The Choice of Captain Ebenezer.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1908, by Clarissa Mackie.

CAPTAIN EBENEZER HOBSON washed and dried his dishes with amazing celerity. In a trice they stood in shining rows on the trim dresser, and the gaunt form of the captain was bent over his little cook stove, while his great brown hands were plying the blacking brush vigorously. When the stove shone like a mirror and the teakettle fairly sparkled with cleanliness, the captain swept out the kitchen and hung the broom upon its accustomed hook, with a sigh of relief. He lighted an old pipe and sat down on the doorstep with his back against the lintel and his keen blue eyes fixed across the bay to where the Ledge light shone like a large red star.

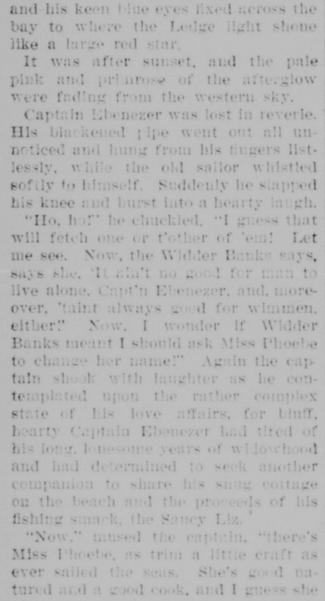
It was after sunset, and the pale pink and primrose of the afterglow were fading from the western sky.

Captain Ebenezer was lost in reverie. His blackened pipe went out all unnoticed and hung from his fingers listlessly, while the old sailor whistled softly to himself. Suddenly he slapped his knee and burst into a hearty laugh.

"Ho, ho!" he chuckled. "I guess that will fetch one or t'other of 'em! Let me see. Now, the Widder Banks says, says she, 'It ain't no good for man to live alone. Capt'n Ebenezer, and, moreover, 'taint always good for wimmen, either!' Now, I wonder if Widder Banks meant I should ask Miss Phoebe to change her name?" Again the captain shook with laughter as he contemplated upon the rather complex state of his love affairs, for bluff, hearty Captain Ebenezer had tired of his long, lonesome years of widowhood and had determined to seek another companion to share his snug cottage on the beach and the proceeds of his fishing smack, the Saucy Liz.

"Now," mused the captain, "there's Miss Phoebe, as trim a little craft as ever sailed the seas. She's good natured and a good cook, and I guess she ain't afeared of the water. A sailor's wife ought to be able to sail across the bay without gettin' yaller about the gills. I don't know, though, whether she'd move down to my cabin. If Miss Phoebe won't have me, I'll have to ask the widder. There ain't another woman with marryin' within twenty miles; but, Lor', the widder's tongue'll make things lively, I suppose!"

Captain Ebenezer had sighed after Miss Phoebe Lummis for many months. That little lady's utter indifference to his society had chilled his ardent sailor heart, and he had changed his matrimonial course in the direction of the Widow Banks' brown house on the high hill overlooking the bay. Captain Ebenezer had made up his mind to marry, and marry he would, one or the other of the two objects of his choice—whichever one would have him.



BURST INTO A HEARTY LAUGH.

That night the wind changed and blew restlessly from the southward. The pale sun rose on a gray-green bay whipped with white foam and on long green waves that broke on the beach with a sullen roar that was music to Captain Ebenezer's ears.

"It's pretty roughish," he muttered between the teeth clinched on his pipe, "but the Saucy Liz is as safe as a rockin' chair, and if either of them two wimmen is scared to go out in her she won't do fer me!" He spat reflectively at one great roller and stepped back as it broke with a hissing roar over his feet.

"Pretty near got me that time, gol darn yer!" he chuckled, pulling his sou'wester snugly over his ears and turning up the shore road toward the little village which nestled between two high, protecting bluffs.

"Good mornin', Mrs. Banks," he called cheerily as the widow opened wide her hospitable door in answer to his resounding summons. "I'm goin' out to Bar island fer a mess of blues. Thought mebbe you'd enjoy the sail!"

Mrs. Banks cast a startled glance over the captain's burly shoulder toward the tossing, tumbling, whitecapped bay.

"You ain't afraid, be you?" asked the captain hopefully, edging his way toward the steps and unconsciously glancing toward a small white house half hidden among the oaks across the road.

"Of course I ain't a mite afraid, Captain Ebenezer," said Myra Banks at last. "It ain't the kind of a day I'd choose to go out for pleasure, but I'm a sailor's widder, and it ain't for me to balk before a sou'west storm. Many's the storm I've rid out with poor Jim before he had his last sickness and"—

"Yes, yes, ma'am," interrupted Captain Ebenezer hastily. "I'll be ready to cast off in about an hour, when the tide turns, although it don't make much difference on a day like this whether we wait for tide or not."

"I'll be ready, captain," returned Myra Banks decisively. "I guess I'll take a basket and get some beach plums over to the island. I heard they was a-plenty there."

"So they be; so they be. I thought mebbe I'd ask Miss Phoebe to go along, too, as company for you, ma'am."

"So do; so do," agreed Mrs. Banks ironically as she watched the captain's

"THANK THE LORD!" MURMURED CAPTAIN EBENEZER.

stalwart form proceeding down the path. "I believe I see Phoebe Lummis trustin' herself to the Saucy Liz or any other craft on a day like this. I guess victuals for two will be a-plenty this day!" She closed the door and went within, where she busied herself over her preparations with more trepidation than Captain Ebenezer would have believed she could display.

In the meantime the captain had rolled up the trim path bordered with snowy clam shells which outlined rows of richly colored dahlias and gay, many hued asters.

"Terribly neat, Miss Phoebe," he muttered dubiously as he tiptoed across the freshly painted porch and rang the bell.

Miss Phoebe Lummis, small, exquisitely neat in person and delicately neat in form and feature, as Captain Ebenezer mentally inventoried her, smiled pleasantly upon the good looking sailor man.

"Come right in, captain," she said cheerfully, throwing open the door of her sunny parlor, where the honeysuckle vines cast dancing shadows on the walls. "Do sit down while I take my cookies out of the oven. I'll be back in a minute."

Captain Ebenezer looked around the room approvingly. There were a gayly figured brussels carpet, a whatnot containing strange seashells and curiosities from foreign lands, great ragged branches of coral flanking the fireplace and comfortable old fashioned chairs. There were geraniums in the front windows and a canary singing in an adjoining room. Many a long winter evening had the captain played cribbage with Miss Phoebe, and many a drink of sweet cider had he quaffed to wash down the deliciously crisp cookies and light doughnuts that she offered for his refreshment. In spite of this entertainment the captain stood in wholesome fear of Miss Phoebe, who spoke what she thought in brief terms, and it was the fear of getting the right about from Miss Phoebe that deterred the captain from uttering the words of affection that so often trembled on his lips.

"It's a dreadful day on the water," began Miss Phoebe when she had returned and seated herself opposite the captain. "I don't know who'd want to be out on a day like this!"

"I'm goin' out myself," ventured the latter, twirling his sou'wester in his horny hands, "and I came in to say that I'd like to have you go out with me in the Saucy Liz. There's a good fresh wind, and it won't hurt you none."

"Never!" returned Miss Lummis decidedly. "I'd be seasick the minute I got aboard. I ain't no sailor, Captain Ebenezer, so you'll sail without me this time!" She smiled pleasantly upon the discomfited sailor.

"The Widder Banks is goin' along to get beach plums on the island, and I thought mebbe you'd be company for one another. You ain't a good sailor, then, ma'am?" Captain Ebenezer's voice expressed poignant anxiety as he ventured this question.

"Not a bit. I like a sail on a smooth sea, but no sou'westers for me, captain. You ask me some time when it isn't rough and I'll go with you gladly."

"You wouldn't—you wouldn't—oh—easy there!" Captain Ebenezer thrust a hand inside the collar of his flannel shirt and jerked it fretfully. With sudden exasperation he jumped to his feet and extended one hand pleadingly. "You wouldn't marry me, Miss Phoebe, would you?" he shouted desperately.

Miss Phoebe's tinkling laugh died away as a pink flush rose to her delicate cheeks. "I might if you asked me, captain," she said demurely.

"I thought mebbe you wouldn't want to leave this pretty house of yours, Phoebe," said the captain tenderly as later he occupied a place on the sofa beside his fiancee.

"I figured," began Miss Phoebe dreamily, and then she stopped, with a sudden shocked expression in her mild eyes—"I mean," she went on hastily, "I should think we could move this house right down the bluff and fasten it on to your cabin, you know."

"Surest way, my hearty!" sang Captain Ebenezer blithely. "And now"—

"You better be going along, captain," interrupted Miss Phoebe briskly. "I see the widder going down the road, and you don't want to keep her waiting."

Captain Ebenezer stared, aghast. He had forgotten the Widow Banks and the proposed trip to Bar island.

"I'm an engaged man now, Phoebe," he said, mopping his forehead and looking at her out of troubled eyes.

"Oh, go along, Ebenezer, do!" she said, with playful impatience. "I ain't a mite jealous. You wasn't engaged when you asked her to go. Bring me a mess of blues, and you can come to tea and eat 'em."

Captain Ebenezer's blissful smile faded from his face as he proceeded down the road to the beach, where he could see the red knitted jacket of Myra Banks moving toward the landing where the Saucy Liz dragged at her anchor. What the Widow Banks might expect from him as a result of this marked attention he could not, dared not, imagine. If he had only gone to Miss Phoebe's first! He tried to recall if he had ever uttered a remark to the keen witted widow which might have committed him in any way to an avowal of love. There was none that he could remember. He had been wary indeed.

"Here I be a-waitin' for you," began Myra Banks playfully as she deposited a heavy basket on the landing. "I expect we'll have to eat up all the victuals so's I can put the plums in the basket. Where's Phoebe?"

"Phoebe, she—Miss Phoebe ain't a-comin'. She thinks it's too rough for her," exclaimed Captain Ebenezer, reddening under the keen gaze of the widow. "Now, Mrs. Banks, jest step into the dory, your foot right in the middle—that's it—easy now—umph—so!" With surprising agility the big captain took his place in the rocking boat and with a few quick, long strokes brought them to the side of the Saucy Liz.

It is needless to record this voyage over the careening seas, for neither one of the occupants of the sloop cared to remember the unpleasantness of that day. To the widow it was one long, nauseous period of terror. To Captain Ebenezer it was a dark and gloomy passage. The successful outcome of his wooing was counterbalanced by the fear of what the widow might expect from his marked attentions in the past. He trailed his lines and pulled in myriads of shining, steely bluefish ere they grounded on the pebbly beach of the quiet cove.

The widow tottered ashore on Captain Ebenezer's arm, and they sat down, and while Myra Banks languidly discussed the contents of the lunch basket, which the captain attacked with a right good will, the widow seemed to be revolving some weighty matter within her mind, a matter that might excuse her want of appetite after the bracing voyage.

"I'll help you get your plums, Mrs. Banks," said the captain, looking kindly upon the pallid face and disheveled hair of his guest.

Myra Banks turned a gloomy eye upon her host and then looked back over the tossing sea of green water and shuddered.

"I guess it was a little too rough," ventured Captain Ebenezer uneasily. The continued silence of the Widow Banks was disconcerting and somewhat alarming.

Suddenly the pent up wrath of Myra Banks found vent, and she shook quivering fingers in the air before the astonished visage of the captain.

"Rough, indeed! And what do you mean by a-askin' frail wimmen off on a voyage like this, a-temptin' them with"—

"Sho—sho—Mrs. Banks," expostulated the captain indignantly. "Whatever do you mean? I didn't hold out no temptations when I asked you to go. I jes' asked you to go—that was all!"

"I want to go home," retorted Mrs. Banks bitterly in reply to the captain's last remarks, and home they went, beating before the wind, mounting green heights of water and diving into valleys flecked with foam. While the captain was dropping his anchor Myra Banks looked fiercely about the harbor at the flying smacks, the high wooded bluffs and around the deck of the Saucy Liz, and yet she said never a word.

Silently she accompanied Captain Ebenezer ashore, and sullenly she parted from him, and then, just as he turned away from her, dangling a string of fish in his hand, she called him.

"Captain Ebenezer Hobson!"

"Yes," he shouted back cheerily.

"I wouldn't marry a seafarin' man for anything, so there ain't no need for you to come a-callin' any more!" She faced about and plodded up the road toward home.

"Thank the Lord!" murmured Captain Ebenezer piously as he turned into the clam shell bordered path between the dahlias.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
Schedule effective June 2, 1907.
OAKLAND.
*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *3.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart 10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m. Arrive 9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *8.26 a. m. (Cincinnati, *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night).
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.26 p. m.

FOR SALE.
We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,
1 Gasoline Engine,
8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.
1 Hay Bailer,
operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.
For further information call on or write to
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones

Land for Sale.
We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:
One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.
Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.
Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.
For further information, address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.
Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.
LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of
WILLIAM HACHMAN,
late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.
Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 908.
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSSER,
Administrators.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE
Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00
The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.
SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.
Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.
We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
C. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Ed Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y
You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows & Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S
Big Stock to select from.
Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.
We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.
Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.
We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS
I offer for sale
FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.
COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.
HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.
FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.
HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.
A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.
I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.
150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.
12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.
If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.
For further particulars call on or address
James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Prof. H. W. Browning spent Sunday with Mr. Arthur Chisholm.

Don't forget the lawn fete Saturday, August 22nd.

Mrs. Roy Bigler and children are visiting her mother, Mrs. Griffin.

Mr. John H. Cuppett spent last Friday and Saturday in our town.

Mr. J. W. McCullough and daughter Mariah and children returned home from Pittsburgh Sunday night.

Mr. Crago spent Sunday with Miss Nell Herpick.

Mr. Carl Higgenbothem is visiting Bruce and Fred Mitchel.

Miss Ruth McCandish has returned to her home in Westernport, Md.

Mrs. Hardie is back home from Jacksonville, Va., where she had been visiting relatives and friends for several weeks.

On Wednesday last that prince of good fellows, Mr. George D. Browning, gave a most delightful outing to a number of our townspeople and visitors from a distance, in the way of a personally conducted excursion up the Youghiogheny river to Swallow Falls and Muddy Creek Falls. The genial host having enlisted the Misses Mason, of Friendsville, as his assistants in the affair, the guests were duly marshalled at Kendall where Mr. Browning met them with an engine and car and the trip up the picturesque Yough began. The rough, rugged scenery was greatly admired by all, and the climax was reached when the train stopped opposite the falls of Muddy creek. So taken were all the party with this view that a second visit afoot was made to these falls later in the day. Upon arrival at Swallow Falls Miss Gertrude Browning, of Oakland, and Mr. Frank Browning joined the party and did much to add to the enjoyment and pleasure of all. A call to luncheon a la picnic in the saw mill found an array of appetites whetted by the Yough ozone that did ample justice, and then some, to the more than delectable edibles prepared and served by fair hands of ladies fair. We except the "coffee," however, as a male tried to make it, and, as a natural result, it was "wretched," though not baldheaded, like himself. If any one thinks the girls will not hand you "a hot one" sometimes just ask Brownie or Van if all candy is good. Or if fishing in the Yough is not par excellent ask either Messrs. J. M. Harpick, Ralph Harpick or R. A. Long, of Connellsville, Pa., and as a fortune teller Miss Ruth McCandlish, of Westernport, has the seventh daughter of the seventh daughter of the gypsy tribes all in the novice class.

After an afternoon of unalloyed pleasure the party re-embarked aboard the Log-Road Limited accompanied by the Messrs. Browning and Miss Browning who saw them safely and happily returned to Kendall. The evening ride down the Yough was even finer than the trip up. One old back number was heard to say that if he had to live very long in this romantic region he just knew he would grow romantic himself, propose to some fair ladie and then trouble would begin—the wretch!

Upon arrival at Kendall the ladies served a buffet supper and all wended their way homeward with feelings of deepest obligation to our host and his fair helpers for a most pleasurable day's outing. Those not already mentioned who were members of the party enjoyed themselves and added greatly to the pleasure of all others were, Mrs. Dr. A. J. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Gould, Mrs. G. R. Long and daughter Ruth of Friendsville; Miss Herpick, Miss Margaret Herpick and Miss Lytle, of Connellsville, Pa. Nor must we forget the kindly offices of Dr. A. J. Mason in seeing to the transportation of the guests and impedimenta to and from Kendall and Friendsville, and the sincere regret of all that professional duties prevented his being with us the entire day.

GORTNER.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Sanders were visiting relatives and friends at Philippi, W. Va., Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Shettler were calling on Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Killius Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. Moses Yoder, of Springs, Pa., spent Sunday with relatives at this place.

Steward Wamsley and Clarance Sanders are assisting J. W. Beckman to harvest his oats.

S. O. Ridder and family were visiting home-folks Sunday.

A number of the local fans of Sunnyside assisted the Bittinger base ball team last Saturday in defeating the team from Springs, Pa. Score 1 to 0.

Simon Swartzentruber and sister Miss Kate were visiting relatives at Springs, Pa., last week.

Geo. DeWitt and Miss Nettie Brenninger were calling on Miss Barbara Gortner Sunday.

Messrs. Allen Butler and Roland Shuck, of Creilin, were calling on their lady friends here Sunday evening

Sunday school at 10.30 and preaching at 11.30 next Sunday morning.

WILLIE.

HOYES.

Services were conducted at the Catholic church Tuesday instead of Sunday.

Mr. C. H. Bishoff and nephew, Chester Bishoff, of Barnum, spent several days the past week at the old homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence DeWitt, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Olive DeWitt, of Frostburg, returned to their respective homes last Saturday after visiting relatives and friends for two weeks at Hoyes and Selbysport.

Misses Dessie and Mary Callis returned to their home Monday after attending Chautauqua at Mt. Lake the past week.

Fred Kerby, of Homestead, is a guest at Rev. H. E. Friend's home.

Bruce Savage and sister Della, who spent the past five years on the Pacific Coast, are visiting their sister, Mrs. W. A. Smith.

Miss Amelia Smith, who has been staying in Hoyes for several months past, spent Saturday and Sunday at her home at McHenry.

Miss Icie Friend, of Elder, was pleasantly entertained by Miss Freda DeWitt at her home last Sunday.

F. M. Seymore returned to his home from Gorman last Saturday, where he had been employed for the past month.

Robert Hutchinson, of Johnstown, Pa., was shaking hands with his friends in Hoyes Tuesday.

A party of fourteen persons composed a jolly fishing party from Hoyes on Tuesday were conveyed by Mr. Ray Friend with his commodious hay wagon to the Yough river at the mouth of Sang Run which is one of the most picturesque places we know of for an occasion of this kind. The party was composed of the following: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, Misses Sudie and Sadie Friend, Della Savage and Ethel DeWitt, and Messrs. Bruce Savage, Arthur DeWitt, Charley and Ray Friend, F. Kerby and Masters Stanley and Milton DeWitt and Cecil Smith. The day will be a memorable one to all. First a most sumptuous dinner was served at 12 o'clock. The table was elaborately decorated with wild flowers and ferns and consisted of all that goes to make a good dinner, including hot coffee, fried Maryland chicken, fruits, salads, etc. Games were engaged in, such as base ball, slight of hand performance, fortune telling, also vocal and instrumental music. We are under many obligations to Mr. Kerby who photographed the party in many different poses. Fishing was also engaged in but we can say "the fish are safe."

BLOOMING ROSE.

Not seeing any news from this place I thought a few items would be of interest.

Harvesting is done and threshing is the order of the day.

Crops are generally good. Hay crop was extra; corn is promising to be the best it has for years. Buckwheat gives every evidence of a No. 1 crop.

Sherman Friend, C. F. Friend and Mack Sisler have all built new barns this spring and summer. Walter G. Meyers was the contractor.

James Frazee is arranging to build one this fall. His barn was burnt down by lightning some time ago. He had a small insurance on same, carried by the Garrett County Insurance Co.

George G. Meyers and Geo. Savage both expect to build new barns this fall.

C. W. Friend, Cross Roads merchant, is doing a fine business. He holds his head higher than ever since the arrival of a new boy at his home.

J. S. Meyers is having a lot of clearing done on his farm. Yankee John Friend is the contractor.

Perry Frantz, our hustling stone mason, has been quite busy. Perry is a good mason. Anyone wanting good work done will do well to secure his service.

There was singing school at this place Sunday afternoon by Prof. Wakefield.

There will be a Sunday school picnic held here on Saturday, the 22nd inst., for the benefit of the church. Everybody invited. Dinner will be served on the ground at the small price of 25 cents. All kinds of refreshment will be served. Come and spend the day with us. Game of ball will be played in the afternoon: Kendall vs. Blooming Rose. A good time is expected.

Miss Ruth Herring, of near Uniontown, is here visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Friend. She and her uncle, Mr. Ray Friend, spent Sunday at Accident with Mr. Smith Friend.

Sunday school is increasing in numbers with Mr. E. B. Hook, superintendent.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bowling were visiting at Mr. John Hoff's recently.

Jack Frantz is preparing to build a new house. Jack is a member of the baseball team and a good one.

Geo. W. Meyers, our blacksmith, is smiling over the arrival of a new girl at his home.

We are all for Taft and Sherman.

RIP VAN WINKLE.

Subscribe for the Republican.

NORTH GLADE.

Recent rains have been a great blessing to us.

J. Albert Wilt has a bumper crop of hay. Mr. Wilt is one of our best farmers.

Oats are exceedingly short, potatoes will also be a very poor crop, wheat was good and corn is looking fine.

Apples are plentiful and apple cuttings are again popular, especially with our young folks.

We are sorry that our good friend, Judge Fitzwater, has been quite ill the past week.

H. C. Hersman has been having considerable sickness in his family. He has our sympathy.

Joseph Beckman has a new daughter at his house, Joe seems all right again.

Mr. Albert Baker and Miss Effie Mason were married last week. We extend our hearty congratulations.

We are informed that Mr. Wm. Pritts and Miss Bessie Colmer were also married recently, to whom we wish joy and success.

Rev. Manges, of Oakland, preached very acceptably in the Lutheran chapel last Sunday.

Rev. Engle will preach for us Sunday morning.

Our Sunday school is going on nicely with G. W. Moon as superintendent.

BITTINGER.

I kin hear dem "Trusts" a callin',
And dem poo' folks how dey kicks;
Arter "boodle" men are brawlin,
In de world of politics.

Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp, who has been unwell for a week past, is much improved at this writing.

Miss Ruth Stark, of Jennings, spent last Sunday with friends in this village.

The Big Four base ball team, of Sunnyside, spent last Saturday and Sunday at this place.

Miss Effie Mason, of Meadow Mountain and Mr. Albert Baker, of the firm of Lininger & Co., of Accident, were quietly married at Oakland last week by Rev. E. Manges, of the Lutheran church.

Luther Reckner and family, of Confluence, Pa., were visiting at the home of Amos Reckner of this place.

Elias Harshbarger, residing north of Grantsville, died at his home on last Sunday afternoon, after a protracted illness.

The installation of Rev. Alvin Yugel occurred in the Lutheran church at this place last Sunday morning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Manges, of Oakland, assisted by Rev. Wagner, of Frostburg.

The picnic held here last Saturday was largely attended and has been pronounced a success.

FIKE.

During the past week we have had considerable rain with a couple of electrical storms.

Mr. James B. Frazee and wife and Mrs. Lee S. Cuppett, passed through here on their way home from Oakland and other points in the county where they had been visiting friends and relatives for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dutton, and Mr. Jones, of Uniontown, Pa., were visiting relatives in this vicinity a few days last week.

Mr. Lloyd K. Fike will attend a birthday party at Mineral Springs, near Keyser, Md., on August 22, 1908.

The threshing machine is around threshing for the farmers at this time.

Clarence Miller, of Jennings, is now working for Isaiah Umbel.

Mr. Isaiah Umbel has some young cattle which he keeps on what is known as "the Louis tract" and as fast as Mr. Umbel can bring them home and put them in the stable some berry pickers will open the stable and let the cattle out. I would just say those who do such things had better be careful or they may get themselves in trouble.

Some of our people must expect to play music for there has been a couple of new organs purchased in our town.

There was a telephone meeting held in the school house at this place and it was decided to build a farmers line from Markleysburg, Pa., to Guthrie Switch.

CARTER.

Valuable Property At Public Sale.

The Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, Pa., by advertisement printed elsewhere in this paper today gives notice of the sale of one of the most valuable and a very extensive coal property, located at Stoyer, this county, owned by the Stoyer Run Coal Company. The sale will take place on Saturday, September 12th, in front of the First National Bank in Oakland. Messrs. Benj. A. Richmond, of Cumberland, and Fred A. Thayer, of Oakland, are the solicitors for the trust company.

Money to Loan.

$5,000. To loan on 1st mortgage in sums to suit. Apply to

BOWIE JOHNSON,
Oakland, Maryland.

Wreck at Snowy Creek.

Tuesday afternoon another wreck, in which a number of loaded steel coal cars were demolished, took place at the famed Snowy Creek Curve, seven miles west of Oakland on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Both tracks were torn up very badly, the eastbound track, upon which the wrecked train was passing, being the greatest damaged. Traffic was delayed from two o'clock until nearly five o'clock as a result of the smash-up.

A post card received Tuesday from Mrs. J. M. Gnagey who, with her husband and little daughter, have been sojourning at the home of Mr. Gnagey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gnagey, at West Milton, Ohio, states that they are enjoying their outing hugely, and that Mr. Gnagey, the affable and efficient accountant for the Shipley Hardware company of this city, who was in ill health has gained 10½ pounds in avoirdupois. This will be good news to his many friends here.—Meyersdale Republican.

Send In Your Samples.

All land owners, in or near the Youghiogheny River valley, are requested to send samples of all the coal, iron ore, fireclay, kaolin, glass sand, lime and building stone, or other minerals found on their lands, to the office of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company, room 14, First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md., where they will be labeled for exhibiton.

H. P. TASKER,
General Manager.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey; 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

(Benj. A. Richmond, Cumberland, Md., and Fred. A. Thayer, Oakland, Md., Solicitors.)

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

COAL MINES

AND

Village Property

AT

Stoyer, Garrett County, Md.

By virtue of the power of sale to the undersigned mortgagee, a corporation, as set out in the mortgage from the STOYER RUN COAL COMPANY of Garrett county, Maryland, to it, dated the first day of April, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, page 46, of the Land Records of Garrett county, Md., default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay said moneys secured by said mortgage when due, the said LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia, Pa., in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage, will, on

SATURDAY,

The 12th Day of September,

1908, at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett county, Md., commencing at twelve o'clock, noon, sell at public sale as a whole coal and mining plant, all the real, leasehold and personal property, rights, franchises and privileges of said Stoyer Run Coal Company, particularly described and set out in the mortgage aforesaid, the same being more particularly described as follows:

First—All that piece of ground lying near Stoyer in said county, being a part of a tract called

"The Addition to Paradise," resurveyed for William W. Hove July 13th, 1880, described as follows: Beginning for said part at a stone marked "X" standing near the East margin of the county road at Stoyer and South 25 degrees East, 181½ feet from a hemlock tree, which stands at the end of the first line of a part of said tract called "Addition to Paradise" which was conveyed by William Whitmore to John P. Stoyer, by deed dated March 7th, 1887, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 19, folio 352 of said land records, and running thence South 55 degrees East, 153 feet, South 35 degrees West, 194 feet to the north limits of the Western Maryland Railroad Company's right of way and with said limit, North 61½ degrees West, 92 feet, North 23½ degrees East, 210 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ this of an acre more or less.

Second—All that other part of the tract of land called

"Addition to Paradise,"

aforesaid lying at said Stoyer, beginning for the same at a stake standing North 55 degrees West, 40 feet from the aforesaid planted stone marked "X," standing at the beginning of the first parcel just above described, and running thence North 83¼ degrees West, 646 feet to a planted stone marked "2," then South 85½ degrees West, 550 feet, South 82 degrees West, 127 feet to a large stone marked "X" then South 20 degrees East, 165 feet to the northern limits of right of way of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, then with said limits in an easterly direction about 1300 feet to the intersection of a line drawn South 25½ degrees West, from the beginning thence reversing said line North 25½ degrees East, 213 feet to the beginning, containing five acres more or less.

Third—All that other part of said tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

beginning for the same at a point on the southern limits of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is South 25½ degrees West, 279 feet from the beginning of the second parcel just above described, and running thence South 25½ degrees West, 200 feet to a stake standing on the north side of the Potomac River, thence up said River North 28½ degrees West 162 feet to the mouth of Stoyer Run, then North 43 degrees West, 179 feet to the south limits of the right of way of said railroad, and with it, in an easterly direction, about 290 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ths of an acre, more or less.

Fourth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under which said lots and leased land are adjacent to and near the three parcels just above described, being the same lots and premises, which were leased by and described in the lease from John P. Stoyer and wife to H. M. Datesman dated the 12th day of June, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 32, of said Land Records, to which lease reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the same.

Military Lots Nos. 203 & 199,

Fifth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under a tract of land known as lying West of Stover in district No. 8 of Garrett county, which is particularly described in and leased by a lease for the same from the Bayard Coal and Coke Company to Harris M. Datesman, dated July 31st, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 289, of said Land records. For a more particular description of which property reference is made to said lease.

"Addition to Paradise,"

All the above described parcels of real and leasehold property being particularly described in and conveyed by a deed from William H. Thomas, Trustee, to the said Stoyer Run Coal Co., dated the 15th day of June, 1905, and recorded among said Land Records.

Sixth—All and singular the personal property of the said Stoyer Run Coal Company owned by it at the time of said mortgage or since acquired by it, situate at or in said place and upon the aforesaid properties or used in connection with said coal mines and mining plant of said coal company, consisting principally, but not wholly of the following, viz.: 50 cars thirty six inch gauge mine cars, two pit cars, three tons of steel rails, one set of Fairbank's track scales, one full set of blacksmith tools, a large lot of mining tools, [illegible] two large boilers with pumps, several engines and all appliances appurtenant thereto, all tramways, hoists, [illegible]es, mine props, and all other fixtures, appliances and equipment constituting a first class plant for the mining and shipping of coal, together with all other goods and chattels and personal property of said mortgagor now owned by it and situate on any of the aforesaid properties.

Seventh—All the corporate franchises, rights and privileges of said mortgagor, and all rights of connection with said property and coal mines and coal thereunder given by the aforesaid deeds and leases.

Said fee simple properties are improved by one large two and a half story superintendent's house, twenty two-story houses or cottages for miners' dwellings, twelve large shanties, one large store building 60 by 20 feet deep with dwelling attached and office room, one storehouse, ice house, magazines, stable for twelve head of mules, coal tipples, blacksmith shop, dumps and tramways.

The mines have a coal area of about 550 acres of coal with three mine openings. Mine No. 1 is in the Lower Kittanning vein of 4½ feet coal. Mine No. 2 is in the Masontown Seam with a vein of about 6 feet. Mine No. 3 is worked by plane with engine and is in the Upper Freeport Seam.

These mines lie on the Western Maryland Rail Road and have a fine siding costing over $2,000.00. Said mines are equipped with the most modern machinery, engines, pumps, boilers, tramways, hoists, etc. The storeroom is a fine stand for a store and when the mines are working does a good business.

All the aforegoing will be sold as ONE WHOLE PLANT, including all the aforesaid real, leasehold, personal and mixed property.

TERMS OF SALE—$500 cash on day of sale and the balance upon the ratification of the sale by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, the purchaser or purchasers securing the deferred payment by their note or notes with a surety or sureties approved by the undersigned.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.,
Trustee and Mortgagee.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

THOMAS DAVIS,

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the nest clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. Telephone Comp'y

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Section 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on the 15th day of August, '08,

SATURDAY,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M., at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1. The undivided one-half interest in MILITARY LOT NUMBER ONE HUNDRED AND SEVEN, CONTAINING FIFTY ACRES OF LAND, and being the same property which was conveyed by Etta M. Smouse and others to Lawrence B. Crane by deed bearing date the 7th day of May, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 47, folio 125, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7, of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lawrence B. Crane.

No. 3. ALL THOSE PIECES OR PARCELS OF LAND KNOWN AS LOTS NUMBERS NINE HUNDRED AND THIRTY AND NINE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-TWO as shown on the plat of Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, folio 800, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, Md., and being the same land which was conveyed by A. C. Snedeker and others to M. E. Conner by deed bearing date the 7th day of October, 1896, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 32, folio 343, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said M. E. Conner.

No. 7.—ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND KNOWN AS LOT NUMBER SEVENTY-SIX IN BLOCK 2 as shown on the plat of Loch Lynn Heights as recorded among the Land Records of Garrett county, containing for the same the quantity of 20-121 of an acre, and being the same land which was conveyed to William D. King by C. L. Smith and others by deed bearing date the 10th day of March, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 44, folio 385, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said William D. King.

No. 8.—ALL THOSE PIECES OR PARCELS OF LAND KNOWN AS LOTS NUMBERS FORTY-EIGHT, FIFTY-NINE AND SIXTY-TWO as shown on the plat of Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 6, folio 800, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the same property conveyed to C. W. Conner by deed duly recorded among the Land Records of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said C. W. Conner. Saidl land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

H. R. DEWITT,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County

ORDER NISI.

Silas Teats vs. Allen Teats, et al.
No. 1521 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

It is ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, this 30th day of July, 1908, that the sale of the property mentioned in these proceedings and made and reported by Andrew S. Teats, Trustee, appointed by a decree of this Court to make sale, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 21st day of August, 1908; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper printed in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 14th day of August, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1,300.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1908. NUMBER 25

ARRESTED IN PITTSBURG.

Chef of the Mountain Lake Park Hotel Shipped Goods to That City.

Sheriff Austin Brown returned to Oakland Sunday morning having in charge Raymon Higgins, the colored chef of the Mountain Lake Park Hotel, who was arrested at Pittsburg on Friday when he went to receipt for a box of groceries at an express office, the box having been shipped by Higgins from Mountain Lake Park and consigned to him in Pittsburg.

Higgins was chef of the hotel at the Park until last Thursday when when he left his position and returned to his home in Pittsburg. Large quantities of groceries had been missed from the store room at the hotel and upon investigation it was found that at regular intervals Higgins had sent from the Park station to his family at Pittsburg numerous boxes and packages. The last shipment of these goods was made on Wednesday last and a warrant was sworn out for the arrest of the man by Mr. L. T. Yoder, owner of the hotel. Sheriff Brown communicated with the Pittsburg authorites and his arrest followed.

The prisoner was given a hearing by Justice Gonder Tuesday and in default of bond for his appearance at the December term of court Higgins was remanded to jail.

BITTINGER.

If at first you don't succeed,
Try, and keep on tryin',
To life's past failures pay no heed,
Says William Jennings Bryan.

Within the past week many of the farmers in this section have thrashed their wheat and oats. Wheat shows a heavy yield, but the oats crop is light.

Both Jennings Bros., and Mason Bros., have closed down their saw mills temporarily.

Thomas Smouse, of Cumberland, was here on business one day last week.

The Mennonite church, recently completed, near this village was dedicated last Sunday morning and the services were attended by a vast assembly of persons from all sections of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Christian Shrock are greatly rejoiced over the recent arrival of a daughter in their home.

Wade H. Lohr, and little son, of Swanton, and Charles Pearson, of New York city, were agreeable visitors to this place last Sunday.

J. Turner Lohr, is spending this week viewing the conditions west of the Mississippi.

The drought was broken in this section by a delightful rain on last Monday evening.

J. B. Emory has opened a broom shop at this place and cordially solicits the patronage of the public for brooms in any weight and quantity.

DRILLING AT OIL WELL TO BE RESUMED SHORTLY

Leases are Being Extended and Subscriptions Being Taken.

OLD HOLE WILL BE REOPENED

Local People Have An Abiding Faith That Gas and Oil Will Be Found on the Harned Farm When the Old Well is Bored Deeper.

As a result of the two or three meetings of the stockholders of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company held within the past three weeks at the court house in Oakland, interest in the development of our mineral resources has been renewed and it has been determined by those interested in the corporation to prosecute the work of development until it is definitely known whether or not gas or oil or both exist within the territory under lease by the home people.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the above company held recently the books were reopened for additional subscriptions to the capital stock of the company and Mr. E. J. Fringer, the secretary, was appointed to secure the extension of leases upon the property held by the corporation. In securing the extension of the leases Mr. Fringer has been extremely fortunate, every land owner approached with the proposition giving ready consent to the extension.

In the financial end of the proposition additional stock to the amount of several hundred dollars has been subscribed, the bulk of the money being put in by the original shareholders. As soon as an amount deemed sufficient by the directors has been subscribed, the work of sinking the well on the Harnerd farm to a greater depth will be resumed. At the time the hole was abandoned, or rather, work ceased, it had reached a depth of more than thirty-five hundred feet. The drillers, unfortunately, dropped their sand pump into the hole where it remains and this obstruction must necessarily be removed before the active work of drilling can be resumed. To remove the pump will be somewhat of an undertaking, but with modern appliances at hand the undertaking will be simplified.

Country Club at Deer Park.

Golf and tennis tournaments are still features of interest at Deer Park. There is some talk of forming a country club and erecting a clubhouse about three miles distant from the hotel, building the additional golf holes necessary to connect with those of the hotel, thus giving a full eighteen-hole course.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

CARE OF SECOND GROWTH FORESTS.

State Forester Besley Makes Some Excellent Suggestions.

Mr. F. W. Besley, the State Forester, who is engaged in making a survey of the forests of Garrett county, furnishes the following suggestions concerning the care of the cut-over or second-growth forests:

There is very little timberland in the county that has not been cut over at least once, and under the present practice of lumbering cut-over lands are not regarded as much value for another timber crop. Under this belief and practice there have been added each year large areas of land that are practically waste. Fires are allowed to sweep over them frequently and the grazing of sheep and cattle keep down the young growth that may escape fires or that may spring up afterward.

Just as steadily as the original stand of timber is cut does the demand and consequent price of stumpage advance so that the situation is becoming alarming from the economic standpoint. There is more timber used than ever before and the supply is every year becoming less. Not only is the area of woodland decreasing due to clearing land but after cutting over a timber tract it is a long time before a second crop can be forested under favorable conditions. Where fires and grazing destroy the young growth often a second crop is almost impossible and should it survive the quality of the material will be very inferior.

The State Forester is now examining conditions in the county and attempting to devise some practical plans for hastening the second growth and making it more valuable. Timber ten, twenty, or thirty years from now will be much more valuable per board foot than it is today, hence no one who owns cut-over lands can afford to let them lie idle or grow up without care when it is assured that proper attention now will insure good returns for the future.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. MARY ANN RAY-BYRNE.

The Kingwood Journal will contain the following, relative to the death of Mrs. Mary Ann Ray-Byrne, maternal grandmother of Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, of Oakland, with whom Mrs. Byrne spent the last year of her life:

Died at her residence in Kingwood, West Va., on Saturday, August 15th, 1908, at 11 o'clock a. m., of an illness incident to extreme age, Mrs. Mary Ann Ray-Byrne, aged ninety years and twenty-five days, the deceased lady having been born at Wheeling, West Va., July 20th, 1818, being a daughter of Patrick and Mary Ray, an English couple who came to America from the Isle of Wight in the years succeeding the War of the Revolution.

Thus has the church on earth lost another of her staunchest supporters and friends—another tried servant of God has passed from the conflicts of earth to eternal rest in heaven—from the Cross to the Crown. Few lived a more blameless life—few left a better record behind them. Humble and self-distrustful, but strong in the Lord; courteous, forgiving, noble—she was a shining example of the true Christian. Since early womanhood Mrs. Byrne was a member of the Kingwood Presbyterian church, having been a charter member of the congregation. Her attendance at all public services in the church was as regular as that of the minister until her last illness which forced her to forego the pleasure of hearing the Message.

Of Mrs. Byrne's wedding we read in a newspaper clipping found among some of her papers the following:

"At Pilgrim's Cottage, Mount Carmel (Pa), on Thursday morning, Dec. 5th, 1839, by Rev. J. D. Ray, John P. Byrne, Esq., of Kingwood, Va., to Miss Mary Ann Ray, of Wheeling, Va."

As a result of this happy union there were born five children—four daughters and one son. Of the children but two reached the age of maturity, namely: Mary Eleanor, who became the wife of Mr. D. Y. Morris, and whose death occurred but a few years ago, and Julia Elizabeth, who survives.

Mr. Byrne died on July 12, 1862, while yet a comparatively a young man, at his summer home, Woodside, Va., near Oakland, Md. For more than forty six years his widow cherished the memory of one whose life was blameless and who is remembered for his many charities, faithfulness and devotion to friends and family.

Of Mrs. Byrne's life words are lacking in which to express its purity, its cheerfulness, its beauty and charity. Her interest in the welfare, prosperity and happiness of others was one of her chief characteristics. Her life—in a word—was devoted to seeing others made happy. In her home she dispensed hospitality to the poor and rich alike.

She was truly one of God's noblest creations.

Her funeral occurred from her late home Monday afternoon, August 17th, at 3 o'clock, the services being in charge of Rev. R. M. Ramsey, pastor of the Kingwood Presbyterian church. Rev. Ramsey was assisted by Rev. J. H. Flanigan, of Grafton, who was the deceased lady's pastor more than fifty years ago, and who in his few remarks over the demise of his friend of half a century paid a glowing and well earned tribute to the beautiful life led by her for more than three score and ten years. Rev. Dr. Hess, of the Kingwood M. E. church also assisted in the services, both at the home and at the cemetery.

The pall bearers were life long friends, viz: Prof. A. W. Lorentz, and Major William C. McGrew, of Morgantown; Mr. Wm. G. Brown, Mr. I. P. Martin, Mr. Francis Heermans and Mr Felix Elliott, of Kingwood. Those who attended the funeral from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Parley DeBerry, of Terra Alta; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dille, Mrs. J. H. Moreland, Mr. Clarence Dille, Mr. Ray Dille, Major W. C. McGrew and son James, Prof. A. W. Lorentz, Mr. John Willey and Mr. William Willey, of Morgantown, Mrs. Gilmor S. Hamill and Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sincell, of Oakland.

MRS. INGABY KING.

Mrs. Ingaby King, one of the oldest residents of this vicinity, died August 13, 1908. She was born January 25, 1816, and at the time of her death was ninety two years, six months and nineteen days old. Her father's name was Wm. White and her mother's name was Charlotte White. She was the oldest of a large family of children, all of whom are dead except her youngest brother, Jonathan White, who resides at Loch Lynn. She was married twice. Her first husband being Thomas Gilpin, who died June 10, 1840, leaving two children, one of whom, Thornton Gilpin, is still living. Her second husband was Joseph King, whom she married Feb. 24, 1842. They lived together nearly sixty years. He died March 16, 1901. By this marriage there were nine children, of whom there are three living: Mrs. Sarah Adeline King, Mrs. Amy Kimmel and Alfred King. There is a numerous posterity—thirty-one grandchildren and twenty one great-grandchildren. For over fifty years she was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church and her life was an influence for good. The infirmities of old age gradually weakened her until she fell asleep. A large crowd of friends and relatives gathered to pay their last respects to her memory and to lay her body away to await the resurrection day. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Hudson, assisted by Rev. James Enlow. May those who remain be comforted by the assurance that she is asleep in Jesus, resting from her labors. C. W. H.

MARY MARGARET EMMART

Mary Margaret Emmart, the wife of Charles Emmart, of Deer Park, departed this life Tuesday, August 11, 1908, aged thirty-seven years, two months and seventeen days. She was laid to rest in beautiful Deer Park cemetery Wednesday, Aug. 12. The funeral was preached in the Union church by Rev. C. W. Hudson. Mrs. Emmart had been a sufferer from consumption for some time and came to the mountains in search of health. All that a loving husband and friends could do was done, but to no avail. God saw fit to take her; she knew she must die and was ready to go, her only sorrow being that she must leave her husband and children, of which there were five of her own and one adopted. May the God of the motherless care for them and help and comfort the father in his distress. C. W. H.

A Rock-Ribbed Democrat Hopes for Bryan's Defeat.

Cashier John O. Getty, of the First National Bank of Grantsville, Md., was a Salisbury visitor last Sunday, accompanied by his wife and two young sons.

While engaged in conversation with the editor, Mr. Getty, who is a rock-ribbed Democrat of the old school, expressed the hope and belief that Bryan would again be defeated for the presidency of the United States. "Following the election of Taft," said Mr. Getty, "there is good hope for the prompt resumption of business and a general loosening up of money matters all over the country while in the event of Bryan's election the panic would likely become much more severe."

We may not have quoted his exact words, but we have given the substance of them, and as Mr. Getty is a good, practical business man, politician, scholar and thinker, his opinion ought to be worth something. One thing is sure, his opinion is shared pretty generally, all over the country, by business men, regardless of their politics.—Salisbury Star.

TYPHOID FEVER EPIDEMIC AT KITZMILLERVILLE.

Physicians Have Thirty-Five Cases Now Under Treatment.

THREE DIED ON LAST SATURDAY

Water Supply, Which Comes From Shallow Wells, Many of Which Are Contaminated, The Cause of The Illness of So Many.

The prosperous town of Kitzmillerville, which is located on the north bank of the Potomac River in the county, and her sister town, Blaine, on the opposite side of the river in West Virginia, are both in the grip of an epidemic of typhoid fever, there being at present no less than thirty-five cases under treatment by the physicians of the two towns.

As a result of the epidemic three deaths have occured, two of the victims, Charles Cramer, aged 60 years, and Floyd Arnold, aged 25, dying last Saturday, while Elmer Cramer, son of Charles, died earlier in the week. Mrs. Charles Cramer is lying dangerously ill of the disease.

The towns are the centre for coal mining interests, no less than six large mines being located almost within the confines of the places and giving employment to several hundred men when they are working full time.

The water supply for both drinking and cooking purposes is obtained from very shallow dug wells, many of which have become contaminated by surface drainage. Sanitary conditions surrounding the homes of the residents are being improved as fast as possible and it is hoped that the epidemic can be stayed, although a number of new cases were reported yesterday, one of the patients being Mrs. Boyd Harvey.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 8 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows. Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.

Preaching 8 p. m.

Luther League every Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sunday at 11 a. m.

Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

Call for Your Letters.

M. L. Brown, Miss Veda Hesse, Mr. T. A. Nenny, Mr. David Noontz, Mr. J. P. Neccessary, Mrs. H. T. Pressey, Miss Emma Reed, Miss Ida Ross.

MAN MURDERED AT HENRY, W. VA.

One Foreigner Killed Another During a Quarrel Over a Woman.

Two foreigners got into an altercation over a woman at Henry, W. Va., on the Western Maryland railroad, Saturday shortly before midnight and one shot and stabbed the other to death. The knife thrust went through the dead man's heart. The murderer escaped, but was arrested Sunday morning at Bayard, W. Va., while he was in a restaurant eating breakfast. On his person were found two razors, a revolver and a stiletto. It is stated that the murdered man was an Italian and the murderer a Polander, both about 25 years old, and that the killing took place at a wedding among the foreign population.

Rowdyism In District No. 4.

'Squire M. M. Fazenbaker, of District No. 4, Garrett county, was in Lonaconing yesterday, and looked up the Times reporter. The 'Squire says that he is determined to stop the lawlessness in his district. There are a few crossroads desperadoes out there, and the 'Squire is after them. He says that the people of the district are afraid of these toughs and will not make information against them. About three weeks ago one of these fellows—Wesley Custard by name—tried to kill Clyde Michaels, an aged farmer of District No. 4. Custard was paying attention to Michael's hired girl, and was visiting her one night. Mr. Michaels had occasion to leave the house for a few minutes and as he returned Custard whipped out a revolver and fired at the old man. Fortunately he missed him, but Michaels thought he was shot and fell to the ground and shouted murder.

No one has had the courage to make information against Custard, and the 'Squire can do nothing till the grand jury convenes, when he will go to Oakland and ask for an indictment. 'Squire Fazenbaker assures the Times that he would make short work of the gunmen and toughs in his district if the people who are terrorized by them had the courage to come to him and make information against them. They fear that they will be ambushed or that their houses and barns will be burned.

'Squire Fazenbaker is the father of Dr. C. J. Fazenbaker, of Westernport, and Harrison Fazenbaker, of Lonaconing, and several other brainy and stalwart sons. The 'Squire was doing some business with the George's Creek Coal and Iron Company yesterday.—Lonaconing Corr. Cumberland Times, August 14.

FOR RENT—A good farm. About 50 acres under cultivation; twenty acres in grass; good barn and house; plenty of wood for fuel; about two miles from Oakland. For further particulars address "Farm," Republican office, Oakland, Md. 22-4t

DIXON & KELSO

Wholesale Retail

PEACHES! PEACHES!

Peach season is on and we are headquarters for same.

Will receive fresh Peaches daily.

Price the Lowest.

Car load of Mason's Fruit Jars, Jelly Glasses and Stoneware at Bottom Prices.

Come and See
DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

Cut Prices
ON Low Shoes.

Cut this ad. out and bring it with you and I will allow you a rebate of 50 cents on Men's Women's and Boy's, and 25 cents on Misses' and Children's low cut Shoes.

This offer good during July and August.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

Not So Much Corruption In Congress As Formerly.

By J. WARREN KEIFER, Congressman and Ex-Speaker of the House.

THE world is growing better despite the wholesale charges of stealing in the commercial world and fraud and graft in the legislative halls. Away back in the early times here there was a SYNDICATE OF THIEVING MEN who tried to make money out of the plans for the city of Washington. They bought up all the land in the vicinity of the capitol building, thinking to force the growth of the city in that direction and selling to the government at enormous profits. THEY EVEN GOT GEORGE WASHINGTON INTO THE SCHEME. A lot of Dutchmen outwitted them by building in the opposite direction, on what is now known as Pennsylvania avenue, and so the CONSPIRATORS WERE DISAPPOINTED and lost a lot of money in the bargain.

THERE IS NOT SO MUCH CORRUPTION IN CONGRESS AS FORMERLY. CONGRESS UNDERWENT A GREAT PURIFICATION PROCESS DURING THE CIVIL WAR. IN THOSE DAYS IT WAS A VERY COMMON THING TO PUT ROTTEN JOBS THROUGH THE TWO HOUSES.

I don't think that many serious frauds are perpetrated nowadays on the public in legislation. A few bills with a small degree of jobbery in them may get through, but not many.

THE CORRUPT LOBBYIST IS NOT TOLERATED HERE ANY MORE. TWENTY-FIVE AND THIRTY YEARS AGO THIS PARASITE THRIVED IN WASHINGTON. SOME OF THE WORST AND MOST UNSCRUPULOUS IN THE WORLD WERE HERE IN THOSE DAYS, AND THEY HAD ENOUGH INFLUENCE TO STOP LEGISLATION THEY DIDN'T WANT AND PUT THROUGH NO END OF FRAUDULENT CLAIM BILLS AND PUBLIC LAND STEALS.

I think the lobby against the homestead bill which infested the capitol for twenty-five years was the MOST GIGANTIC FRAUDULENT COMBINATION of the kind ever organized.

Importance of Pacific Ocean In World's Future.

By BENJAMIN IDE WHEELER, President of the University of California.

THE people on the Pacific coast are enthusiastic about the approach of the battleship fleet. They are glad that the nation has DISCOVERED IT HAS A PACIFIC OCEAN and that the Pacific coast is being recognized as a part of the United States. On every hand there is great rejoicing that the fleet is coming.

Our relations with Japan are still difficult. We have many difficult problems to solve with the Japanese yet, although the agitation has settled considerably on the coast. This has been due to a great extent to the peaceable internal policy of Japan. We now live on a friendly understanding.

This friendly understanding will be better understood when all our efforts and power as a nation are clearly set forth. But the BEST PEOPLE OF JAPAN will have a strong influence to SETTLE ALL QUESTIONS PEACEABLY.

We have just as important a role to play in the Pacific, which FROM THIS TIME ON BECOMES THE CENTER of the working out of the great problems of the world's history.

WITHIN THE NEXT CENTURY CHINA IS COMING INTO THE WORLD. IT HAS BEEN OUT OF THE WORLD UP TO THIS TIME. AND SO IS INDIA COMING INTO THE WORLD. CHINA, INDIA AND JAPAN REPRESENT HALF OF THE WORLD'S POPULATION. THESE PEOPLE ARE JUST BEGINNING TO PLAY A PART IN THE WORLD'S AFFAIRS. THEY WILL BE OCCUPIED WITH PACIFIC OCEAN MATTERS. THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA DON'T REALIZE THE TREMENDOUS POTENTIALITIES THAT RESIDE IN PENT-UP CHINA.

Home Rule For Ireland Almost In Sight.

By JOHN E. REDMOND, M. P., Irish Politician.

IN Ireland the people are determined to permit NO DIVISION IN THE NATIONAL RANKS, for they fully realize that a united party in the English house of commons, backed by a united Irish nation outside, must in the end prove irresistible.

OF COURSE ENGLISHMEN ARE CONSTANTLY TALKING OF IRISH DISUNION, BUT THEY FORGET THE DISUNION AMONG THEMSELVES. HOW MANY PARTIES AND SUBDIVISIONS OF PARTIES ARE THERE IN ENGLAND NOW?

There is another fact which they also forget—that, despite the differences which have arisen among Irish nationalists since the Parnell crisis, HOME RULE HAS HELD ITS GROUND. We stand as we stood before the crisis.

THE BITTERNESS AGAINST HOME RULE WHICH EXISTED TWENTY YEARS AGO HAS DISAPPEARED. I BELIEVE IT WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE TO INFLAME THE ENGLISH MIND AGAINST HOME RULE NOW AS IT WAS THEN.

Remember that a great cry was made against home rule twenty years ago because people said that the landlords would be plundered. But the "PLUNDERING" legislation which was then objected to has since in great measure taken place, and though the question is not yet settled it is in process of settlement and THE IRISH PEASANTS ARE BEING SLOWLY BUT INEVITABLY MADE THE OWNERS OF THEIR HOLDINGS. The cry of "Don't grant home rule or the landlords will be robbed!" is not longer available to the Unionist party. Another cry which was raised was that an Irish parliament would establish and endow a Catholic university. That cry is no longer available either, because Unionist leaders are practically pledged to a university for Catholics. In fact, the Unionists themselves have in a sense been forced to throw down their own lines of defenses.

INFIDELITY DIFFICULT TO EXPLAIN

Mrs. John A. Logan Draws Interesting Deductions From the Subject.

One is shocked beyond measure at the innumerable cases of unfaithfulness on the part of husbands who have hitherto been reckoned among honorable members of society. A recent instance, if the newspaper reports be true, is especially sad. A member of a prominent Philadelphia family married a beautiful young woman eight or ten years ago. Two children are the fruits of this union. There has not been a breath of scandal against this lovely wife and mother. Now it is stated that the husband has become enamored of another woman, that he deliberately proposes to settle $100,000 upon the mother of his children and give her one of the children if she will take up a residence in North Dakota long enough to obtain a divorce from him and leave him free to marry the woman who has robbed him of every sense of honor and decency. The fact that the wife has gone to North Dakota to live for the time being would indicate that the report is correct.

If it is true, this wronged wife has made a mistake. No woman, so betrayed and abandoned without provocation on her part, should for one moment consent to anything that carried with it freedom to her faithless husband. This is the one weapon she has for her defense, and she should hold fast to that for her own and her children's sake, and she might eventually see her husband recover his senses and witness his keen remorse for his cruelty.

Such examples of infidelity by persons in high places have been followed by others in the lower walks of life. It seems worse for men who find it difficult to make comfortable provision for his lawful family to undertake to gratify the wicked caprices of sirens, who have beguiled them from the paths of rectitude and honor. The wives of such men have usually been loyally devoted to their husbands and children, self-denying and economic in their domestic affairs accepting their fate with cheerful resignation, rarely knowing for a long time that their husbands were leading dual lives.

That which is the most astonishing in such cases is that men of intelligence and self-respect can be attracted by women of the character they must be who would attempt to wean them from their families. And yet, when they are exposed, they with perfect effrontery of their escapades and of the "outrage" of anyone interfering with their "private business," affirming that their relations are based upon love they have for each other, boldly declaring that when they are freed from the matrimonial bonds which forbid them to commit bigamy, they will hasten to be married.

Take the late case of one Hobson. When caught in New York with Mrs. Pyle, the wife of another Washington man, he is reported to have said: "Mrs. Pyle and I found we cared for each other some time ago, and so, when I was forced to make this little business trip, she came with me. We had both left our homes before we met each other, and we didn't consider either her husband or my wife as any hindrance to our happiness."

Mrs. Pyle was indignant because her trip to New York was referred to in the newspapers as a lark. "There's no lark about it," she declared. "This is the most interesting and important event in my life, and upon the outcome depends my future happiness."

An interview with the abandoned wife of Hobson revealed the fact that she and her two little children under five years of age had not known of the husband's whereabouts for weeks, or received a cent from him for their support.

Instead of such offenders against society being ostracised, they are treated with leniency and many excuses are made for them, and in all too many instances the inoffensive wives and husbands accused of all kinds of inhumanity and hartlessness. It is incomprehensible that the authorities are loath to punish these violators of the laws of the sacred institution of marriage, which is the foundation of morality and the most holy relation of life. Nine times out of ten the unhappy abandoned partners are unable to get any kind of redress and are left to spend the remainder of their days in melancholy reveries over the sacrifice of the best of their lives upon the altar of matrimony.

PREACHER SAYS CREMATE DEAD

Says the Dead in the Cemeteries are Contaminating the Living.

In the Church of the Redemption, Locust Point, on Sunday, Rev. W. A. Crawford Frost preached on the text Numbers xvi, 48: "And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed." He said, in part:

When the Israelites were smitten by the plague God told Moses, and Moses told Aaron, what to do. The high priest took a censor and offered incense and made an atonement for the people. He stood between the dead, who numbered in all over 14,000, and the living; and the plague way stayed. This may have been a miracle. God knows many laws of nature that man has not found out yet, and He could work miracles if He wanted to, but perhaps Aaron used an incense that was in itself a disinfectant or mixed a disinfectant with it and so killed all the germs in the camp.

One thing our text brings out clearly: Aaron by means of this religious rite succeeded in seperating the dead, who were a source of comtanination, from the living, who were in danger from it.

The city of Baltimore is at the present time stricken down in the grasp of typhoid fever. Yesterday on a Carey street car I passed two houses with crape on the door on opposite sides of the street in the same block. This is ominous. I am informed by a physician resident on Locust Point that the spread of the disease here is appalling. The hospitals are full and the cases are so numerous that the doctors find it impossible to give to patients proper care in their homes. An emergency hospital is badly needed in this section. The faithful rector of a neighboring church has, through the press, made a powerful appeal that the City Council should do justice to South Baltimore. At present this part of the city, from a sanitary standpoint, is in a frightful condition. The clergy and the doctors must stand shoulder to shoulder between the living and the dead to prevent the former from joining the ranks of the latter. Again, the dead in the cemeteries surrounding Baltimore are co taminating the living. Nearly all the burial grounds are higher than the lower portions of the city and the water must drain from them into the lower sections. Many people seem to think that placing a body in the earth will destroy the germs of disease like typhoid fever. This is a dreadful mistake. Those germs spread and propagate in the water under ground with incredible rapidity, so that the whole city becomes contaminated, and if there is a break anywhere in a water pipe the people drink in the deathly the deadly stuff. Surely, the ministers of the city can stand between the dead and the living here by advocating cremation with all their powers.

We will never be able to stay the plague of typhoid fever so long as the typhoid excreta are allowed to be discharged into cesspools and either private or public sewers. The city should supply suitable disinfected vessels and collect such matter every day and burn it. Then, and then only, can we stay this plague.

The Gold Mine Store is the place to get your candy, post cards, tobaccos, toys, wagons, base ball goods and fishing tackle of all kinds. Two bottles of pop for 5c.

SAY THERE IS NO POLITICAL MOVE

Baltimore and Ohio Officials Explain Their Attitude in Hepburn Act Cases.

The Baltimore American of yesterday says:

The hearing of the three conductors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, now under arrest for violation of the Hepburn act, which forbids discrimination in both passenger and freight traffic, will be held Wednesday. All the evidence in the possession of the railroad company has been furnished the United States District Attorney's office, and while the Baltimore and Ohio will be represented by counsel, the duty of prosecution devolves upon the Federal authorities.

Whether there is any political significance behind the action of the railroad company, which brought about the detection and arrest of its employes, is a question which has aroused much comment. It is understood that an effort will be made to prove that the conductors concerned accepted from the passenger in the case cash fare below the regular rate and failed to make any returns to the railroad company. So far as the railroad is concerned, therefore, the effect is that of carrying the passenger free.

Under ordinary circumstances dismissal from service would be the punishment meted out to the employes who might violate the rules of the company by carrying passengers free of all charge. In this particular instance, however, the Hepburn act has been brought to bear, and the duty of prosecution is placed upon the Federal authorities.

If it shall appear, as a result of the hearing, that violation of the act will result in the punishment being visited upon the agents of the company, instead of upon the corporation itself, the inevitable result will be the arousing of the ire of the railroad unions toward the Hepburn act, and indirectly, it may be, towards the party in power, which was responsible for the passage of the act. Is this the purpose of the arrest of the conductors? Is there any desire to discredit the administration with the labor elements of the country?

Officials of the railroad company says no, and disclaim any motive other than the desire to bring about the punishment of employes charged with violating company orders, and, incidentally, the Hepburn act. It is believed, however, that there is behind it all a desire to impress upon the federal authorities that the railroad is anxious and willing to obey the law, but that there is always present the possibility of its being violated by irresponsible employes. Should the incidental effect be aroused the antagonism of the labor unions towards the act and towards the administration the responsibility therefor will not be assumed by the Baltimore and Ohio. The hearing Wednesday will be of unusual importance, attracting the attention not only of the railroad people generally, but the whole labor world.

Corporation people generally, and the business world, have allowed it to be understood that they prefer Taft to Bryan. There has been no secret made of the fact that the Roosevelt policies are unpopular, and there exists a willingness to attack them. A complex element is, however, infused into the political situation by the action of the Baltimore and Ohio, especially should it result in directing towards the Herburn act the fire of the labor unions.

The Hepburn act is so popular with the railroads. As a result of it they have made great savings, although it is to be noted that they do not appear in the annual statements—a fact which is explained as due to the general industrial depression. It may be that the labor unions of the country will insist upon a revision of the act as regards the placing of responsibility and the degree of punishment in case of violation, and, on the other hand, the whole affair may be in the nature of a warning served upon the entire country as illustrative of the extremity of the act.

It is not believed that the labor element of the country will regard the incident as one of the political significance, although it may result in an effort being made to make railroads more directly responsible for violations of the act. The whole question is a legal one rather than of political purport. It resolves itself into that of the liability of the employer. The trend of modern legislation has been to make the employer responsible for the acts of the employe or agent, the result in a general way being to secure the employment of responsible persons, and to cause corporations to exercise due diligence in securing conscientions labor on the part of the employe. If the burden is to be shifted to the employe it is not at all improbable that labor en masse will protest against any interpretation of law in such a way as to make unions responsible for the acts of an irresponsible few. In such an event the issue would be the old one of labor in a contest for its rights against capital and not one of labor against party.

FINEST TRAIN IN INDIA.

In Some Respects It Has Advantages Over Those of America.

The American has long been taught, and perhaps rightly so, that the United States is the real home of the railroad, but a passenger train has just been placed in service in India by the side of which the finest passenger train in this country would not have the advantage, as far as comforts for travelers are concerned.

Chief among the special features of this train, which runs between Calcutta and Bombay, are the bathrooms. There are three of these in each first-class coach, or corridor saloon, as they are called. The tops of the basins are almost on a level with the floor and are provided with hinged covers to keep out dust and dirt. The floors are tiled with unglazed encaust tiles and the sides are paneled to the window sills in a glazed sanitary tile of dark shade.

The train consists of two composite baggage and third-class coaches, three first-class corridor saloons and a dining car. The first-class coaches are 63 feet long, 10 feet wide and 9 feet high. Each car is divided off into four compartments with four berths to each, and an additional stateroom at one end. The seats and berths are upholstered in dark green morocco. At intervals throughout the entire train are electric fans which keep the air in circulation.

ENGINEER'S TAME SPARROW.

Has a Fondness for Railroad Men—His Queer Nesting Place.

Jim is the name of a sparrow which is the pet of the engine drivers and firemen at one of the railroad centers in the north of Scotland.

He was hatched within the noisy precincts of a busy locomotive stable, but falling out of the nest before being fully fledged, was placed in a cage and tenderly cared for in the in the railroad office. On the third day he began to be friendly, and in a very short time was flying all over the room, and even allowed himself to be petted.

In fact, he quickly became so tame that one day when his owner (the local railroad engineer) was writing he flew onto his hand and quietly fell asleep, and when about six months old began to accompany him on his daily rounds among the engines in the yard, perched jauntily on his shoulder or hopping contentedly by his side.

He chooses very queer places for his nests, the oddest and most awkward so far being the inside breast coat pocket of his owner, whom he would follow wherever he went, stuffing the selected pocket with miscellaneous nesting material. Jim is now six years of age.—Animals' Friend.

Subscribe for The Republican.

DOLLIE AND THE MANEATER.

By Colin S. Collins.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"I can't help it because I am rich, can I?"

Paul Vinton spoke of his wealth as though it were a thing accursed. Dollie Darcy shook her head with judicial solemnity.

"I don't suppose that you can," she admitted. "At the same time, Paul, you cannot blame me for taking an interest in people who do things."

"Such as waiting on table?" retorted Vinton. "I don't see anything to command respectful admiration in a job like that."

"But he is a college man," reminded Dollie. "Just fancy a student so anxious to learn that he will wait on table in a hotel to gain the funds for his tuition!"

"He would do well to go to a grammar school first," growled Vinton. "He waited on me this morning and when I asked for eggs he told me that 'the eggs isn't very fresh.' That's good grammar for a college student, and then his slang is something weird."

"George Ade uses slang," cited Dollie defensively. "I'm sure that no one ever accused Mr. Ade of being common."

"Because he keeps his slang for his books and plays," reminded Vinton.

Dollie checked the sharp speech that sprang to her lips and hurried down the piazza steps to join a bespectacled youth who appeared around the corner of the hotel.

He was not an inviting sort of person. One ear was considerably larger than the other and an aggressive chin belied a mildness of appearance due to the large lensed spectacles he wore. His hands and feet were large and unmanageable and his clothes fitted him as though they had been made for a man of more generous build.

"HE'S THE MAN TO TIE TO, ALL RIGHT."

The Hotel Breeze had solved the servant problem by employing college students as waiters. It had become fashionable to take an interest in these struggling aspirants for learning, and Dollie Darcy was nothing if not fashionable. Even though it threatened a break with Paul Vinton—whom she expected to marry some day—she insisted on having her student to be interested in.

Dollie had picked out Brady as the favored one for the reason that he seemed the most forlorn and desolate one in the lot. There was something almost pathetic to her in the idea of this man who maltreated the English language so brutally seeking a higher education, and she found his personality interesting and at times amusing.

There were other times when the man bored her sadly, but she would not confess that she found him tiresome lest Paul should think the victory lay with him.

Every evening when the tables had been cleared and the dining room put in order Brady would slip down to the beach and walk or sit with Dollie, while Vinton sat on the piazza and vowed that he would leave the place for some better resort where the waiters were not the fad of the moment.

He never went, for on second thoughts he told himself it would be better to stay on and look after Dollie. She must tire of her fad presently, and perhaps on the rebound he might induce her to say the coveted "Yes."

Dismally Vinton realized that the waiting game was bound to be a long one, and chancing upon Dollie waiting on the sands for her waiter protege Paul was moved to reopen his argument.

Following an unusually hot day the humidity of an approaching storm deprived the sufferers of the relief of the night breezes. Dollie was tired and irritable and in no frame of mind for an argument. Both raised their voices slightly above the pitch of good breeding, and Brady, coming upon them suddenly, gathered that there had been a dispute.

"Has this guy been unbuttonin' his lip?" he demanded of Dollie.

Perhaps it was the heat, perhaps it was the memory of some of the things that Vinton had said. At any rate, there was a barely perceptible pause before Dollie languidly responded:

"He has been very annoying. I am glad you have come," she said.

Brady picked up a pebble and tossed it down the beach.

"Go after it," he urged. "You ain't wanted here, Bo. Notify your feet to get busy with your shoes and pedal hard."

"I presume you are trying to urge me to go away," suggested Vinton coldly.

"You've got a fine presumer," commended Brady. "Gear it up a little higher. It's runnin' too slow."

"I am grateful for your advice," said Vinton with sarcasm that appeared to be lost upon the other, "but it is not my intention to take myself off until Miss Darcy signifies to me that my presence here is unwelcome."

"You heard her say that you made her tired," reminded Brady. "Be a nice little boy, Bo, and go play in the next yard. There's a fine cellar door there. Go slide down it."

Vinton looked inquiringly at Dollie, but she made no sign. Brady was displaying a new phase of his many sided character and she found it rather interesting. Vinton, too, puzzled her, and she wanted to see what he would do.

She had not long to wait, for, with a final appeal to take a walk before his feet hurt him and he couldn't, Brady advanced toward his antagonist.

Short and sharp was the encounter. Brady struck first, and Vinton, nothing loath, responded. In both men the primal instinct was aroused, and they fought for the favor of a woman as men in the stone age fought.

For the moment Vinton forgot Dollie's presence, forgot everything except his desire to avenge the blow.

Brady had slipped off his glasses at the first sign of trouble and he was somewhat at a disadvantage, but for all of that he had the best of the fight, though Vinton had taken boxing lessons from an old champion and was accounted more than ordinarily skillful at the game.

They were on a strip of the beach little frequented in the evening and the encounter attracted no attention. In five minutes Vinton was down and out and Dollie was kneeling beside him in the sand seeking to restore him to consciousness. He opened his eyes presently and smiled into Dollie's anxious face.

"It's all right," he said weakly. "That little college student of yours has the skill of a professional prize fighter."

"Sure!" assented Brady. "You was goin' some, Bo, but your company was too fast. I used to be the Cherry hill maneater until me eyes went on the blink and I had to look for somethin' easier. I been teachin' the rah-rah boys to handle their hams lately. It's a puddin' alongside the other game. The doc told me to get some salt air for the summer an' I'm pickin' a piece of the coin while I'm doin' it. I fought Terry five rounds to a draw once," he added with pride.

"And now you are studying for college?" asked Dollie wonderingly.

"I was teachin'," explained the maneater. "I was professor of boxin'. What's all this row about college anyway? When the boss cook hired me he says, 'I s'pose you come from college?' And I told him I just come from there. Now you're harpin' on the same string."

"The waiters this season are all students working their way through college," explained Dollie. "That was why I"—

She paused in confusion and Brady completed the sentence for her.

"That was why you mashed me?" he asked good naturedly. "I'm sorry for you, sis, but I ain't the real goods. Better stick to his job lots over there. He's in your class. I ain't no heavyweight."

Dollie regarded Paul, nursing a rapidly blackening optic, and smiled. At the moment Vinton seemed anything but romantic.

"That's all right," interposed the maneater understandingly. "A bit of raw steak will fix that up. He's the man to tie to, all right. There ain't many chaps like him that could give me the run he did. You hook up."

"Thank you. I will take your advice," declared Dollie as she sank down on the sand beside Vinton, and seeing that he was no longer wanted the maneater slipped away rubbing his cauliflower ear reflectively.

"I hope he won't beat the little dame," he said musingly. "He sure can hit, even if he can't lick me." And the maneater never realized that with Cupid as referee Paul was the winner after all.

A Vivid Description.

A shortsighted and deaf old gentleman who was at an entertainment where a professor performed on a big bass viol thus described the scene: "The professor carried on to the platform a gigantic beetle attached to the end of a sort of lamppost. He leaned over and fondly embraced it, tickling its back violently with a long comb.

"The spectators seemed much delighted at this display of scientific affection. The beetle was apparently quite unmoved. Then the professor gave a capital imitation of the drunken man and the lamppost. He swayed rapidly up and down, clutching quickly at all points.

"Sometimes his fingers quivered passionately upon one spot, like an ill tempered man struggling with an obstinate pair of braces. Sometimes he rested momentarily, as one rests after a contest with a stiff white tie.

"Finally he gave a last convulsive tickle to the huge beetle, picked himself up from the lamppost and carried off the unresisting insect. The audience applauded vigorously."

A Fluctuating Fortune.

"About how much do you figure that you are worth?" asked the old time friend.

"How do I know?" replied Mr. Cumrox. "Mother and the girls have joined a bridge whist club."—Washington Star.

Great American Navy to Guarantee World's Peace.

By RICHMOND P. HOBSON, Congressman From Alabama, Former Naval Officer.

THE NAVY IS AMERICA'S ONLY NATIONAL INSURANCE. JAPAN SOON WILL MAKE THE ATTEMPT TO CONTROL THE PACIFIC, AND WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES IS INEVITABLE.

There is but one way for America to enforce peace, and that way lies in the building up of A GREAT NAVY, and I believe that the whole world is looking to this nation TO GUARANTEE THE PEACE OF THE WORLD.

The white race and the yellow race will clash, and THE FIRST WAR WILL BE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN. This will be followed by a general war between the white and yellow races unless by the building up of a great navy this country shows Japan the FOOLISHNESS of engaging in a war with the United States.

Japan has ordered $125,000,000 worth of great warships since her war with Russia. Japan does not need these ships against Russia, China or Great Britain. Japan has added five divisions to her army since her war with Russia, and the military activities of Japan have more than doubled since that trouble came to a close. The United States has furnished them 750,000 rifles. Japan can put 200,000 soldiers aboard ships inside of four days.

The Japanese could land 400,000 soldiers on the Pacific slope in four months, another 400,000 in six months more and a million men in a year. They could put TEN SOLDIERS TO OUR ONE on the Pacific slope. Japan will have eight new battleships ready for service soon, any one of them equal in effectiveness to three of ours. If they get the Pacific ocean they will take the Pacific slope.

THE JAPANESE HAVE EDUCATED THEIR PEOPLE TO HATE AMERICANS, AND THE PEOPLE ARE ONLY AWAITING THE GOVERNMENT'S SIGNAL TO GO TO WAR. THE GOVERNMENT IS AWAITING ONLY A PRETEXT.

United States Should Expand From Panama to the Arctic.

By JOHN A. JOHNSON, Governor of Minnesota.

WORLD power is a great thing, but centralization of power is fraught with danger. I incline to the belief that it is the bankers rather than the system (of currency) that cause or prevent trouble.

NO CORPORATION SHOULD BE PERMITTED BY LAW TO ISSUE A SHARE OF STOCK THAT DOES NOT STAND FOR PAID IN CASH AND CERTIFIED BY STATE EXAMINATION.

If we have a Hawaiian wart on the national nose and a Philippine hump on Uncle Sam's back, doubtless we will have to look out for them.

It may be that the Japanese situation demands an extension of our preparations. In fact, I do not object to naval progress or our keeping up with the procession, but I CANNOT AVOID REGRETTING that our national policy, instead of going after distant islands, did not move in the direction of extending the boundaries of the United States FROM THE PANAMA CANAL TO THE ARCTIC OCEAN—not by conquest, of course, but by FRIENDSHIP, ALLIANCE, CONCORD AND AMALGAMATION. If Mexico and Canada were states of our Union there would be no necessity of great fleets. Even as it is, what country would venture to attack us?

I DO NOT CONSIDER THAT IT IS THE PROVINCE OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO ASSUME THE POWERS THAT, AS A MATTER OF THE LAW OF THE LAND, APPERTAIN TO THE STATES.

No War Between Japan And China or America.

By WU TING FANG, Chinese Ambassador to the United States.

THE relations between Japan and China are cordial. There may be some friction, but it is local. That may occur in any country. So far as my knowledge goes, Japan has not violated the Portsmouth treaty with reference to the open door policy in Manchuria.

China is organizing a good modern army, but as to its size I cannot say. That's too long a story at this time.

China has made WONDERFUL PROGRESS in the last few years. In its army, its schools, its railroad industries and other industries China will become a modern nation, but it must go slow.

THE PEOPLE ARE NOW PREPARING FOR A CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT. When a constitution will be granted I cannot say—at least not until the people are educated to know that it is what it is and what it means. That will take some time.

I do not believe there will be war between Japan and this country or ANY OTHER COUNTRY.

I AM POSITIVE THAT JAPAN IS NOT SEEKING WAR, BUT WISHES TO MAINTAIN PEACE. I CANNOT BELIEVE OTHERWISE OR SEE WHAT IT WOULD GAIN BY WAR.

Americans Have and Want Too Much.

By Bishop FREDERICK BURGESS of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Long Island.

WE Americans have altogether too much. Our men are GREEDY FOR WEALTH, and they will sacrifice honor, truth and nobility to get it. Our women are not contented unless their HOUSES ARE CRAMMED FULL of costly rugs and tapestries, and they vie with one another in the cost of their toilets and in the amount spent upon their tables. Children are brought up in the midst of the WORST KIND OF SNOBBISHNESS.

LIVELY KICKER ITEMS

Always Something Doing In the Land of Giveadam Gulch.

SEEKS LOP SHOULDER MAN.

Editor Jim Hellso Wants to Know as to His Whereabouts In Order to Ease the Mind of a Heartbroken Father. Other Important News.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

Henry Shine and William Davis of Lone Jack had a dispute last Saturday as to the weight of Secretary Taft, and guns were drawn and eight shots fired. When shyster lawyers shoot at each other no one is hurt.

The editor of the Blue Hills Banner called us a liar over the telephone the other day. Three hours later, when we appeared in Blue Hills with a calling card in our hand, the man had been gone into the mountains for two hours.

If any one has come across a young man with a lop shoulder and a pair of bow legs and answering to the name of French, please forward particulars at once. His heartbroken father is here at the Gulch and wants to know what has become of him. If any of the cowboys around here hung him for horse stealing, forward particulars just the same. It will ease the father's mind to know that his son was not drowned in some river or smothered in a snowdrift.

A YOUNG MAN WITH LOP SHOULDERS AND A PAIR OF BOW LEGS.

Numerous subscribers are writing us to ask what candidate we propose to support at the coming presidential election. As postmaster of Giveadam Gulch we wish to hold our job, and we shall be in no hurry to come out and swing our hat. Bread and butter first, patriotism next.

Our esteemed contemporary announced in a column article last week that he would cheerfully lead a party to pull us up to the limb of a tree. After straining his intellect to make the announcement he borrowed money for a trip to Salt Lake and proposes to be gone a month.

Colonel John Sloat of Big X ranch called on us the other day and insisted that the Kicker pick a fuss with Japan. Because we refused to do it he stopped his paper and went away mad. We have had to gently shoot the colonel three different times in the last four years to keep him in the harness, and it looks as if we should have to bore him again.

The Hellso Opera House closed its season last Saturday night with "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It was a dramatic close. The boys shot out all the lights, three actors had their shoe heels shot off, and the company started the next morning to walk the distance to Florence. We are a theatrical people at the Gulch, but sometimes we grow most too enthusiastic.

Some of the papers in this territory are making fun of our presidential boom and asking where it is. Don't sweat your collars, gentlemen. We have started out to be president of the United States, and though it may take a little time we shall get there in the end if we don't catch the measles. Wait for the dark horse.

Mr. Buffalo Johnson, who imagines himself a holy terror, was notified by the vigilance committee last Sunday evening to leave the Gulch within six hours. He got out with five and a half hours to spare, and the tracks he made in going were five feet apart. When it's up to a western man it's beautiful to see him hustle.

One George Henderson of Utah got it into his head that it was his duty to remove us to another sphere, and on Monday morning he called in at our sanctum to do the little act. After he had fired five shots at us we took a hand in the game, and George is now in the hospital and a doctor is looking for the bullet in his shoulder. He anticipated an easy victory and a crown of laurels and is somewhat disappointed at the outcome.

Jim Hellso, which is us, does not hold fourteen different elective and appointive offices, as some of the papers announce. We hold only seven, and we don't know where on earth to scare up another. Some newspaper men may think it a duty to edit their papers from the poorhouse, but we don't belong to the bunch. When we work for the country at large we expect to get our dollar a day and board and lodgings.

The money stringency that struck the country last fall has had no effect whatever on Giveadam Gulch. There was only a dollar or two in the town, and that has been circulating from hand to hand to give everybody a fair show. Another dollar is expected next month, and then we shall probably have a real estate boom.

Mr. Charles Harrison, a representative of a waterworks system, returned to Chicago yesterday after a stay of four weeks in the town. He came to see about putting in waterworks, but as he saw only one gallon of water used during his stay he became discouraged and went his way.

We had nothing against Mr. Thomas Weed, but when his wife gave a birthday party and left us out in order to administer a social snub we communicated with a sheriff in Pennsylvania, and Mr. Weed went back east last week to finish the balance of his term in prison. We are not a cantankerous cuss, but we are the head of society in this town, and any attempt to rub it in on us will witness the departure of some well known citizen.

Mr. George Bates of Lone Jack has lost his third wife and has our congratulations. She has eloped, like her predecessors, and if he doesn't overhaul her he may count on being rid of her for good and all. If he takes a fourth he ought to get one so lame in both legs that she can't skidoo. As to divorces and all that, George is not a man to let them bother him.

In shooting at Jim Cummings the other day an individual from Montana named Waterford killed a valuable broncho belonging to Silas Williams. The man is in jail, and even if he pays the price of the broncho the jury will want to know by what right a critter like him is carrying a gun around. No wonder Arizona is refused statehood. M. QUAD.

Not to Be Wasted.

"I suppose you pride yourself on your garden," said the girl who tries to be agreeable, "even though it isn't very large."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It's jest as easy for Mandy to raise some green corn an' tomatoes as it is to keep up a patch o' marigolds an' petunias."

"But of course you raise things to eat?"

"Nope. That garden's too good an advertisement to be devoured by a lot o' boarders."—Washington Star.

Good Ad.

The Midget—Hello, Mary. Now that the show season is over, are you going to loaf all summer?

The Fat Lady—Well, I should say not, Gaspard. I have a contract from a country boarding house to sit in the railroad station when the train comes in and advertise the table.—Pittsburg Post.

Before the Scrap.

"So that dude in the grand stand said I umpired a stiff game, did he?" questioned the vain umpire.

"Well, he didn't exactly use those words," replied the messenger boy.

"But he said something similar?"

"Yes; he said you umpired like a stiff."—Chicago News.

His Days of Prosperity.

"You haven't always been a hobo, I take it."

"No, sir. I can remember the time when I could pay for a room at a hotel and had a watch and pocketbook to leave under the pillow."—New York Press.

Not Too Loud.

Mother—You should have given an alarm when that bold young Staylate kissed you last night.

Daughter (demurely)—I did give one.

Big Brother—Humph! It must have been a still alarm.—Baltimore American.

In Kidville.

The sheath skirt hits Kidville.—New York American.

The Superstitious Man.

He was a superstitious man,
Who loved a pretty maid.
He woed her long, but still to pop
The question he delayed.
At last resolved to know his fate,
Beneath the moon's pale sheen
He started forth, but soon recalled
The date—it was thirteen.

Returning to his little rooms,
"If I should ask her, lo,
Upon this hoodoo date," he cried,
"She'd surely answer no!
Tomorrow is the fourteenth; then
I'll sally forth again
To win her promise, and I feel
It will not be in vain."

So, dressed with most exceeding care,
Next evening forth he went
And, kneeling at her feet, implored
The maiden's sweet consent.
Alas, his superstition got
A fearful jolt instead!
"Ed Bates proposed last night, and I Accepted him," she said.

—Minnie Irving in New York Herald.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK,

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

ON AUGUST 28, Mr. Taft goes fishing for bass in Lake Erie. His opponent will stay at home and angle for 30-cent campaign contributions.

IF BRYAN is to be so busily plied with brothering questions at this stage of the game what may not happen when the campaign really begins to get warm?

IN this campaign the question is principally one of the best man for the place. The records of both are open for a long period of years, so the decision should not be difficult. Mr. Taft's record is one of official competence and judicial mentality from the beginning. Mr. Bryan's record is one of espousing discredited and discarded theories—theories and issues which he admits have been disproved by events. The question before the voters is whether they will choose for a chief executive, to meet the emergencies of government, a man whose judgment has been at fault upon every question, where he was free to choose.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"SHALL the people rule?" asks Mr. Bryan. The people, using a familiar locution, might well ask him, "What do you take us for?" In truth, if the people were what Mr. Bryan takes them to be, they would be unfit to rule. It is perfectly evident that Mr. Bryan proceeds upon the assumption that the people have short memories, no fixed beliefs, no respect to permanent principles, and that they are guided rather by emotion than by sound sense. The people will look in vain in Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance for any program of statesmanship and administration. The chief characteristic of the speech is its adroitness. The whole country was to read this utterance, so Mr. Bryan refrained from discussing those topics that in many states would hurt him.—New York Times.

PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

If we may judge from what we see in the Democratic papers, the paramount issue for Mr. Bryan this year is his campaign fund, says the New York Tribune Not only does the peerless one touch upon the fund problem almost every day, but much of the talk from his headquarters and in his organs is on the same palpitating subject Mr. Bryan recently greeted a delegation of visiting farmers with undisguised warmth because, coming on the train they had taken up a collection of $50 to help "the people rule." Then there is Mr. Bryan's Commoner, now sailing under false colors in the keeping of his brother Charles W., which makes a specialty of acknowledging contributions of $1 and $2 from misguided followers of the Denver candidate, while out in Indiana a Thirty-Cent League has been organized by the faithful. Contributions are limited to 30 cents and the story goes that within an hour the formidable sum of $20 was raised in 30-cent doses and at once forwarded to the national committee. In Oklahoma Democratic papers are offering prizes to persons who will bring in the most dollar campaign subscriptions. In Pittsburg a Bryan organ has been offering to acknowledge all subscriptions of whatever dimensions, but as yet its columns have not been adorned with a list of contributors.

And so the merry collection goes on. Anything, no matter what, to meet Mr. Bryan's demand for a sight of the coin before he gets fairly into the battle. Meanwhile was there method in the perennial one's order that not over $10,000 should be received from any one individual? Was that intended to save his own sacred pile of gold from disaster? He could spare several times $10,000 and still be be better off than when he first burst into the game 12 years ago; but William J. is a thrifty person and he isn't going to take any extra-hazardous financial risk to win even the presidency.

Imagine a Jefferson, a Jackson, a Cleveland, Lincoln, McKinley of Taft going before the American people and begging them to put up $1 a head to help make him president! In the whole history of American politics we never have had anything quite as raw and cheap as this.

MARYLAND IN LINE.

Bryan and his party in Maryland are in despair. Their last hope of carrying the State vanished when the most powerful and influentianl Democratic organ in the Commonwealth, the Baltimore Sun, made the announcement at the conclusion of an ably written and convincing leading editorial on Friday last, that "we believe the election of Mr. Taft would tend to hasten the restoration of business conditions. We believe that his administration will be prudent. Therefore we support him from a sense of public duty."

When we take into consideration that the Baltimore Sun is one of the oldest and most widely read newspapers in the country, wielding an influence, both in and out of the State, that is astonishing, it will not be difficult to understand the effects of its cutting loose from its Democratic proclivities, in the present instance, will have in the rank and file of the Democratic party in Maryland. It was the Sun's influence that turned the State over to the Republican party in 1895, by the election of the late Lloyd Lowndes, Governor, who gave the state one of the fairest and best administrations it ever had. It was the confidence the people of Maryland had in the claims and utterances of the Baltimore Sun, coupled with the influence of the Baltimore American, that wrested our fair State from the domination and "rule or ruin" policy of the Democratic party. The Sun is now ready to aid in the election of Mr. Taft, "from a sense of public duty," the highest and most honorable motive a newspaper could have for wanting to continue in force the wise and economical policies of the Republican party by the election of its presidential nominee. With this departure of the Baltimore Sun, the Democratic party in Baltimore and in the State is left absolutely without an influential organ.

ROOSEVELT WOULD IMPROVE FARM LIFE.

With the purpose of bringing about better social, sanitary and economic conditions on American farms President Roosevelt this week named a commission to study the subject and report to him in time to enable him to treat the subject in his annual message to Congress. The President says: "No nation has ever achieved permanent greatness unless this greatness was in the well-being of the great farmer class, men who live on the soil for it is upon their welfare, material and moral that the welfare of the rest of the nation ultimately rests." He admits that in some sections of the country conditions leave little to be desired but that applies to comparatively a small portion of our national area. The President thinks that "our attention has been almost exclusively concentrated on getting better farming and he thinks that in the beginning this was unquestionably the right thing to do. The farmers must first of all grow good crops in order to support himself and his family." But when this has been secured the effort for better farming should cease to stand alone and should be accompanied by the effort for better business and better living on the farm. It is at least as important that the farmer should get the largest possible return in money, comfort and social advantages from the crops he grows, as that he should get the largest possible return in crops from land he farms. Agriculture is not the whole of country life. The great rural interests are human intersts, and good crops are of little value to the farmer unless they open the door to a good kind of life on the farm. He would make country life more attractive. Garrett county and indeed our entire section including the Eastern States and middle west have gone far in the direction of attractive home life on farms, having perhaps a greater percentage of modern comforts and necessities, churches, schools and other public institutions than other sections, including modern farming appliances and the development of the science of agriculture. But even in this section the small farmer with a mortgage and a large family to raise has a hard problem. The grind of poverty and debt takes the children out of school early and makes earners of them. There are few opportunities to read good literature and improve the mind but even in these circumstances our country affords some glorious examples of pluck and perseverance. American boys and girls working hard all day find way to improve the mind and beautify the home and one day the hand of destiny beckons to them to come up into the greater world and with the character built amid the glories of nature, go forth equipped to do great things. The President's interest in the subject is keen and as far as he can aid with his example, encouragement and by way of advising Congress what it can do to help, he stands ready to do.

Oil Well News.

We are glad to state that the Yough River Oil and Gas Company of Garrett county is reviving. All lessors called upon for a two year extension, in putting down first well on their property have willingly given the extention, except one. We are collecting the back stock subscribed, others are taking shares, and we hope to be in shape for work in the near future, cleaning out old well and drilling same deeper.

Everyone should help in developing our county. Stock is same price, ten dollars per share.

COMMITTEE.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. Marion Stewart and Miss Hildah Kendall both of this place, were married by Rev. Creek at the M. E. parsonage, on last Sunday evening about 9 o'clock.

Miss Ida M. Klemm, of Baltimore, is a guest of Miss Alma Kemp

Mr. Fred B. Hartman, bookkeeper and stenographer for the Monroe Coal Mining Co., of Barnum, accompanied by his mother, spent Saturday and Sunday at Mt. Lake Park.

Mrs. Harry Coffman, of this place, has been detailed an extra operator at the telegraph office at Hendricks.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Donnell, of Cumberland, and Mr. Edward Devine, of Piedmont, were entertained by Mrs. Maggie Collins, on Sunday.

Mr. Daniel Smouse, of the G. C. Pattison store, is spending his vacation at Atlantic City.

Mrs. Ward, wife of Capt. John Ward, of the W. M. R. R. vestibule train, was the guest of relatives and friends during the past few days.

Mrs. Ohie Raley, wife of John Raley, who came home a few weeks ago in poor health, has completely recovered and returned to her husband at Lynchburg, Saturday. John has signed a contract to play with the Lynchburg team next season.

The remains of Mr. Horace Farmer, a boiler-maker, employed at the B. & O. shops at Keyser, was found lying beside the B. & O. track at West Virginia Junction on Sunday morning. The head was completely seperated from the body and was found about 100 yards away from the latter. The young man had attended an entertainment at Piedmont on Saturday night, and came back with some of his young lady friends who live at the Junction. On the return trip to Piedmont it is supposed he stepped from one track to the other to escape an approaching train and was struck by No. 4 eastbound, about 1 p. m. Magistrate Huth, of Piedmont, viewed the remains about 8 a. m. and decided, after learning all the facts, that an inquest was unnecessary. The youmg man hails from Winchester, Va., where his parents reside. One brother works in the shops at Keyser.

The new bank building at Kitzmiller is in course of erection. The concrete foundation is about completed and the material for the superstructure is being placed upon the ground. The first floor will be devoted exclusively to the banking business, the second floor will be divided into handsome office rooms with all modern conveniences.

Mrs. John Leonard, of Lochiel, is lying dangerously ill with typhoid fever.

Mr. R. A. C. Howard, ex-member of the House of Delegates, has located at Kitzmiller and is clerking in the store of Price & Miller.

The ladies'aid society of the M. E. Church is holding a festival in Junior Hall, the proceeds of which are for the pastor's salary.

A beautiful monument of white marble has been erected over the grave of firman John Davis in the Bloomington grave yard.

We are glad to note that the condition Mr. B. Davis, who has been quite ill for the past ten days, has considerable improved. Mr. Davis is 98 yeaas old, 70 years a member of the M. E. church; 20 years a local minister, hale and hearty up to the present time. He makes his home with his son, Mr. James Davis a well known farmer of Chestnut Grove, this district.

Mrs. Van Camp, her two daughters, Misses Anna and Rose, Mrs. Marster, of Carlisle, Pa., Mrs. Effie Morris and Harry Carl, of Pittsburg, and Miss Anna Carl, of Keyser, are the guests of Col. and Mrs. Michael Masteller, at their beautiful home at Barnum.

Mr. Joseph Bennett, wife and family, of near Cumberland, spent the first of this week with relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Otho Barnard.

Mrs. Anna Kemp, wife of Dr. H. M. Kemp, left for Pennsboro, W. Va., on Wednesday morning on a visit to her daughter.

Mr. Casper Kight, of Barnum, Secretary and Treasurer of the Kight Oil Company, is on a business trip to Monroe county, Ohio, in the interest of his company. The company has been fortunate in striking two good paying wells and before Mr. Kight returns a third well will be located.

Mr John C. Brydon, wife and infant son of New York city, are guests at Borderside, the parental homestead.

Mr. Lewis Baldwin, a well known resident of this place, moved his family to Oak Mountain on Monday.

DEER PARK.

We are glad to learn from our friend and neighbor Mr. S. Hinebaugh that his daughter, Miss Ella T. Hinebaugh, who had undergone a severe treatment at the Hinebaugh Sanatorium at Oakland, when an operation for laparotomy was undergone and was followed by typhoid fever, has entirely recovered, and speaks in the highest praise of Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh and his able corps of assistants, and especially of the kindness of Miss Robinson and all connected with this laudable and much needed institution for their kindness and courtesy in this, the most critical and painful of her young life; and to all connected with this institution she extends her thanks and implores God's blessing on their work for suffering humanity.

We are sorry to note the loss sustained by James A. Hinebaugh (brother of the young lady mentioned above) in the burning of his house located on Water street in this place, on Monday, 17th inst., at about 11.45 a. m., in which all the furniture on the second floor, including trunks and clothing and cash to the amount of $20 or $25, the hard earnings of a good wife and industrious daughter, who have the sympathy of all our people, and we trust an effort will be put on foot to assist Mr. H. in rebuilding. We feel sure our good people will donate articles of furniture to take the place in part of that consumed.

Letters received from Mrs. Herbert T. Apsley, of Baltimore, speak in glowing terms of the pleasant trip to the Southland on her bridal trip. Leaving her parental home, known as "Five Gables," where she had spent most of her young, bright and happy life, the joy and pride of a devoted father and loving mother and the idol of one of the best brothers that any sister could have in this world. Yet, she forsook them all for the one she calls Herbert, and one month ago today, on July 18th last, on the front verandah of her girlhood home, facing a multitude of admiring friends and relatives she was joined in holy wedlock to one of Baltimore's best young men, who bids fair to be one of the legal lights of the Baltimore bar. After the mountain wedding they took their flight to the sunny South, going directly to Baltimore and taking a steamer they sailed down the beautiful Chesapeake Bay to broad Atlantic's waves, and for two days were gently fanned by the breezes by day and at night were lulled to sleep by the rolling waves until Savannah, Georgia, was reached. After taking in the sights of that seaport city of the Empire State of the South, they set sail for Jacksonville, Florida, and in that beautiful and of flowers they reveled the in joys of love for one week, and then returned by sea. On the third night out they were caught in a terrible storm, the waves rolling mountain high and for a time these lovers thought they would never see "blue Patapsco's billowy dash" or their cozy and elegantly furnished home 200 Augusta avenue, Irvington, in the metropolis of their own native heath, "Maryland, my Maryland."

Mr. and Mrs. Apsley speak in the highest praise of the courtesy and kind hospitality of the Southern people. This is nothing new to the writer who was born under the influence and teaching of the cultured and refined of Southern blood, in the good old antibellum days.

We notice our friend J. K. Mitchell, who was appointed road supervisor of certain roads in District No. 10, meandering around. We presume he is inspecting the roads he superintends He and his staff are quartered at his camp called "Four Winds."

Miss Anna Hoye, daughter of the late John J. P. Hoye, of Dunbar, Pa., is visiting her aunt and uncle Miss E. J. and W. D. Hoye and also spending a vacation calling on her aunts Mrs. Engle and Mrs. L. D. Thrasher, wife of our efficient and accommodating postmaster, as also other relatives at Mountain Lake Park and Oakland, Mrs. Rev. Joseph Lee, Mrs. John Felty and Mrs. W. C. Dunnington. Miss Anna will be joined by her brother John, on the 21st inst., also of Dunbar, one of the trusted electricians of the Dunbar Furnace company.

We would like to mention many things transpiring in our little mountain town, and the many guests and friends of others, especially Mrs. Dr. Hayman, of Baltimore, Mrs. Hendrickson, of Washington, Miss Minnie Stemple, of Morgantown, the Misses Hogue, of Waynesburg, relatives of our neighbor, Mr. and Mrs. E. Clark and others, but space and your patience, Mr. Editor, forbid.

We must say, however, that our friend Col. W. E. Burwell is the happiest man on our mountain top—the B. & O. hotel and all the cottages filled to overflowing.

Col. George Truesdell is smiling and overjoyed—Altamont Springs water is in demand and going out by the car load to the thirsty in all the cities of the East as well as the Middle West.

Pardon and bear with me and don't resort to the waste basket and I will promise—

MORE ANON.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Misses Cora Frantz and Dora Brown, of Oakland, are visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Mr. Fred Mitchell and wife are visiting friends in Cumberland. Md.

A party of twelve drove to Accident and were served with a delightful chicken dinner at Reese's Hotel last Saturday evening.

Miss Nitia Nugent returned to her school at Bayard on Saturday last.

Mr. R. C. McClandlish made a flying trip to Bruceton, W. Va., last Thursday.

Mrs. C. V. Guard and little son are visiting relatives at Craneville, W. Va.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank
Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

Tne New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

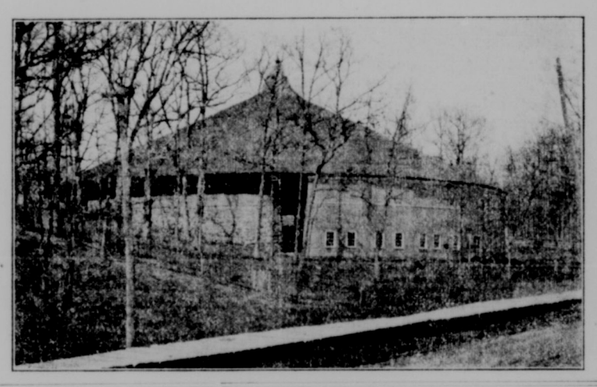
Last Excursion of the Year

National Day.

The One Opportunity Remaining to Visit the Most Sensible Summer Resort in America.

Friday, Aug. 28

The Closing Day it Always the Best. The Great Season will Wind Up in a Blaze of Glory.



MORNING: S. M. Spedon, the great Crayon Artist, drawing rapidly and accurately many humorous pictures in the presence of the audience and talking entertainingly.

AFTERNOON: Geo. R. Stuart, on "Lop-Sided Folks." For many years associated with the late Sam P. Jones. More than his equal in wit and humor. Hear him.

NIGHT: The greatest entertainment the Mountain Chautauqua has known. The great Chorus with orchestral assistance. Emanuel Schmuck, violincelist. Karl Blose, violinist. Famous Otterbein Male Quartette and Hand Bell Ringers Prof. Struck, the incomparable magician, in great feats of magic. The American Vitagraph with its wonderful Moving Pictures.

COME. ENJOY THIS NATIONAL DAY.

$1.00 round trip rate from both Grafton and Cumberland with special trains. Corresponding low rates from intermediate points.

Excursion trains in both directions leave Mt. Lake Park at 10.00 p m.

Excursion tickets to Cumberland and other points east will be honored on train 72 leaving Mt. Lake Park at 4.47.

Excursion rates from Fairmont, W. Va., $1.25. Leave Fairmont at 7 a. m., arriving at Mt. Lake Park at 10.18. Leave Mt. Lake Park on train No. 5, at 7.54, arriving at Fairmont at 10.35 p. m.

You Don't Need a Town Crier

to emphasize the merits of your business or announce your special sales. A straight story told in a straight way to the readers of this paper will quickly reach the ears of the thoughtful, intelligent buying public, the people who have the money in their pockets, and the people who listen to reason and not noise. Our books, will show you a list of the kind of people you appeal to. Call and see them at this office.

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$277,285 68
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	113,010 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	708 02
Due from State Banks and Bankers	2,150 89
Due from approved reserve agents	43,994 65
Checks and other cash items	364 65
Notes of other National Banks	475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $29,501 70
Legal-tender notes 5,280 00	25,781 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation	2,500 00
Total	$572,487 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,686 45
National Bank notes outstanding	48,750 00
Due to other National Banks	3,482 92
Due to State Banks and Bankers	104 02
Dividends unpaid	190 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,077 84
Time certificates of deposit	262,696 03
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 38
Total	$572,487 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. H. W. Matheny, of Cumberland, spent Sunday in Oakland.

Mr. I. W. Abernathy, of Wilson, was in Oakland on business Tuesday.

Just received at the City Roller Mills, one car oats and one car corn. Helbig & West.

Mr. J. Arthur White, of Pittsburg, is spending a vacation of ten days with Oakland relatives.

Mr. L. L. Loar, of Grafton, is spending a few days this week with his mother in Oakland.

Messrs. John O. and William Thayer, of Thayerville, spent Tuesday in Oakland on business.

Mrs. Alvin Getty, of Cumberland, is visiting her father, Mr. E. D. Kepner, at his home on Alder street.

Washington's expert piano tuner will be in Oakland until August 29th. Leave orders at Lauer's bakery.

Mr. A. H. Seyler, of Pittsburg, was in the city yesterday on business, when he made this office a brief call.

Feed of all kinds constantly on hand at the City Roller Mills. For prices telephone us. Helbig & West.

Mr. Hamill Spedden, of Fairmont, who with his family is summering at Mountain Lake Park, was in Oakland this morning.

Messrs. Henry Bobet, of Deer Park, and William F. Nine, of near Wilson, were among the callers at this office Tuesday morning.

Mr. John Compton has taken a responsible position with the Tioga Tanning Company at Hutton and will move to that place shortly.

Misses Marie Hood and Beulah Boice, of Fairmont, W. Va., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ashby, at their home on Alder street.

Orders taken for Aubrey Sisters famous Beautifier, tint, massage cream, depilatory powder, soaps, etc., at Oakland Hotel. 19-tf.

Mr. J. O. Thomas, vice president and superintendent of the Tioga Tanning Company, Hutton, spent Tuesday in Oakland on business.

Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, accompanied by his daughter Miss Dora May, returned to Oakland from Grafton, West Va., yesterday morning where they had been on a visit to the family of Mr. George W. Custer.

Mr. Robert L. Shirer, of Morgantown, W. Va., arrived in Oakland last Sunday to spend a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, who spent last week at Berlin, Pa., where they were guests of relatives, returned to their home in Oakland Saturday night.

Ex-County Treasurer Horace R. DeWitt, of Hoyes, was in Oakland a day or two last week and on Saturday conducted a sale of some real estate upon which the taxes were in arrear.

Messrs. D. E. Bolden and Allen S. Howell, who went to Webster Springs, West Va., to remain ten days, returned to Oakland last Monday evening, Mr. Bolden's health not permitting him to stay longer.

When you come to town don't forget to call at the Gold Mine Store. Candy, tobaccos, fishing tackle, 2 bottles pop for 5c. Geo. M. Mason, Prop'r.

Mrs. Belle Miller and daughter Miss Ruth Miller, of Baltimore, are here as guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell. Miss Emma Feldmeyer and niece Dorothy Brewer, of Annapolis, are also gusts of Mr. and Mrs. Sincell.

Mr Charles Sweeney, who has been an invalid for a number of years, was brought down town in a wheeled chair Tuesday where he met many of his acquaintances. He remarked upon the improved appearance of the streets and was very much gratified with the new court house now building.

Garthright, at Mountain Lake Park, wants all the fresh eggs and choice, sweet, fresh butter he can get at 20 cents cash and trade. 24-2t

A water famine is now on at Barnum, W. Va. The reservoir which supplies the company's houses is almost dry, as is also the stream which feeds it. There are no wells or springs in the town, and drinking water must be carried from the mountains. Barnum is a small town on the Western Maryland Railroad.

Mrs. Gilmor S. Hamill returned to her home Tuesday morning from Kingwood, West Va., where she went on Sunday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Byrne, her aunt. Mrs. Hamill was accompanied to Oakland by Mrs. J. H. Moreland, of Morgantown, who spent Tuesday in Oakland visiting her sister, Mrs. D. I. Totten.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

FIRE DESTROYED LARGE MILL.

Oss Brothers Lumber Plant Near Swanton Burned.

The lumber mill at Strickers Siding, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, two miles east of Swanton, belonging to Oss Bros., was destroyed by fire Saturday. The fire is thought to have been of incendiary origin. The loss will reach $5,000. The building was not insured. The whistle of a passing locomotive aroused the people of that vicinity, who succeeded in saving the lumber yard. The mill will be rebuilt. This is the second loss by fire that the firm has had within the past 18 months, the previous fire destroying their lumber at Oss Siding.

Mr. Henry Grusendorf, of Hutton, who recently graduated from the pharmacy department of the University of Maryland, has purchased the drug store of the Keyser Drug Company at Keyser, W. Va., taking charge a few days ago. He has the best wishes of numerous Garrett county friends for success in his undertaking.

Miss Carrie Louise Ziegler is visiting Miss Irene Haulenbeek at Uplands cottage, Deer Park. Miss Ziegler is very much pleased with the climate and delicious atmosphere of Garrett county. She spent the early summer in the Blue Ridge mountains, but avers that the Alleghanies are far ahead in every respect. Miss Ziegler is a Woman's College graduate.

The editor and wife were at Oakland Sunday attending at the bedside of Mr. G. A. Shirer, an uncle, who was so seriously burned last Wednesday morning while trying to release a valuable span of horses from his burning barn, Mr. Shirer's condition, while yet very critical, is considered improved over that of a few days previously. The physicians have definitely ascertained that his eyesight has not been destroyed. His principal burns were about the face, hands and arms. His recovery is a question of many weeks yet.—Grafton Republican.

Mr. P. J. Nee, of the well known furniture firm of P. J. Nee Co., of Washington, D. C., is spending the summer at the Oakland Hotel His wife and children are also at the hotel, and have been very much benefitted by their sojourn in the mountains. Indeed Mr. Nee is so well pleased with the healthfulness of the Alleghanies that he contemplates erecting a summer residence in or near Oakland if he can find a suitable site. The firm of P. J. Nee Co. stand well commercially, and deal in high grade furniture. They have recently enlarged their establishment to accommodate growing business.

Freight Conductor Got Very Severe Treatment.

The fact has just been made known, through an investigation that has been set afoot by the B. & O. R. R. Co., that freight conductor A. J. Gank of Cumberland, was very badly used up and quit severely injured Friday afternoon, on the grade between Rowlesburg and Tunnelton, by four men, all of whom are or have been employees of the company. It seems that Conductor Gank found the four men on his train, endeavoring to purloin a ride from the company from this point to Grafton. The conductor asked them to get off, which they refused to do. Upon a second request that they get off, and a word of explanation from the conductor that, according to the rulings of a late order in compliance with a recently-adopted law, they could not ride on his train under any consideration. Thereupon, it is reported, two of the four men seized Conductor Gank and pushed him down among a lot railroad iron in a flat-car, dislocating his left shoulder and otherwise severely bruising him. The men, realizing what had happened, then left the train. Conductor Gank was able to inform his train crew of what had occurred, and they assisted him to his caboose. He was brought on to Grafton, where his wounds were dressed by Drs. Warden and Ellis, after which the patient was placed on an evening passenger train and sent to his home in Cumberland. It is said that the B. & O. company will rigidly investigate the occurrence, and it would not be surprising if arrests should follow such a high-handed outrage as was perpetrated upon one of the company's most careful and considerate conductors.

Mr. Deffenbaugh Declined.

Sylvester L. Young, a real estate agent, was unanimously nominated by the Socialist convention at Hagerstown Saturday afternoon for Congress from the Sixth district after C. W. Deffenbaugh, of Cumberland, had declined the honor. This campaign committee was appointed: B. W. Deffenbaugh, Cumberland; John Baker, Hagerstown; H. Henderson, Silver Springs; George Morgan, Sharpsburg, and Ira Culp, Vale Summit.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK, Friendsville, Md.

See The Republican for Job Printing.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The season, which is nearing a close, has been a success in every way. The attendance has been larger than ever before, the weather has been fine and Dr. Davidson has furnished an unusually good program.

Following are prominent features in the program for the coming week:

Friday, 11.00 a. m., Lecture, "Mushrooms and Oaks," Rev. Robt. E. Smith, Galva, Ill. 8.00 p. m., Lecture, "Parsifal," Dr. Henry R. Rose, illustrated by stereopticon views, followed by moving pictures.

Saturday, 11.00 a. m., Lecture, "The Philosophy of the Hustler," Rev. Robt. E. Smith. 2.30 p. m., Final Pow-wow of the Seton Indians. 8.00 p. m., Extraordinary Week-End Entertainment, Mr. Clifford Wiley, the famous baritone, Youna, in marvelous Japanese juggling and moving pictures

Sunday, 11.00 a. m., Sermon, Rev. Ora Samuel Gray. 7.00 p. m., Eventide Sacred Concert, stereopticon views and brief addresses.

Monday, 2.30 p. m., Lecture, "The Truth About Ireland," Rev. Alex. Corkey, Cedar Bluffs, Neb. 8.00 p. m., Mono-Drama, "Koto-San," presented by Miss Bernice Costello, who has achieved great success in her Japanese impersonations, followed by the Otterbein Male Quartette and Hand-Bell Ringers and Mr. Clifford Wiley.

Tuesday—"Recognition Day," 11.00 a. m., Lecture, "Getting There," Rev. Alex. Corkey. 2.00 p. m., March of Chautauquans; Lecture, "The Inverted Crown," Dr. D. W. Howell, Field Secretary of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. 8.00 p. m., Otterbein Male Quartette and Hand-Bell Ringers, Miss Costello and Mr. Wiley.

Wednesday, 11.00 a. m., Lecture, "World on Fire," Rev. J. M. M. Gray, Baltimore, Md. 8.00 p. m., Lecture, "Absolute Zero," Prof. J. E. Woodland, Rochester, N. Y., with brilliant experiments, followed by moving pictures.

Thursday, 11.00 a. m., Lecture, "Ether Waves," Prof. Woodland, with fascinating experiments. 8.00 p. m., Lecture, "Is Fun Divine or Devilish?" Rev. George R. Stewart, Cleveland, Tenn., the legitimate successor of Sam Jones in all that makes for popularity.

In the amphitheatre last Wednesday night Miss Anna Manges, of Oakland, reader and impersonator, made her first public appearance before an audience made up largely of local people. Miss Manges' impersonations were of the highest order and she was repeatedly encored. She made a decided hit and we trust that she may be placed upon the program next season.

Capt. Maulsby is very critically ill.

Maj. Gen. Frazaer, U. S. A., was a guest of Maj. J. M. Burns this week.

The movement for an increased capitalization of the stock of the Mountain Lake Park Association for the purpose of making most needed improvements has been abandoned. The ragged and unkept condition of the Park front still remains.

Rev. John S. Harvey and wife have been on a visit to his parents in Ryans Glade for the past two weeks.

The tournament under the auspices of the Woman's Civic Club was a great success in every way. The net receipts exceeded one hundred dollars. The prize winners were—first class, first prize, Harry Porter, Eglon, W. Va.; second prize, George Geisman, of Oakland, Md. Second class, first prize, E. H. Smouse, of Deer Park; second, Wm. Scherr, of Eglon, W. Va.; third, Wm. Armstrong, of Mountain Lake Park, Md. The ladies crowned Queens of Love and Beauty were Mrs. Porter, of Eglon, W. Va., and Miss Katharine McLain, of Wheeling, W. Va.

The excursion to the Park yesterday did not bring the crowd hoped for, yet there was a goodly number present and and all seemed pleased with the splendid program at the amphitheatre.

We have just receive a car load of Extra Clear Red Cedar Shingles direct from the Pacific Coast. C. M. RATHBUN & SONS, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 22

The Gold Mine Store is the place to get your candy, post cards, tobaccos, toys, wagons, base ball goods and fishing tackle of all kinds. Two bottles of pop for 5c.

WOOD'S SEEDS. Best qualities obtainable.

Winter or Hairy Vetch

makes not only one of the largest-yielding and best winter feed and forage crops you can grow, but is also one of the best of soil-improvers, adding more nitrogen to the soil than any other winter crop.

Wood's Descriptive Fall Catalogue gives full information about this valuable crop; also about all other for Fall planting. Catalogue mailed free on request. Write for it.

Farm & Garden Seeds

T. W. WOOD & SONS,

Seedsmen, - Richmond, Va.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Arthur Townshend,

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND COUNTRY PRODUCE

First National Bank Building, Main Street, Oakland, Md.

Matting.

To close out our Matting will give you bargains.

$1 Lace Curtains for 75cts

BEAUTIFUL LINE OF

Summer Underwear

and beautiful line of

WOOL GOODS CHEAP.

Dimities, Percales, Seersuckers, etc.

American and Beauty

CORSETS,

Medium and Long Waists.

Are You Thinking

of taking a course in a School of Music, a School of Expression, a School of Fine Arts, a School of Commerce and Administration, or a School of Railroading and Telegraphy?

West Virginia Wesleyan College

offers you able instructors, good buildings, ample facilities, reasonable rates. For catalogue and full particulars write

DR. CARL G. DONEY, PH. D., President. Buckhannon, W. Va.

or call on W. L. MASON at Mt. Lake Park during August. 22-3t

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould in to the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK, Dixon Building, Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. Telephone Comp'y

Subscribe for The Republican.

Through The Fiery Furnace.

By EDGAR WELTON COOLEY.

Copyright, 1908, by Edgar Welton Cooley.

ON one end of the bench in front of Dillingham's general store sat Abner Moon, widower, peaked face protruding in front of his thin gray locks, one leg across the other lank knee, jackknife in his right hand, shingle in his left. On the other end of the bench squatted Bige Ellet, bachelor, fat legs spraddled out, pudgy feet just touching the ground, black pipe in mouth.

"Some folks can do a thunderin' lot of thinkin' not to amount to much in this world, seems to me," said Abner.

"Meanin'?" said Bige.

"Meanin'," replied Abner, peeling a long shaving off the shingle, "some folks can sit around for an hour sunnin' themselves and never say a word to show their sociability."

"Waal," drawled Bige, puffing vigorously, "I was thinkin' what an all fired good thing it is that Saloam Center has so many baldheaded old widowers struttin' around like peacocks in a peach orchard."

"Why?" asked Abner, squinting at Bige.

"'Cause town would be fuller of old maids and widders than the Sahary desert is of sand burs."

Abner fell to whittling the shingle spitefully. "I reckon," he mused, "that it just isn't right to fly in the face of Providence, and if the good Lord had ever intended Bige Ellet for a Romeo he'd 'a' made him a leetle more handsome and a trifle less hippypotamous."

"Maybe I'm a hippypotamus," said Bige calmly, "or a alligator or a 'nosoross, but I ain't losin' no sleep yearnin' for a postgraduate course in matrimony."

"By jingo!" cried Abner, leaping to his feet and shaking his fist. "Don't taunt me, Bige Ellet; don't ye do it!"

"Ain't goin' to taunt ye, but if you don't keep out of my way I'll step on ye, and I've seen a moon 'fore now that didn't have nothin' left to it but a rim."

"You're a consarned old blow pout!" stormed Abner. "You're a jealous old jessecat! You know I courted Sereny Simkins 'fore you did, and you think you can cut me out, but ye can't do it."

For a moment he gyrated up and down in front of the sneering Bige, then darted up the street. Bige sat on the bench and watched him until he disappeared in the distance. Then he arose slowly and brushed his clothes with his bandanna handkerchief.

"Can't, eh?" he soliloquized, glancing in the direction whence Abner had fled. "Can't, eh? Reckon I'll just wander down that way and see."

Miss Simkins was out by the willow hedge gathering green brush in a clothes basket when Abner came shuffling along the road. He was trembling with indignation and fatigue and sat down on the well curb to rest. But he hadn't been there ten minutes when he saw Bige Ellet, puffing like a freight train on a steep grade, steering for Miss Simkins' modest abode.

"Jumpin' Jericho!" he cried, gazing frantically about for some avenue of escape.

Already the front gate was blocked by the bachelor's pompous form. In the rear Miss Simkins was coming up the path. So with the agility of a squirrel he darted into the smokehouse, climbed a ladder and squatted silently amid the gloomy rafters, from which dangled numerous uncured hams and pieces of side meat.

Straight to the open door came Bige, then paused and removed his hat as Miss Simkins approached. "Why, how d'ye do?" he began, bowing effusively.

"Oh, Mr. Ellet," replied Miss Simkins, "I'm so glad you came. I need somebody to help me smoke that meat."

"Why, certainly, mum," said Bige, his rotund face turning scarlet with pleasure.

He took the basket from her and dumped its contents upon a pile of leaves on the middle of the smokehouse floor, then struck a match and touched it to the leaves.

"Oh, Lord!" groaned Abner from his elevated perch as a thin cloud of smoke began rising. "I wish a cyclone would come along. I wish the town would catch fire. I wish somethin' would happen to make 'em go away. I don't know what I am goin' to do."

"It is certainly very kind of you, Abijah," said Miss Simkins, blushing. "A lone woman has a hard time trying to get along." She sighed effectively.

"Must have a thunderin' hard time to want to marry a widderer with six children," said Bige dryly.

A great cloud of smoke was rising fr[om] the fire. Abner was nearly choking; he was rolling his eyes desperately to keep from sneezing. The tears were running down his cheeks in streams.

"Why, Mr. Ellet," began Miss Simkins amazedly, "what do you mean?"

"Heard that you were goin' to marry that old idjit of an Abner Moon," came Bige's complaining voice. Then the door closed with a bang, and a bolt flew into place.

Miss Simkins sat down on the doorstep and looked up at Bige. "I don't care," she said. "Mr. Moon has been a very kind friend of mine, and, besides, some men don't seem to have sand enough to declare their feelings."

Bige blushed scarlet and stammered. "Really, Miss—Miss Simkins," he said, "I—I—that is, I long have—have nourished a—a deep regard"—

But just then from somewhere within the dark recesses of the smokehouse came an unearthly noise.

"Kertychoo—oo—oo! Good Lord—kercho—o—o!"

"Mercy sakes!" cried Miss Simkins, glancing at the closed door affrightedly. "What in the world was that?"

"I—I dunno, mum," gasped Bige. "Sounded like a cat."

"No, 'tain't no cat. There ain't no cat around the place."

"Kertychoo! Ky—choo—oo! O—O Lord!"

"It's a man, and he's in the smokehouse," cried Miss Simkins, trembling. "He's choking to death. Let him out—oh, please let him out, Mr. Ellet!"

"Hadn't ought to let him out," replied Bige. "Ought to keep him in there till he's cooked to a crisp. He's a thief, and he's after your meat, mum."

"Open this door!" coughed Abner. "I'm smoked up worse than a brier pipe. I'm blacker than the ace of spades. I've got to get out. You can laugh at me if you want to; you can laugh till you can't see straight, but I can't stay here no longer." He was wheezing like a blacksmith's bellows with a rent in it.

"Who be ye?" demanded Bige cautiously. "And what be ye doin' in there?"

"I'm Abner Moon, if ye must know," replied a weak voice, "and I'm under-goin' the pangs of slow torture. My lungs are fuller of smoke than a consarned old chimney, and I feel like a half cured ham."

"I FEEL LIKE A HALF CURED HAM."

"Oh, mercy!" cried Miss Simkins. "Poor Mr. Moon! Poor Abner! Let him out this instant, Mr. Ellet."

Bige threw open the door, and Abner staggered into the light of day. He was covered from head to foot with soot and ashes.

"Well, well!" began Bige. "It is Abner Moon, but what a lookin' Moon! He's gone into total eclipse. He's never goin' to shine any more!"

"I'm burnt all over," moaned Abner. "I'm toasted on the outside and fricasseed on the inside. I'm charred!"—

"But what was you doin' in there?" demanded Bige. "However came you to be in there anyhow?"

Abner put his hands suddenly to his head. "I dunno," he said. "I was taken sick suddenly. I didn't know what I was doin' or where I was goin'. I was dizzy. I was dizzier than a yeller cat with a conniption fit, and I'm gittin' dizzy ag'in." He rolled his eyes dolefully, then looked at Miss Simkins. "I don't like to bother you, mum, but if I could lie down—I'm afraid I'm goin' to faint."

"Oh, dear, dear!" said Miss Simkins sympathetically, taking him gently by the arm and leading him toward the house. "Poor, poor Abner!"

Bige watched them a moment in silence. Then he winked one eye cunningly and chuckled to himself.

"Mebbe I'd better go and get the doctor, mum," he said. "'Pears to me he's a pretty sick man."

"Yes, do," replied Miss Simkins. "And hurry—oh, please hurry!"

Bige hurried. Fifteen minutes later he was coming down the street with Dr. Lavender. He was talking low and grinning. The doctor was nodding his head and grinning.

Abner was lying on the horsehair sofa. Miss Simkins was bathing his forehead with cold water and holding one of his hands in hers.

Dr. Lavender felt of his pulse and looked at his tongue. Then he shook his head solemnly.

"Goodness, mum," he said, "it's the worst attack of nervous excitement I ever saw. I do believe he's been getting mad at something or somebody. He ought to control his temper. He's threatened with a rush of blood to the spine, and that would kill him. If you will get me a piece of ice, mum"—

Miss Simkins hurried to the kitchen and in a moment returned with some ice in a pan. Dr. Lavender took a piece the size of a hickory nut and looked at Abner.

"Do you think you could sit up a minute, Mr. Moon?" he asked.

"I—I dunno," Abner replied weakly, "but I'll try."

He put one arm around Miss Simkins' neck and raised himself. The doctor dropped the ice down his back.

"Jumpin' Jericho!" he screeched, falling back upon the sofa. "What d'ye do that for? Tryin' to give me spinal meningitis?"

"It's just as I feared," said Dr. Lavender. "He's gettin' violent."

"You're a conspirin' old Nero!" yelled Abner. "You've plotted with Bige Ellet to make a fool of me. But I ain't goin' to let ye do it. I'm goin' home this very minute."

"There, there, Abner!" said Miss Simkins solicitously. "Do try and calm yourself."

"I'll try, Sereny," he replied meekly. "You see, mum," explained the doctor, "they always act that way when they have hysteria. They always think you are trying to torture 'em. If you'll kindly get some cloth, mum, and some mustard, we'll make some plasters. Let's see." Bige was hunting for something under his chair. His handkerchief was stuffed in his mouth, and he was blue in the face. "We'll need one plaster for his chest, another for his back and one for the sole of each foot."

"You're not goin' to put them fool things on me!" howled Abner, sitting up and glaring as if he was going stark mad. "I tell you, I ain't goin' to let ye make any bigger idjit of me than ye have already."

"Mebby we'd better chloroform him," suggested Bige. "Mebby we'd better strap him to a board."

"It's too bad to have to put these things on anybody," soliloquized Dr. Lavender dryly while he and Bige Ellet were affixing the plasters. "Would not wonder but they'll disfigure him for life."

"And he ain't any too good lookin' as it is, goodness knows," added Bige sympathetically.

"Go ahead and taunt me," growled Abner in a muffled voice from the environment of his disarranged clothing.

"There," said the doctor finally, fastening the last band and rising to his feet. "Now we must keep him warm. He ought to have a couple of blankets and three or four bedquilts on top of him."

"Sereny," observed Abner a few moments later, peering out from beneath a mountain of bedclothes like a rabbit peeking from under a straw stack, "I don't feel like I was very long for this world. I'm a half cured ham covered with mustard. I feel like a moldy old sandwich." He turned his face toward the wall and groaned.

"Oh, Abner," said Miss Simkins cheerfully, "do try and bear up, Abner!"

"And, Sereny," he resumed weakly, "when they take them poultices offen me I'll be the reddest Moon anybody ever saw. I'll be so lurid that I won't dare to go home for fear of givin' my children the scarlet fever."

"There, there," crooned Miss Simkins cheerily; "don't you go to worryin' about them children, Abner."

He turned and looked at her tenderly. "Sereny," he said, "would you really like to look after 'em—always? Would you care to marry"— He paused suddenly and rolled his eyes like one in mortal agony. His breath came in gasps. His mouth was wide open.

"Fire! Fire!" he roared suddenly, trying desperately to push the covers off. "I'm ablaze from one end of me to the other. I'm a ragin' conflagration. In just three minutes there won't be nothin' left of me but a bed of coals. I'm sufferin' spontaneous combustion, I tell ye! Won't somebody please put me out?"

Miss Simkins wrung her hands in fright. "Oh, Dr. Lavender!" she cried. "Oh, Mr. Ellet! Do something for him, can't you?"

"Mebby I'd better throw a bucket of water on him," said Bige. "Mebby I'd better turn in a fire alarm."

"Consarn ye!" groaned Abner. "I want ye to take them things offen me. They've drawed my wishbone and my spinal column together already, and the soles of my feet are clinging to my kneecaps like a stone bruise to a boy's heel."

"Be there any blisters on ye?" asked Dr. Lavender.

"There's just one," snorted Abner, "but it's bigger than a barn door, and I'm right in the middle of it."

"Too bad," said the doctor solemnly. "When plasters take effect as quick as that it shows his nervous system is a total wreck." He opened his medicine case, took out a bottle, shook it and held it between him and the light.

"I'm afraid, mum," he resumed sadly, "I'll have to give him a dose of this, after all. I hate to do it, but it's the only chance left us." He poured a little into a spoon. Abner was watching him with a florid but anxious face.

"It may cure him, mum," he resumed gravely. "If it does, he will be a well man in ten minutes, but if it doesn't, mum, it will kill him deader than a nit."

Abner clutched the bedclothes convulsively. He tried to speak, but he could only gurgle like cider pouring out of a jug, and a cold sweat broke out all over him.

"N-n-no," he gasped, throwing off the covers and sitting up on the edge of the sofa, "I won't take it! There is nothin' ailin' me but just plain foolishness. I came here to court Sereny, and when I saw Bige Ellet comin' I hid in the smokehouse. But I'm goin' home now. I ain't goin' to ask Sereny to marry me. I wouldn't ask any woman to marry a consarned idjit that'll let a couple of heartless heretics make a degratted dunce of him."

"But I want to marry you!" cried Miss Simkins, laughing and weeping by turns. "I don't care if you have been offered up as a burnt sacrifice. You've passed through the fiery furnace triumphant, and I'll marry you if you say the word, Abner."

She put one arm around his neck and rested her head affectionately upon his shoulder.

"Ugh!" groaned Abner, twisting his face into a horrible grimace. "I love ye, Sereny, and I'll marry ye, but—please don't pilfer your head on that poultice, Sereny."

A Daughter of Vesuvius.

By Pierce Vincent.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

It was a small two edged stiletto that Zabetta Gemelia bought at Antonio Mordo's shop in Naples, a very tiny plaything of a stiletto; but, as every Italian knows, the heart lies barely two inches below the surface and a blade that will reach that distance is long enough for all practical purposes.

On the crucifix handle of this particular stiletto Zabetta had sworn that it should drink the blood of either Caesar Pino or of his betrothed, Maria Vincente.

They were a very ancient family, the Gemellas. One ancestor had escaped from the eruption that overwhelmed Pompeii and another had been mummified at Herculaneum. The race had a certain fierce sturdiness inherited from some lava born forefather before Romulus.

They also had an unpleasant mediaeval habit of keeping their oaths regardless of consequences, as family traditions and court records bore witness. They took life seriously, as many had found to their cost.

So when people heard that Caesar Pino had thrown over Zabetta Gemella for Maria Vincente they shook their heads. Zabetta herself went home, dry lipped and fiery eyed, and at midnight swore the sibylline blood oath, a strange and terrible curse intrusted to her by the muttering old crone, her grandmother.

Zabetta dwelt in the outskirts of Boscotrase on the slopes nearest Vesuvius. Her first view at dawn from her little attic was of the purple plume and mighty shoulders of the great volcano heaved against the sky, and her last glimpse at night was of the same plume streaming wildly across the sunset. She knew the mountain in all its moods and from its nature shaped her own. Its heart of fire was no wilder than that within her breast.

Caesar Pino belonged to the aristocracy of Boscotrase. His olive trees were the best in the place, and did not the choicest Lachryma Christi come from his grapes grown on the scoriae of Vesuvius? Caesar was dark and handsome, a fine singer and dancer, a hard worker, a good fellow all round. All the girls in the village were in love with him.

ZABETTA LIFTED THE INSENSIBLE CAESAR IN HER ARMS.

Handsome Caesar fell in love with handsomer Zabetta. True, her family was poor. But what difference did that make? Caesar had enough for both. Their betrothal soon followed. Nobody could deny that they made a fine looking pair. To be sure, some families whose daughters would not have objected to occupying Zabetta's place hinted privately at the record of the Gemellas. But none spoke openly, remembering that same record.

All went well until Maria Vincente came to Boscotrase. Then Caesar's affection for Zabetta cooled. Not that Maria deliberately did anything to tempt the young man away. But it soon became known through the town that Caesar and his sweetheart had quarreled; next, that he was betrothed to Maria.

Then, indeed, people shook their heads and some said, "Poor Zabetta!"

But others, who knew her family's record better, said, "Poor Caesar!"

And everybody waited to see what would happen.

It was the next day after the break that Zabetta bought the dagger. The Gemellas always acted promptly. But she found it difficult to decide whose blood the sharp point should drink.

Sometimes she felt it would be Caesar's, sometimes Maria's, and on one black day when the two passed her arm in arm she determined that it should be both and she had hard work to restrain herself from putting the sentence into immediate execution.

Then came the great eruption.

For generations Vesuvius, muttering and grumbling, had looked down on the presumptuous vineyards and olive groves, boldly pressing nearer the region where it had decreed no living thing should grow. Unheeded it had given warning after warning, like a cross old man who is continually making threats, but whom no one takes at his word.

At last the giant that dwelt in the mountain's fiery heart decided that it was time to teach the forgetful race of men one lesson more. So pouf! He blew off the cone and descended in streams of lava and sheets of ashes.

Boscotrase was one of the worst sufferers. For a time [illegible] hoped they might escape with a shower of stones and cinders. But one night the scarlet ribbons that had been trickling like rivers of blood down the rough slopes turned toward the village and flight was the only resource.

In a few hours Caesar had seen his vineyard and olive grove damaged beyond hope of reparation in his own lifetime. From a wealthy man he had become poor. Although he did not notice it, Maria's affection had cooled perceptibly from the moment when she realized that her lover was now no richer than his fellows.

Zabetta was gloomily preparing to flee from her home at the coming of the lava. To her whether she escaped or not mattered very little. The cataclysm without found a responsive echo in her heart, fiery, scorched and blasted.

With a small bundle of her belongings she was hurrying along the street amid the ashes and falling stones when a pale faced, shrieking figure rushed past her.

Zabetta's hand involuntarily sought her bosom, whence lurked the stiletto. She was alone with her hated rival. In that fearful semimidnight who would know if she slew Maria?

The other shrank back, seeing her stern face and guessing the import of her bosomed hand.

"Where is Caesar?" grimly questioned Zabetta. Maria cowered away.

"I left him at his house a little while ago. The lava was coming. As he entered to get a bundle the walls fell and buried him. I dared not go in. He is dead."

"Coward!" hissed Zabetta. Dropping her load, she gave the shrinking girl a push that hastened her flight, then flew back through the lurid gloom along the well known way that led to Caesar's house. Why she went she did not know. Caesar was dead to her, so her heart whispered. Yet instinct told her to hasten back.

Soon she saw the ruined house. Only a few rods away a red stream was rolling slowly down the street. She entered the tottering walls and beheld a prone figure partly buried under the fallen stones.

It was Caesar!

The peril of her former lover made Zabetta forgetful of her own danger and of the fact that he was the betrothed of another woman. Madly she tore with bleeding fingers at the debris that covered him. His heart was beating; he was alive. With strength increased tenfold she tugged at the wreckage until she had cleared away everything but a heavy block that pressed down the little finger of his right hand. This block resisted Zabetta's utmost efforts.

It was growing hotter and hotter. A few minutes more and the lava would engulf the house. Death would be the portion of any living thing therein. Zabetta drew her tiny dagger.

At that instant Caesar returned to consciousness. Seeing her bending over him, knife in hand, he gave a cry of terror and appeal and swooned again just as the blade descended. It severed his crushed finger at the second joint and he was free.

There was not a second to lose. Already the air was scorching. With a man's strength Zabetta lifted the insensible Caesar in her arms and carried him out into the street. Through the showers of ashes she staggered with her burden. She had not got fifty feet from the door when the lava boiled against the walls and the whole house fell in ruins.

But Caesar was saved!

So Zabetta kept her vow, sworn on the crucifix of the little dagger, that it should drink the blood of either Caesar or Maria. And it was probably the first instance on record where the fulfillment of a Gemella's blood oath resulted in a marriage.

Too Complicated.

Modern household improvements are appreciated by the initiated, but to the unenlightened they sometimes prove discouraging. Mrs. Gordon was showing Ina, the new maid, who had agreed to work for $4 a week, the conveniences of her up to date kitchen.

"It's a very easy place," explained the lady, "because I have so many contrivances for making the work light.

"Now, here's a new patent bread mixer. When you're ready to [illegible] I'll show you how to put it together. And this is a splendid meat grinder. It saves hours of labor with the chopping knife. Here is a fine apple parer that takes the cores out too. And this hardwood slab is a wonderful potato slicer."

"Then," continued Mrs. Gordon proudly, "I have a patent dishwasher, a percolating coffeepot and an automatic ash sifter."

"Meesis," said Ina firmly, "eef I is to spend all mys time learning how to make dose fenny t'ings go I must hov t'ree dollar a mont' more. She vor too moch vork."—Youth's Companion.

The Constitution.

The first draft of the constitution contained an enumeration of the states by name after the word "people"—as "We, the people of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Virginia"—but it became impossible to retain this form after the adoption of the seventh and last article, which provided that the ratification by nine states should be sufficient to establish the constitution as between them, and for the plain reason that it was impossible to determine whether all the states would ratify or, if they failed, which they would be; or, if nine should ratify, how to designate them. No alternative was thus left but to omit the enumeration and to insert in its place "United States."—New York American.

FISHY.

When Willie Jones was only twelve
He fished 'most every day in summer.
Quite often he brought home a string—
Also a yarn about a hummer—
He said it was as long as this:

But got away. How he did rue it!
That fish was just about this big.

And right well little Willie knew it.

He reached the age of twenty-two
And fished with flies and other tackle.
The strings he caught were shorter now,
But to the boys he'd loudly cackle
About the missing fish—so long:

He told of it in glowing diction.
He would have held his hands like this

Had he avoided piscine fiction.

At forty-five he whips the streams
And sounds the ocean's mighty caverns
For scaly things to brag about
Of evenings in the clubs and taverns;
The fish that get away from him
Grow more and longer every season.
From up to tip the last looked so:

Though this space would be more in reason:

—Charles R. Barnes in New York Sun.

An Enthusiast.

Towne—Oh, yes, he's quite an enthusiast. He goes in for things in real earnest.

Browne—Yes; if some one were to send him on a wild goose chase he'd speak of himself afterward as a sportsman.—Philadelphia Press.

Hard Times.

"You've got no reason to growl," said his satanic majesty. "We've lots of people here as good as you are."

"Oh, I don't mind the place," replied the eminent explorer. "What jars me is that I can't go back and lecture about it."—Boston Post.

Many Like Him.

Towne—McBuff started to tell me today how terribly ashamed he was"— Browne—Yes, I know him. Whenever he wants to brag about something he's proud of he always begins, 'Well, I'm ashamed to say.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

No Comparison.

Mrs. Hatterson—I engaged three cooks in one day, and not one of them came.

Mrs. Catterson—I had worse luck. I did the same, and they all came.—New York Life.

"A Counterpart."

A Dream Shattered.

"That man is constantly staring at me," exclaimed Miss Simperson.

"Be careful not to embarrass him by noticing it," replied Miss Cayenne. "He has a glass eye."—Washington Star.

He Knew.

"Come, Willie," said mother at the table, "sit up like a man."

"Why, mother," replied Willie, "men sit down for their food; it's only dogs that sit up."—Denver News-Times.

Money Wasted.

Young Fitznoodle (with a yawn)—Ya-as, weally, it costs me five thousand a year just to live, don't y'know.

Farmer Hardpan—Don't ye pay it! 'Tain't wuth it.—Judge.

When the Bills Came In.

She—Didn't you say you'd go through fire and water for me?

He—Yes, but I'll be hanged if I ever said I'd go through bankruptcy!—Yonkers Statesman.

Reassuring Him.

Cholly—Doctoh, have I any symptoms of bwain fag?

The Doctor—Brain fag? Not at all, my dear fellow; nothing but fag.—Chicago Tribune.

All For Him.

"Your fiancee seems to have a will of her own."

"Yes, and sometimes I half regret that I'm sole beneficiary."—Philadelphia Press.

One Comfort For Johnny.

"Yes," said Mrs. Lapsling, "Johnny tries my patience sometimes, but I never spank him. I don't believe in corpulent punishment."—Chicago Tribune.

Jane's Sandals.

"Jane is wearing sandals now. She wants to be considered literary."

"Beginning at the wrong end, ain't she?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Vacation Annoyances.

"Going out of town this summer?"

"No. Can't stand the discomforts of the resorts. Always sure to meet some creditor."—New York Times.

At the Shore.

"What are the wild waves saying, sister?"

"'Come in; the water's fine!'"—Cleveland Leader.

Something More Practical.

"How the speaker's face shines!"

"Inspiration?"

"Perspiration."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

... The ... Cashier's Grip

By ALANSON CROSBY.

Copyright, 1908, by Alanson Crosby.

"WELL!"

The low, gruff exclamation of chagrin fell from the lips of William Kane, alias Banker Bill, as he pressed his nose to the big plate glass window and descried by the solitary light above the cashier's desk of the Merchants' National bank that that official was engaged upon his books.

The exclamation was echoed by Bill's companion, a thin, slight, consumptive fellow of thirty-five, who contrasted strangely with the other man's hulking form, but in whom the pallor and emaciation of incurable disease affected not the restless, cunning gleam in his pale blue eyes.

"Dis cooks our goose fur tonight, Jake," muttered the first and larger of the two men. "We can't do nothin' wid dat bloke in dere."

"We might pop him," suggested the smaller man, touching his hip pocket mechanically and almost unconsciously as he spoke.

"Nix," said Bill authoritatively. "Youse entirely too free wid yer gun, Jersey. It's all right when it's necessary an' not too resky, but it ain't goin' ter do here. We'd be plached before we could make tracks, and den de chair fur both of us. It might be all right fur youse, who ain't got long ter live nohow, but my bellows is in good workin' order, an' I wants ter keep 'em pumpin' a few years yet."

For ten minutes the scratching of the cashier's pen and the turning of the leaves of the huge book before him continued. Then, with a sigh that partook of the qualities of a groan, he closed the volume and raised a haggard, care-marked face so that it was seen for the first time by the watching pair.

"Gee, dat mug's a dead give-away."

"Gee, dat mug's a deal give-away!" whispered Bill. "De bloke's been blowin' de bank's wads an' now he's makin' de books."

The cashier returned the book to its proper place. Then he disappeared through the door of an adjoining room, returning to view almost immediately with a small traveling grip in his hand. He glanced about him nervously, as though fearing he might be watched. The two pairs of eyes that were eagerly taking in his every action and the forms of their owners were undistinguishable, however, in the gloom of the street.

"Dis is gettin' interestin'," whispered Bill, and his companion grunted an assent.

The cashier laid the grip down upon his desk and lowered the gaslight above it to a faint flicker. Then he entered the vault, the door of which was open. Speedily he returned, bearing in his arms several small oblong packages wrapped in paper. By straining their eyes Bill and Jake could still take in his every action. Quickly he opened the grip and deposited the packages within it.

"De guy's doin' de job for us!" chuckled Bill. "Oh, dis is dead easy!"

Deposited the packages within.

The cracksmen could see the cashier's hand tremble as he drew his watch from his vest pocket and, holding it closer to the light to see the time, shook his head negatively, as if in disappointment. Then he picked up the satchel, disappeared with it in his hands into the black depths of the vault and returned empty handed.

"What does this mean?" growled Jersey Jake.

"It's all right," replied his companion. "Jest cultivate a little patience, Jersey."

The cashier closed the vault door and set the locks. Then he leaned against his desk in meditation. His face fell into his hands, and his frame shook with emotion. In a few minutes the throe ceased, and he straightened up. Again he looked at his watch. Then he put on his hat and overcoat and rubbers.

"He's got ter put in his time till de next train leaves fur Canady," whispered Bill, "an' he's goin' out. It's up ter us ter foller him."

"Why not crack de vault an' get de grip while he's gone?" asked Jersey Jake.

"What's de use?" demanded Bill. "We'd be takin' chances of bein' caught, while if we bides our time all we has ter do is ter relieve dis gentleman, who is kindly doin' our work fer us, of de grip. Den he gets de credit fur de job, an' we gets de cush. Oh, youse may be wise ter some lines of biz, Jersey, but youse gotta take off yer lid ter me in dis game. Duck inter dis stairway now. De bloke's comin' out."

The cashier stepped into a saloon and ordered whisky. His hand shook as he poured it out, and the glass overflowed before he could put the bottle down. He apologized abjectly to the bartender, threw the drink down his throat and called for another. This dispatched, he strode with uneasy steps out of the barroom and walked rapidly for several blocks.

Tipped the waiter and walked out.

He looked at his watch again and cursed as he noted the time. Then, he entered a restaurant and gave the waiter an order. He called for a newspaper and tried to read. The paper quivered so in his hands that he could not see the letters, and, with an exclamation of disgust, he called for his check, paid for the supper that had not yet been served him, tipped the astonished waiter a dollar and went out.

He looked furtively into the faces he passed in the streets and cast his head over his shoulder from time to time with nervous jerks. But he did not see the figures that followed him constantly a block back.

After an hour of this aimless wandering he returned to the bank. Opening again the vault door, he once more disappeared from view in the darkness and again reappeared with the satchel in his hands. Then hastily, as though he feared interruption, he closed and locked the vault door and hastened to the street, grip in hand.

A cab happened to be passing the bank as he stepped out. He called the driver, gave him a direction and jumped into the conveyance.

Jersey Jake uttered an oath.

"He's goin' ter get away from us!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, hush!" muttered Banker Bill, with some disgust. "Youse is always goin' off half cocked. He tole de cabby ter take him ter de Northern station. Dat means Canady fur him, as we know'd already, an' de folst train don't leave for half an hour yet. We got lots o' time. Don't get excited, ole man."

Banker Bill summoned another cab, and the two worthies entered it.

The Canadian limited bore only five passengers in the smoking car. Two of them occupied a seat near the front of the car, with their feet resting on the turned seat next to them. The tilted forward position of their hands and the small portion of their heads showing above the back of their seat indicated that they were enjoying a nap. The third passenger, a nervous, middle aged, white haired gentleman, sat toward the rear of the car, with a small satchel upon the seat beside him, from which he never withdrew his hand. The two remaining passengers, who, it is needless to say, were Banker Bill and Jersey Jake, occupied the last seat in the aisle.

A nervous, middle aged gentleman.

"Youse understands de game?" whispered Bill to his companion. "De next station is de last one on de American side. As soon as de train has pulled a few miles out of it I gets up an' yanks de bell rope, which brings de train ter a stop. As I does so youse blackjack de gent. I grabs de grip, an' we hikes ter de platform. As de train slows down we jumps. Oh, it's a puddin'!"

"It's a bad night," growled Jersey, who was prone to look upon the dark side. "I never seen such a storm in my life. We'll be drownded in the rain if we ain't struck by lightnin'."

"Rats!" grunted Bill. "It's all de better fur us. I hopes yer ain't afeard of der heavenly fireworks? We couldn't ask fur a better night fur dis little game. De storm 'll make any bloke cave on pursuin' us if der should be any unforeseen obstacles to de smoot'ness of de programme."

In a few minutes the train halted at a little way station. Some one got off from one of the rear cars, but no passengers were taken on. A deluge of rain was falling, as though all the reservoirs of the heavens had burst, and the black sky was rent asunder with great forks of dazzling light. The nervous man, with his hand still on the grip, looked up at the ever recurring flashes with a convulsive shudder.

He caught up the satchel.

"Steady, now," whispered Bill as the train started slowly on. "Wait till I gives de signal."

Five minutes passed. Then Bill arose stealthily and motioned for Jake to do his work. The latter crawled out from his seat and advanced on tiptoes, his blackjack grasped in his hand. As Jake's arm was poised for the blow Bill pulled the bell cord which would signal for the engineer to stop.

Jake's blow was not struck. As his arm was about to descend the heavens seemed torn apart on all sides. There was a crash of broken glass, a flash as of a sword before Jake's eyes, and the bank cashier fell forward without a sound.

Jersey Jake's arm was still poised in the air, as though struck numb in that position, when Bill shook him.

"Wake up!" he said hoarsely. "De elements did de deed fur us, an' de train's stoppin'. Come on."

As he spoke he caught up the satchel from the dead man's seat and fairly dragged Jake, who was still staring blankly at the fallen figure, after him.

As they reached the platform the train had slowed sufficiently for them to jump off.

"Go on!" yelled Bill. "Are youse struck senseless?"

"All right," returned Jake. "But I was fur a minute."

The two men leaped from the slowly moving train and under Bill's direction set out across a field. They continued to run in the drenching rain until by another flash of lightning they saw that the train had again resumed its flight.

"Bunkoed, by ——!"

"All safe!" panted Bill. "No use wearin' out what's left o' yer bellows by further sprintin' exercises. Now ter see what the haul amounts to."

"How are you goin' ter count the stuff in the dark?" protested Jake.

"De lightnin's our candle," said Bill. "We won't try ter count it, but a look at it will be good fur our eyes."

Quickly the satchel was opened and the wrapper torn from one package.

"Thunder!" roared Bill as a flash of lightning revealed its contents to be waste paper cut in the form of bank notes.

With feverish haste the other packages were opened. Not a dollar was in any of them.

"Bunkoed, by ——!" fairly shrieked Bill as he savagely kicked the satchel from him.

"You said I was green in this line of business, an' I am," growled Jersey Jake, "but I've got de consolation of knowin' dat there's others."

The papers next day told of the strange and sudden death by lightning on the Canadian limited train of Cashier Adams of the Merchants' National ba of B. Mr. Adams, the papers stated, was leaving on a much needed vacation trip when stricken. He was an estimable man, enjoying the full confidence of his business associates, and was survived by a charming family, who were plunged into deep grief by his untimely death.

"Poor Adams!" sighed the president of the Merchants' National bank as he read the papers. "Little did he suspect that we had discovered his peculations and refrained from exposing him only out of respect for his family. He must have opened his grip and discovered that we had substituted waste paper for the money he had arranged so carefully to take away with him. Then, I presume, he threw the grip away, as the papers make no mention of its having been found. Well, I am glad—for his family's sake."

The Old Apothecary Art.

In the old days the Magi ordained that "the Pyrethrum parthenium (the feverfew) should be gathered with the left hand, that the fevered patient's name must be spoken forth and that the herbalist must not look behind him."

Later we hear that "gout was treated with henbanes only when the moon was in Aquarius or Pisces—i. e., three times a year, before sunset. It must be dug up with the thumb and third finger of the left hand, when one must say: 'I declare, I declare, holy wort to thee! I invite thee tomorrow to the house of Fileas to stop the rheum of the feet of —— and say, I invite thee, the great name, Jehovah, Sabaoth the God, who steadied the earth and staid the sea, the filler of flowing rivers, who dried up Lot's wife and made her a pillar of salt, take the breath of thy Mother Earth and her power and dry the rheum of the feet and hands of ——.'"

Henry VIII., who studied medicine and took great interest in inventing new mixtures and remedies, devised many quaint "cramp" rings to be worn for the cure of rheumatism and curious liniments and cataplasms, for the full benefit of which a large amount of faith was necessary.—London Chronicle.

Humans and Cigars.

"Some people," said the smoker, "remind me of a cigar that burns down one side faster than the other. I suppose you will say that this is because of an unevenness in temperament which makes them—well, not wear smoothly or in an all around fashion. That may be the obvious parallel to draw, but I was thinking of something else. They seem to me like an unevenly burning cigar because their tendency is to get ahead of themselves. They overstep themselves in some important particular or other. They are too eager, for one thing, and they show it. They are too anxious for another, and they show that. They are too desirous of pleasing others for a third. They burn down, in effect, too quickly on one side, and most of them never understand what is the trouble. I'm not much of a philosopher, but I can see that when in the daily routine we show our hand too much, or, rather, get into a state of mind when we can't help showing our hand, the all around results are not apt to be especially satisfactory. To follow out the cigar simile, we consume too fast along a special line of weakness, and a little wind of unpleasantness or misfortune will make the calamity worse."—New York Press.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to conveyancing. Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
Schedule effective June 2, 1907.
OAKLAND.
* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points. Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO. Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.). Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING. Depart *9.26 a. m., daily, *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.). Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS. Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.
We will sell at private sale at our farm between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,
1 Gasoline Engine,
8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.
1 Hay Baller,
operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.
For further information call on or write to
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.
We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:
One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.
Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.
Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.
For further information, address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.
Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.
LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of
WILLIAM HACHMAN,
late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.
Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSSER,
Administrators.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00
The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.
SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department
Takes care of your money which waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.
Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.
We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y
You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows & Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S
Big Stock to select from.
Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.
We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.
Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.
We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent
is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safety be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
SincelI Building, OAKLAND, MD.

The Little Crossing Bridge on the National Road near Grantsville.

FACTS ABOUT THE NATIONAL ROAD

The Official Name of Which Is Cumberland Road.

GOVERNMENT WAS VERY LIBERAL

In Making Appropriation Over Four Millions Expended Opposition Strong at Times One Bill Was Vetoed by Monroe

To the Editor of the Republican:

The good roads question is one of so much comprehension and importance that many people are not only thinking over it, but upon the inquiry and study of it. The most important of all the roads in or out of existance is the old Cumberland road, better known as the National road, tho' the former name is the legal and proper one by Congressional enactments.

It is proposed in this paper to give some facts, not generally known in a convenient and intelligible form, which can be clearly understood, showing the number and amounts of the Congressional appropriations from 1806 to 1838, the last of the appropriations, also the amount of money appropriated for for the road east of the Ohio River, and west of it, through three states to east St. Louis. The following is a reliable list of statement of the different appropriations, with amounts, dates and where applied. This statement has been made with care and considerable research and labor:

1806—$30,000, to be expended between Cumberland and Ohio river.

1810—$60,000, between Cumberland and Brownsville, Pa.

1811—$50,000, between the same points.

1812—$30,000, between the same points.

181 —$30, 00, between the same points.

1818—$52,984, between the same points.

1818—$250,000, for Cumberland road generally.

1820—$10,000, for extension from Wheeling, west.

1823—$250,000, between Cumberland and Wheeling, W. Va.

1825—$150,000, between Canton and Zanesville, Ohio.

1827—$30,000, between Cumberland and Wheeling, W. Va.

1829—$100,000, beyond Zanesville, Ohio.

1831—$24,915.85, for Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

1832—$150,000, for use east of the Ohio river.

1834—$450,000, for use in Ohio. Indiana and Illinois.

18 30,000, for use east of the Ohio

$200,000, for use in Ohio.

$100,000, for use in Indiana.

$346,186.58, for the road east of er.

—$200,000, to State of Ohio.

1836—$250,000, to State of Indiana.

1836—$150,000, to State of Illinois.

1837—$190,000, to State of Ohio.

1837—$100,000, to State of Indiana.

1837—$100,000, to State of Illinois.

1838—$150,000, to State of Ohio.

It will thus be seen that the large amount of $4,284,086.43 were from 1806 to 1838 appropriated by Congress and applied to the building and maintaining the Cumberland road, which passed through and touched six different states of the Union, and with a length of about 750 miles in all—only 35 miles in Maryland; about 80 in Pennsylvania, and 10 in the Panhandle of Virginia and about 600 miles in the three western states, $1,889,170.59 of the whole sum was spent on the road from Cumberland to Wheeling: 131 miles, as marked by the many iron markers, some of them yet standing, about 75 years old. Upon the road west of the Ohio river with a straight line through Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the sum of $2,384,915.85 was used. How much to each State does not appear. This latter amount came from the sale of government lands then lying in these three states.

The part of the money thus applied that went to Maryland can not be ascertained correctly, but a full share no doubt, as the Maryland part was the most mountainous of the whole line. The most imposing and expensive stone bridge is to be found spanning the Little Crossings river, one mile east of Grantsville. Its half moon arch is a wonder to many. The structure is in a sound condition, except the top guard walls, which are delapidated. The conseeration of this wonderful bridge was witnessed by the late Joseph Shriver in his boyhood days about the year 1816. In late years this bridge has become to sight seekers an object of interest nearequal to that of the Natural Bridge of Virginia.

There was all along considerable opposition to the Cumberland road, mostly on constitutional grounds. At least one of the bills for its support was vetoed by President Monroe. But the country at large was in favor of it. They saw its national charact e usefulness. And they did not fail to see it was the outlet of the populous and wealthy east to the inviting and developed west the near and far West. Thus it then was.

Would it not be proper and even advisable for our general government and lower authorities to join hands in giving a new life to this once magnificent national highway, not only for historic reasons and associations, but for national and local utility. J. B.

August 8, 1908.

BALTIMORE SUN OUT FOR TAFT

Says His Election Will Better Promote Public Welfare.

The Baltimore Sun has come out flatfooted for Taft. In its leading editorial last Fridayit says:

On July 10 Mr. W. J. Bryan was nominated for President by the Democratic National convention at Denver. Yesterday he received formal notification, at Lincoln, Neb., of the action of that convention. In his speech accepting the nomination, which we publish in full on another page, Mr. Bryan said:

"Our platform declares that the overshadowing issue which manifests itself on all the questions now under discussion is, 'Shall the people rule?' Shall the people control their own government and use that government for the protection of their rights and the promotion of their welfare; or wealth prey upon the defenseless public, while the offenders secure immunity from subservient officials whom they raise to power by unscrupulous methods?"

The master hand in the construction of the Democratic platform was Mr. Bryan's. He was consulted about every item. It is understood that he formulated the most important declarations. It is probable that in quoting from the platform Mr. Bryan is literally quoting himself. It, as the Democratic nominee asserts, the paramount issue in this campaign is "the rule of the people," the use of their government "for the protection of their rights and the promotion of their welfare," the proposition submitted to the voter is not only a very practical one, but a very simple one. It is the judgment of The Sun that the material welfare of the people of the United States—industrial and financial—would be promoted to a greater degree by the election of Mr. Taft than by the election of Mr. Bryan; that their rights would be safeguarded as carefully by Mr. Taft as by Mr. Bryan. And the grounds upon which we base these conclusions are as follows:

The people of this country are just beginning to recover from a period of industrial, financial and commercial depression, due, primarily and measurably, to the methods, rather than the object in view, of the Roosevelt administration in dealing with trust and corporation problems. The Sun has never failed to recognize the existence of corporate abuses, to condemn lawlessness on the part combinations of capital and industry. It has supported earnestly and energetically all proper measures for the correction of these abuses and for the protection of the people's rights and interests. At the same time it has not hesitated to condemn Mr. Roosevelt's methods, his application of correctives which, while failing to curb the lawlessness of "predatory wealth" and to impose adequate punishment, tended to disturb business conditions generally. The "Big Stick" has been tried for four years, and it has in part resulted in disaster to labor and to capital. Mr. Bryan has his "Big Club," and we frankly say that the Big Club in Mr Bryan's hands would argue no better for the public weal than the "Big Stick" has done.

The Sun is convinced that the "arm of the law," personified by a President of balanced judgment, with a thorough knowledge of the law—a man of steady purpose, just and resolute—would prove a better defender of the rights of the people, would do more to promote their material welfare, than the Big Stick has done in the hands of Mr. Roosevelt or than the Big Club could do in the hands of Mr. Bryan. It is our deliberate judgment that for the next four years the material interests of the people of this country would be safer with Mr. Taft at the head of the national Government than with Mr. Bryan. We further believe that while the lawbreakers would be brought to account by Mr. Taft with as little fear or favor as Mr. Bryan could display, the methods employed by Mr. Taft would not curtail the workingman's opportunities for employment by disturbing the business of law-abiding men and corporations, as has been witnessed in the last few years. Mr. Taft's experience in important administrative posts, his judicial temperament, his patience and thoroughness in investigation, justify the belief that as President he would execute the law faithfully and well, but not spectacularly. And while this type of man ought to be in the White House all the time, he seems to be especially needed now, when the country is emerging from an industrial and financial depression which brought distress and suffering into many homes.

The greater part of the wealth of this nation is not "predatory." It is invested in lawful enterprises, and upon the success of these enterprises depends the prosperity of the nation. The Sun believes that "predatory wealth," so far as that phrase means capitial engaged in combinations that oppress the public, should be curtailed by proper regulations and punished whenever it is lawless. The thoughtful voter should vote his honest convictions, with intelligent regard for his own welfare in the economic as well as the political sense. Fine phrases do not multiply the avenues of employment. Epigrams butter no bread and start no factories. Repartee and ready debate do not raise the scale of wages. The products of the farm are not marketed by eloquence or fine diction. We no not question Mr. Bryan's sincerity or his devotion to the interests of the people. But we believe that the material welfare of the nation would be safer in the hands of a President of Mr. Taft's temperament and calm judgment, and for this reason we favor his election to the Presidency.

These are the conclusions which we have reached after mature consideration and with the sole desire to promote the good of the nation and the welfare of the people. We are aware that they are not in accord with the views of many of our readers. We have entire respect for their sincerity. We recognize their right to follow their own convictions and judgment. Every man is entitled to freedom of political action. Americans generally have the welfare of the nation at heart, and though they differ as to the means and methods by which the national welfare can be assured, they differ honestly. We believe the election of Mr. Taft would tend to hasten the restoration of prosperous business conditions. We believe that his administration will be prudent. Therefore we support him from a sense of public duty.

Send In Your Samples.

All land owners, in or near the Youghiogheny River valley, are requested to send samples of all the coal, iron ore, fireclay, kaolin, glass sand, lime and building stone, or other minerals found on their lands, to the office of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company, room 14, First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md., where they will be labeled for exhibiton.

H. P. TASKER,
General Manager.

For Sale Cheap

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

For Sale or Rent,

The Litzinger building on south side of Second street, Oakland, Md., for sale, or the north storeroom for same for rent. Apply to J. C. Peddicord, Oakland postoffice, for particulars.

J. M. LITZINGER.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent,
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Subscribe for The Republican.

[Benj. A. Richmond, Cumberland, Md., and Fred A. Thayer, Oakland, Md., Solicitors.]

Stoyer Run Coal Company

TRUSTEE-MORTGAGEE'S FORECLOSURE SALE

OF VALUABLE

COAL MINES

AND

Village Property

AT

Stoyer, Garrett County, Md.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa., Trustee-Mortgagee.

By virtue of the power of sale to the undersigned mortgagee, a corporation, as set out in the mortgage from the STOYER RUN COAL COMPANY of Garrett county, Maryland, to it, dated the first day of April, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, page 46, of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Md., default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay said moneys secured by said mortgage when due, the said THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia, Pa., in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage, will, on

SATURDAY,

The 12th Day of September,

1908, at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett county, Md., commencing at twelve o'clock, noon, sell at public sale as a whole coal and mining plant, all the real, leasehold and personal property, rights, franchises and privileges of said Stoyer Run Coal Company, particularly described and set out in the mortgage aforesaid, the same being more particularly described as follows:

First—All that piece of ground lying near Stoyer in said county, being a part of a tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

resurveyed for William W. Hoye July 13th, 1880, described as follows: Beginning for said part at a stone marked "X" standing near the East margin of the county road at Stoyer and South 25 degrees East, 18½ feet from a hemlock tree, which stands at the end of the first line of a part of said tract called "Addition to Paradise" which was conveyed by William Whitmore to John P. Stoyer, by deed dated March 7th, 1892, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 19, folio 353 of said land records, and running thence South 55 degrees East, 133 feet, South 35 degrees West, 194 feet to the north limits of the Western Maryland Railroad Company's right of way and with said limit, North 61½ degrees West, 92 feet, North 25½ degrees East, 210 feet to the beginning, containing ¾ths of an acre more or less.

Second—All that other part of the tract of land called

"Addition to Paradise,"

aforesaid lying at said Stoyer, beginning for the same at a stake standing North 55 degrees West, 40 feet from the aforesaid planted stone marked "X," standing at the beginning of the first parcel just above described, and running thence North 34½ degrees West, 96 feet to a planted stone marked "2," then South 85½ degrees West, 160 feet, South 82 degrees West, 125 feet to a large stone marked "X," then South 20 degrees East, 165 feet to the northern limits of right of way of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, then with said limits in an easterly direction about 320 feet to the intersection of a line drawn South 25½ degrees West, from the beginning thereof, leaving said line North 25½ degrees East, 215 feet to the beginning, containing five acres more or less.

Third—All that other part of said tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

beginning for the same at a point on the southern limits of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is South 25½ degrees West, 270 feet from the beginning of the second parcel just above described, and running thence South 25½ degrees West, 300 feet to a stake standing on the north side of the North Branch of the Potomac River thence up the said River North 28½ degrees West 162 feet to the mouth of Stoyer Run, then North 43 degrees West, 179 feet to the south limits of the right of way of said railroad, and with it, in an easterly direction, about 290 feet to the beginning, containing ¾ths of an acre, more or less.

Fourth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under which said lots and leased land are adjacent to and near the three parcels just above described, being the same lots and premises, which were leased by and described in the lease from John P. Stoyer and wife to H. M. Datesman dated the 24th day of June, 1903, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 32, of said Land Records, to which lease reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the same.

Military Lots Nos. 203 & 199,

Fifth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under a tract of land known as lying West of Stover in district No. 8 of Garrett county, which is particularly described in and leased by a lease for the same from the Bayard Coal and Coke Company to Harris M. Datesman, dated July 31st, 1903, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 219, of said Land records. For a more particular description of which property reference is made to said lease.

"Addition to Paradise,"

All the above described parcels of real and leasehold property being particularly referred to and conveyed by a deed from William H. Thomas, Trustee, to the said Stoyer Run Coal Co., dated the 13th day of June, 1905, and recorded among said Land Records in Folio E. Z. T. No. 49, p. 531.

Sixth—All and singular the personal property of the said Stoyer Run Coal Company owned by it at the time of said mortgagor since acquired by it, situate at or in said village of Stoyer or at or in the coal mines at said place and upon the aforesaid properties or used in connection with said coal mines and mining plant of said coal company, consisting principally, but not wholly of the following, viz.: 61 tons thirty six inch guage mine cars, twenty three tons of steel rails, one set of Fairbank's track scales, one full set of blacksmith tools, a large lot of mining tools, two mules and harness, two large boilers with pumps, several engines and all appliances appurtenant thereto, all tramways, hoists, gas engines, mine props, and all other tools, appliances and equipment constituting a first class plant for the mining and shipping of coal, together with all other goods and chattels and personal property of said mortgagor now owned by it and situate on any of the aforesaid properties.

Seventh—All the corporate franchises, rights and privileges of said mortgagor, and all rights in connection with said property and coal mines and coal hereinder given by the aforesaid deeds and leases.

Said fee simple properties are improved by one large two and a half story superintendent's house, twenty two-story houses or cottages for miners' dwellings, twelve large shanties, one large store building 60 by 20 feet deep with dwelling attached and office room, one storehouse, ice house, magazines, stable for twelve head of mules, coal tipples, blacksmith shop, dumps and tramways.

The mines are said to have a coal area of about FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ACRES of coal with three mine openings. Mine No. 1 is in the Lower Kittanning vein of about 4½ feet coal. Mine No. 2 is in the Masontown Seam with a vein of about 6 feet. Mine No. 3 is worked by plane with engine and is in the Upper Freeport Seam.

These mines lie on the Western Maryland Rail Road and have a siding costing over $2,000.00. Said mines are equipped with modern machinery, engines, pumps, boilers, tramways, hoists, etc. The storeroom is a fine stand for a store.

All the aforegoing will be sold as ONE WHOLE PLANT, including all the aforesaid real, leasehold, personal and mixed property, the same being open to inspection by purchasers without warranty by the Mortgagee-Trustee as to contents, quality or otherwise.

Reference is hereby made to the terms of the said recorded Mortgage as to the power of the Trustee-Mortgagee to adjourn the sale, the right of purchasers to use bonds in part payment of purchase money, and other provisions affecting the sale.

TERMS OF SALE.—$1000 cash on day of sale and the balance within ten days after the ratification of the sale by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, subject to such terms as may be prescribed by the Court, or announced by the Trustee at the time of sale.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Trustee and Mortgagee.

WM. R. NICHOLSON, President.

ORDER NISI.

H. R. Dewitt, Late Treasurer, vs. Jesse S. Severe.

No. 161 on Miscellaneous Docket. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

It is ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., this 18th day of August, 1908, that the tax sale made and reported in the above entitled cause, by H. R. Dewitt, late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Md., be ratified and confirmed; unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper printed in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $55.45.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Ada Bowser, et al., vs. Cyrus Bowser.

No. 1382 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Amos Bowser, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown or before the 18th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $700.00

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

William Hachman, et al., vs. Caroline Gentz et al.

No. 1340 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Edward H. Sincell and Gilmor S. Hamill, trustees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three sucessive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $175.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.

FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY

Six Courses of Instruction

Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $80 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

Subscribe for the Republican.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1908. NUMBER 26

COVERING TRAIL OF GEN. BRADDOCK

...y of University Explorers Reached Connellsville After 12 Days Out.

The party of professors and students exploring the old Braddock road reached Connellsville Saturday. The Connellsville Daily News, Aug. 22, says:

A tale of the old Braddock trail across the mountains from Cumberland to Braddock is soon to appear in the "American Historical Review," from the pen of Prof. J. K. Lacock of Amity, Pa., who holds the chair of assistant of American Diplomacy at Harvard University. Mr. Lacock is in town registered today at the Arlington hotel, he and a party of young men having made the trip over the old trail this far. In the party besides Prof. Lacock are Prof. Charles F. Abbott, of the Somerville, Mass., high school; Claude S. Larzelere, professor of history and political science at the Mt. Pleasant Michigan State Normal School; Prof. Henry Temple, of Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, and his son John Temple, a student there; Edgar Murdoch, Esq., of Washington and Jefferson, and Ernest K. Weller, a well known Washington photographer. All members departed for home this morning but the leader and his photographer.

Prof. Lacock is making the expedition for the purpose of securing data for the article mentioned and for a book he expects to write. The others with the exception of the photographer are out for the historical value of the trip. The party left Cumberland on August 10. Many difficulties were encountered. Often the trail would be lost and the fact not discovered until many miles had been traversed. The residents of the country through which they passed gave them invaluable aid locating old landmarks.

The trail led through northern Maryland along the old Indian trail by way of Somerfield, Farmington, Jumonville and Mt. Braddock to Connellsville. Thus far the task has not been as difficult as the leader expects it to be the remainder of the way.

Stork News.

This very important item has been neglected for the past two issues of this paper, hence we apologize to those interested and note the following births:

To Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Townshend, on Thursday, August 13th, a son.

To Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Hinebaugh, on Thursday of last week, a son.

To Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stanton, on Friday of last week, a daughter.

To Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson, of Mountain Lake Park, on Thursday of last week, a son.

Call for Your Letters.

F. C. Fear, Mr. George Haines, H. W. Harrew, G. B. Hitchcock, Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Jack Moes, Mr. John M raw, Mr. N. G. Sins, Miss Maue Wilson.

TOMORROW MOUNTAIN CHAUTAUQUA CLOSES

Will End the Most Successful Season in the History of The Park.

BETTER PROGRAM:BETTER RESULT

More People Have Been at Mountain Lake Park This Year Than Ever Before and They are Universally Satisfied With Conditions.

Tomorrow will witness the close of the Twenty-Sixth Annual Assembly at Mountain Lake Park, to be followed on the succeeding day by the conference of representatives of the Young Woman's Christian Association, composed of delegates from the middle, eastern and southern states of the country who will sssemble for a session lasting until September 6th.

The closing day of the Mountain Chautauqua has always been one of the great events of the year. Heretofore on that day great National characters such as Sam Jones, T. DeWitt Talmage and others of equal prominence, have graced the platform. This year by reason of the death of Mr. Jones, Mr. George R. Stuart, a colleague and the equal in many respects of Sam Jones, has been secured to deliver the closing lecture of the season. Others who will appear on the platform will be Dr. D. W. Howell, of New Haven Conn. The Otterbein Male Quartette and Hand Bell Ringers, will also have a part in the evening's entertainment, as will also Mr. H. U. Engle in impersonations and readings. Prof. Struck in feats of magic, will startle all with his mysterious work. The vitagraph, with the wonderful moving pictures, will contribute much to the enjoyment of those who will surely be present. The evening will end with an attractive display of twentieth century fireworks.

The management of the Chautauqua, as well as those having interests at Mountain Lake Park, are more than gratified with the success of the season so near at an end. The program has been much better than in years gone by with the result that a much better patronage has been accorded it by the local people as well as by those who come to the mountain for a season of plea ure and profit.

Never before in the history of Mountain Lake Park have so many people visited that lovely spot. Today the crowd is as large as at any time during the season with the result that the hotels and boarding houses and even private dwellings are as full as comfort will permit. What will contribute more to the future success of the Park is the fact that the people composing the great crowd now present and those who have been there and returned to their homes, have been universally satisfied with the program, the weather, the climate and all other things combining to make a summer outing pleasant and profitable.

All this success is the result of heroic work, good management and faith in the public displayed at all times by those two princes of good generalship, Drs. Davidson and Davis.

The East Central Young Women's Christian Association Student Conference will hold its first session in Assembly Hall at 7:45 p. m., Friday, August 28th. Each day's program will open with a Bible class for the leaders of the Conference. At 10:30 a. m. there will be a series of platform meetings addressed by some of the leading Christian workers of the country.

Every afternoon there will be a Mission Study class. The remainder of the afternoon will be given to recreation. In the evenings there will be platform meetings to be addressed by prominent speakers, each evening closing with delegation meetings. Admission to the week day meetings will be by card, but the Sunday meetings will be open to the public. The morning and evenings of the two Sundays, August 30th and September 6th, will be held in one of the larger Auditoriums. The preacher for Sunday, August 30th, both morning and evening will be Rev. Dr. Frederic Goss, of Cincinnati. Dr. Goss is one of the great speakers and writers of this country. The people will be cordailly welcome to hear him on Sunday.

Field Day at the Park last Friday was a grand success. The dashes were won by Lanham, of Grafton; standing broad jump by Thayer, of Oakland; running broad jump, high jump and hurdle race were won by Pipes, of Pittsburg. Milton Sincell, of Oakland, was successful in the shot put, and Coleman, of W. U. P. in the mile run. Prizes were awarded by C. M. Rathbun & Sons, W. A. Gonder, H. C. Sincell & Co. and the Park Association.

Mr. James A. Enlow, who has been so efficient and courteous as ticket agent at the Chautauqua this season, has been appointed agent for the American Bible Society and will commence work September 1st, beginning in this county and working eastward until he covers the entire state which is his territory. The Bible Society was certainly fortunate in securing one so eminently qualified for this important work.

The Stevens Band was entertained at luncheon by the hostess and guests of Haydenhurst cottage Wednesday afternoon after a serenade by that splendid musical organization.

BLOOMING ROSE.

The picnic that was announced in our last letter was a success in very respect regardless of the condition of the weather or the opposition it met with. Everyone taking part feel satisfied with the result. The box social at night was a splendid affair. The boxes were all of the best, showing both skill and taste. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. The game of ball came off on regular schedule time, Blooming Rose winning as we expected. We have somewhat of a "Hayseed team." "Spikey" Bolling was pitcher and his son Playford, 15 years old, catcher, and for a boy we do not know of any that can equal him. Blooming Rose team has an invitation to go to Brandonville and play a game. Brandonvide team played a game in the afternoon with part to Blooming Rose, Kendall and Friendsville. Victory for home combination, 7 to 6.

Miss Ruth Herring, of High House, Pa., who was visiting relatives for a few weeks, has gone home.

Mr. H. L. Friend, of Swanton, went through here on Saturday with a traction engine en route to Swanton.

Mr. J. S. Meyers and wife and Mrs. S. C. Bowling attended the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. William Willet, near Brandonville.

People are preparing the ground to sow wheat. Corn is ripening fine with prospects for a good crop. Buckwheat is a very promising crop.

Messrs. John Hoff and Arthur Dixon spent Sunday with their families at Blooming Rose.

Mr. Ed. Dixon and family, Samuel Bolling and family, J. S. Meyers and family, Harry Friend and family and uncle Dave Friend all spent the day at Blooming Rose church recently. A more pleasant time no one ever enjoyed.

Mr. L. H. Johnson attended the picnic here on Saturday.

Mrs. C. B. Friend spent the day at this place on Saturday.

Mr. T. P. Frantz, our mason, has recovered from a spell of sickness.

Mrs. Riley has opened a first class boarding house. Meals at all hours.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

GARRETT COUNTY LUMBER INDUSTRY.

The DuBois and Bond Bros. Plant on The Savage River—Other Plants.

"T. Jay," Oakland's versatile newspaper writer, sent the following from here to the Cumberland News on Monday, which appeared in Tuesday morning's edition of that paper:

Another of Garrett county's lumber industries is operated by DuBois and Bond Brothers The firm's plant is located on Savage river about four miles from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with which it is connected by a branch road running from the mills to Bond station. This connecting line is equipped, owned and operated by DuBois and Bond Brothers. This company is cutting timber on a tract of many thousand acres, extending from the Baltimore and Ohio across the county nearly to Grantsville on the National road. This industry gives employment to a large number of Garrett county people, and the monthly payroll is very large. Mr. N. U. Bond, who is at the head of Bond Brothers, says the demand for lumber is reasonably good, but prices are unsatisfactory. He further says that if they sell they must sell at remunerative prices. Under these conditions the DuBois and Bond Brothers Co., with 9,000,000 feet of lumber stacked up in the yard at the mills shut down during the month of July.

DuBois and Bond Brothers like the Kendall Lumber Company, are looking forward to the time now not far distant, when the lumber supply has been exhausted in Garrett county and with this end in view have purchased 43,000 acres of timber in the state of Oregon. This timber produces lumber about the same quality as the North Carolina pine, but has no pitch. The company is building a large mill on the Columbia river about 20 miles below Portland. They will build forty miles of standard gauge railroad to haul the logs from the forest to the mill from which point they have two lines of railroad to the east and deep water outlet as well.

Bond Brothers on their on hook have purchased ten thousand acres of Oregon timber on the line of the DuBois and Bond Brothers railroad, which gives them a through rate to all distant points.

Bond Brothers have built up quite a village around their plant at Bond in this county, and have made many friends in Garrett county, who will miss them when they no longer have a supply of timber here.

A large portion of the territory which is now being cut by the Bond mill was partly cut over by the old Lochiel Lumber Company many years ago. This company had its mill on Savage river, near Bloomington. It was a great industry in its day, but I have always understood that it was not a financial success and soon passed away. At the present time there is hardly a trace of of this once busy plant remaining. The time is not very distant when the same will be said of the busy thriving plants now in operation for their wheels must cease to revolve when the timber has been exhausted. How will Garrett county fill the gap which will be made when that time comes? I propose to discuss this question later.

I now call attention to the large plant owned and operated by Jennings Brothers, near Bittinger in this county. Several years ago Jennings Brothers purchased what was known as the Cunningham lands, and the Manaydier lands, and erected thereon a large lumber plant. This firm built a railroad down Casselman river, which gave an outlet to the Pittsburg and Connellsville road. This mill like the others is one of our great industries. These several large mills distribute to our people about fifty thousand dollars per month, and besides this they all have made a great deal of money for the owners.

The Meadow Mountain Lumber Company with John W. McCullough at its head and with its plant at Friendsville has cut nearly all the timber in that section. Mr. McCullough has made a great success of the lumber business. For several years past he has been actively engaged in buying and selling timber and coal lands, and has cleaned up a half million dollars. He is now manufacturing lumber in Southern Virginia, near the North Carolina line, and is largely interested in numerous oil wells in the Indian Territory.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HENRY SCHLOSSNAGLE.

Died, at his home near Accident, on Tuesday, the 18th inst., of rheumatism, Henry Schlossnagle, aged 83 years. For the past ten years the deceased was a confirmed invalid, being almost entirely helpless as a result of the disease with which he suffered. Besides his wife he is survived by six sons and one daughter.

JUDGE TAFT GIVES MESSAGE TO THE WORLD

Presidential Candidate Delivers Unique Sermon To a Phonograph.

HIS IS A CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

Discourses on the Importande of Foreign Misson.—Declares There is Nothing in the Constitution to Prevent This Nation From Assisting Other Nations.

"A little sermon in a phonograph" is what one of the phonographic records recently made by Judge Taft is called. The generally expressed curiosity to know what the Republican candidate said into the talking machine was gratified Tuesday by this reproduction.

"I have known a good many people who were opposed to foreign missions. I have known a good many regular attendants at church—consistent members—that religiously, if you choose to use that term, refused to contribute to foreign missions. I confess that there was a time when I was enjoying a snug provincialism that I hope has left me now, when I rather sympathized with that view. Until I went to the orient, until there was thrust upon me the responsibilities with reference to the extension of civilization in those far-distant lands, I did not realize the immense importance of foreign missions.

"The truth is, we have got to wake up in this country. We are not all there is in the world. There are lots besides us, and there are lots of people besides that are entitled to our effort and our money and our sacrifice to help them on in the world. No man can study the movement of modern civilization from an impartial standpoint and not realize that Christianity and the spread of Christianity are the only basis for hope of modern civilization in the growth of popular self-government.

"The spirit of Christianity is pure democracy. It is equality of men before God—the equality of man before the law, which is, as I understand it, the most Godlike manifestation that man has been able to make.

"I speak not of foreign missions from a purely religious standpoint. That has been and will be done. I speak of them from the standpoint of political and governmental advancement of modern civilization, and I think I have had some opportunity to know how dependent we are on the spread of Christianity for any hope we may have of uplifting the people whom providence has thrust upon us for our guidance.

"It is said that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that authorizes national altruism of that sort. Well, of course there is not: but there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that forbids it. What there is in the Constitution of the United States is a breathing spirit that we are a nation with all the responsibilities that any nation ever had, and therefore when it becomes the Christian duty of a nation to assist another nation the Constitution authorizes it because it is part of our national well being."

GORTNER.

Jessie Shaffer and son, who have been operating a thrashing machine in this vicinity for the past two weeks returned to their home at Horse Shoe Run, W. Va., last Saturday morning.

James Lichty, of Boynton, Pa., was visiting his parents, Mr. and S. J. Lichty, last week.

Mr. Bruce Dodge and sister, Miss Georgia, of Terra Alta, W. Va., spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dodge, of near Sunnyside.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Lee, of Springs, Pa., are calling on their many friends at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Miller, of Plain City, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. William Schrock, of Arcola, Ill., were among the many visitors to this village during the past week.

Sunday School next Sunday at 10 o'clock a. m., and Bible reading at 7:30 p. m. Everybody welcome.

WILLIE.

FIKE.

The weather has been very dry for the past week and the farmers are patiently waiting for rain so they can plow their wheat ground.

Mr. L. K. Fike went to Keyser, Md., last Saturday.

Miss Mary Umbel spent a few days in Uniontown last week.

I have heard some people say that if the road supervisor does not repair the bridge just beyond Christian Fike's that some one may be injured in crossing it. We hope that it will soon be repaired as the bridge as it is is not safe for travel.

Would the editor please state in his valuable paper what date the public schools will open this season.

CARTER.

[The schools will open on September 14th for a term of seven and a-half months.]

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

Subscribe for The Republican.

DIXON & KELSO

Wholesale Retail

PEACHES! PEACHES!

Peach season is on and we are headquarters for same.

Will receive fresh Peaches daily.

Price the Lowest.

Car load of Mason's Fruit Jars, Jelly Glasses and Stoneware at Bottom Prices.

Come and See

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL CLOTHING

NOW COMING IN.

The best stock I have ever had. Fine line of BOYS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in the best styles. Plenty to select from.

And don't forget, I have the best line of SHOES in the county.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

Quit Talking About Politics In Railroad Troubles.

By MELVILLE E. INGALLS, Former President Big Four and Chesapeake and Ohio Railroads.

THE railroads will not make much at the pace they have been going. THE STOCKS HAVE DRIFTED TO NEW YORK, AND THERE ARE TOO MANY STOCKS AND BONDS, DIVIDENDS ARE TOO HIGH, and wages in some cases are too high. The raise in wages was the natural result of the unwarranted boost of dividends. Railroad financiers did not declare dividends on the business handled, but on what the business would have been if they had been able to handle it.

The wage earners naturally, seeing this supposed evidence of prosperity, demanded their share of it. Mr. Gompers at a Civic federation meeting in New York last winter gave warning to capital that wages will not come down; that labor will not stand a cut. I told him at the time that he was foolish; that he couldn't tell what would happen in the near future. In the past perhaps wages have suffered before capital, and that was wrong. THE PROCESS MAY BE REVERSED THIS TIME.

BUT IF THE PRESENT SITUATION OF THE RAILROADS IS TAKEN IN HAND IN A BUSINESS WAY, IF WE QUIT TALKING ABOUT POLITICS HAVING ANYTHING TO DO WITH IT, EVERYTHING WILL COME RIGHT IN A REASONABLE TIME. OF COURSE THERE WILL BE SOME SUFFERING, BUT BY BOTH ELEMENTS EQUALLY. WE CAN'T EXPECT TO RECOVER FROM THE BIG DRUNK WE HAVE HAD WITHOUT A HEADACHE. IF THE WATER IS TAKEN FROM STOCKS AND DIVIDENDS ARE REDUCED TO A LEGITIMATE FIGURE, WAGE EARNERS WILL NOT OBJECT TO BEARING THEIR PART OF THE EXPENSE OF REHABILITATION. THEY ARE MEN OF SENSE, AND I HAVE NEVER FOUND ANY DIFFICULTY IN DEALING WITH THEM ON AN HONEST BASIS.

I have always believed in a profit sharing plan, but it has not been adopted generally, principally because the labor people do not believe they will get a fair division. Perkins has worked it out in a way, however, in the steel company.

MY IDEA IS TO TREAT WAGES AS CAPITAL, AND WHEN YOU DECLARE A DIVIDEND ON CAPITAL DECLARE AN EQUAL DIVIDEND ON WAGES. THIS PLAN WORKED PERFECTLY ON THE ORLEANS ROAD IN FRANCE BEFORE THE GOVERNMENT TOOK IT OVER. THE GOVERNMENT ABOLISHED THE SYSTEM, AND THERE HAS BEEN DISSATISFACTION EVER SINCE.

On the Stability of Character.

By President HADLEY of Yale.

EVERY day and every hour we have to be making choices. Sometimes the matter to be decided is one like the choice of a profession, which will affect our whole future life and which demands months of careful thought. Sometimes it is a mere trivial choice of what we shall eat or drink, what we shall say or do for our amusement, which is settled upon the instant and then forgotten. This principle we call a man's philosophy of life.

A CHILD CAN PERHAPS GET ON WITHOUT SUCH A PHILOSOPHY, CONTENT TO DECIDE EACH QUESTION UNDER THE CONTROLLING IMPULSE OR CONTROLLING FORCE OF THE MOMENT. A MAN CANNOT, AT LEAST NOT UNLESS HE IS CONTENT TO REMAIN INTELLECTUALLY AND MORALLY A CHILD. HE CANNOT ACT ON ONE PRINCIPLE AT ONE MOMENT AND ANOTHER PRINCIPLE AT ANOTHER MOMENT AND EXPECT ANYBODY TO TRUST HIM.

He will have no stability of character. Nay, if we are to define character as the habit of doing the same thing under different circumstances, he will be destitute of character itself.

Pink Tea Talent Is No Longer Wanted In Diplomatic Service.

By SPENCER F. EDDY, United States Minister to Argentine Republic.

THE old conception placed on diplomacy by Americans is fast disappearing. It has not been so many years back since the impression prevailed that a diplomatic post was nothing more than a medium through which our country maintained its social entente cordiale with other nations. And this interpretation of the functions of the office was held also by the men in the service themselves.

But MEN OF PINK TEA PROCLIVITIES ARE NO LONGER WANTED IN THE SERVICE.

A school for the instruction of those who wish to enter the service, conducted on the lines of some institution like West Point or Annapolis, would raise the standard of American diplomats still further. It is impossible for a youngster to jump into the field and compete with older heads, but with three years of hard training in such a school he would be fully qualified for the work cut out.

Psychology and Physiology Essential In Modern Religion.

By Dr. ELWOOD WORCESTER, Preacher and Author.

WE venture to say that the time has come when THE CHURCH MUST ENTER MORE DEEPLY INTO THE PERSONAL LIVES OF PEOPLE AND MAKE A FREER USE OF THE MEANS OF MODERN SCIENCE AND THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST PLACED AT HER DISPOSAL IF SHE IS TO CONTINUE EVEN TO HOLD HER OWN.

THE TEACHINGS OF MODERN PSYCHOLOGY AND PHYSIOLOGY AS TO THE ESSENTIAL UNITY OF HUMAN NATURE AND THE MUTUAL RELATIONS OF MIND AND BODY HAVE SUNK SO DEEP INTO THE POPULAR CONSCIENCE THAT THE CHURCH CAN NO LONGER ADDRESS MEN AS DISEMBODIED SPIRITS, AND NO SCHEME OF SALVATION CAUSES THE HEART TO BEAT WITH HOPE WHICH DOES NOT INCLUDE THE WHOLE MAN AND WHICH DOES NOT BEGIN NOW.

Why the Republican Party Should Be Successful In November.

I.—The Party of Expansion.

The Republican party was founded upon the principle that this government was established to protect for all times the rights and opportunities of every individual from abridgment. That principal it has successfully maintained. Through the Civil War it consecrated a reunited country to free and equal American citizenship. It has kept the channels of Interstate Commerce open for all and, through the National Banking System, the refunding of the National Debt, Resumption of specie payments, the Gold Standard and the Emergency Currency Law, has sustained the life current of national integrity.

As trustee of the National wealth, it has investigated mineral regions, surveyed soils, developed waterways, including the Panama Canal, irrigated deserts, conserved watersheds, and husbanded the public lands. Protecting American labor by regulating immigration and by taking at the Custom House, to pay American taxes, foreign capital's advantage from low wages, it has preserved to American industries the home market of eighty millions of the world's greatest consumers and so laid the surest basis for American competition in foreign markets. Uniting capital and labor, thus, in a common prosperity and common source of increased reward, it has created opportunities, improved conditions of employment, brought about a higher standard of living, and more widespread distribution of wealth and well-being, and make expansion moral as well as material.

Intrusted with insular possessions, it was brought them peace and progress, and provided for the extension and protection of American trade, for the National defense, and for the honorable discharge of the responsibilities of world greatness. Maintaining peace at home, with foreign nations among them, it has given American rights and American opportunities new meaning throughout the nation and throughout the world.

II—The Party of Progress and Prosperity.

Promising progress and prosperity, it has been politically sincere. It has never a candidate of a section, prejudice, of class, nor a platform of negation, scheme of repudiation, program of scuttle, or doctrine of dispair. It has never lent itself to a demand for revolution, to be followed by reaction and retrogression, it has stood firm for evolution by constant, steady and enduring progress. Finding trusts, giant-born, flourishing under supposed conflict of State and National law, the double prohibition of existence serving but to foster their development, it has never, in an attempt to destroy trusts, withdrawn, in State or Nation, the protection of law from property, but has, through Executive investigation and resort to the courts, resolved the conflict which has silenced the law and given trusts existence.

It has never proposed to advance American workingmen and American institutions by banishing American industries and building up those of other lands, and scorned to insult labor with an illusory promise of immunity from law. Yet it passed the Pure Food Law and the Employers' Liability Law, secured equal accommodations on railroads, aided agriculture, created the Civil Service, established Free Rural Mail Delivery, reduced foreign postage and increased pensions. Continuing a naturally marked-out progress, it will keep its pledges of Tariff readjustment, Currency Reform and development of the Merchant Marine, and made the United States the financial centre as it has made it the industrial centre of the world.

III—The Constructive Party—It Organizes the National Will.

In the evolution by which party government has become the extra-constitutional method of securing responsibility to the people, the Republican Party has become their traditional representative and the Democratic Party the organized aspirantion of individuals for power without responsibility. Fairly tried, from 1893 to 1895, the two Democratic Houses and the Democratic President were a "wild team" and a helpless driver. Democracy agitates local differences, Republicanism organizes the National idea. In 1863 the people were committed to the cause of human liberty; the idea of "Liberty and Union" expanded for the first time into the reality of the American nation.

In 1879 money was committed to a specie basis; specie was at once, until 1893, no longer sought, and government bonds went to a premium at the reduced rate of interest. In 1896 business men were again committed to confidence; before a single statute was enacted prosperity set in and in ten years bank deposits almost trebled—a permanent gain which the recent panic, a "state of mind" now completely dispelled, scarcely touched. In 1906 business was committed to fair methods: without compulsion violation largely ceased.

The Republican Party, at each period, sounded the public conscience, felt the National pulse, framed its policies in response, and realized in law the dominant American idea. Its constructive past assures its constructive future. It is to-day as it always has been, "The Party fit to Govern."

IV—The Party of Statesmen.

The party of Statesmanship, it has been the training school of statesmen. Its policies have been forged in the heat of public discussion, tempered in the deliberation and shaped in the conflict of many trained minds, and drawn and finally wrought for the country's welfare. Dominating its members through principles, it assures unity in Government; its staunchest partisans have made the greatest contributions to National progress. The roster of its leaders in the national roll of honor of public service.

V—Taft and Sherman Constsuctive Candidetes—A Constructive Platform.

Republicanism stands to-day for progressive policies in safe hands. By solving the constructive problems of world power in the last two administrations, William H. Taft taught the world our capacity and us his own. In all constructive legislation for twenty years James S. Sherman has been a leader. In the records of the Republican candidates as well as in the platform are written the story of the nation's progress and the reliance of the future.

A Democratic President or a Democratic House would turn back those pages; thereafter Bryanism would record "Destruction." This the Republican Senate could not prevent. Under Taft and Sherman and a Republican Congress the great progress of the past will be held and the greater progress of the future will be assured.

JUDGE TAFT'S RELIGION

Prominent Member of All Souls' Unitarian Church.

CANDIDATE IS NOT AN ATHEIST

His Pastor Does Not See How Any Criticism Can Be Directed Against Him On Religious Grounds.

(Washington Correspondence Brooklyn Eagle.)

From the large number of letters received by the Rev. Dr. Ulysses G. P. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, in this city, where William H. Taft worships, it seems as if a great many person did not deem themselves sufficiently enlightened by the official statement issued from the White House on June 16 last concerning the religious views of the Republican nominee for President.

That statement, which undoubtedly had the sanction of Mr. Taft, said that he was a member of the Unitarian Church, and that his parents and grandparents before him had been so affiliated. What the writers wanted to know principally is with respect to the candidate's belief in the cardinal or basic doctrine of Christianity. Dr. Pierce, in answering these inquiries, always says that he is not in a position to state what is in the mind of the former Secretary of War. He does not know what Mr. Taft believes, but says he has been of much service to the Unitarian Church and has joined in its work for the betterment of humanity.

Nevertheless, the widespread interest in learning something more definite as to the principles of Mr. Taft's faith may draw from him a still further statement on the subject before very long. His friends say that the White House statement along this line, which was made on the eve of the nomination of Mr. Taft, was put out because information had been received that certain opponents of his were about to spring a story that he was an atheist.

Mr. Taft had been in Washington a very short time when his name was added to the members' list of All Souls' Church, and since that time he has been a regular attendant. Mrs. Taft occasionally accompanies him to worship there but her own church is St. John's Episcopal—"the Church of the Presidents"—opposite Lafayette Square, which Mrs. Roosevelt also attends. Mr. Taft is a pretty active member of All Souls', and in February, 1906, on the occasion of the centenary of Joseph Priestley, the eminent Unitarian chemist, he delivered the address.

For the benefit of the curious it may be said that the creed of the Unitarian Church is summed up in article II of the constitution, which says:

"The church declares itself to be in affiliation with the body of liberial Christians organized as 'The American Unitarian Association,' and subscribes to the following declaration of principle embodied in the constitution adopted by the National Conference of Unitarian and Other Christian Churches in 1894:

"'These churches accept the religion of Jesus, holding in accordance with His teaching, that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to man. * * * and we iuvite to our working fellowship any who, while differing from us in belief, are in sympathy with our spirit and our practical aims.'"

The above, broadly speaking, may be said to be Mr. Taft's religion. Whether he believes in the divinity of Christ—the Immaculate Conception—or not, is not known, but he does not have to do so to come within the principles of the Unitarian faith. He has subscribed to the constitution of the church and that is all that is required.

Dr. Pierce does not understand how any criticism can be justly leveled at Mr. Taft on account of his religion. He points out that Jefferson, Adams and Daniel Webster were Unitarians, and that the Unitarian belief was essentially that expressed by Jefferson in his public writings.

"Our belief, which Mr. Taft has embraced, is to love justice and mercy and to walk humbly with God," added Dr. Pierce. "Abraham Lincoln did not believe everything everybody else did, and yet he was a pretty fair specimen of a man. And I might mention that the beautiful hymn, 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' so much loved by McKinley, was written by a Unitarian."

All Souls' Church was established in 1821, and has occupied its present home, at Fourteenth and L streets, northwest, since 1877. The structure is not imposing, but roomy and comfortable, and covered heavily with clinging ivy, and has a restful appearance in the midst of the bustle of the city. From its steeple in brazen tones a bell, cast by Paul Revere—he of the "midnight ride" fame—in his New England foundry, summons the people to worship, just as in earlier days it sounded the fire alarm.

The membership roll of the church has contained the names of many well-known persons. John C. Calhoun was an attendant there as were also Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Justice Morrill, John D. Long and George Bancroft, the historian. Rear-Admiral Evans is now a member, as is the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, who frequently occupies the pulpit. Among its membership are persons who were previously Methodists, Baptists, Roman Catholic, Presbyterians, etc. Dr. Pierce, in this connection, explained that the church would no more think of inquiring into the religion of an applicant for membership than it would busy itself with his political views. The church stood for freedom and the doing of good things in a practical manner, he said. It maintains, for instance, a visiting nurse, paying all the expenses, being the only church of any denomination in Washington which does this.

As to the pastor of this church, he is a native of Providence, R. I., a young man who was reared a Baptist. He went to school as a boy in Boston, and took a post-graduate course at Harvard. He was called to All Soul's eight years ago, and since then has become one of the best-known pastors in the city. About the time he first entered the pulpit as a Baptist preacher he began reading Darwin and Huxley, and readjusted his religious views to conform to the more advanced teachings of science. Then he turned to the Unitarian church.

Send In Your Samples.

All land owners, in or near the Youghiogheny River valley, are requested to send samples of all the coal, iron o fireclay, kaolin, glass sand, lime a building stone, or other minerals foun on their lands, to the office of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company, room 14, First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md., where they will be labeled for exhibiton.

H. P. TASKER,
General Manager.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

For Sale or Rent,

The Litzinger building on south side of Second street, Oakland, Md., for sale, or the north storeroom for same for rent. Apply to J. C. Peddicord, Oakland postoffice, for particulars.

J. M. LITZINGER.

We have just receive a car load of Extra Clear Red Cedar Shingles direct from the Pacific Coast. C. M. RATHBUN & SONS, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 22

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Editor a Weather Prophet.

The editor of a country paper received the following query: "Can you tell me what the weather will be next month?" In reply he wrote, "It is my belief that the weather next month will be very much like your subscription." The inquirer wondered for an hour what the editor was driving at, when he happened to think of the word "unsettled." He went in the next day and settled his account.—Printer and Publisher.

The Back Number.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

When the boys came back to college, Catherine Newlands displayed rejuvenated charms. The enforced quiet of the summer season in the dull old town had rested her, had brightened her eye and given a tinge of color to her cheeks.

As she crossed the campus that first morning in a scarlet sweater and white linen skirt, with her tawny hair in a big knot low on her neck, a half dozen of the freshmen turned to look after her.

Catherine felt their admiration with a thrill of gratification. For ten years she had basked in the delight of making that first impression on the new boys, and it was like a draft of old wine to a tippler.

Now and then in her triumphant progress a junior or a senior stopped her and greeted her with frank friendliness. That was one of the advantages of an affair with Catherine Newlands. She knew how to shade a love affair off into a good comradeship, and the boys, who in their freshman years had been her adorers, came for advice in their later love affairs.

For Catherine would have none of them. She liked to bask in the sunlight of their admiration, she liked to be the queen of the junior promenade, she liked the violets and the blue pennants and the crowd of eager boys surrounding her at the football game. She liked to sing "Down the Field" for them and to have them cheer her at the end. She liked to lead in their college yell, and the roar of their young voices was music in her ears. But that was all!

"You are too young," she would say frankly as some stricken youth would plead, "and, besides, if I married you, what would the other boys do?"

A lot of her old friends crowded around her as she reached the library steps, and there was a fringe of unconquered freshmen in the background. But when she presently detached herself from the group it was one of the faculty, Oswald Ware, who accompanied her.

"Dear old boy," she said as they walked toward the great gate that led out into the city street, "it's so good to have you back."

"Don't call me old boy," he flung out, with a touch of irritation. "Heaven knows I am old, but you needn't rub it in."

SHE SAT DOWN ON THE OTHER SIDE OF HIS DESK.

He was bareheaded, and Catherine glanced affectionately at his gray streaked temples.

"You're just right," she told him, and then as her eyes swept the scene—the sunlighted square, the old buildings that seemed to breathe a benediction over the boys, the boys themselves, of the best college type, graceful, lithe, strong young animals, ready for the training that should make men of them—she exclaimed: "Aren't they fine? It's the spirit of the place that I love, Oswald, and it's the ideas of such men as you that help to bring out the best in them."

"They are a lot of cubs," gloomily.

"Oswald!"

"Well, they are. In the classes I don't feel that way. I know they are going to be men some time, and I want them to be the right sort, but when I see you frittering away your time with them—you with all your possibilities"—

"I love it," she asserted, "and when I can't have their admiration any more I think the youth in me will die, Oswald."

He glanced down at her. "But there are other things worth while—love and me and the needs of humanity."

"I am not great enough for those things," obstinately. "Why didn't you fall in love with some other girl, Oswald?"

"Because you are the one woman. And I know you better than you do yourself. Some day this will pall on you"—

She interrupted him. "I shan't change," she said flippantly, "but if I should I'll come to that stuffy little, mussy little class room of yours and tell you"—

They had reached Lampson hall, and he was forced to leave her. As she made her way slowly back across the campus her eyes were thoughtful, but her ears were sharpened to hear the comments of the new boys.

"Who is she?" came an eager question.

"Catherine Newlands."

"She's a beauty"—

"My dear boy, she is a back number. She is twenty-eight if she's a day."

It was the first note of disloyalty to her queenship, and the man who had said it for her to hear was sore over a rebuff, but the light seemed to go out of the morning. The old buildings frowned grim and gray above the hollow square, and, to add to it all, in through the big gate came another girl—a little thing with a fluff of fair hair. Tiptilted on her high heels, with her pink ruffles floating about her, she was like a wild rose.

The boys on the campus fence bent eagerly to watch the new arrival, and the freshmen, debarred from the fence, but hanging in groups about the big gate, asked the question that had so often thrilled Catherine Newlands:

"Who is she?"

Laughing and all a-flutter with the joy of the attention she was exciting, the other girl came toward Catherine.

"Oh, Miss Newlands," she gurgled, "don't you remember me?"

"It's Gracie Allendale!" Catherine said brightly. "Why, Gracie, when did you grow up?"

The other girl laughed delightedly.

"Yesterday, I think," she said, "when mother told me that I needn't go back to school. I am going to be here all winter and have the time of my life."

Her lips answered the older girl, but her eyes were on the boys. And suddenly she was swept away, with a dozen laughing lads in her train, and Catherine was left alone.

One youngster ran back.

"You won't mind," he said boyishly. "We want to show her things."

Catherine shook her head.

"No," she said slowly; "I don't mind."

But when he had gone she went out of the big gate with lagging steps and drooping head.

Late that afternoon Oswald Ware, bending over a pile of papers in the fusty, musty study, saw a vision of light as Catherine in a filmy flowered gown came in.

She sat down on the other side of his desk.

"Oswald," she said, "the queen is dead. Long live the queen!"

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"I am a back number," she said wistfully. "I heard a boy say it. And Gracie Allendale has developed into a little beauty, and they are flocking to her."

"She will never be as beautiful as you," he said indignantly.

"Ah, but she has youth." The girl was silent for a moment; then, "Just think of it," she said, "I am twenty-eight."

"You are a mere child," he stormed. "Why, I—I am almost forty. You are a mere child."

A smile broke the corners of her mouth.

"How nice it sounds to hear you say it. You are such a comfort, Oswald."

"I wish you would let me show you what there is in life for you, dear heart; such big things as compared to the little life of the campus."

"Ah, but youth is there." And her eyes wandered out to the sunlighted space under the elms.

"And love is here," he said.

Then her eyes came back to him.

"That is why I came," she said tremulously—"that is why I came to you, Oswald."

A Trying Prescription.

There was little doubt in the doctor's mind that Mr. Lambkin's recovery from an attack of nervous exhaustion would be more rapid if Mrs. Lambkin were a less animated and constant talker.

Mrs. Lambkin had never felt that her husband's trouble was serious. Her own health was in a far more precarious condition than his, she felt sure.

"We didn't need to come to the country on his account any more than on mine," she told the doctor on his third visit. "As I say to Mr. Lambkin day after day, if he'd rise above his feelings, as I do, and take an interest in everything and ask questions and observe and draw people out he'd forget himself. Now, I know perfectly well that I have a high temperature this morning, and I should like you to look at my tongue."

She thrust out her long and lively tongue for the doctor's inspection and waited for his answer.

"I see, madam," he said at last gravely, "that it is sadly in need of exactly what I am prescribing for your husband—perfect rest and quiet for at least six hours a day for the next three months."

A Rich "Find."

The sensational discovery of buried Spanish treasure of gold and jewels on the foreshore at Paradelha reminds one of the romantic discovery of the famous treasure of Guarrazar under conditions almost identical, says the Westminster Gazette. Some peasants traveling near Toledo one day in 1858 noticed objects of gold and jewel work which had been exposed to view by the heavy rains. The peasants, ignorant of its value, sold their treasure trove for a trifling sum to a local resident, who fled with it to Paris and disposed of it to the authorities of the Musee Cluny. The objects proved to be of rare antiquarian as well as intrinsic value. They were, in fact, eleven crowns which had been worn by Visigothic kings who had ruled Spain 1,200 years previously. The largest of these crowns, a beautiful piece of workmanship, has thirty large sapphires and as many pearls of great size. Below it hangs a cross set with similar precious stones, from which hang jeweled pendants.

Unless Backed by a Strong Navy the Monroe Doctrine Is but an Empty Boast.

By President ROOSEVELT.

THERE are always certain numbers of well meaning, amiable individuals, coupled with others not quite so well meaning, who advocate merely a coast defense navy. Such advocacy illustrates a habit of mind as old as human nature itself—the desire at the same time to do something and not to do it.

NO FIGHT WAS EVER WON YET EXCEPT BY HITTING, AND THE ONE UNFORGIVABLE OFFENSE IN ANY MAN IS TO HIT SOFT. THAT APPLIES TO THE INDIVIDUAL, AND IT APPLIES TO THE NATION, AND THOSE WHO ADVOCATE A COAST DEFENSE NAVY ARE ADVOCATING THAT WE SHALL ADOPT AS A NATIONAL PRINCIPLE THE PRINCIPLE OF HITTING SOFT.

I hope with all my heart that never will this nation of ours hit unless it cannot possibly be helped. I believe that the nation should scrupulously refrain from wronging or insulting another nation; that it should put up with a good deal in the way of misconduct on the part of others before going to war. But when this nation does have to go to war SUCH WAR WILL ONLY BE EXCUSABLE IF THE NATION INTENDS TO HAMMER ITS OPPONENT UNTIL THAT OPPONENT QUITS FIGHTING.

For the protection of our coast we need fortifications, not merely to protect the salient points of our possessions, but so that the navy can be foot loose.

If war comes at any time in the future, that administration under which it comes will indeed be guilty of folly if they use the fleet to protect any port. Let the port be protected by the fortifications. THE FLEET MUST BE FOOT LOSE TO SEARCH OUT AND DESTROY THE ENEMY'S FLEET. That is the only function that can justify the fleet's existence, and that function cannot exist in the case of such a ridiculous fleet as the fleet would be if it were only possible to use it for coast defense purposes.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE UNBACKED BY A NAVY IS AN EMPTY BOAST, AND THERE EXIST BUT FEW MORE CONTEMPTIBLE CHARACTERS, INDIVIDUAL OR NATIONAL, THAN THE MAN OR NATION WHO BOASTS AND, WHEN THE BOAST IS CHALLENGED, FAILS TO MAKE GOOD.

If we have a coast defense navy only, we had better at once turn over the Panama canal to some stronger and braver nation which would not limit itself merely to a coast defense navy and could protect it. If we should limit ourselves merely to a navy that would confine us to defensive war—war certain in the end to be unsuccessful—it would be well at once to give up Hawaii, to give up Porto Rico, to give up Alaska and to say that we had no more interest in Cuba than the smallest outside powers.

If we intend to claim to be a great nation, THEN WE MUST FIT OURSELVES SO THAT WE MAY BE READY AT NEED TO MAKE GOOD THAT CLAIM. That can only be done by building up and maintaining at the highest point of efficiency the United States navy.

We do not want any navy at all if it is not a first class one, and such a navy will be necessary for us just so long as we demand the right to administer our national affairs as we think best.

Trend Toward Unrighteousness In Our Politics.

By CARDINAL GIBBONS.

I WISH to say a few words upon political conditions in our country. I am much disturbed over these conditions. There seems to be a GRADUAL TREND IN SOME RESPECTS TOWARD UNRIGHTEOUSNESS IN THE GREAT MASS OF OUR PEOPLE, and thinking men must realize that the problem must be met without delay.

POLITICIANS MUST BE PURGED. THERE IS NO POLITICS WITHOUT MORALITY, THERE IS NO MORALITY WITHOUT RELIGION, AND WITHOUT RELIGION THERE IS NO GOD.

In politics today men will sell their votes for $1.50. Corrupt political bosses in many states and cities lead men to vote either way they choose. Men are nominated and elected who are unfit. THINKING BECOMES SUBSERVIENT TO OBEYING THE ORDERS OF THE BOSS.

Still, my confidence in the people is not shaken, and, whoever is elected to office, I do not fear for my country's welfare.

BUT THE DUTY THAT CONFRONTS EITHER MR. TAFT OR MR. BRYAN, AND BOTH ARE VERY ESTIMABLE GENTLEMEN, IS PLAIN. IT IS THAT THEY SHOULD LEAD PUBLIC SENTIMENT INTO THE CHANNEL OF A HIGHER AND BETTER PUBLIC MORALITY.

No Sign of Animosity In Japan Against America.

By Colonel ROBERT M. THOMPSON, Copper Magnate, After a Trip to Japan.

FROM the highest to the lowest the Japanese regard America as their friend. They believe this to be the greatest nation on earth. There is no sign of the animosity we hear spoken of at home. It does not exist. It is the only country that has not been invaded by the Germans in their quest for trade, but they are now trying to wrest from America what it has earned. This is being attempted by shrewd methods, and unfortunately the Americans are falling into the trap which has been set for them.

THE JAPANESE WOULD MUCH RATHER TRADE WITH US THAN ANY OTHER NATION IN THE WORLD. THEY CARE LITTLE FOR THE FRENCH, GERMAN AND ENGLISH, AND IT IS THIS VERY PREFERENCE THAT SHOWS HOW BASELESS THE RUMORS OF ILL FEELING ARE. THE WAR TALK IS OZONE. THERE IS NO WAR FEELING. IT IS NOT THOUGHT OF.

What the Japanese are trying to do now is to recuperate and recover from the frightful expenditures in the war with Russia.

BOWSER AS A SLEUTH

He Undertakes to Help Police In Running Down Crime.

ARRESTED THE FIRST NIGHT.

Old Philosopher Is Taken to the Lock-up on the Charge of Impersonating an Officer—Mrs. B. Informed of Hubby's Actions.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

When Mr. Bowser came home to dinner the other evening he had a bundle under his arm.

It was a suspicious bundle.

So far as Mrs. Bowser could tell it might contain a living child.

Or the dismembered remains of a strongarm.

And Mr. Bowser stood for a moment in the hall and looked at her keenly and suspiciously. During that sixty seconds he seemed to read her very thoughts. She tried to return his look, but found herself shivering.

"What have you brought home?" she finally managed to ask.

"Never you mind," he answered as he placed the bundle on a chair. "After dinner I want to have a talk with you."

"But why do you act so queer, and why do you look at me in such a strange way?"

"We will go down to dinner, madam. If you have anything on your conscience it will do well for you to confess and throw yourself on my mercy."

HE LOOKED LIKE A CROSS BETWEEN VIDOCQ AND AN OLD TRAMP.

"Oh, you've got another one of your streaks on, have you? I thought it was about time. I don't care a cent what is in your old bundle."

Glanced Around Suspiciously.

When Mr. Bowser entered the dining room he glanced around suspiciously at the walls.

Then down at the floors and under the table.

The look he gave the cook made her shake and shiver in her shoes, and she came within an ace of dropping the dish of mashed potatoes.

At intervals during the meal Mrs. Bowser found his eyes resting on her, and if she had been guilty of poisoning her mother or cutting the cat's throat she must have betrayed herself and asked to be taken into custody at once.

When dinner was half over Mr. Bowser suddenly rose up and inspected the sideboard, as if suspicious that some murderer was concealed therein. Then he looked into the refrigerator and sniffed long and suspiciously. His victim had thus far escaped him, but he was close on the trail.

"Well, have you got through with this monkey business?" tartly asked Mrs. Bowser as she rose up.

"Lead the way, woman, lead the way," he replied, with one long last glance around the room, in which his eyes took in everything, even to the china cream pitcher with its broken nose.

Upon reaching the sitting room he took a cigar from his pocket and carefully examined both ends of it to see if it contained an infernal machine. The match with which he finally lighted it was also critically examined to see if it had been tampered with. Then his eyes fell upon the cat, and for sixty seconds he stood and steadfastly regarded her. The feline writhed under his scrutiny and finally made a dash from the room.

"Are you going to play the idiot all the evening?" demanded Mrs. Bowser as her eyes flashed and her cheeks reddened.

"I am ready to explain, madam," replied Mr. Bowser as he took a seat. "Perhaps you did not see the interview with the mayor published in the papers this morning, in which he asked the co-operation of all good citizens in the detection of crime?"

"And you are going to co-operate?"

"I am."

Mr. Bowser suddenly looked behind him.

Then he arose and tiptoed across the room and looked out into the hall.

Then he glanced at the piano as if wondering what guilty secrets it was concealing.

Then he spoke, and his tones were sleuthy and his gestures dramatic as he said:

"Yes, I shall go out this evening and hunt down the man that murdered old Nancy Ray for the few dollars she had in the house. The police believe that he fled to Europe on a sailing vessel, but I differ with them. I believe he is still in the city. Aye, he may be within two blocks of us and walking about as free as any honest man. I am sure I shall know him on sight, however."

"Bosh!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser in contempt. "You want to leave the detective business to those who are paid for it. If people around here get to know that you are sleuthing around they will call you a fool."

"Remember who you are talking to, madam!"

"I shall. I say it's the craziest notion you ever brought home, and you've brought a hundred. Give it up before you get into trouble."

Mr. Bowser took another tiptoe look into the hall.

Then he softly opened the parlor door and looked in.

Then he looked over Mrs. Bowser's head at one of the back windows. The sash looked suspicious. The panes of glass seemed to have guilty knowledge.

"Sit still where you are, and don't move a finger until I return!" he hoarsely whispered. "Remember—not a finger—not a thumb—not a toe!"

"You'll be moving your fingers and thumbs and toes toward an idiot asylum before morning!" she called after him as he disappeared down the hall.

The minutes went on.

Just the Night For Murder.

It was just the night for a cold blooded murder.

A black visaged villain might even then be straddle of the alley fence with a thirst of blood in his heart.

Hist! Look out! Beware!

When Mr. Bowser returned he had donned an old suit of clothes, was wearing a Scotch cap and had the false whiskers of a stage villain. He looked like a cross between Vidocq and an old tramp who lost his all in the great Chicago fire. Mrs. Bowser gave one look and then burst out laughing.

"Well, madam?" queried Mr. Bowser, with great dignity, after a minute.

"I have nothing to say. Go right along with your sleuth business. If you get into trouble don't blame me."

"And when I return, madam—when I return after having landed the murderer in a police station"—

"Yes, when you return."

"I shall have a number of questions to ask you and the cook. Don't attempt flight. Neither of you can escape me."

After standing for a few seconds with a warning finger pointed at her nose he tiptoed down the hall and opened and shut the front door so carefully that she heard no sound. As he emerged from the gate he caught sight of a man standing beside a tree on the opposite side of the street.

In one minute Mr. Bowser had crossed the asphalt.

Waiting For the Cook.

In another minute the suspicious character was explaining that he was engaged to the cook in the house and was waiting for her to come out to the gate. He spoke with the accents of truth, and the old sleuth let him go, but with a warning never to do it again.

The next suspicious character was dressed in female apparel. That was just the disguise a murderer would adopt, and Mr. Bowser took up the trail. He had pursued it for five minutes and was about to advance and place his hand on her shoulder when she wheeled around and exclaimed:

"See here, you old masher, if you follow me another step I'll pull all the hair out of your head."

Mr. Bowser dropped the trail, but two blocks on he picked up another. It was that of a lame man. There was a faint odor of pegs and wax in the air, and he jumped to the conclusion that the murderer was passing himself off as a cobbler.

Ten minutes later Mrs. Bowser was called up on the telephone.

"Is this Mrs. Bowser?"

"Yes."

"Wife of Samuel Bowser?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is the Fourth police precinct. Your husband has been arrested for passing himself off as an officer, and he won't be home tonight. Goodby." M. QUAD.

Stuffed.

"It's ridiculous to say that any one could dance well with artificial legs."

"Oh, I don't know. There's Mme. Padden, the ballet dancer. I'd hate to say how much is artificial about hers."—Minneapolis Journal.

Too Strong For Taking.

"This play in its intensity," said the go out between the acts young man, "fairly takes my breath away."

"I only wish it would," gloomily remarked the lady in the next seat.—Baltimore American.

Doing His "Best."

—Harper's Weekly.

A Heavy Loser.

"Mrs. Skidd seems to have lost all self respect."

"I'll bet she lost it at bridge."—Denver News-Times.

How He Does It.

Nodd—How can you keep track of all your children?

Todd—By a card index system.—New York Life.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK,

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

JUST AS IT WAS IN 1896 AND 1900

It is no different Bryan who is running for President this year. As the days pass it becomes increasingly clear that the intelligence of the country will have to contend in 1908 against essentially the same desperate appeals to cupidity and ignorance and thriftlessness as were made in 1896 and again in 1900.

A Bryan campaign without quackery would be welcome, but it would be inconceivable. The quack feature of the Nebraskan's canvass this year is going to be his anti-panic specific of a government guarantee of bank deposits. Two years ago it looked as though it would be government ownership, but it was sure to be government something or other. All the ideas which Bryan has championed resolve themselves into the one idea which is the core of Socialism, that only by government shall mankind be saved from itself. Guaranteeing bank deposits is only the open form which it takes for the present occasion. The real danger lurks in the background of insincerity.

One of the amazing facts about Bryan's candidacy is that it is based on grounds which Bryan himself disputes. The Denver platform has a railroad plank which promises new excesses of regulation. Bryan does not believe in railroad regulation; he believes in government ownership of railroads. He has said, many times, that railroad regulation is bound to fail and that nothing but government ownership can solve the so-called railroad problem. The Denver platform also abounds in planks promising vigorous regulation of industrial corporations, but it follows like night after day that Mr. Bryan no more believes in regulating such concerns than he believes in railroad regulation. His whole course, his whole creed so far as it has been expounded, is evidence of a belief, albeit not yet confessed to himself perhaps, in the ultimate necessity of government ownership of industrial corporations as well as of railroads. The people, Mr. Bryan has said, believe in regulation. Therefore, I am willing to help all I can in helping them to experiment with regulation.

It is very kind of Mr. Bryan to be so willing to pander to the people, but when they understand him as thoroughly as they should now, what can the people think of him? Certainly if they believe in a policy of regulation they must think, they cannot think anything else, that the last man to whom to intrust the carrying out of that policy is a man who disbelieves in it thoroughly, except as it may be a half-way house to the government ownership in which he believes implicity but in which the people do not believe at all.

ALL AT SEA.

The Bryan campaign in Maryland has opened under adverse circumstances, says the Baltimore American. "The party in the state has no organ; there are internal dissentions, and there is no real confidence in Bryanism. These are three very serious obstacles, and it is useless for the manager to belittle them. That the influential press of the state is against them is a fact which it is foolish to attempt to ignore. The majority of the public form their opinions on the statements of the press, and with no potent power like this to guide and crystalize public opinion the Bryan case is a bad one. People are not so loyal to mere party as they used to be in the days of strictly drawn lines when independent opinion was a negligible quantity. The public know much more of the intimate relation of politics to ordinary life than formerly, and they are looking not so much to the triumph of this or that party as the restoration of business confidence and business prosperity.

"There is no real popular confidence in Bryan and his policies. Thoughtful Democrats who have the real welfare of the country collectively and their own business interests individually at heart are inclining to a safe and tried man like Taft, rather than to a man of picturesque but experimental policies like Bryan. The country just now cannot afford experiments. Maryland is one of the sanest and safest in a business way of all the states, and a hurrah campaign is not enough to satisfy its men of either party, who want to see real and beneficial results from the coming election."

See The Republican for Job Printing.

THE BEST EQUIPPED CANDIDATE WITHIN THE MEMORY OF THIS GENERATION.

Of all the Presidential candidates within the memory of this generation, Taft is unquestionably the best equipped, in training and experience, and in wide and close contact with large affairs. In one important respect his equipment is unlike that of any of the Presidents, no one of whom had ever served on the bench. With the exception of those nominated on their military records, and two or three who had been governors of their states, the Presidents have been men whose political training was in the legislative branch. Taft was never in Congress, even in his state legislature. He is wholly without personal experience in what is called practical politics. He was educated for the bar; early became a judge; the whole trend of his thought and of his ambition has been in the line of the judiciary, and his ingrained judicial temperament it was that made him so conspicuously useful and successful in the many difficult administrative problems he was later called upon to solve.

It was a distinct sacrifice he made when President McKinley took him from a life position that he enjoyed, and that was in line of his dearest hopes, to lay upon him the burden of establishing peace and order in the Philippines. The judgment, tact and skill with which he carried on that great task; the candid diplomacy with which he smoothed away perplexing obstacles; the unselfish devotion with which he has upheld the interests of those far-away people in the face of indifference at home, were an honor to the nation. The same qualities of a wise adjudicator have been repeatedly at the service of the country. In Cuba, in Panama, in Japan, it has been necessary only to "send for Taft." Misunderstandings are cleared up and difficulties vanish before this gracious personality, this calm, clear, disentangling mind. His intellectual integrity and disinterestedness have been as unmistakable as his quiet strength, his unswerving sense of justice, his absolute honesty. It is not a mind that moves by impulse or in startling flashes; it is a mind well poised and of singular lucidity, that reaches its results by logical principals, which do not antagonize, but convince.—Philadelphia Public Ledger, Ind. Dem.

BITTINGER.

An all-week meeting was held in the Glade Mennonite church near here, conducted by Rev. Suttler, of Johnstown, Pa., and as a result a number of new members will be received into the church on next Sunday morning.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger and Mrs. Dennis Detrick, made a brief visit to Salisbury, Pa., last Saturday.

C. H. Jennings and son Paul passed through this village last week in an up-to-date automobile.

The new bridge on the county road leading from Bittinger to the Amish settlement is about completed and is open for travel.

After spending his vacation pleasantly with friends near Easton, Md., Rev. Alvin Yugel returned to this place last week and has resumed his duties as pastor.

Charles Engle, of Frostburg, has taken the contract to erect a dwelling house for Levi Resh, near this place, and the building will be of concrete work.

John Holman and Thomas Swan, the former from Friendsville and the latter from Bloomington, this county, were callers in this section last Saturday and Sunday.

It is reported here that Jennings Bros' will shut down their large lumber plant until after the fall election and in the event of Bryan's election they will not resume operations then.

HOYES.

The whistle of the threshing machine engine is a familiar sound with us now.

Mr. N. K. Welch attended the picnic at Blooming Rose Saturday.

Mr. Abel DeWitt, of Ammistead, was seen here a few days ago.

Messrs. Cecil Enlow and Walter Townshend, of Perryopolis, Pa., are with the formers grandfather, T. H. Cuppett, at this writing.

Miss Auburn Smith goes to Mt. Lake Park for a visit of several days among friends and relatives.

Mr. Lloyd Custer and sisters Florence and Hazel are spending several days with their grandfather, Geo. E. Bishoff.

Mr. Martin and family of Albright, W. Va., are paying a visit to Rev. H. E. Friend.

Several people from this place attended the Fraternal Day exercises at Mt. Lake Park last Wednesday.

Miss Blanche Callis, who has been at Mt. Lake Park for several months, is home on a visit.

Mr. Chas. DeWitt and daughter Freda visited the former's daughter, Mrs. John Brenneman, at Oakland last week.

Again we take upon us the pleasant task of penning the account of one of those delightful hay-rides for which our village seems to be noted. It was a monstrously large one, the climax of the season, which was enjoyed so grandly on Saturday last. The party was composed of about sixty people, ranging in years, anywhere from six to eighty-five. It was one of those joyous combinations of youth and old age, which makes the old younger but the youth no older. Starting from Hoyes about eleven o'clock, the crowd was conveyed to Sang Run in two hay wagons for the younger members and carriages and buggies for the older. In spite of the downpour of rain from the organization of the party at 9 a. m., till about 1 p. m., there was no lagging of the spirits and after frequent outbursts of song and laughter all along the way, defying the inclemency of the weather, they arrived at Camp Bachelor, Sang Run, somewhat happier than they imagined they looked. The next thing in order was the dinner which was so delicious and so bountiful in supply as to do credit to the best housewives in America. The people then scattered for a mile or two along the Youghiogheny River and spent the afternoon in fishing, a happy idea, for it was such an abundance of fun and didn't hurt the fish. Old Sol showed his kindly face in the afternoon and warmed up the whole affair. The return trip was begun just before dark and as the party came up Spook Hollow the woods rang with such merriment that every ghost must have fled in search of more favorable climes Except for a few rainy tears, the homeward bound journey was a pleasant one in every sense of the word and with one accord it is said that the day will never be forgotten. We make acknowledgment to the proprietor of Camp Bachelor who so kindly tendered us the use of his rustic furnace on which to make or coffee. Will report later on the success of the maiden ladies

Mrs. Lou Keller and daughters, Mary Browning and Margaret, of Romney, who spent several weeks here visiting relatives and friends, left for Oakland Tuesday. They will spend a day or two at the Chautauqua before returning to their home.

Miss Sudie Friend has gone to Mt. Lake, where she will visit for an indefinite time.

Mr. D. R. Smith spent a few days this week with his stepmother, Mrs. Albright, near Cranesville, W. Va.

Boys, get your bells ready for an old time serenade, as we fear we will loose one of our young ladies.

Miss Della Savage spent a few days the past week at her old home at Sang Run.

Mr. Arthur DeWitt made a flying trip to Oakland this week.

Miss Mary Koontz recently returned from an extended visit to friends in Meyersdale.

Mrs. Dean and children, of Cumberland, are visiting Mrs. D.'s parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour.

Mr. Charles DeWitt and daughter Freda, also Masters Whitfield and Webb DeWitt were guests of Mrs. Maud Brenneman and Minnie Thayer near Crellin for several days recently.

BLOOMING ROSE.

The farmers in this section are through harvesting and are preparing to sow wheat.

Mr. J. S. Meyers and wife have returned from West Virginia where they have been visiting Mrs. Meyers' relatives.

Mr. Roy Jones expects to move to Kendall in the near future.

Mr. C. H. Friend is having a well drilled on his farm.

The singing class at Blooming Rose is getting to be quite a success under the splendid management of Prof. Samuel Wakefield.

Misses Pearl Friend and Ruth Harring drove to Friendsville last Sunday evening.

Mr. Oryal Friend made a flying trip to Asher Glade last Saturday night.

Mr. Ellis Friend attended the ice cream supper at Cleve Sisler's near White Rock and reports a good time.

Mr. Samuel Bolling and family spent Sunday at Wm. Meyers'.

Mrs. Margaret Glover, of Meyersdale, is the guest of Mrs. E. B. Hook this week.

Mrs. E. B. Hook is very ill.

Mr. Arthur Dixon and family were visiting friends near Sweet Pink Sunday.

We are sorry to note the illness of Grandmother Vansickle but hope she will recover.

Mr. D. H. Friend and Wm. Hinebaugh took a wagon load of people from Locust Grove to the mountain one day last week to pick huckleberries. They all report a grand time.

Miss Ruth Harring is the guest of Mrs. J. S. Meyers this week.

Mr. Isaac Savage has his saw mill in operation on the farm of Mr. George Savage at present.

Arthur Dixon and John Hoff are very busy threshing through this community.

Mr. Harley Friend made a flying trip to Sand Spring last Sunday evening.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 19, 1908.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1906, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intends each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

F. R. Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Theophilus George, Republican, Judge of Election, Swanton.

Gus Harvey, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Clarence Sweitzer, Republican, Clerk of Election, Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Thos. Fike, Sr., Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; W. M. Frazee, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Charles Fike, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; W. E. East, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Noah Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Jacob S. Fresh, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Clarence E. Stanton, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Charles Zehner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Thomas Michael, Democrat, Judge of Election, Westernport; Grant Hershberger, Republican Judge of Election, Bloomington.

S. F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

P. J. Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Amaziah Turney, Republican, Judge of Election, Strawn, Pa.

Charles C. Schlossnagle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, R. F. D. No. 2; Asa Beechley, Republican, Clerk of Election, Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Wm. G. Mattingly, Democrat, Judge of Election, Hoyes; James W. Wilburn, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Edgar F. Jinkins, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Cranesville; D. W. Fraker, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

James L. Barnard, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Thomas Callis, Republican, Judge of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Edward F. Smouse, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park; Warren Rathbun, Republican, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

John L. Harvey, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gormania; Joseph M. Conneway, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

Mortimer G. Williams, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gormania; James Aronhalt, Republican, Clerk of Election, Wilson, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's,

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Robert C. Minick, Republican, Judge of Election, Finzel.

Pat Hoye, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg; T. A. Werner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Finzell.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

P. J. Lohr, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

T. J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; Wilfred Chadderton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

George S. Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Hugh Weir, Republican, Judge of Election, Lonaconing.

Jonas Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bond; John T. Green, Republican, Clerk of Election, Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Thompson Gilpin, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bittinger; Albert Brenneman, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Perry Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; C. L. Beltzel, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

H. L. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Kitzmillerville; John H. Rafter, Republican, Judge of Election, Klitzmillerville.

David S. Sharpless, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville; H. L. Price, Republican, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

James A. Delawder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Raymond Saucer, Republican, Judge of Election, Crellin.

Wm. F. King, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; R. C. Townshend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

D. M. MASON, Pres.,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:
L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

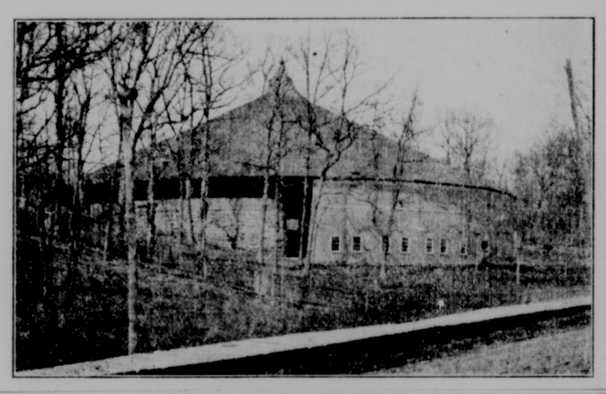
Last Excursion of the Year

National Day.

The One Opportunity Remaining to Visit the Most Sensible Summer Resort in America.

Friday, Aug. 28

The Closing Day it Always the Best. The Great Season will Wind Up in a Blaze of Glory.



MORNING: S. M. Spedon, the great Crayon Artist, drawing rapidly and accurately many humorous pictures in the presence of the audience and talking entertainingly.

AFTERNOON: Geo. R. Stuart, on "Lop-Sided Folks." For many years associated with the late Sam P. Jones. More than his equal in wit and humor. Hear him.

NIGHT: The greatest entertainment the Mountain Chautauqua has known. The great Chorus with orchestral assistance. Emanuel Schmuck, violincelist. Karl Blose, violinist. Famous Otterbein Male Quartette and Hand Bell Ringers. Prof. Struck, the incomparable magician, in great feats of magic. The American Vitagraph with its wonderful Moving Pictures.

COME. ENJOY THIS NATIONAL DAY.

$1.00 round trip rate from both Grafton and Cumberland with special trains. Corresponding low rates from intermediate points.

Excursion trains in both directions leave Mt. Lake Park at 10.00 p. m.

Excursion tickets to Cumberland and other points east will be honored on train 72 leaving Mt. Lake Park at 4.47.

Excursion rates from Fairmont, W. Va., $1.25. Leave Fairmont at 7 a. m., arriving at Mt. Lake Park at 10.18. Leave Mt. Lake Park on trai. No. 5, at 7.54, arriving at Fairmont at 10.35 p. m.

You Don't Need a Town Crier

to emphasize the merits of your business or announce your special sales. A straight story told in a straight way to the readers of this paper will quickly reach the ears of the thoughtful, intelligent buying public, the people who have the money in their pockets, and the people who listen to reason and not noise. Our books will show you a list of the kind of people you appeal to. Call and see them at this office.

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$277,285 08
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	113,000 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	708 02
Due from State Banks and Bankers	2,150 20
Due from approved reserve agents	43,914 65
Checks and other cash items	364 65
Notes of other National Banks	475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$20,591 70
Legal-tender notes	5,380 00	25,781 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation)	2,500 00
Total		$582,487 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,686 45
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	3,482 92
Due to State Banks and Bankers	104 02
Dividends unpaid	10 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,677 84
Time certificates of deposit	262,685 05
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 36
Total	$582,488 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
D. E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
J. M. DAVIS,
Directors.

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Gold Coin Seed Wheat for sale—Jack Grimes, Deer Park, Md. 26-2t*

Mrs. Cora Rinard, of Kentland, Ind., is in Oakland visiting her brother, Mr. Scott T. Jones.

Mrs. Herman Creutzburg left Oakland this morning for a ten days' visit to Atlantic City.

Mr. Jonas C. Beachy, of near Bittinger, was in Oakland a day or two last week on business.

Ex-County Treasurer Thomas B. Wiley, of near Bittinger, was a caller at this office on last Friday morning.

Messrs. Charles E. Hilleary and E. M. Mickey, of District No. 8, were visitors to Oakland Tuesday evening.

Miss Ella Payne, assistant superintendent of the York (Pa.) Hospital is in Oakland visiting the Misses Manges.

Orders taken for Aubrey Sisters famous Beautifier, tint, massage cream, depilatory powder, soaps, etc., at Oakland Hotel. 19-tf.

Horse for sale cheap, rather than winter. Good to work anywhere. Address R. G. Richardson, Mt. Lake Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Feldmyer and Mrs. Joseph S. M. Basil, of Annapolis, are in Oakland visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell.

Miss Goldie Krantz, of Adamstown, Md., is in Oakland as the guest of relatives, having accompanied her sister Miss Cleo Krantz, here a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Felty and little son, of Connellsville, Pa., who spent a week here as guests at the Browning Hotel, returned to their home Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Schroeder, who have been spending the past two weeks with Frederick relatives, will return to their home in Oakland Saturday evening.

When you come to town don't forget to call at the Gold Mine Store. Candy, tobaccos, fishing tackle, 2 bottles pop for 5c. Geo. M. Mason, Prop'r.

Mrs. Margaret Brown and her sister Mrs. Tate, of Kentucky, who are spending the week at Mountain Lake Park, were in Oakland Monday calling on friends and relatives.

The Board of County Commissioners will meet on Tuesday, September 15th, as required by law. All business that may be presented the Broad at this meeting will be considered.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnished or unfurnished.

Mrs. Olin F. Durst, of Lonaconing, and Mrs. Harry W. Matheney, of Cumberland, who spent several weeks with Oakland relatives, returned to their respective homes yesterday morning.

Capt. Joseph Washington Thompson, of Philadelphia, who represents a number of interests, among them being the Stoyer Run Coal Company, spent a day or two last week in Oakland on business.

Mrs. George E. Smith and little son Richard, of York, Pa., who have been here on an extended visit to Mrs. Smith's parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges, returned to her home this morning.

Mr. A. E. Rambeau, of Morgantown, formerly of Mountain Lake Park, is spending a two weeks' vacation at the latter place. He has as a companion on his vacation Mr. C. B. Ireland, of Baltimore.

The Gold Mine Store is the place to get your candy, post cards, tobaccos, toys, wagons, base ball goods and fishing tackle of all kinds. Two bottles of pop for 5c.

Dr. A. J. Mason, Justice Leon Hardie and Messrs. R. M. Holman and Albert Frazee, of Friendsville, were in Oakland Tuesday evening attending Masonic Lodge, returning to their homes yesterday morning.

Miss Catharine Manges left Oakland last Saturday morning for York, Pa., where she will probably resume teaching. Miss Manges departure from Oakland is sincerely regretted by her multitude of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Shank and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Shank, of Ohiopyle, Pa., who are on a visit to the parental domicile in Oakland, accompanied by Miss Orley Dunham, left here this morning for a ten days' visit to Atlantic City.

Mr. John Brydon, formerly of this city, but now residing in New York, as the vice president and general manager of the West Kentucky Coal Company, was a visitor in Cumberland yesterday, being accompanied by his brother, Mr. Louis Brydon.—Cumberland News.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

HAND CAR JUMPED TRACK

Resulting In the Serious Injury of Two Italians.

Last Saturday morning a hand car being operated by a gang of Italian track men, jumped the tract at the Waghington Spring bridge west of Oakland and turned turtle. Two of the trackmen were very painfully hurt, one of them having his right leg broken between the knee and ankle and the other sustaining a very badly sprained ankle.

The men are quartered in camp cars on a siding opposite the Oakland Hotel grounds where they are being cared for by their countrymen.

Dr. Henry W. McComas, the railway surgeon, rendered surgical aid to the injured men.

Mr. Albert A. Hinebaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Hinebaugh, of Oakland, has accepted a responsible position with a large coal mining company operating in Mexico, about seventy-five miles south of the Rio Grande River, for which point he expects to leave within a week or two.

Prof. John T. Harris, a botanist of note, formerly of New Jersey, but now a resident of Cumberland, is in Oakland this week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Harned. These two gentlemen, who are kindred spirits in the botanical line, have unearthed some very rare as well as excellent specimens of the local flora.

Mr. Edward A. Browning, County Superintendent, accompanied by his brother Nathan C. Browning, of Sang Run, left here on last Friday for Salisbury, Mo., where they will be the guests for a week or ten days of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Browning, an elder brother, who is remembered by many Garrett county residents.

Mr. Bernard Gonder, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gonder, who has been in the northwest for more than a year, where he was employed at various points along the line of the Great Northern Railroad, his present position being at Butte, Montana, as chief operator, arrived home last Saturday night to spend a week or two with his parents and his many friends.

Tuesday the editor enjoyed a ride to Mountain Lake Park in Mr. William Miller's new automobile, which was received here on Monday from the factory in the west. The machine is rather unique for this country, having cushioned wheels of a height nearly as large as those usually fitted to a carriage. It is built for utility rather than speed. The machine was driven to Mr. Miller's home at Accident from here on Tuesday morning.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Will Be Wedded September 9th.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hart, of Oakland, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter Miss Anna Elizabeth to Mr. Daniel Leo Shaffer, which will occur in St. Peter's Catholic church in Oakland on Wedneseay morning, September 9th, at ten o'clock. The bride-elect is one of Oakland's charming young ladies whose host of friends will be delighted to learn of the event, but who regret the fact that she will reside away from Oakland. Mr. Shaffer, the groom-to-be, is a valued employee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, his headquarters being in Wheeling, where the couple will be at home after October 1st.

Garrett County Poet.

Mr. Edward Broadwater, aged 79 years, the Garrett county poet, one of the most unique characters that visits Frostburg, is here spending a few days with relatives. On Saturday evening he attended the Dreamland Electric Theatre and saw motion pictures for the first time in his life. He added to the entertainment at the electric theatre by reciting several original poems. At the conclusion of the entertainment inside the theatre, Mr. Broadwater sang several solos and recited an original selection entitled, "The Final Judgment Day," to a large audience gathered on the street just outside. Mr. Broadwater has never had any of his poems printed, but commits them to memory and recites for the benefit of his friends and others. "St. Peter at the Gate" is a fine selection and he recites it with dramatic effect.—Frostburg Corr. Cumberland News.

Dangerous Lunatic Escapes.

Albert Kelly, who, three weeks ago, in a fit of insanity, attempted to murder certain members of his family and was foiled in this, and who made an unsuccessful effort to burn down the Kelly home, on West Main street, Grafton, W Va., escaped from the State Hospital for the Insane at Weston at early hour Monday morning and thus far five guards sent out after him have failed to effect his capture. This is his second escape from the institution, he having been placed there the last time just after attempting to carry on his murderous designs three weeks ago.

The Republican for Job Work.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Andrew Nau, Aged Sixteen, Victim of Shotgun Accident.

Andrew Nau, aged sixteen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nau, of Westernport, and grandson of Joseph Shaffer, of near Oakland, accidentally shot himself near his home Tuesday morning and a short time later was found lying unconscious by a Miss Carney, who was passing along the road leading from Westernport to Franklin Hill, the objective point of young Nau who started out to hunt, armed with a shot gun. Miss Carney gave the alarm and when a surgeon arrived he found the youth dead with a gaping wound in his breast.

UNION SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

Members of the Presbyterian and Luthern Schools Will Join.

Arrangements have been under way for more than a week for a Sunday school picnic to be held jointly by the members of the Presbyterian and Lutheran schools at Bradley's grove, west of Oakland, on Thursday, September 3rd, when a large crowd of children as well as grown-ups are expected to be present.

A committee has the affair in hand and a splendid time is anticipated by those who will attend.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m., by Rev. Dr. Fenner, of Louisville, Kentucky.
Luther League every Wednesday at 8 p. m.
Preaching at Hutton on September 3rd at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Lyndale—Preaching at 10.30 a. m.
Pleasant Valley—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 8 p. m.
A cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Ferndale—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

I. O. O. F.

All members of Oak Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., Mt. Lake Park, Md., are requested to be present at the regular meeting of the lodge, Tuesday evening, Sept. 10, 1908. Grand Sec'y, Wm. A. Jones, of Baltimore, Md., accompained by other grand officers of the order, will be present and deliver short addesses. All visiting brothers welcome.

A. T. WHITE,
C. V. HARVEY,
2t J. W. REAMS.

Semmes Hamill to Speak.

The members of the Meyersdale lodge of Knights of Pythias will hold their annual reunion and picnic in Slicer's Grove, Myersdale, Saturday, September 5th. A special train will be run from Friendsville and nearly every lodge of that order in Somerset county will be represented. Rev. B. B. Collins will deliver the address of welcome and the speaker of the day will be Attorney G. S. Hamill, Jr., of Oakland, Md.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

Supervisors' Appointments.

In another column of this paper today will be found the appointments made on last Wednesday by the Broad of Supervisors of Elections of Judges and Clerks of election to serve at the election to be held in November.

For Sale or Rent.

The Litzinger building on south side of Second street, Oakland, Md., for sale, or the north storeroom for same for rent. Apply to J. C. Peddicord, Oakland postoffice, for particulars.

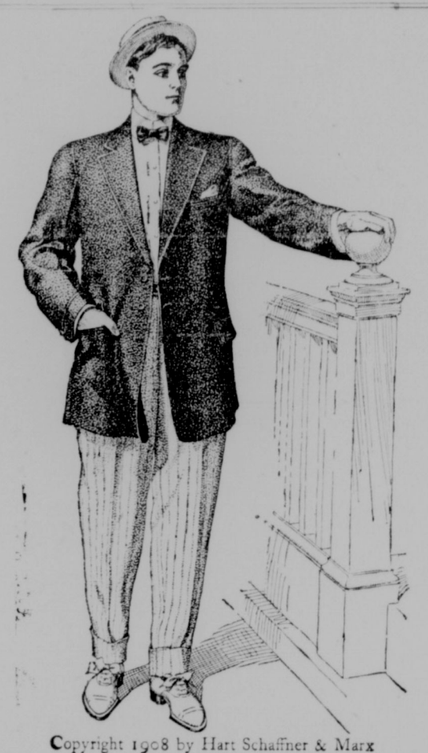
J. M. LITZINGER.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent,
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

H. C. Sincell & Co.



Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Arthur Townshend,

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND COUNTRY PRODUCE

First National Bank Building, Main Street, Oakland, Md.

Matting.

To close out our Matting will give you bargains.

$1 Lace Curtains for 75cts

BEAUTIFUL LINE OF

Summer Underwear

and beautiful line of

WOOL GOODS CHEAP.

Dimities, Percales, Seersuckers, etc.

American and Beauty

CORSETS,

Medium and Long Waists.

Are You Thinking

of taking a course in a School of Music, a School of Expression, a School of Fine Arts, a School of Commerce and Administration, or a School of Railroading and Telegraphy?

West Virginia Wesleyan College

offers you able instructors, good buildings, ample facilities, reasonable rates. For catalogue and full particulars write

DR. CARL G. DONEY, PH. D.,
President.
Buckhannon, W. Va.

or call on W. L. MASON at Mt. Lake Park during August. 22-3t

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. Telephone Comp'y

Subscribe for The Republican.

The Valedictorian.

A Commencement Day Story

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1907, by Frank H. Sweet.

"I'VE no patience with your sky-scrapin' notions about educatin' up girls'" As Silas loosened the baked earth about the strawberry vines with his trowel he gave that emphatic jerk of the head that Elizabeth called nodding his chin. "'Stead of gallivantin' off to college, Kit had a sight better stayed at home helpin' you."

Elizabeth packed away a sigh among the red berries that her quick fingers were laying in precise little rows in their square boxes. "Some girls is spry with their hands, Si, and some with their minds." She looked up, smiling, the glow on her thin cheeks other than that of the sun parching the thirsty

"KIT HAD A SIGHT BETTER STAYED AT HOME HELPING YOU."

ground. "Think of the child keeping books summers, taking only a skimpy two weeks' rest, and yet standing at the head of her class—why, Si, she deserves the handsomest white frock we can buy her!"

"Shucks! I'd like to meet the fool woman—I bet a round silver dollar it was a woman—that invented graduatin'. Now Kit's got her le'rnin' why can't she come home peaceable without makin' a brass band circus of herself?" The chin nodded excitedly. "I know them graduatin' shows! They squeeze you into a hothed crowded with chairs, and there you sit shut up tight in a boiled shirt, your best clothes smellin' of the moth balls that have been in 'em since the last funeral, the sweat streamin' down your face like the creeks in a freshet."

"Perhaps," said Elizabeth shyly. "'tisn't the ups and downs that make life, but the way you take them—the thin ears of corn along with the full." She placed the last filled box in the waiting space of the drawer and slowly straightened her stiff, aching body. "I know it's been a bad year, Si, but fixings for her commencement means so much to a girl, and Kitty couldn't save up for them. It was hard enough to make both ends meet anyway. If you could just strain a point for the frock, if"—

"I told you," interrupted Silas, "I hadn't the money to spend on any such foolishness, and that ends it." The chin wagged vehemently. "I'll not be pestered to death about it, neither—you understand?"

Elizabeth turned to the house in silence. She did understand. She had been Silas' wife thirty years. But the tightly closed lips were not closed in meekness, and the faded gray eyes flashed. The child should have her fixings somehow—yes, even if her mother had to take— Elizabeth sank into a kitchen chair, the corners of her mouth quivering, her hands dropped helplessly in her lap. Then, as though ashamed of a weakness, she sprang to her feet and resolutely hastened upstairs into her bedchamber.

She gave a swift, stealthy glance over her shoulder as she knelt before her opened bureau drawer, pulling out from the toe of a knitted slipper a small wad wrapped in an old glove. Breathlessly she emptied her treasure trove, pennies, nickels and dimes falling softly upon the bills that her proud fingers had counted out on the floor. Nine dollars and eighty-seven cents was the measure of her opportunity for self denial, the means to fulfill her heart's desire, for the radiant purpose to attend Kitty's commencement had been a golden dream bridging in happiness the loneliness, toil and hardships of the past three years, and to that end she had industriously hoarded every cent that she could call her own, rising an hour earlier busy summer mornings to pick wild berries for the doctor's wife, sitting up winter nights to manufacture tomato pincushions for the Christmas trade at the Hillsboro store. She gathered the money in her hands, hugging it to her breast. "Kitty's to speak a piece," she sobbed. "The child's going to speak a piece, and her mother won't be there."

The hot, tedious days lengthened, and Elizabeth went through her routine of duties with the soulless precision of a machine.

"Are you under the weather, mother?" asked Silas an evening two weeks later as he sat absorbed in the drowsy comfort of his pipe, his chair tilted back against the house, his slippered feet crossed upon the porch railing. "You seem sort of tuckered out."

Elizabeth looked away as she answered. She dared not trust too much to the deepening twilight. The next day would be that of Kitty's graduation.

"Shucks," ejaculated Silas, "that was the gate's click! Who can be comin' this time of night? Why, if it ain't the doctor's wife!"

"Mrs. Farland?" Self reproach mingled with tenderness in the questioning. In the stress of her own unhappiness she had forgotten the anguish that her dear little friend must be suffering as she looked forward to tomorrow, for during the first years at college Ethel Farland had been Kitty's classmate and only the preceding summer, one of typhoid at Hillsboro, had the sweet young life been called to a higher school. Elizabeth's bitterness shriveled in shame, and, holding out her arms, she ran down the path. No words passed between the two women. The unaccustomed kiss, the outstretching thoughts of each mother heart, was speech enough.

"Don't disturb yourself, Silas," said Mrs. Farland gently as they came up to the porch. "No, Betty, dear, I can't stay." Her voice fluttered nervously. "I came only to give you—this." She slipped an envelope into Elizabeth's astonished hand, pressing it with trembling fingers. "The express passes through Hillsboro at 6:15 and gets to Centerville at 10. The commencement exercises don't begin till half past, you know. It's my own ticket—the one I'd have bought for myself if—if things had happened different. This is the only way you can help me bear tomorrow, Betty."

She turned from the spellbound woman on the porch and darted up the path. The gate clicked. The dark silence was broken by the hooting of an owl. In a patch of sky above the shadowing branches of the trees shone a star.

Sleepless hours of happy planning, fitful dreams of thrilling adventure, and Elizabeth's night had slipped into dawn. For a moment of ecstasy she lingered at her window, eyes uplifted to the glory flushing the eastern sky; then she stole downstairs to a hundred little commonplace deeds of love, from giving the chickens fresh water to cutting a pie for Silas' lunch.

After they had hurried through breakfast, Elizabeth chattering so much that she forgot to eat, Silas glumly acquiescent in his wife's "fool hankerin' after graduatin' shows," came the excitement of dressing. Standing before her cracked mirror, her shaking hands tying the black lace veil with its elaborate border about the dingy straw bonnet trimmed in purple ribbon and red currants, she proudly surveyed herself, glad that she had yielded to Silas five years ago and bought a cinnamon brown alpaca instead of the coveted gray, because it looked more "partyfied" for the present occasion.

She who had for years experienced no more exhilarating motion than a jolting ride in the farm wagon passed through the whirl on the express in a trance. But a shock of awakening came when the express had left her upon the Centerville platform. She had supposed that Kitty, with the other graduates, would be at the station to see the train come in, and, not finding her, she stood bewildered, with the frightened eyes of a lost child.

"I CAME ONLY TO GIVE YOU—THIS."

"Looking for some one, mother?" called a laughing voice.

With a start she turned toward a nearby wagon, where a boy sat smiling at her.

"I was sort of looking for Kitty, though she didn't know I was coming," she explained. "You see, it's Kitty's commencement, and"—

"Oh, you're one of the college crowd, are you? You'd better get a move on you! Your train's twenty minutes late, you know."

"Late!" cried Elizabeth. "Why, we came flying! Is it very far to walk?" she asked, looking helplessly to right and left. "Kitty speaks a piece. I can't miss that!"

The urchin's smile broadened into a grin. Then an impulse of chivalry stirred the thoughtless boy heart. "Say, you climb up beside me. I'll drive you there in a jiffy."

The hall was crowded when Elizabeth entered, but a smiling usher with a rose in his buttonhole found her a seat just as the band began to play and the graduating class trooped upon the stage.

After much fumbling she threw back her veil and, putting on her "specs," gazed in delight and awe at the young girls seated there, all in a flutter of excitement and fluffy white dresses.

"It looks like the pear orchard abloom," she confided to the lady beside her. She leaned forward, her lips parted, her breath coming in little gasps. "That's Kitty—there in the middle—the one with the sunshiny hair. She's going to speak a piece." Her hand trembled upon the lady's arm. "Why have they hung those pink sashes over the stage? And, see; there's a pink bow on every girl's chest!"

"MOTHER!" CRIED KITTY. "YOU DEAR FRAUD!"

"The class colors," was the smiling answer.

"It looks like"— Elizabeth stopped abruptly. Again she stood at her window, eyes uplifted to the wonder and the beauty of the early morning. That was the meaning behind it all—the commencement of a new day in the sky; the commencement of a new striving and achieving in these young lives; rose colored dreams and ambitions, ribbons of dawn fluttering with hope and promise in every little graduate's heart.

Kitty's "piece" came at last. She had been elected valedictorian of her class. Elizabeth listened spellbound. To this idolizing judge every thought in it was inspired by genius, every sentence a poem in prose, while through the whole reading ran flashlights of the child herself—Kitty with her first doll hugged in her fat little arms, Kitty with her first medal won at the Hillsboro school fastened upon her proudly heaving breast, Kitty with her hair done up for the first time and the last tuck out of her Sunday dimity. And when the good natured house burst into applause Elizabeth longed to stand on her chair and shout, "She's mine, all mine!"

After the benediction's hush bubbled over a reaction of chatter and laughter.

"Look at the freak in front of you"—the carelessly high voice drifted over Elizabeth's shoulder—"red currants, purple ribbons and a dress handed down from the ark! A country mother, I suppose, bobbing up at commencement to humiliate a poor little graduate!"

A crimson spot burned Elizabeth's cheek. There was a mist before her eyes, and an ache gripped her throat. But so strong was her habit of unselfishness that she was scarcely conscious of her pain. Her one thought was to slip away before humiliating Kitty.

The opening of the nearby side door promised instant escape, and she hastened toward it. She did not know that the band was playing. She did not notice the graduates filing down to the same door. She did not hear the muttered protests of the people that she passed.

"One moment, madam." At the door an usher laid a detaining hand upon her sleeve.

She shrank back as though the dazzling white line approaching were an apparition of horror. There she stood, motionless, trapped in a crowd where Kitty could not fail to recognize her—and be humiliated! And yet a sudden joy leaped in her heart as she felt Kitty's eyes upon her. It had been so many months since she had had the child in her arms! With these conflicting emotions she breathlessly waited. The white line flashed on unbroken. Kitty had passed her by.

"Madam, you may go now."

Elizabeth stared vacantly at the usher and tottered out of the hall. Life had ended. Kitty—the pride, the promise of all past years—no longer belonged to her, but to this gay outside world where she was an intruder. "The child" was ashamed of her mother!

She stumbled on. There was a white blur upon her stinging eyes where the graduates flocked on the campus, then a detached white figure with outstretched arms darting toward her.

"Mother!" cried Kitty. "You dear fraud, you pretending you couldn't come! When I discovered you I almost broke ranks and ruined the march!"

"But—but, Kitty," faltered Elizabeth, "people are looking, and"—

"I don't care if the whole world sees me hugging you!" laughed Kitty, with a rapturous kiss. "Oh, muzzer, guess what? I've got the Hillsboro school! I can live at home, and we'll have a servant, and—and you need only twirl your thumbs for the rest of your life! But come, honey, I want to introduce you to all the girls."

Standing The Test.

By W. F. Bryan.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Excitment was at white heat in the convention town. The ring was in the last ditch, fighting gamely. Robert Woodham, who had led many another forlorn hope and who had grown gray in the service of his party (as he had understood that service), shook his head as he went over the columns of figures in the inner office at the temporary headquarters.

Try as he would he could not figure a victory. The two-thirds rule prevailed and he could count barely a majority for the ring candidate. The nomination of Dudley for governor meant the triumph of the reform faction and the utter disruption of the state machine, for Foster stood pledged to investigate to the fullest the graft charges brought against the ring.

On the other hand, Graham Bailey was secretly pledged to forget the same promises he had made. Apparently both men were eager to uncover the graft that was the disgrace of the party, but Foster alone was sincere.

The exposure of the graft scandals would not affect Woodham directly. He had always kept himself clear of the crooked work in the party. Could it be accomplished quietly, he would welcome the feat of ridding the party of those politicians who were responsible for the scandal, but here lay the trouble! The graft was widespread. Its uncovering would disrupt the entire party machine. New and inexperienced men would be placed in charge of the party interests, and no members of the old ring could find a place in the councils.

To Robert Woodham politics was as the breath of life to his nostrils. He had played the game from the day that he had organized the Junior Marching club in the little village which had been his boyhood home. It was his sole relaxation. Other strategists played chess. He preferred the political pawn to the bits of carved wood or ivory and his board was an entire state.

Now he saw the end of it all. Unless on an early ballot he could swing the doubtful delegates into the Bailey ranks there would be a stampede to Foster. If he could arrange to stampede some of the Foster delegates to Bailey the uncertain delegates would probably follow the lead of the deserters.

"REVOLT IS IN THE VERY AIR!" CRIED THE OLD MAN

As for the hundredth time his eye ran down the column his hands clinched nervously. His glance rested for a moment on Crosby county with its eleven votes.

Crosby county stood committed to Foster. Could Woodham induce them to change it would mean a difference of twenty-two votes for Bailey, the eleven votes added and the eleven taken away from the Foster adherents. The head of the Crosby delegation was Howard Graves. The others would vote as he voted. And only a few days before Graves had asked consent to marry Marian Woodham!

At the time Woodham had refused because Graves was a young attorney still struggling for recognition at the bar, while Woodham was ambitious for his daughter. Now he drew a sheet of paper toward him and wrote rapidly for a moment. Then he thrust the sheet into an envelope and called a messenger.

An hour later Howard Graves, resting in his room at the hotel for the battle of the morrow, received the missive and read it a dozen times before he placed it in his pocket.

It was diplomatically worded. It did not openly bribe, but suggested that the writer had learned that he was mistaken as to Graves' political affiliations. If it was true, as he now had reason to believe, that Graves and the Crosby delegation were in reality supporters of the Bailey boom, he begged to withdraw his opposition to the match Graves had suggested.

Graves was still uncertain when he went into the convention hall the following morning. From his place in the Skeene county delegation Woodham nodded pleasantly to him and with a glance directed the young attorney's gaze into the galleries.

These ran from the four sides of the hall, and directly above the chairman's desk sat Marian Woodham. She had come down in answer to her father's telegram the night before, and they entered the convention hall before he had explained to her the reason he had sent for her.

"You keep your eye on Graves and he will vote right," had been her father's admonition. "Your wedding present will be that house on Maple street, and you can furnish it as you like. I'll take your husband into the firm too."

It was a heavy bribe. The house alone was worth $10,000, and a partnership with Woodham, Calla & Creagh would save Graves a weary struggle. It was scarcely to be wondered at that her face was white and wan as she leaned over the balcony rail and tried to smile at Graves.

She heard as in a dream the preliminaries. The state chairman placed Bailey's name in nomination, and her father seconded it, asking that the nomination be made unanimous. There was a derisive hoot from the opposition at this, and some one nominated Dudley Foster, and some one else made the seconding speech. There were no other nominations, and the chairman of the convention directed that the balloting begin.

It was the custom in the convention for the spokesman of each delegation to announce the vote when the name of his county was called, and the lifeless voice of the clerk began.

From the first it was apparent that the contest would be close, and as Crosby county was called there was a stir through the hall. All the morning there had been rumors that some of the Foster delegates would go over to the ring candidate, and Crosby county had been one of those mentioned. As Graves rose in his place men moved forward on the edge of their chairs and Marian's face went deadly white.

For a moment Graves stood unsteadily regarding the blur of faces, in which Marian's stood out distinctly. Even at that distance he could see that she was intensely interested, and the thought that she counted on his treachery hurt for a moment, even though he realized that it was natural that she should be interested in her father's success.

To him the time seemed an hour; to others it seemed a full minute, though it was not one-quarter of that time. Then with a steady voice Graves answered:

"Crosby county casts eleven votes for the Hon. Dudley Foster."

For a moment there was the stillness of a house of death. Then the ringing cheers broke out, and a moment later Dannon county, one of the uncertain quantities, followed Graves' lead and the stampede was started, but not at all in accordance with Woodham's plans.

The hall was still ringing with the cheers of the triumphant Foster rooters when a telegraph boy approached Graves with a message that he was wanted outside. Quickly he made his way through the jubilating crowd to the hall to come face to face with Marian.

"Forgive me," he said brokenly. "I tried my best to answer your appeal, but my vote was not my own. It was a trust of the people who sent me here and I could not be false to them."

"My appeal!" Marian clapped her hands softly. "You old darling. I was so afraid that you would vote for Mr. Bailey! Do you suppose I would care for a man who had been false to his trust? I knew only this morning why father sent for me. Poor old dad! It will break his heart! But, all the same, you were in the right and I was so foolishly afraid that you might be tempted."

"I was for a moment," he confessed, "when I saw how anxious you were. Then I realized that if I bought your father's consent it would be with my own self respect, and that I never could look you in the face again."

Robert Woodham came wearily from the hall. In the last hour he had aged ten years. Marian caught his arm.

"Dad, dear," she said gently, "I sent for Mr. Graves to tell him that I would marry him, no matter what you said."

"Revolt is in the very air!" cried the old man. "I guess I will have to drop out of politics when even my daughter electioneers against me."

"I didn't work against you. I just left it to Howard," explained Marian. "He stood the test."

Woodham nodded, and with an arm about the shoulders of each he led the way to the committee room. On his right was his daughter and on his left the new found son who had stood the test, and in his heart Woodham was glad that he had.

Off With the Old Love.

A prominent Chicago lawyer tells of an amusing incident which he witnessed subsequent to a certain breach of promise suit in which he had acted as the defendant's attorney. The two were standing talking when they were joined by a third man, a friend of the client and an acquaintance of the lawyer. The third man had been out of town for some little time.

"Hello, old man, what are you looking so blue about?" the newcomer demanded as they shook hands.

"Oh, I've had a little hard luck. I've got to pay Miss Blank $5,000 on account of a breach of promise judgment," was the disconsolate reply.

"Say, I'm glad to hear that, old fellow," the friend exclaimed fervently, seizing the dejected one's hand and shaking it vigorously.

"'Glad to hear it!' I've got to pay that money, I tell you! What do you mean?" the other demanded in astonishment.

"Just that, my boy. It will be just about enough for us to set up housekeeping on. Miss Blank and I are to be married next month, you know."

THE JUNE GROOM.

Just now you're not
Of much account;
To very much
You don't amount.
If done without
You now should be,
Your sweaty face
No one would see.
Your big red hands
Would not appear
To mar the scene;
That's very clear.
If some one could
Devise a plan
To wed a maid
Without a man,
Your wilted collar
Would not seem
A blot upon
Love's perfect dream.
Your awkward poses
Would not make
The bride's relations
Want to take
You out and dump
You in the lake.
Don't think because
You hold her fan
You cut much ice,
You foolish man.
You're just the groom—
There by your side,
All radiant, fair.
Behold the bride.
She is the glorious
Show today.
And you, poor groom,
Are in the way.
You do not add
Unto this scene
One bit of color
'Cept it's green.
You are a super,
That is all.
And cut a figure
Very small.
No one inquires
Your name or stays
To look at you.
In singing plays
You'd lug a spear
Or hold a horse.
They tolerate you
Here, of course,
Because when done
With fuss and frills
You are the guy
Who'll pay the bills.

—Detroit Free Press.

Some Phases of Phrases.

Tears stood in his eyes.

"Won't you be seated?" he asked.

She arose gracefully.

"What do you think of that get-up?" whispered her rival.

He offered her his hand.

"Thank you," she said sweetly, "but I hardly think I need another."

She stumbled awkwardly over a chair.

"I hope you enjoyed the trip," he remarked pleasantly.

He listened with bated breath.

"I want to catch every sentence," he explained.

She was forced to admit that she missed him.

"Ah," she sighed, "I am indeed an aimless creature."

He told her of his great love.

"When a belle is told," she whispered winsomely, "a ring generally follows."—Bohemian Magazine.

Why Willie Kept Still.

The Minister—You kept beautifully still while I was preaching, Willie. Did you like the sermon?

Kid—No, sir; but papa said he'd spank me good and plenty if I woke him up.—New York World.

Encouraging Sile.

Silas—I swan, squire, but my old mare has just chawed up my pocketbook!

The Squire—Don't worry, Sile. That will make her go so fast she is liable to win the races at the fair.

Silas—Why so, squire?

The Squire—Well, you know money makes the mare go.—Chicago News.

Caution.

"That young man comes of fine old stock," said the suitor's friend.

"Is his family in Burke's Peerage?" asked Mr. Cumrox.

"No."

"Well, we've about decided not to do business with any stock that isn't listed."—Washington Star.

Sharp and Scratchy.

"We didn't let our furnished house to the Dillinghams."

"Why not?"

"That oldest Dillingham girl is wearing short sleeves, and she's got elbows that would dent the hardest of hardwood furniture."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Very True.

"I don't see why they want to put down race tracks."

"Why not?"

"Because, no matter how good a man may be in other professions, go to any race track and you can always find a bettor."—Baltimore American.

Man With the Monkey Wrench.

There is somebody else besides the man
Who sits at the steering wheel
And sends along on its wild career
The merry and mad 'mobile,
When the car is stopped with a broken spring
Or skids in a ditch to stay,
Oh, then the man with the monkey wrench
Is the hero who saves the day!

The chauffeur looks at the cheering crowd
With a calm and a haughty face,
And away he flies like a shooting star
In the dust of the whirlwind race.
But a tire may burst or a cylinder crack,
And he goes to sit on the bench,
While the man of the hour, the man of power,
Is the man with the monkey wrench.

—New York Press.

KODAK SAFETY

DAVID J. LEWIS BY ACCLAMATION

Sixth District Democrats Name Distinguished Cumberlander for Congress.

Former State Senator David J. Lewis, of Cumberland, was nominated for Congress by Democrats of the Sixth Maryland district in convention at Oakland last Thursday. The honor came to Mr. Lewis by acclamation. He was present and he made a brief speech of acceptance. He said:

This is a Republican form of government. The principal difference between it and a monarchial government is in the length of time a man can hold an office. In a monarchial government officers appointed by a king hold office for life. In a Republic men hold office for but a brief stated period, and the makers of our government fixed on a term of two years for a member of the House of Representatives. If they thought it good to have him hold it for eight, ten or twelve years, why would they have provided for the election of a new representative every two years? The truth is that a certain order of regular change in the personnel of office-holders is necessary for a just and healthy Republican government, supplying with the new representative not only new ideas but a new supply of the [illegible] rotate his crops. There are instances of public men of such extraodinary ability and unusual knowledge of public affairs that the people as a whole may well think they would lose in making a change, but these cases are rare. Our constitution was plainly intended to break up the monarchial idea of personal monopoly in office, and for the purpose requires election every two years. And this principle in the past has been fairly well respected in the Sixth District, I am informed no individual having held the office of representative for more than four terms, as in the case of Judge McComas, a man of remarkable ability. The present incumbent of the office has already held it for five terms, ten years under substantial protest from his own party, and now seeks to extend the unprecedented number of six terms, twelve years, a half generation of uninterrupted office-holding.

In this he opposes not only the wishes of a large element of his own party, the spirit and healthy operation of a Republican form of of government. The office is in fact retained not as the result of spontaneous wishes of the members of the Republican party, but, by force of tactical or artificial majority largely made up from the organization and management of subordinate office-holders who are also opposed to the limited term fixed by the law. Let this method once be successful and you have Mexicanized the Sixth district only to introduce the habits of Mexican policies, where Republican government has become nothing but an empty name. Other questions there are which concern the country as a whole of which I shall later frankly state my views but the grave question as to whether the representative from this district is to hold the office according to the spirit of a monarchial or Republican form of goverenmont is one which only the citizens of the Sixth Congressional district of Maryland can decide.

The resolutions adopted were:

The Democratic party, in convention assembled, felicitates the the party and the people upon the the selection of William J. Bryan and John W. Kern as the standard bearers of the party in the great struggle of the people to recover their government from the hands of predatory wealth and privilege, which have made it a morass in the production of ill-gotten and swollen fortunes, and have diverted its powers and functions from the righteous purposes of government to the selfish objects of certain interests which have repaid the government by precipitating a panic in which innocent and guilty suffer alike.

We announce our conviction that the people are now ready to correct these great evils by a return to the principles of a Democratic government administered for all and not for a few, and that for this task they have selected the great tribune of the people, William J. Bryan, whose integrity, courage and understanding of the rights and needs of the people qualify him above all men for this great satisfaction that we endorse the work of the Denver convention, and the sound and progressive platform of principles, and pledge our candidate the utmost vigor and sincerity of support.

This is a republic, not a monarchy, where men hold office for life. According to the constitution, representatives hold office for two years, and if it had been considered wise for them to hold office for eight, ten or twelve years, election every two years would not have been thought necessary. Speaking for the citizens of the Sixth district, without regard to party, this convention expresses its conviction that no representative should continually hold the office for ten or twelve years, and that the present incumbent is violating all the precedents of this district in seeking to succeed himself for a sixth term.

We do not believe that any man should make a monopoly of the office of represetative, and that the great honor should be distributed more evenly among the many sons of the district equally capable to serve the purpose. We therefore invite the citizens of the district, irrespective of party, to join us in breaking up the present condition of personal monopoly in that office, which we believe serves no good public purpose.

We are obliged to express the regret that the people of our section of the state that in a national campaign there is no newspaper in the state with a wide circulation to advocate the principles of the Democractic party in a Democratic state, and we urge that the local papers of this party to especially vigorous efforts to supply the want which we know they will and can do.

At a caucus at the Oakland Hotel, ex-Senator Lewis was agreed upon without opposition. There was remarkable unanimity, all the delegates feeling that Mr. Lewis, a recognized exponent of Bryan policies and a man who has orginated policies tending to uplift labor and the commonweal, should be the standard bearer.

W. J. Grove, of Frederick county, was chairman of the convention and J. Frank Lewis, of Montgomery county was secretary.

COMPOSITON OF GENUINE HUMOR.

Wherein Does the Secret Lie and Why Does a Joke Cause a Laugh?

What is the secret of humor and why do we laugh? All kinds of philosophers have puzzled over this problem, from classic times to present, without getting very near the solution. It is a startling thought that humor has been produced for so many generations, and people have laughed off uncounted buttons without knowing the reason why. If we did not know that everything which is has a right to exist we might conclude that humanity had wasted its time listening to Aristophance and Mark Twain. There is a reason for the joke apart from the living the funny man makes out of it.

A fresh analysis and dissection of the joke problem, by one Gilson Gardner, in Putman's Magazine, makes the discovery, firstly that there is something wrong in eveything that is funny. We must be careful not to turn this statement the other end to. If there was something funny in everything wrong we would be put in good spirits by a visit to the jail and the asylums. Pain or great suffering accompanying a wrong vital humor. Any conflicting emotion, as sympathy, hate or love, spoils the effect. Nobody laughs when he is afraid or angry. The appreciation of humor belongs to a mind that is free of care and ready for an intellectual frolic.

The merely silly will not do for real humor, although odes to the purple cow and jabberwock stuff and limericks appeal to many intellects. The obviously wrong statement is silly and has no power to raise a laugh. The humorous lies somewhere between the extremes of absolute truth and absolute untruth. There must be a similarity or resemblance between facts and the humorous statement. The wrong idea must keep within a fair distance of the right. The similarity must be a new and unexpected sort. A similarity which actually deceives does not make a joke.

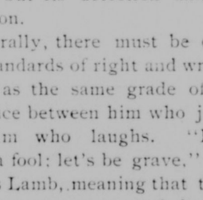
The answer to the riddle. "Why is a stick of candy like a horse?" —"The more you lick it the faster it goes',—illustrates an artificial resemblance of words, linking the true with the false in a humorous manner. The pun is a low form of humor based on the similarity of sound between words and no other ground of likeness. Parody, burlesque and farce exaggerate the right or standard concept by putting an undue burden of ridicule on the wrong. If similarity or resemblance is the base of humor, it might be argued that humor is deception. As a matter of fact, whether the humorist is a lair or not depends on his audience. If the audience is deceived, he is a liar.

Former analyses of the problem have held that man laughs because he enjoys the counterfeit and fraudulent or because he rejoices in his superior smartness over others in catching a point. But it is evident that this is not so. Man laughs because his mind, being alert, detects the fraud, and with pleasure repudiates it. He does not enjoy the contemplation of the wrong, but its detection and repudiation.

Naturally, there must be common standards of right and wrong, as well as the same grade of intelligence between him who jokes and him who laughs. "Here comes a fool: let's be grave," said Charles Lamb, meaning that there was no common ground for the play of just between the man of intellect and the fool. Every trade, every section and every nation has its own jokes depending on its own peculiar standards of the normal and the abnormal. As the world changes opinions alter, and each new era produces its humor appropriate to the prevailing ideas. Once the knight was a serious figure: Don Quixote made him funny when his economic usefulness had passed, and now he is out of date for any purpose. The slave was formerly laughed at. Today the tramp and the mother-in-law share the honors, but it is evident they can not serve indefinitely. Conclusion might be drawn from the vaudeville jests at the expense of politicians and the heaven-and-hell theory.—Philadelphia Press.

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL



BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street. Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity. Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT, DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md. Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST, OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street. GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention. Office—First National Bank Building. KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *9.38 p. m., *10.29 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart †10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m Arrive †10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.29 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *8.29 p. m

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO., Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars

Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING, CIVIL AND MINING ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building," OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Real Estate Bought and Sold.

Particular Attention Given Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO., 6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK, Executrix. McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, SAMUEL MOSSER, Administrators.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
C. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices

Grain Drills, Harrows & Plows

AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞ For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor, Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

America's Best Blood Is Still British.

By Admiral Sir CYPRIAN BRIDGE, British Navy.

I WAS always impressed with the vast extent to which ESSENTIALLY BRITISH IDEAS have permeated America. Family and church life, literature, methods of trade and conception of honor are all British. Then a careful study of American political life shows that OVER EIGHTY PER CENT OF THE PUBLIC MEN IN AMERICA HAVE BRITISH NAMES—English, Scotch or Irish.

All your presidents save Van Buren and Roosevelt have had British cognomens. The same applies to the supreme bench and other courts, to governors, congressmen and senators.

This is especially remarkable when it is considered that there has been no great British emigration to the United States as from other nations.

Moreover, I do not believe that the British stock in America is exceptionally prolific, yet, despite the millions of emigrants from other lands, with their millions of offspring, the original British element has supplied the GOVERNING CLASS which today dominates the nation.

I BELIEVE THAT THIS POWERFUL ELEMENT IN AMERICA WILL EVENTUALLY FORM OR HAS ALREADY FORMED A PATRICIATE SUCH AS ONCE DOMINATED ROME. THE MODERN AMERICAN IS ONE OF THE MOST ARISTOCRATIC PERSONS ONE CAN FIND ANYWHERE. THE WEALTHY, WELL BORN CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES IS FAR MORE UNAPPROACHABLE BY HIS INFERIORS THAN THE ARISTOCRAT OF ANY OTHER LAND.

This is especially true in New England, but the same applies to every part of the country. As this patriciate, which secures a stronger and stronger hold on the country's destinies, is especially British, the hold of Great Britain on America is bound to maintain a relation of EVER INCREASING STRENGTH AND INTIMACY. This may be due to no special desire, to no special good will. The countries simply can't help themselves.

ɔlic and Private nterest In the Railroads.

By CHARLES A. PROUTY, Interstate Commerce Commissioner.

EVERY discussion of the railroad subject should begin with a clear apprehension of the problem. The railway has come to take the place of a public highway, and SOME METHOD MUST BE FOUND TO MAKE IT SUCH. This means that the government must see to it that our railways are open to all members of the public ALIKE and that the charges made for their use are reasonable. We must, I think, go still further and see that the facilities provided are adequate.

But these highways, while public in their use, are PRIVATE IN OWNERSHIP, and the capital invested has been put there upon the representation that it shall be allowed to earn a return. While, therefore, the government must protect the citizen in the use of these avenues of transportation, it must also protect the individual in the enjoyment of his property.

This is obvious to all. What is not always so clearly apprehended is THE DANGER OF DETERRING CAPITAL FROM SEEKING THIS FORM OF INVESTMENT IN THE FUTURE.

IF THE DEMANDS UPON OUR RAILWAYS ARE TO BE MET, ENORMOUS SUMS MUST BE EXPENDED IN EXTENSIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS. THESE EXPENDITURES CANNOT BE MADE OUT OF EARNINGS. THEY MUST COME LARGELY FROM NEW MONEY DRAWN FROM THE INVESTING PUBLIC. THE ABILITY TO OBTAIN THIS NOW AND HEREAFTER WILL DEPEND UPON THE CONFIDENCE WHICH MEN HAVE IN THE SECURITY OF THEIR INVESTMENT.

It is not enough that earnings are ample today if they are likely to be UNDULY reduced tomorrow. Every system of regulation should therefore assure capital of just treatment.

Labor's Right to Resist Injunctions.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS, President of the American Federation of Labor.

THE injunctions as issued against workmen are NEVER USED OR ISSUED AGAINST ANY OTHER CITIZENS OF OUR COUNTRY. It is an attempt to deprive citizens of our country, when these citizens are workmen, of the right of trial by jury. It is an effort to fasten an offense against them when they are innocent of any wrongdoing. It is an INDIRECT ASSERTION OF A PROPERTY RIGHT IN MEN when these men are workmen engaged in a lawful effort to protect or advance their lawful rights and interests.

The injunction as issued in trade disputes is to MAKE OUTLAWS of men when they are not even charged with doing things in violation of law, state or national.

THE WRIT OF INJUNCTION IS IN ITSELF A BENEFICENT WRIT FOR THE PROTECTION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS, BUT IT NEVER WAS INTENDED AND NEVER SHOULD BE APPLIED TO DEPRIVE MEN OF THEIR PERSONAL RIGHTS OR THE RIGHTS OF MAN'S OWNERSHIP OF HIMSELF.

Labor asks no immunity for any man, workman or other, who may be guilty of unlawful or criminal conduct. But we do insist that when a workman is charged with a crime he shall be tried by the SAME process of law as every other citizen.

It may not be amiss to sound a word of warning and advice to such of the RAMPANT, VINDICTIVE AND GREEDY EMPLOYERS who seek to rob the working people of our country of their lawful and constitutional rights by the UNWARRANTED injunction process. The full power of labor has never yet been exercised in defense of its rights; IT IS NOT WISE TO COMPEL ITS EXERCISE.

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Sections 51 and 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and by said section 52 as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

SATURDAY,

the 19th Day of September,

1908, AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M., at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 1.—THIRTY-ONE AND THREE-QUARTER ACRES OF THE TRACT OF LAND CALLED "STRAWBERRY PLAINS," being the residue of land which was conveyed by Resley M. Garrett and wife to John J. Garrett by deed dated the 25th day of April, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 49, folio 17, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, Md. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assssment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said John J. Garrett.

No. 2.—LOT NUMBER THREE THOUSAND AND TWENTY-SIX IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association as recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, page 800, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the same lot of ground which was conveyed to Upton Cuppett by Clarence E. Michaels et al. by deed dated the 21st day of January, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 394, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Upton Cuppett.

No. 3.—LOTS NUMBERS THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO AND THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, folio 800, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and being the same lots which were conveyed to Lydia S. Swearingen by Mountain Lake Park Association by deed dated the 8th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 213, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said lots are located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lydia S. Swearingen.

No. 4.—LOT NUMBER FOURTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, folio 800, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the one of same lots which were conveyed to Wiley W. and Stella N. Welling by Margaret E. Baldwin by deed dated the 23rd day of October, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 281, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said lot is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the year 1906 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Wiley W. and Stella N. Welling.

No. 5.—ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF THREE-QUARTERS OF AN ACRE, located in Crellin, in District No. 14 of said Garrett county, and more particularly described as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of the Preston Railroad and running thence North 86½ degrees West, 194 feet to a stake, thence West 9½ degrees North, 200 feet to a pine stump, thence South 75 degrees East, 241½ feet to a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of said railroad, thence 25½ degrees West, 166½ feet to the beginning, being the same land which was conveyed by John Connell et al. to Lula B. Loraw by deed dated the 26th day of February, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lula B. Loraw.

No. 6.—PART OF LOT NUMBER TWENTY ON THE PLAT OF LAKE VIEW, recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 10, folio 692, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and more particularly described as follows: Beginning for said part of Lot No. 20 on Second Avenue at the corner of Lot No. 19 and running with said Second Avenue 50 feet, then parallel with the line of Lot No. 21, 120 feet to an alley, then with said alley 50 feet to the line of Lot No. 19, and then with said line 120 feet to the beginning, containing 6000 square feet, and being the same parcel of land which was conveyed by James S. Broadwater et al. to Edwin F. Smonse by deed dated the 4th day of September, 1896, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 30, folio 474, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1905 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Edwin F. Smouse.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

H. R. DEWITT,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., August 28, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

WOOD'S SEEDS.
Best qualities obtainable.

Winter or Hairy Vetch

makes not only one of the largest-yielding and best winter feed and forage crops you can grow, but is also one of the best of soil-improvers, adding more nitrogen to the soil than any other winter crop.

Wood's Descriptive Fall Catalogue gives full information about this valuable crop; also about all other for Fall planting. Catalogue mailed free on request. Write for it.

Farm & Garden Seeds

T. W. WOOD & SONS,
Seedsmen, - Richmond, Va.

Don't Preach About Home Trade and at the same time send your orders for job printing out of town. Your home printer can do your work just as good, and in nine cases out of ten he can beat the city man's prices, because he pays much less for running expenses. By sending your next printing order to this office you'll be better satisfied all around, and you'll be keeping the money at home.

For Sale.

Arnold cottage, at Mt. Lake Park, Md; 13 rooms and attic; used as boarding house and has good patronage; high ground; splendid location; two blocks from new auditorium; city water; one of the best built houses in the Park; about 75 feet of porches. Will exchange for smaller property. A good bargain. Address F. P. Arnold, Mt. Lake Park, Md.

We have just receive a car load of Extra Clear Red Cedar Shingles direct from the Pacific Coast. C. M. RATHBUN & SONS, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 22

(Benj. A. Richmond, Cumberland, Md., and Fred. A. Thayer, Oakland, Md., Solicitors.)

Stoyer Run Coal Company

TRUSTEE-MORTGAGEE'S FORECLOSURE SALE

OF VALUABLE

COAL MINES

AND

Village Property

AT

Stoyer, Garrett County, Md.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa., Trustee-Mortgagee.

By virtue of the power of sale to the undersigned mortgagee, a corporation, as set out in the mortgage from the STOYER RUN COAL COMPANY of Garrett county, Maryland, to it, dated the first day of April, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, page 46, of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Md., default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay said moneys secured by said mortgage when due, the said THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia, Pa., in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage, will, on

SATURDAY,

The 12th Day of September,

1908, at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett county, Md., commencing at twelve o'clock, noon, sell at public sale as a whole coal and mining plant, all the real, leasehold and personal property, rights, franchises and privileges of said Stoyer Run Coal Company, particularly described and set out in the mortgage aforesaid, the same being more particularly described as follows:

First—All that piece of ground lying near Stoyer in said county, being a part of a tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

resurveyed for William W. Hoye July 13th, 1859, described as follows: Beginning for said part at a stone marked "X" standing near the East margin of the county road at Stoyer and South 25 degrees East, 181½ feet from a hemlock tree, which stands at the end of the first line of a part of said tract called "Addition to Paradise" which was conveyed by William Waltmore to John P. Stoyer, by deed dated March 7th, 1892, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 19, folio 355 of said land records, and running thence South 55 degrees East, 153 feet, South 35 degrees West, 191 feet to the north limits of the Western Maryland Railroad Company's right of way and with said limit North 61½ degrees West, 92 feet, North 25½ degrees East, 240 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ ths of an acre more or less.

Second—All that other part of the tract of land called

"Addition to Paradise,"

aforesaid lying at said Stoyer, beginning for the same at a stake standing North 55 degrees West, 40 feet from the aforesaid planted stone marked "X," standing at the beginning of the first parcel just above described, and running thence North 83½ degrees West, 66 feet to a planted stone marked "2" then North 25½ degrees West, 300 feet, South 82 degrees West, 127 feet to a large stone marked "X" then South 20 degrees East, 165 feet to the northern limits of right of way of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, then with said limits in an easterly direction about 190 feet to the intersection of a line drawn South 25½ degrees West, from the beginning thence reversing said line North 25½ degrees East, 243 feet to the beginning, containing five acres more or less.

Third—All that other part of said tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

beginning for the same at a point on the southern limits of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is South 25½ degrees West, 279 feet from the beginning of the second parcel just above described, and running thence South 25½ degrees West, 240 feet to a stake standing on the north side of the North Branch of the Potomac River thence up the said River North 28½ degrees West 162 feet to the mouth of Stoyer Run, then North 43 degrees West, 179 feet to the south limits of the right of way of said railroad, and with it, in an easterly direction, about 250 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ths of an acre, more or less.

Fourth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under which said lots and leased land are adjacent to and near the three parcels just above described, being the same lots and premises, which were leased by and described in the lease from John P. Stoyer and wife to H. M. Datesman dated the 24th day of June, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 32, of said Land Records, to which lease reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the same.

Military Lots Nos. 203 & 199,

Fifth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under a tract of land known as lying West of Stover in district No. 8 of Garrett county, which is particularly described in and leased by a lease for the same from the Hazard Coal and Coke Company to Harris M. Datesman, dated July 31st, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 219, of said Land Records. For a more particular description of which property reference is made to said lease.

"Addition to Paradise,"

All the above described parcels of real and leasehold property being particularly referred to and conveyed by a deed from William H. Thomas, Trustee, to the said Stoyer Run Coal Co., dated the 15th day of June, 1905, and recorded among said Land Records in Folio E. Z. T. No. 49, p. 531.

Sixth—All and singular the personal property of the said Stoyer Run Coal Company owned by it at the time of said mortgagor since acquired by it, situate at or in said village of Stoyer or at or in the coal mines at said place and upon the aforesaid properties or used in connection with said coal mines and mining plant of said coal company, consisting principally, but not wholly of the following, viz.: 61 tons thirty six inch guage mine cars, twenty three tons of steel rails, one set of Fairbank's track scales, one full set of blacksmith tools, a large lot of mining tools, two mules and harness, two large boilers with pumps, several engines and all appliances appurtenant thereto, all trainways, hoists, gas engines, mine props, and all other tools, appliances and equipment constituting a first class plant for the mining and shipping of coal, together with all other goods and chattels and personal property of said mortgagor now owned by it and situate on any of the aforesaid properties.

Seventh—All the corporate franchises, rights and privileges of said mortgagor, and all rights in connection with said property and coal mines and coal thereunder given by the aforesaid deeds and leases.

Said fee simple properties are improved by one large two and a half story superintendent's house, twenty two-story houses or cottages for miners' dwellings, twelve large shanties, one large store building 60 by 20 feet deep with dwelling attached and office room, one storehouse, ice house, magazines, stable for twelve head of mules, coal tipples, blacksmith shop, dumps and tramways.

The mines are said to have a coal area of about FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ACRES of coal with three mine openings. Mine No. 1 is in the Lower Kittanning vein of about 4½ feet coal. Mine No. 2 is in the Masontown Seam with a vein of about 6 feet. Mine No. 3 is worked by plane with engine and is in the Upper Freeport Seam.

These mines lie on the Western Maryland Rail Road and have a siding costing over $2,000.00. Said mines are equipped with modern machinery, engines, pumps, boilers, tramways, hoists, etc. The storeroom is a fine stand for a store.

All the aforegoing will be sold as ONE WHOLE PLANT, including all the aforesaid real, leasehold, personal and mixed property, the same being open to inspection by purchasers without warranty by the Mortgagee-Trustee as to contents, quality or otherwise.

Reference is hereby made to the terms of the said recorded Mortgage as to the power of the Trustee-Mortgagee to adjourn the sale, the right of purchasers to use bonds in part payment of purchase money, and other provisions affecting the sale.

TERMS OF SALE.—$1000 cash on day of sale and the balance within ten days after the ratification of the sale by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, subject to such terms as may be prescribed by the Court, or announced by the Trustee at the time of sale.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Trustee and Mortgagee.
WM. R. NICHOLSON, President.

ORDER NISI.

Ada Bowser, et al., vs. Cyrus Bowser.
No. 1582 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 28th day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Amos Bowser, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $305.0

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

William Hachman, et al., vs. Caroline Goutz et al.
No. 1540 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Edward H. Sincell and Gilmor S. Hamill, trustees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $22[illegible].

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves in debted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator.
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements, location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $90 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

Subscribe for the Republican.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1908. NUMBER 27

COMMITTED MURDEROUS ASSAULT

Arthur Fazenbaker, After Breaking [illegible] Wife's Leg and Jaw, Flees.

A report comes to Oakland from District No. 11, located along the Allegany county line, of the misdoings of one Arthur Fazenbaker, a resident of that section of Garrett county, which if true, should land the man in the penitentiary for life or dangle him at the end of a rope.

The offense alleged against Fazenbaker is that on Monday of this week he committed a murderous assault upon his wife by beating and treating her so cruelly that her leg and jaw were both broken, after which he left the community in company with a woman, also named Fazenbaker, who is supposed to be at the bottom of the trouble between Fakenbaker and his wife.

The man and woman are known to have gone to Elk Lick, Pa., where they will probably remain several days and where the Garrett county officers will likely find them.

Went After Christian Science.

A western exchange has the following to say of the doctrine of Christian Science:

"Christian Science is almost as great a swindle as Dowieism, but because both sail under the cloak of religion, false though it be, people hesitate to criticise or interfere with them. Bishop Underwood, in a meeting at Minneapolis the other day, called a spade a spade with a frankness as surprising as it was refreshing. "Christian Science is pantheism pure and simple, and is the greatest farce of the age," said the bishop. "Thousands of upright men and women have been deceived into accepting the faith and should be rescued. Thousands of deaths have been caused by this doctrine and it is high time that someone was punished for this loss of life. This cult is trying its best to destroy the gospel of Christ and the increase in its following is alarming. It does not ask honesty, truth, virtue. It relieves man of all moral responsibility. A man can do what he will and then say it is not wrong for there is no sin. Christian Science is the most unchristian, unscientific, unreasonable doctrine [illegible] the Christian world today."

Fatally Injured by Blast.

William Breathwaite, aged 33 years, of Bloomington, Md., employed in the Davis Coal and Coke Co. mines, was so badly injured while at work Thursday that he lived only an hour afterwards. He misunderstood a signal given by men in another room who were putting off a blast to tear away a coal wall or partition that separated his room from theirs and returned too soon, before the second explosion took place, blowing him through the partition. He leaves a wife and three small children.

See The Republican for Job Printing

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. J. B. SHOUP.

The wife of our beloved brother, Rev. J. B. Shoup, of Fitzgerald, Ga., fell to sleep on the 25th of August, aged 63 years and about 3 months. Mrs. Shoup was the eldest daughter of the late Rev. Prof. Henry Ziegler, President and Professor of Pastoral Theology in Selin's Grove Institute, Selin's Grove, Pa. She was united in holy wedlock to Rev. Shoup forty years ago. There came from this union eight children. Three of them preceded her to the spirit land. Four daughters and one son survive the mother. Mrs. Shoup has been in ill health for many years, and suffered greatly during the past six months. Her death was hastened, doubtless, by the abduction of her lovely grandchild, Genevieve Shoup, four or five months ago. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to brother Shoup and his children in this their sad bereavement. May the God of mercy and of peace abide with them and may His loving spirit cheer and comfort them in the hour of discouragement and sorrow. E. M.

REV. DANIEL LUKE MOON.

Luke, as we were accustomed to call him, was the son of Abraham Moon, whose home is near Gorman and at the time of his death was twenty-six years, two months and nineteen days old. He became ill while performing his duties as paster of Circleville charge in Pendleton county, West Virginia, and died on the twenty-ninth of August. The funeral services were conducted in the home church, Oak Grove, Sept. 1st, by Dr. R. B. Ward. Professor F. B. Trotter, formerly of West Virginia Wesleyan College, Rev. J. H. Funk, Rev. E. J. Westfall, and the pastor, Rev. E. P. Idleman, each made a brief address. The deceased would have completed the the arts course at West Virginia Wesleyan College this year. To those who were not acquainted with him it may seem that his life work had hardly begun, yet we who were associated with him in school, feel that his life was not spent in vain. His indefatigable efforts were an inspiration to us; his loyalty to every institution of the college, with which he was connected, and especially to the church of which he was a member, won for him the admiration and respect of all, and we can think of no trait of character more prominent and forceful in his life than the manly tenderness which bound us to him as with cords of steel. Chief among his well merited honors was the presidency of the Young Men's Christian Association. He was unaminously elected president of his literary society for the coming term. Be assured that D. L. Moon will live for many years at Wesleyan College.

A FELLOW STUDENT.

When you come to town don't forget to call at the Gold Mine Store. Candy, tobaccos, fishing tackle, 2 bottles pop for 5c. Geo. M. Mason, Prop'r.

ROAD MEETING SATURDAY NIGHT

Was Held Under the Auspices of the Oakland Board of Trade.

Last Satuday night, pursuant to a call issued by the Oakland Board of Trade, a meeting of the residents of Oakland and those residing in the county who happened to be in town at the time, was held in the court house, the purpose of the meeting being to select a committee of representative citizens to go to Baltimore to meet and confer with the State Highway Commission relative to the roads to be improved in this county at State expense.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. G. Semmes Hamill, president of the Board of Trade, and Mr. W. R. Offutt was the secretary.

In addressing the meeting Mr. Hamill stated that a movement was on foot in Allegany county whereby the residents, or at least those belonging to an automobile club in Cumberland, hoped to influence the Good Road Commission to expend the entire amount apportioned to Garrett county for the improvement of its roads upon the Old National Road, leading from the Allegany county line on the east to the Pennsylvania State line on the west, thus giving automobilists and others touring the country a straight and good road through one edge of the county that would be of no material benefit to the great majority of the citizens and tax payers in reaching the county seat or in fact any other section of the county.

Others present at the meeting also spoke along the same line, the general concensus of opinion being that the improvements to the roads should begin at Oakland and work north to the old National Road by the most practical route, thus benefitting the largest number of home people. The resolutions adopted at the good roads meeting held on June 3rd, at which time the Good Roads Commission as well as residents from every section of the county were present, was referred to and the committee named to meet the commission in Baltimore was instructed to urge the Commission to follow the route as laid down in the resolution referred to, which reads as follows:

Resolved, By the people of Garrett county (all the districts being represented), in mass meeting assembled, that it is the sense of the citizens of the said county that the road to be built under the direction of the State Highway Commission in Garrett county should begin at the Northwestern turnpike and run from thence through the town of Oakland, the county seat of said county, by the most practical route to the National Road, and that this conclusion of the people be submitted to the said Highway Commission upon the occasion of its visit to Oakland on June 3rd, 1908.

As the committee to meet the Commission in Baltimore, the following were selected: Dr. E. H. Bartlett, Messrs. G. S. Hamill, E. H. Sincell, C. E. Ellithorp, D. E. Offutt, F. A. Thayer, Austin Brown, A. C. Mason, S. T. Jones, William Miller, G. S. Hamill, Jr., U. M. Stanton, W. McCulloh Brown and Dr. W. W. Davis.

At the time the Saturday night meeting was held the impression had gotten out that the Commission in Baltimore would meet on Wednesday of this week and would receive the Garrett county delegates along with the Allegany county people. A telephone message from THE REPUBLICAN office to Mr. C. M. Bowerman, Governor Crothers' secretary, Monday morning, brought the information that the claims of other counties other than Garrett and Allegany would be considered Wednesday, but that due notice would be given the local people when to appear in Baltimore, hence the committee is waiting and will go to Baltimore when summoned.

Brookside an Dairy Farm Interesting Place.

Brookside Farm is one of the most interesting places imaginable judging from reports brought from that dairy ranch by A. S. Ingles and others of the Whyel party who recently visited there. It is located near Mt. Lake Park, and much time and attention is given to the raising of fine stock for dairy purposes.

Here they have over 100 cows and nearly 1,500 pounds of butter are turned out every month. The owner of the farm, a Mr. McBride of Cleveland, rents the place to a Mrs. Kirkpatrick of Philadelphia, who has a 20-year lease on it. She has the operation of the farm under her own supervision. There are about 100 tenants on the farm, and for their use alone, 40 pounds of the butter above mentioned is used daily. Mrs. Kirkpatrick gets 40 cents a pound for this butter, the year 'round, and the Brookside daily products are noted all over that section.

Mr. Ingles was much impressed with the place, which is a small village in itself. The drives are beautiful in that section and great care has been given to that feature of the place, as well as all the other things that goes to make a fine dairy farm place. — Uniontown Standard.

GORTNER.

Mr. Chas. Shaffer, of Washington, D. C., is spending his vacation at his old home near this place.

Walter Baker, of Gassaway, W. Va., spent Sunday here as the guest of J. H. Sanders.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dodge are visiting relatives at Ashtabula, O., this week.

D. M. Schrock and Geo. Killius drove down to Keyser, W. Va., Monday, where they will spend a few days among the peach orchards.

Rae Carr, of McHenry, was calling on Miss May Sanders Sunday.

Ethel, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sander, who died on Sunday after an illness of only a few days, was buried at the Gortner cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. S. J. and Mrs. D. Slabach are on the sick list this week.

Sunday school at 10 a. m. next Sunday. WILLIE.

THE MINES AT WORK.

A few months ago the mining industry of Maryland and West Virginia was at an alarmingly low state. In this section many of the mines were closed, or partly so, and hundreds of miners were out of employment. Since the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission removing the fifteen cent differential from the small vein coal in Maryland, there has been a marked change for the better. A large number of new openings for the development of the small vein have been made, and the old openings that were closed in consequence of the operators being unable to compete with West Virginia and Pennsylvania coals by reason of the charge of fifteen cents upon every ton of small vein coal shipped from the Maryland fields to tide water, have been reopened. The monthly pay rolls of the various coal companies throughout the region evidence the return of prosperity in the coal industry in Maryland. In the coals field of West Virginia there has also been a gratificating change. Referring to these facts the Baltimore American of yesterday editorially says:

In no other section of the country has resumption in industrial enterprises, since the demoralization occasioned by last year's panic, been brought more nearly to complete realization than in the Western Maryland and West Virginia coal, iron and coke area. Practically all the mines of both states are in operation. The railroads serving this great industrial area have added extra crews in order to handle the increased traffic. The tonnage output from some of the mines for August was nearly double that for July. In this area there is no longer talk of idle cars; on the contrary, business is again being hampered by a scarcity of cars. All branches of business, including that of the retail merchants, are experiencing again something very close akin to the full pulse beat of high pressure prosperity.

Not only is there general resumption in this mining region, with which Baltimore capital and enterprise are so largely associated, but many newly planned development schemes are in process of realization. Several hitherto unworked coal properties, in this instance involving an area of 3,500 acres, are about to be developed. Another coal tract, estimated to contain 25,000,000 tons of coal, is to be made productive. Some immensely valuable timber lands, located partly in Maryland and partly in West Virginia, have recently changed hands, and it is expected that both paper pulp and building enterprises will be developed upon these transferred forest areas. A single lumber company, operating in the West Virginia field, has acquired forest lands embracing an area of 200,000 acres. The manufacture of glass had become, prior to the 1907 panic, an industry of vast extensiveness in West Virginia. Many of the glass plants were compelled to shut down during the latter part of last year, but practically all the glass factories in the state had resumed before the close of August.

The restoration of business to its old time swing in the Western Maryland and West Virginia mining regions is a fact of immense significance to Baltimore. With the prosperity of that region the commercial and capitalistic interests of this city are closely interwoven.

Killed at Gormania.

The body of James Seamon, aged 33 years, of Blaine, W. Va., was found lying on the tracks, between the rails at Gormania, W. Va., Sunday morning. It is thought he was struck by a train Saturday night and that his body was lying on the track until found Sunday morning. He was a miner, unmarried, and leaves a mother and several brothers in Blaine, W. Va., to which place his remains were taken.

FANCY VEST OVERLOOKED BY SNEAK THIEF.

William E. McMillan Is Victim of Meanest Sneak Thief Ever on Train.

From a recent issue of the Pittsburg Gazette-Times we clip the following concerning an erstwhile Garrett county lumber operator, whose holdings were located over on the Potomac valley near Bayard, the gentleman mentioned in the story being Mr. W. E. McMillan who is remembered very well by many people of District No. 8 and also by some of the Oakland business and professional men.

The Gazette-Times' story is as follows:

"William E. McMillan, President of the McMillan Lumber Company, was the victim of perhaps the most unique, certainly the meanest sneak thief, who ever entered a Pullman car. While en route from Baltimore to Pittsburg, over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, the thief stole every stitch of clothing possessed by Mr. McMillan, while the latter slept. The lumber king, who weighs 200 puonds, had retired wearing only a little athletic undershirt. He had this when he was waked yesterday morning, and in addition he had been left his fancy vest. Even his shoes and socks as well as his roll of money—$250 and about $250 in jewelry—were gone. Nor did he have his hat.

"Mr. McMillan set the porters to work to find the clothing, thinking that some joker friend had taken it, but it was not to be found. Then he tried to borrow a pair of trousers, but there was not a man on the train who weighed over 140.

"Finally the Pullman conductor announced that he had three pairs of extra trousers. Mr. McMillan split two of the pairs trying to get into them, even partly, the third pair held good, and aided by a sheet the lumber king was enabled to reach a telephone booth in the baggage shed of the Union station, where he sent home fo. aid.

"'I am a peaceable man, and I don't want to meet the man who stole my clothes,' said Mr. McMillan. 'If I do, I'm afraid I'll kill him. It doesn't look good to come racing into a big city with nothing on but a short undershirt and a fancy vest, and a lot of splinter weights, into whose trousers you could not get one leg, offering you advice.'"

Bids Were Lacking

The Bradley Farm, adjoining Oakland on the west and consisting of nearly three hundred acres, was offered at public sale last Monday morning by Mr. William E. Walsh, attorney, of Cumberland. It being understood that no bid of less than $10,000 for the property would be considered would-be purchasers held aloof and after an hour's work on the part of Auctioner Fringer the sale was called off.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

LEADING MEN OF MARYLAND.

Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd Has the Distinction of Being One of Them.

Under the head line "Leading Men of Maryland,', the Baltimore American Star, the new lively afternoon newspaper of that city, in its issue of Friday, contained a most excellent double column cut of Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd of Cumberland, accompanied by the following brief sketch of Maryland's distinguished jurist:

"Although a native of Virginia whence come so many distinguished residents of this state, Judge A. Hunter Boyd has lived so long in Maryland that he practically passes as a son of the soil, and has resided in Cumberland for 37 years. Judge Boyd was born on July 15, 1849, and is the son of a Presbyterian minister, the Rev. A. H. H. Boyd, his mother having been Miss Eleanor Williams. His career at Washington College is said to have been marked by a preference for the study of abstruse subjects, and he early displayed a marked aptitude for the law, which eventually placed him in the front rank of his profession.

"On graduating from Washington and Lee University, in 1871, he was admitted to the bar in Virginia, and in the same year settled in Cumberland, being elected state's attorney on the Democratic ticket in 1876, but declined a renomination. Later, however, he was elevated to the bench, and in 1907 was designated by Governor Warfield as chief judge of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, in place of the late Judge McSherry. Prior to that he has presided over the Fourth district, which includes the counties of Allegany, Washington and Garrett.

"Judge Boyd married Miss Bessie Thruston, daughter of Mr. George Thruston, of Cumberland, in 1874, and has several children, one named for him being an attorney in this city."

Fairmont Booze Statistics.

Five thousand and ninety gallons of beer were shipped into Fairmont and vicinity Saturday. There was a marked decrease in the amount of beverage sent into Fairmont proper over the same day of the week previous, on account of the other Saturday being pay day. Three carloads were shipped by one brewery of a nearby town into the local mining region.

Following is the list of the shipments:

Shipments to Fairmont, 142 eight gallon kegs and 68 cases containing three dozen pint bottles each.

Shipment to Grays Flats, 150 eight gallon kegs and 50 cases containing thirty-six pint bottles each.

Shipment to Montana, 128 eight gallon kegs and 46 cases containing same as above.

Shipments to New England, 124 eight gallon kegs.—Fairmont Times, Aug. 31.

Subscribe for The Republican.

DIXON & KELSO

Have Replenished Their

FEED AND GRAIN

Stock and can Name the Following Prices:

Corn, Oats and Barley Chop	per hundred	$1.65
Wheat Bran	" "	1.45
White Middlings	" "	1.65
Cracked Corn	" "	1.90
Sucrene Dairy Feed	" "	1.40
The best White Oats we have had for years, per bushel		.60
Winter Wheat Patent Flour in wood, per bbl.		5.50
" " " " " 24½lb bags		.70

Our Feed is put up in 100 lb. bags and not in 94 lb. sacks, whichh some of our competitors are selling.

Fertilizer! Two cars Wheat Fertilizer unloaded this week. Have sufficient stock to supply all comers.

JARS FOR APPLE BUTTER!

Have about 3000 gallons Stone Jars to offer cheap.

P. S.---We can use a few hundred bushels of Potatoes at 75c per bushel.

Come and See

DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL

CLOTHING

NOW COMING IN.

The best stock I have ever had. Fine line of BOYS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in the best styles. Plenty to select from.

And don't forget, I have the best line of SHOES in the county.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

A CHANGE IN THE CABINET IN PROSPECT

Rumor Current That Attorney General Bonaparte is to Retire.

HOT IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Summer in Washington is a Season Excessively Torrid.—Replacing The Sand Stone Columns Of The Treasury Building With Granite Monoliths.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Again there is a rumor of a change in the cabinet, but it fails to arouse any special interest here. In Washington a rumor of a cabinet change is an every-day affair, and for that matter, changes in the cabinet themselves are almost every-day affairs. The last rumor is to the effect that Mr, Bonaparte is to retire from the cabinet after the election in November, and is to be succeeded by Wade Ellis, attorney general of Ohio, and the accredited author of the greater part of the Republican national platform. This is not the first time that it has been rumored that Mr. Bonaparte would leave the cabinet, and neither, of course, is it the first time he was called upon to deny it.

Mr. Bonaparte is now holding his second position in the cabinet. He entered that body as Secretary of the Navy when Paul Morton resigned in 1906. Last year Mr. Bonaparte succeeded Moody as attorney general, Moody going to the Supreme bench. Bonaparte is the third attorney general under Roosevelt, his predecessors having been Knox and Moody,

All told, counting transfers, there have been twenty-seven members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet. He has had two secretaries of state; three secretaries of the treasury; three secretaries of war; two secretaries of the interior, five secretaries of the navy; one secretary of agriculture; five postmasters general, three attorneys general; and three secretaries of commerce and labor.

Did you ever spend a midsummer in Washington? If not, follow the justly celebrated advice of Punch—"Don't!". Talk about deserted villages. Midsummer in Washington has but one known rival and that is Washington at the time of the Chistmas holiday! Washington is hot in summer, just plain hot. We don't suffer much from humidity. We have it at times, but it is not a regular thing. We have broad streets here and these streets are paved with asphalt, and after the sun has beaten down on these pavements, the heat from below equals the heat from above. It is a favorite pastime for the small boys and the village wags to astonish and startle visitors by cooking an egg on Pennsylvania avenue. The asphalt becomes so soft by midday that it is dangerous to step upon it. Horses' hoofs sink into it as if was so much tar. A recent striking instance of this was afforded when a transfer company undertook to remove one of the giant monoliths from the freight warehouse to the treasury building. Fair progress was made until the asphalt was struck on Pennsylvania avenue. Then the wheels of the great truck simply sank into the asphalt, and twenty-four horses were unable to budge it. There was nothing left to do but to wait until the asphalt had hardened during the cool hours of the night. Just at daylight the next morning, twenty-two horses were attached to the truck and succeeded in moving it merrily along.

There are thirty of these monoliths to be placed in position along the east front of the Treasury Building. They are of granite and are duplicates of sandstone columns now being taken down. Each weighs about twenty-eight tons, and each cost about $5,000. The new monoliths are expected to last practically forever, but the old sand-stone columns have been crumbling for the last few years, and it was a question of a few years more until they would have become so disintegrated by the elements that they would have become a real danger. There is a very general desire on the part of Washington people to make some monumental use of the columns. Many and various suggestions are being made. Some desire them arranged in the form of a court of honor in one of the parks. Another has urged that they be used as an ornament in the White Lot back of the White House. A third suggestion is that they be set up along Pennsylvania avenue. The problem is in the hands of Col. Charles S. Bromwell superintendent of pubiic buildings and grounds.

Speaking of the use of old monoliths, some one has facetiously suggested that they might be placed on top of the lid that is being urged for the national capital. It is generally acknowledged by Washingtonians and by Washington visitors that if there is one thing Washington needs more than anything else, it's a lid.

Sunday here is a day of riotous excitement. People stroll recklessly, morning and evening, up and down Connecticut and Pennsylvania avenues, and along "F" street, and with utmost abandonment, gaze in at the shop windows and recklessly indulged in soda water and ice cream. Young men have been seen boldly to enter cigar stores and other evil resorts and making their exits viciously puffing cigars and cigarettes.

The street cars run here all day Sunday, and the church bells add their clamor to the din of this day, that should be kept quiet and sacred as a day of rest. In view of the uproar and disturbances that ever mark the Sabbath day here, several bills were introduced at the last session of Congress, providing for a special lid. None of them succeeded in passing. It is expected, however, that something definite will be accomplished next session. It must be admitted that the present state of affairs is all but intolerable.

One of the drawbacks of the merit system applied to the civil service is the fact that it will keep a man in office as long as he is efficient, and then when it ought to let him go he is found to be too old and too unfitted for his government work to be good for anything in any civil line of employment. The result is that all the departments are full of men and women who have given good service in the past, but who are now a drag upon the work and who keep out the younger men and women who would be a help. Neither the heads of the departments nor the members of Congress have the heart to put these faithful old servants out, and yet they haven't been able to agree upon just what to do with them. All sorts of retirement and pension plans have been formulated and advocated, but when one doesn't run contrary to the Constitution it is found to be impracticable or indequate. Many of the clerks have no other means of support than their monthly stipend from the government and are without either friends or relative who could look after them until death relieved them of their burden. They simply can't be turned out to starve or die in a poorhouse. It is truly a delicate and pathetic problem and one rendered all the more difficult by the fact that few, if any, of the superannuates realize that their day of usefulness is over. They think they are just as good as they used to be, and, consequently are of no help in solving the problem that they present. Between the superannuates who persist in holding to their jobs and the younger clerks who are forever agitating increase in pay, the life of the heads of the departments and the Congressmen is far from being a happy one.

The U. S. Retirement Association an organization of clerks from the various government departments formed for the purpose of solving the problem, has now offered a prize of $150 for the best suggestion. The competition is open to all departmental clerks and it is hoped and expected that the solution will thus be found.

McKinley is always a name to conjure by, but it is to be doubted if it has added anything to the popularity of Representive William B. McKinley, of Illinois, who was the head and front of the Canton boom, and is now the chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee. McKinley is a little man with a big heart and a big pocketbook. He owns 500 miles of interurban railways in Illinois that turn so much money into his bank account that it troubles him to spend it. And he is a spender, too. He doesn't throw money away, but spends it like a gentleman and a prince. He is the best entertainer in Washington during the sessions of Congress. When anything good happens to anybody or anybody goes away or comes back, McKinley is sure to celebrate it with a superb dinner. He is a regular Santa Claus for thousands at Christmas. Presents just ooze out of him. He always subscribes to things. At his home his name is always put down on the list and then some one goes and tells him how much he is expected to give. He gives it invariably.

Nevertheless he is one of the most shrinkingly modest men you could find in ten states. Uncle Joe Cannon, who looks upon him as a son, played a mean joke on him when he first entered Congress. Cannon knew how modest the new Congressman was, but notwithstanding he called upon him to act as temporary speaker early in the session. McKinley nearly dropped dead when Cannon summoned him to the speaker's desk. Uncle Joe gave him no time to protest, but hurriedly left the chamber. The perspiration poured out of McKinley from every pore. But he was equal to the emergency. Calling one of his friends to his side, he said: "For God's sake make a motion to adjourn."

The friend took pity upon him and did so, and the House was adjourned almost before Uncle Joe's coat tails had disappeared through the swinging doors.

SAWDUST IS NOT WITHOUT ITS USES

Efforts to Convert it Into Paper Pulp, However, Are Not Successful.

Sawdust is one of the puzzling waste in lumbering operations. The wastes is serious, too, for the kerf—the part cut out by the saw in the mill and transformed into sawdust—always bears a rather high ratio to the boards obtained. In cutting thin stuff, one-fourth of the log, or even more, may be kerf.

Efforts to turn sawdust into pulp for the paper mill have usually been unsuccessful on account of mechanical difficulties in handling. In several European countries, however, a new way has been found of turning sawdust to account. The sawdust, chiefly pine and fir, is ground with millstones, exactly as old-time mills made cornmeal, or wheat or rye flour. Expensive machinery is not required, but it is necessary to take special precautions against fires which might start from sparks between the millstones.

Sawdust flour is sold to dynamite factories to be mixed with nitroglycerine and forms the body or absorbent for that high explosive. It is also in demand for the manufacture of cheap blotting papers. The mills in the Harz mountains, in Germany, an important manufacturing centre, are kept busy meeting this demand.

The price of the "flour', in Germany ranges from $7.50 to $12.50 a ton. It is shipped in bags, like meal, or in bales of about, 100 pounds made by means of high pressure.

FARMERS WILL NOT BE HOODWINKED.

The following from the Toledo, Ohio, Blade should be read by every farmer who is in doubt as to what he should do in the present campaign:

When Mr. Bryan made his appeal to the farmers of the country for contributions to finance the Democratic campaign he touched a match to a mine which promises for the third time to blow him into political oblivion

The average farmer has little fear of the "predatory corporations" which Bryan holds before him to scare him into voting the Democratic ticket. The farmer is making money; his acres are growing in value and he is getting good returns for his labor. Furthermore, he knows his business and is about the last man who can be gold-bricked. He is well informed, has opinions of his own, knows how to express them and is proof against the wiles of the most cunning politician.

The Blade is in receipt of an open letter to Mr. Bryan, written by a farmer in Tennessee who desires its publication in The Blade and who is not afraid to sign his name. We gladly give it space for we believe it expresses the sentiments of farmers generally, and coming from one of them has more force than if written by one not a farmer. Here it is:

Hon. W. J. Bryan, Lincoln, Neb.

Dear Sir:—I have read the appeal made by you and Mr. Kern for campaign funds. Your story of the contribution of the Swede farmer is very touching indeed—just the thing to "touch" other farmers with.

I am a farmer, but was born in Indiana—not in Sweden, and Johnny Kern wants money, as he most always does. But I thought since you had got to be a farmer you were better fixed, as most farmers are in good shape now, having made lots of money since 1896, and are still coining it, thanks to good crops and high prices.

Our cattle, hogs, corn and wheat, and most everything else we raise are higher now than ever and we get spot cash for the stuff. The only sort of farmers who are not making money are the fellows who do not raise anything to sell.

I am one of the thousand who could give your campaign fund a hundred dollars and hardly miss it, but I would rather give it to insure conditions to remain as they are I am not afraid of a single "predatory corporation" on the face of the earth as long as I get good prices and buy manufactured things, machinery, etc., cheaper than I used to buy them, and can ride on railroads cheaper than ever.

The corporations certainly have not the best of the farmer, whatever they may have of politicans.

Your own appeal for funds is proof that you know where the money is, and who has it, and you have the cheek to ask us to give it up to you to use to change conditions! Well you can't have it, Bre'r Bryan. I prefer to invest my $100 in a young mule—and not a Democratic mule either.

I am afraid you can never again raise as big a fund as you had in 1896, when silver trusts put up its big wad on your "steen-to-one proposition."

Yours truly,
D. W. STARNES.
Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

Send In Your Samples.

All land owners, in or near the Youghiogheny River valley, are requested to send samples of all the coal, iron ore, fireclay, kaolin, glass sand, lime and building stone, or other minerals found on their lands, to the office of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company, room 14, First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md., where they will be labeled for exhibiton.

H. P. TASKER,
General Manager.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. V. JOLLIFFE.

See The Republican for Job Printing

VILE PICTURE OF FASHIONABLE LIFE

Of the Stage. He Says, "in This Business Nothing is Given for Nothing.

Joseph Medill Patterson, son of R. W. Patterson, editor of the Chicago Tribune, socialist and eccentric, has written a book "A Little Brother of the Rich," in which the idle rich of New York and the stage life of Broadway are clouted to the place where the hero of the rival Fiske and Savage plays come from.

According to "A Little Brother of the Rich," every fashionable woman drinks to excess, is untrue to her marriage vows, is animated by absolutely no thought, except vulgar display, the gratification of animal passion and insatiate desire for money, and cares nothing for the means by which this money is obtained.

A single sentence expresses his opinion of the case, "Why," says a chorus girl to another, "don't I get along in the profession? I can sing better and dance better than 50 per cent of those who are striding away past me."

"Because, my dear," answered the other, "in this business nothing is given for nothing."

The hero of "A Little Brother of the Rich," if such a miserable, despicable character as Paul Potter, its principal masculine figure, can be called a hero, is introduced as a poor country boy working his way through college (Mr. Patterson is a Yale man). Because of his athletic prominence he is taken up by the richest and most fashionable of them all, Carl Wilmerding, apparently a thin disguise for a young millionaire who was disinherited some years ago for refusing to give up, at his father's command, the girl to whom he was engaged.

All the women in the book are untrue, all the men thieves, and all actors debauchers.

Joseph Medill Patterson was elected to the Legislature when 23 years old. Later he had charge of the editoriol page of the Tribune.

Patterson became an ardent advocate of E. F. Dunne, and when that gentleman was elected Mayor of Chicago on a municipal ownership platform, he appointed Patterson Commissioner of Public Works. After a year Patterson resigned, feeling that he was making no headway, and could make none under existing conditions against the evil and corruption surrounding his office.

He then announced in an open letter his conversion to Socialism and took the stump in an endeavor to excite a social revolution. As a means to this end he next became editor of the Chicago Daily Socialist. Several years ago he married the daughter of Harlow W. Higgenbotham, one of Chicago's richest and mort prominent citizens, and for many years a partner of Marshall Field.

Beware the Fly Pest.

Prof. Thomas B. Symons, State entomologist, in an address Saturday night before the Pleasant Hill Grange picnic at Arcadia, Baltimore county, spoke of the common house fly as a factor in disseminating intestinal diseases, especially typhoid fever and dysentery.

Dr. Symons believes the control of the pest of even greater importance than the mosquito, for there are more deaths from typhoid fever and dysentery than from malaria. He is conducting a campaign to have the people realize the importance of first preventing the breeding of flies and avoiding their access to filth and thence to food that is eaten.

"The abolition of flies will naturally involve some trouble and expense. In a town or thickly settled country, it will become necessary for general measures of cleanliness to be adopted to secure results, but in the isolated farmhouse the number of house flies may be greatly reduced by individual work. All accumulations in stables or barns should be collected, if not daily, at least once a week, and should either be disposed of on the farm or placed in either a pit or vault or in a screened inclosure at the side or end of the stable.

"Similar care should be taken in preventing closets or other filth from serving as a breeder place for the pest.

"Flies can be prevented from gaining access to the food by careful screening of houses to protect dining rooms and kitchens and by screening all food."

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of Claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
Schedule effective June 2, 1907.
OAKLAND.
*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *5.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.
Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address
THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

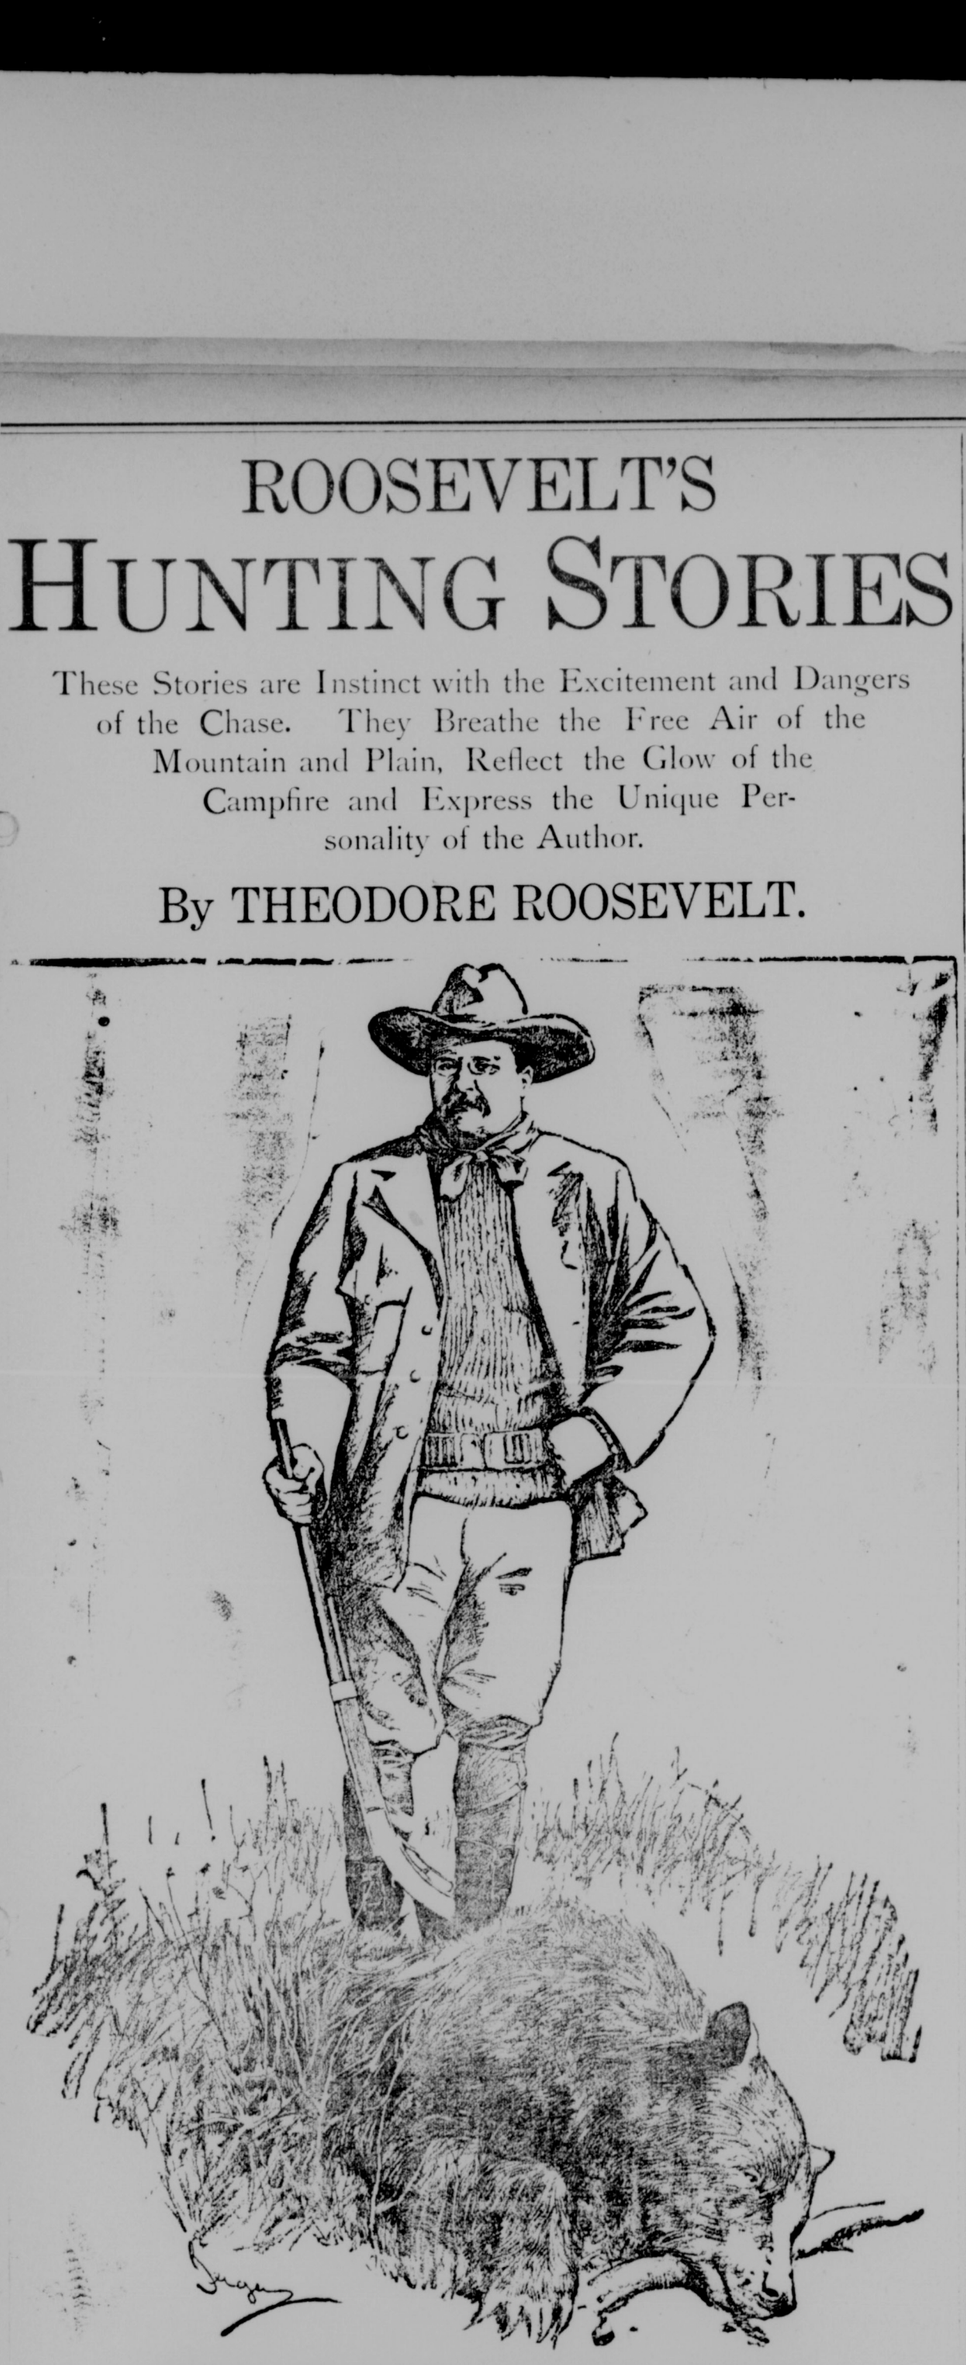
Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSSER,
Administrators.

ROOSEVELT'S
HUNTING STORIES

These Stories are Instinct with the Excitement and Dangers of the Chase. They Breathe the Free Air of the Mountain and Plain, Reflect the Glow of the Campfire and Express the Unique Personality of the Author.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.



ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING STORIES

Written by Himself

Illustrated by Parker and Jones, with one page of double column cuts by Berger and Ryder

Most interesting stories of outdoor life ever written.
Each story will be published complete.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S deal with the Scribners for the publication of his jungle hunting stories puts him at the top notch as a popular writer. Not even Mark Twain has received the princely sum of $2.00 a word for his writings, the price it is figured Roosevelt will be paid.

Will Begin in These Columns Shortly

The Spirit of Allegiance.

A Fourth of July Story
By EMMA ARCHER OSBORNE.

Copyright, 1907, by E. A. Coe.

THE street in which the McShanes dwelt was one of the least inviting of the lower west side. The long rows of old red brick buildings were ornate with nondescript collections of superfluous household articles thrust on to the fire escapes.

A boy, yelling vociferously to his kind in the street, five stories below, balanced his scantily clad little body across the iron railing of the McShane fire escape.

This was the lad's first pause since daybreak, since the young America of the neighborhood had emerged numerously, yet as one man, with crackers and joyous spontaneity, to hail with diabolical din the nation's natal day and to awake many a grownup to a profane realization of the hour.

"I SWEAR ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG."

He raised himself and took a long view of the street in either direction. He broke into a surprised exclamation.

"Gee-e-e!" he shouted. "Look at the flags!"

For the space of a few seconds the boy gazed delightedly. He seemed to forget the thrilling bangs that filled the air. Then he glanced quickly in the direction of a nearby schoolhouse.

"She's there, all right!" he exclaimed as he caught sight of a good sized gay bunting floating above the building.

A swish of skirts and a happy faced girl stood beside him.

"Who's there, and where?" she asked.

"Well, if girls don't ask the foolishest question!" sniffed the boy in undisguised scorn at the girl's query. "A flag ain't a 'who.'"

"Oh!" breathed the enlightened girl, with a smile. "'She's' a flag, is 'she'? But you'd better flag yourself in to breakfast. Mother's waiting for you."

She turned to go inside. The boy caught her.

"Say, Kate, we learned somethin' at school to say to the flag. Want to hear it?"

The boy was the brightest spot in Kate's prosaic life.

"Of course I want to hear it," she replied eagerly.

At once the boy assumed a military air. With body erect and dirty little heels in close contact, he raised a grimy hand in soldierly salute to a much befreckled forehead. Ignoring surroundings and apparently addressing the flag in the distance, he repeated clearly and in a high pitched boyish voice:

"'I swear allegiance to the flag and to the republic, for which it stands—one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.'"

He was immediately gathered into the girl's strong young arms.

"Terrance, my little man, you talk like the president," she exclaimed, proudly kissing the boy's red hair. "And you learned that in school? Oh, it's fine!"

She clasped him so tightly that patriotism was forced to cry out for liberty.

"Lem-me-go, lem-me-go!" roared Terrance, sputtering and wriggling from his sister's embrace. "Sure, I learnt it in school, but you needn't squeeze a feller to death about it," giving himself a reassuring shake.

"It's such a pretty speech," interrupted Kate, ignoring the uncomplimentary allusion to her sex, "that I'm going to fetch you something nice from Coney Island for learning it."

"Aw," blustered Terrance condescendingly and slipping through the window into the flat, with Kate in close pursuit, "'tain't nothin' 'cept what we say in school. Every mornin' one kid he dips the flag like this—see—an' the rest of us stand up like this—see—an' say it— Who you goin' with to Coney?" he asked abruptly, changing the subject. "Mike Peters?"

"Indeed I'm not," replied Kate with a disdainful toss of her head.

They joined their father and mother at the table.

As the family ate its breakfast Kate was bombarded with queries as to who was to accompany her to Coney.

Mike Peters and Kate's father were teamsters, and it might have been this similarity of occupation and their almost constant association which endeared Peters to the major portion of the family. It might have been his big, handsome self, his wholesome good nature, coupled with a dogged patience in waiting for Kate, that was subtly bringing the girl to a realization of his enduring devotion. This change of escort, therefore, on the day of all days for an outing naturally aroused curiosity.

Kate's days were passed in a big department store. Many persons stopped at her counter and made purchases. Some were fine people, and from snatches of their conversation she gleaned mental visions of their luxurious mode of living. Frequently she looked out covetously on to their beautiful plane of life.

She often wondered how people get rich.

But today she was for once to be "a real swell lady," as Susie Mullins had expressed it.

"Now, look a-here, yez two," interrupted Kate's mother, coming to the girl's assistance at the breakfast table. "Kate's goin' to Coney wid Susie Mullins an' two rale gintlemen as has axed the gir-ruls, an' thim as has autimobeels too. Shure, if she wants to be a-goin' wid quality instid av the loikes av Mike Peters—an' I'm sayin' nothin' again' Mike, ayther, God bless him—why can't she?"

The question at issue seemed convincingly answered with a strong intimation that no further discussion was desired. The meal was finished peacefully, but not without some inward resentment on the part of Kate's father over the seemingly unwarranted sidetracking of Peters.

Later a gay little automobile party sped swiftly through the city streets, across the river, over vast stretches of lowlands and on to the fantastic wooden city by the sea.

It was a still gayer little party as it indulged in the pleasures and revels of the place. The light heartedness of youth made the day one of irresponsibilities and freedom, and the cloudless sky and the life giving sea breezes were in accord with the blissful mood and high spirits of the merrymakers.

Not even a passing thought was given to the unconventional circumstances of their meeting.

Paul Ricard, chauffeur for an uptown garage, made some purchases of Kate one day.

"She is very pretty," said Ricard to himself as he noticed her delicate features, crowned by auburn hair.

When she looked up to more clearly catch the address he was giving for the delivery of his purchases he saw that her eyes were of a deep blue, and there was a hidden laugh in them. He smiled at her boldly with his great brown eyes.

The little flush, scarcely perceptible, and the slight parting of the lips telegraphed to Ricard his victory.

He found other occasions upon which to visit the store, never forgetting to pass Kate's way. An acquaintance followed, into which Susie Mullins was introduced, and the Fourth of July trip was planned.

I may invite my friend Mathot?" he asked.

"Sure!" chimed the girls unhesitatingly.

Kate was swept to heights of ecstasy by the flattering attentions of Ricard. He was tall and handsome, lithe, dark and had winning features.

Mike Peters became merely an occasional thought.

It was evening at Coney Island. The little party had dined on the balcony of a big hotel. The quieting influence of twilight had hushed their irresponsible chatter, and they sat dreamily watching the shifting scene before them.

The ocean sighed and broke softly on the gray sandy beach.

In the distance the lighthouses flashed their warnings to ships plying their lonely ways over the dark waters.

Away off at the horizon the big moon peeped—hesitatingly, so it seemed, for a continuous performer—then, reassured by the long silvery reflection upon the waves, rose bravely to the occasion.

Kate was as if charmed.

Ricard sat complacently smoking, his eyes feasting on the changing beauty of the girl's face.

Susie and Mathot strolled away.

Then the witch of fire appeared.

Little lines of white light shone out, moving indefinitely about like illuminated snakes. They reached upward, outward and encircling; they outlined buildings; they crept high, leaving noble towers; they wrought stirring emblems commemorative of the day; they lighted the highways; they pointed to the scintillating places for the night's revels, and they traced great piers stretching far into the sea.

Coney was depicted in exquisite silhouette.

Suddenly the air was filled with flamboyant glory.

Myriads of explosives shot skyward—up, up, swiftly at first, with hissing sounds. High in the heavens they faltered a bit as if in search of stellar objects against which to dash themselves. Then, bursting into gorgeous displays of varicolors, they spread into showers of beauty simultaneous with the shouts of delighted spectators and fell gently, like brilliant, iridescent spray.

Kate was in raptures. She laughed and clapped her hands. She let out little screams of delight.

To gain a better view she moved to the railing and leaned far out. She was in danger of falling.

Ricard sprang to her side, caught her and held her protectingly with an arm encircling her.

He talked to her lightly, merrily at first; then he bent his handsome, dark head until it was close, very close, to the auburn tresses, and he spoke in deeper, more serious tones, and the girl forgot Coney in the music of his voice.

Kate caught herself wondering why Mike Peters had never acquired the pleasant ways of Ricard.

After awhile he placed a big, firm hand under her chin and raised her face so he could watch its every lineament. His dark eyes were luminous and tender. His voice was persuasive as he said something to her, now and again its tones pleading, and he emphasized his words with soft little pats on her warm cheeks.

Silently Kate's head drooped to his shoulder, and he held her tightly for the space of a few moments.

Then he took her by the shoulders gently. He stretched his arms at full length and held her there. His handsome face was aglow with exultation. Kate laughed hysterically. She felt herself helpless in his strong grasp, and she expected any moment to be gathered back with a mighty rush into his embrace.

Something dark, like a great mantle, floated noiselessly in between them, shutting each from the other's view.

Ricard caught it and flung it off.

It whipped back again, swept toward Kate and partially enveloped her.

The girl was frightened and struggled to disentangle herself. Ricard was helping her when a blaze of light from an exploding rocket revealed what they were pulling and tugging at.

It was the trailing end of a big flag moved by the shifting breeze.

Like one electrified, Kate ceased her struggles. She snatched wildly at the fluttering bunting and held it captive. Her face turned like marble, and into her eyes there came a new, strange expression as she stood motionless, her white gown gleaming here and there between the folds of the flag.

As swiftly and silently as the coming of the colors enlightenment had descended upon her.

Oblivious to the presence of Ricard and her surroundings, she was living again her commonplace existence of the morning. She was seeing her home, with its mean environments, and all was being borne in on her mind swiftly and with new significance.

Again she saw Terrance saluting the flag and heard his childish explanation.

"One nation indivisible—one nation indivisible," repeated itself over and over. Then it seemed to merge into "one home indivisible" and ever in Terrance's clear boyish voice. There could be no "home indivisible" if she went with Ricard into his enchanted world, as he had suggested.

With a cry that was half sob she sank to her knees, burying her face in the flag.

"Terrance!" she whispered.

Ricard had watched the girl wonderingly. Her tears brought him pityingly to her side.

"Don't! Don't do that!" he pleaded tenderly, attempting to raise her.

Kate sprang to her feet, shuddering at his touch. She shook him off.

He was perplexed by her action. "You are tired," he ventured and took her hands in his.

She made no reply. Instead she tried to free herself. Ricard, aroused and angry, would not release her.

"You shall not shake me off," he said sternly. "You are mine." And he grasped her by the shoulders, hurting her cruelly.

She did not speak, but met his eyes unflinchingly. For the space of a few seconds they thus faced each other. He searched in vain for the light that had shone in her eyes but a few moments before. What he saw instead were awakened, aroused womanly intuition, chastity and hatred. What she saw was determination, pleading.

"AW—CUT—IT—OUT!" HE PROTESTED.

She yielded not a bit to him.

The red haired Irish shopgirl was like the embodiment of an age of Celtic queens. He wanted to crush her, to devour her.

And still she said not a word, but looked and looked at him steadily, coldly, dominatingly. He met her gaze with equal fortitude. It was as if the souls of the man and woman were in visual combat.

Ricard's perfidious spirit swayed.

"Forgive me," he said in a trembling, humble voice. "Let me take you home."

Terrance awoke with a start when Kate, flinging herself on her knees beside his bed, commenced to smother him with kisses.

"Aw—cut—it—out!" he protested sleepily. "What'd—you—bring—me, Kate?"

"These," she replied, spreading an array of trinkets and souvenirs of the day out upon the bed—"these, dear boy"—

The boy was asleep again when she added sobbingly—"and your sister."

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK,

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

HAS HIS HOBBIES.

As often as Taft buys or talks of buying another horse, Bryan mounts another hobby and rocks awhile. Of late he has taken much apparent interest in the election of United States senators by direct vote. In his Nebraska platform, adopted last March, he pronounced it "the gateway to all other national reforms."

A good many people, Republicans and Democrats alike favor the election of senators by direct vote, but on the other hand a number as large, or perhaps larger, prefer to follow the method favored and adopted by the fathers of the Republic. Nobody believes the question of such momentous importance as Mr. Bryan declares in his Nebraska platform of last March. He doesn't believe it that important, for in his Denver platform adopted in July, he omitted the word "all," showing himself subject to sudden change in his views.

There is no reason why it should be of great importance in this campaign and no reason to believe that Mr. Bryan can open this "gateway." He has limited his possible public service to four years and admits that the United States senate will be Republican during that time, so he could not open this gateway. Beside a number of Democratic senators are opposed to opening this "gateway."

Further, a large number of the states have primary laws which enable the voters to make known their choice for United States senator and legislatures never disregard their recommendation. Beside, it is doubtful if election of senators by the people would help Mr. Bryan. He had a practical test of that in Nebraska in 1904. He was the Democratic candidate for senator and appeals were made to the voters of his state to support candidates for the legislature who favored his election, and if his party had been successful in carrying the legislature he would have been chosen. He had all the money necessary to make a vigorous contest, for that "creature of predatory wealth," Thomas F. Ryan contributed $20,000 to his campaign, according to the New York World, yet the Republicans carried Nebraska by a plurality of of 85,000 votes, showing that his own state thinks even less of him as a senatorial candidate, than as a presidential possibility. There doesn't appear to be any good reason why Colonel Bryan should be so much concerned about a change in the method of choosing senators. It wouldn't change the political complexion of the country. The people rule in most states even in the choice of United States senators, and Mr. Bryan should choose a better hobby.

NOT FIT TO GOVERN.

Colonel Bryan in his opening campaign speech, puts aside his plea for money to finance his campaign, long enough to make a plea to let him and his party reform the tariff. The response to the latter plea will hardly be more hearty than to the former. They let him and his party reform the tariff in 1892, and once is enough to satisfy them for a lifetime.

In referring to this period, in his address at Hot Springs, Mr. Taft said:

During this period it repealed the McKinley tariff bill passed in 1890 and enacted the Gorman-Wilson tariff bill of 1893. With the prospect of a Democratic tariff for revenue and under the operation of the Gorman-Wilson tariff bill subsequently passed a period of industrial depression set in which continued through the next presidential campaign of 1896. The remedy for this depression as proposed by the Democratic party under its present leadership was a change from the gold standard of currency and values, which was the measure of all pecuniary obligations, to a silver standard—a change which would have scaled the debts of all by quite 50 per cent and would have produced a financial crash in which the business disaster would only have been exceeded by the injury to our national financial honor.

As soon as the Republican party came into power in 1897 it repealed the Gorman-Wilson tariff bill and enacted the present Dingley tariff bill, and with the assurance of an honest monetary standard confidence was restored and a period of business expansion and prosperity followed to an extent never before known in the history of the world. Wages were never higher, and the average standard of living of the wage earners, of the farmers and of the business men in point of comfort and of enjoyment of life was advanced beyond precedent.

I have no hesitation in saying that not since the beginning of the government has any national administration done so much for the cause of labor by the enactment of remedial legislation as Theodore Roosevelt and the Republican congresses elected and sitting during his tenure of office. It is true that additional legislation is needed to perfect the machinery for enforcing the principles laid down by Mr. Roosevelt and declared in the remedial statutes already passed.

The Republican candidate gives some excellent reasons why the government should not be delivered into the hands of the Democratic party in these words: Great care will be required in the enactment of additional legislation, and the fact that the Democratic party has had but little recent experience in the responsibilities of power and but little training in actual legislation makes the party and its distinguished leader utterly oblivious of the necessity for care and caution in the enactment of statutes which are to accomplish changes in our social and business relations.

They seem to have an impression that an evil which is very insidious, and which is elusive in its character, when definite legal description is to be given of it and heavy penalty is to be prescribed for it, may be safely met by a statutory denunciation hastily prepared in a day or a week or a short period. We have seen within the short four years of the present administration such measures as government ownership of railways, election of Federal judges and national initiative and referendum proposed as remedies for our existing evils and now withdraw under assurances that they will not be again suggested.

The silly Democratic claim that the President and the Republican party have stolen their policies from the Democrats is disposed of by Mr. Taft, and the incapacity of that party to rule the country wisely, in the following:

While the resolutions of its platform in 1896, 1900 and 1904 denounced the abuses of corporate wealth they never proposed feasible plans or made the prominent and chief issue of any campaign the carrying out of what have now become known and properly known as the Roosevelt policies. On the contrary, in 1896, the party made the chief issue a disastrous financial experiment, which would have retarded the progress of this country a quarter of a century and sullied its financial honor.

In 1900 the party reiterated its adherence to this suicidal policy of repudiation of national and private debts and obligations and then advanced as the paramount issue of the campaign not the trusts, not corporate wealth and abuses, but rather the repudiation of all our international responsibilities growing out of the Spanish war and the destruction of what they call the growing cancer of imperialism in the policy of this country. Again, in 1904, instead of selecting the abuses and evils for which they now seek to make the Republican party responsible of the main issue of the campaign, the burden of their contentions was the usurpation of the powers of the executive office by President Roosevelt, including the settlement of the anthracite coal strike and the violation of the Federal constitutional limitations by the Republican party, while the extent of the trust evil was minimized by the statement of the then party candidate that the common law furnished sufficient remedy to suppress it, and by the general party declaration that nothing but safe and sane policies were adopted under the administration which should follow its success in the election.

MR. CLEVELAND'S ESTIMATE OF MR. TAFT.

The New York Times of yesterday printed an article written by Grover Cleveland on the Presidential campaign of 1908. The article is one of three that Mr. Cleveland had planned to write, but the only one that was completed. It is written in Mr. Cleveland's unmistakable style—a little heavy and bearing indication in every line that writing was not an easy task for the late President. For that reason it is not light reading and will not appeal to the multitude. But there is something in the rugged honesty of Mr. Cleveland's pen that always strikes a sympathetic note in those who knew his unyielding devotion to duty as he conceived it. If there ever was a man who did not use words to conceal thought, Mr. Cleveland was that man. The very lack of grace in his writing bore testimony to the fact that he strove to reproduce his honest thought rather than to say the pleasing or the grateful thing.

His review of the political situation means, therefore, to all those who appreciated his character the mature opinion of a man who took a large view of public questions, who was unusually well equipped to forecast the trend of political events and who could not if he tried speak else than frankly about them. In the circumstances, his practical declaration of an intention to support Mr. Taft for the Presidency and his plea in Mr. Taft's behalf will count for much with independent Democrats.

The former President was so exceedingly careful in bestowing praise that his eulogy of Mr. Taft means something. He says, among other things:

"Personally and officially I have had the opportunity of knowing many things concerning Mr. Taft that were not a matter of general knowledge, and with a keen interest I have watched his large share in the conduct of our national affairs in very recent years. His excellence as a Federal judge in Cincinnati is something not to be underestimated or over-emphasized, for should he come to the Presidential chair the qualities which made him a judge of high ability, which I know him to have been, will be the most needful to him as President of the United States. His high ideals of honesty and of relative justice, his great capacity for severe labor and his humorous wisdom in the face of the serious problem are attributes equally valuable and commendatory to people seeking him in whom they may repose the trust of their collective interests while they turn their increased attention to their passing individual demands."

Mr. Cleveland was a good judge of men. Living, his earnest support of Mr. Taft would have counted for more than that of any other Democrat or any other dozen Democrats. Dead, his expression of profound confidence in and admiration for the Republican candidate will tend to reassure thousands of his countryman—Republicans, Democrats and Independents—that in giving Mr. Taft their confidence they have made no mistake.

SUPPORT HOME TRADE.

If you send your money away from home does it not occur to you that you are not helping to build up your own community, or make it pay your home storekeeper to stay in business where you live, and where he helps you to pay taxes, but that you are building up some concern in a distant city that has no interest in you or your property?

Remember that your home merchant accommodates you often by delivering goods at your door, by extending credit to you when cash is not at hand; he helps to support the schools, churches and other public institutions, including helpless and unfortunate ones in your locality; he is your neighbor, working shoulder to shoulder with you, and helps to increase the value of your own farm or reale state by making your community more active and vigorous.

The tendency for the past few years has been for people to congregate in large cities, and the more the farmer helps to centralize the distribution of goods in large cities the more he helps to cut down the value of his farm and the farm products. It is for the interest of the farmer to have a number of villages, towns and small cities throughout the country, rather than a few large cities. By building up his own community and helping to make it progressive, working shoulder to shoulder with his neighbor, the merchants and local business men, each helping the other, conduces to the best development of the country.

BITTINGER.

The aged wife of Rev. J. B. Shoup departed this life at her home in Fitzgerald, Ga., early last week, Rev. and Mrs. Shoup had resided in this village until last November when Rev. Shoup gave up his duties as pastor of the Lutheran congregation here and returned to ois old home in Georgia, since which time Mrs. Shoup's health constantly declined until the end came. Rev. Shoup's many warm friends feel much sympathy for him in this hour of grief.

C E. Ellithorp will meet the Good Roads Commission in Baltimore this week and will present the desires and interests of this section in the selection of the route for the proposed state road.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger is improving her residence by the addition of a new porch at the front.

Mrs. O. C. Buckle and Miss Effie Bittinger were sight seeing in Grantsville last Monday.

Messrs. Columbus and Clark Brenneman, Harry Wiley and Leonard Stark attended G. A. R. day at Mt. Lake Park last week.

S. P. Slabach. who was taken from this community to Illinois when but six months of age, is visiting relatives in this section.

While picking huckle berries on the mountain one day last week, Mrs. Patterson Engle, Mrs. P. G. Stark and Miss Effie Bittinger became strangly bewildered and wondered about in a drenching rain for some time and were finally found by Mrs. Stark's husband and piloted out of the forest.

Last week was very gloomy and the mercury went so low as to cause great apprehensions of frost.

Attend To It Now.

Septemt er or October should see your cemetery lot beautified. Let us erect a monument before the snow comes. Make a selection from our stock at Frostburg, or at our Cumberland Yard, No. 99 North Centre street, or wait for one of our salesmen. Our stock of finished monuments at Cumberland is said to be the finest in the State. 27-3t

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 19, 1908.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1896, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intends each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

F. R. Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Theophilus George, Republican, Judge of Election, Swanton.

Gus Harvey, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Clarence Sweitzer, Republican, Clerk of Election, Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Thos. Fike, Sr., Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; W. M. Frazee, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Charles Fike, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; W. F. East, Republican, Clerk of Election Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Noah Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Jacob S. Fresa, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville

Clarence E. Stanton, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Charles Zehner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Thomas Michael, Democrat, Judge of Election, Westernport; Grant Hershberger, Republican Judge of Election, Bloomington.

S. F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

P. J. Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Amaziah Turney, Republican, Judge of Election, Strawn, Pa.

Charles C. Schlossnagle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, R. F. D. No. 2; Asa Beeghley, Republican, Clerk of Election, Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Wm. G. Mattingly, Democrat, Judge of Election, Hoyes; James W. Wilburn, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Edgar F. Jinkins, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Crabtree; D. W. Fraker, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

James L. Barnard, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Thomas Callis, Republican, Judge of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Edward F. Smouse, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park; Warren Rathbun, Republican, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

John L. Harvey, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gormania; Joseph M. Conneway, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

Mortimer G. Williams, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gormania; James Aronhait, Republican, Clerk of Election, Wilson, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's,

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Robert C. Minick, Republican, Judge of Election, Finzel.

Pat Hoye, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg; T. A. Werner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Finzell.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

P. J. Lohr, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

T. J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; Wilfred Chadderton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

George S. Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Hugh Weir, Republican, Judge of Election, Lonaconing.

Jonas Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bond; John T. Green, Republican, Clerk of Election Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Thompson Gilpin, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bittinger; Albert Brenneman, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Perry Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; C. L. Beitzel, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

H. L. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Kitzmillerville; John H. Ratter, Republican, Judge of Election, Klitzmillerville.

David S. Sharpless, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville; H. L. Price, Republican, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

James A. Delawder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Raymond Saucer, Republican, Judge of Election, Crellin.

Wm. F. King, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; R. C. Townshend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

D. M. MASON, Pres.,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entities the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

When You Need Printing Done

You want it to be of the very best kind. As you expect your printed matter to make business it is necessary it should do the talking for you. Poor or indifferent printing cannot do this as it lacks the strong points required to gain and hold the interest of the patron.

¶ In this particular line of work we excel, for several reasons, viz: 1st; we have the largest and best variety of up-to-date type to be found in the western part of the state. 2nd; we carry only the very best grades of papers; and 3rd; the know-how with which to create original and attractive tye display.

¶ You make no mistake when you come to us with an order of printing

The Republican Job Printery
Benj. H. Sincell, Prop.,
Okland, Md.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

I. O. O. F.

All members of Oak Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., Mt. Lake Park, Md., are requested to be present at the regular meeting of the lodge, Tuesday evening, Sept. 10, 1908. Grand Sec'y, Wm. A. Jones, of Baltimore, Md., accompained by other grand officers of the order, will be present and deliver short addesses. All visiting brothers welcome.

A. T. WHITE,
C. V. HARVEY,
2t J. W. REAMS.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

For Sale or Rent,

The Litzinger building on south side of Second street, Oakland, Md., for sale, or the north storeroom for same for rent. Apply to J. C. Peddicord, Oakland postoffice, for particulars.

J. M. LITZINGER.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Caught Seven Coons.

Dr. A. S. Warder, Charles Hawkins and a party went out on a coon hunt at Deer Park, Md., Saturday night and succeeded in landing seven of the game they started for. The coons were all of a good size and the catch was the largest that has been made this season. —Grafton Sentinel.

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$277,295 68
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	115,000 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	708 92
Due from State Banks and Bankers	2,175 88
Due from approved reserve agents	43,914 65
Checks and other cash items	564 65
Notes of other National Banks	475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$30,591 70
Legal-tender notes	5,250 00 25,781 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation	2,500 00
Total	$572,481 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,686 45
National Bank notes outstanding	48,750 00
Due to other National Banks	5,482 02
Due to State Banks and Bankers	104 02
Dividends unpaid	160 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,677 84
Time certificates of deposit	242,695 03
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 58
Total	$572,493 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 16th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

STABILITY

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Two horses for sale. Apply to Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md.

Mr. D. Y. Morris, of Kingwood, spent Sunday in Oakland with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Sliger were guests of Terra Alta friends Monday evening.

Mr. R. T. Semmes, of the Cumberland bar, was in the city Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp, of Bittinger, spent a day or two in Oakland last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Nimrod Glotfelty and daughter, of near Accident, were in Oakland Monday.

Mr. A. F. George, of Swanton, spent an hour or two with Oakland friends Tuesday morning.

Mr and Mrs. D. W. Wilson, of near Wilson, W. Va., were in the city last Saturday shopping.

Mr. Gilead Broadwater of Grantsville district, was in Oakland on business a day or two this week.

Gold Coin Seed Wheat for sale—Jack Grimes, Deer Park, Md. 26-2t*

Mr. P. A. Chisholm, one of our good friends from over near Gorman, was in the city Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jamesson and little son of Piedmont, are here as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder.

LOST—Ladies brooch. Pink enameled flower and small barouque pearl. Return if returned to First National Bank.

Mrs. J. W. Riggs and Mrs. T. J. Parsons, of Terra Alta, were guests on Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. Scott T. Jones.

Horse for sale cheap, rather than winter. Good to work anywhere. Address R. G. Richardson, Mt. Lake Park.

Oakland is steadily improving—briar patches, gone-to-seed weeds and other like monuments adorn the streets and alleys.

Miss Clara Painter, of near Pittsburg, who was the guest for several weeks of Miss Grace Jones, has returned to her home.

Miss Blanche Babb, of Greeland Gap, W. Va., has returned to her home after a visit of ten days to Mrs. A. D. Naylor in Oakland.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnished or unfurnished.

Dixon & Kelso have added a Bell telephone to their office fixtures. 2t

Miss Maragret Miller, who was the guest for a short time of Miss Rebecca Thayer, returned to her home in Cumberland Monday.

Mr. J. H. Rodeheaver, of Terra Alta, accompanied by Mr. Jacob Feathers, of near Cranesville, were callers at this office last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Schroeder, who spent ten days at the paternal home of the former at Frederick, returned to Oakland Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Keller, of near Hoyes, who spent a few days last week at Mountain Lake Park, returned to their home Tuesday afternoon.

Orders taken for Aubrey Sisters famous Beautifier, tint, massage cream, depilatory powder, soaps, etc., at Oakland Hotel. 19-tf.

Mr. and Mrs. Alf Duty and Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Duty, of Gypsy, W. Va., were guests last week of Mr. A. W. Duty and daughter in Oakland.

Mr. William Edgar, who has been near McHenry during the past summer on a visit to friends and relatives, left here Tuesday night for Williston, N. D., his home.

"Is you a-gwine to vote for dat Taft pusson?" one darkey was asked by another a few days ago. "Yessar, I is, and I'm not a-gwine to vote for Bryan again 'till 1916."

The Gold Mine Store is the place to get your candy, post cards, tobaccos, toys, wagons, base ball goods and fishing tackle of all kinds. Two bottles of pop for 5c.

The Presbyterian and Lutheran Sunday schools of Oakland are holding a picnic at the Bradley farm today. Many scholars and teachers are present enjoying the outing.

Attorneys Thomas J. Peddicord, Gilmor S. Hamill and William R. Offutt went down to Bittinger Tuesday morning on professional business, returning to Oakland yesterday.

Mr. Harry Lohr, of Oakland, Md., arrived in the city yesterday and will remain a week or two as the guest of his brothers, Messrs. L. L. and Geo. W Lohr.—Grafton Republican

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

CAPITAL 50,0 0,00

THE First National Bank

SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000,00

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

GOOD FISH STORY VIA PIEDMONT

Mr. N U. Bond Proved Where There's a Will There's a Way.

N. U. Bond, senior member of the well known lumber firm of Bond Brothers, of Bond, Md., was in town today and he is held responsible for the best "fishy" story of the season. Col. Bond and a party of gentleman were inspecting last week some timber land on Elk river, in Pocahontas county, this state. There were on the Black branch of this river, and numerous trout could be seen swimming around but in the party of lumbermen, not one had a fish hook, or even a pin in their clothes to make a hook. A fair size trout in retreat went under a stone and Col. Bond cast a stone from the bank on top of the stone under which the trout had gone for safety. The trout was killed, and measured about eight inches in size. In his gill was found a trout hook with about thirty inches of line attached. The strings which had used to tie the lunches up for the party were made into a line and the hook taken from the dead trout was brought into service, when in less than one hour Col. Bond had taken from the back fork of Elk sixty one of the speckled beauties. They were not large in size but all right in flavor to appease the appetite of an epicure. Your correspondent can vouch for the hook and the recovered part of the fish line as it came under his personal observation, but ex-Congressman Ben Wilson once dryly remarked: "Who will vouch for you?" when interviewing a ticket collector that followed the passenger conductor. —Piedmont Corr. Cumberland News.

Mrs. O. T. Treacy, Misses Margaret Chrystal, Mary Boyle and Annie Treacy, of Oakland, and Miss Mary Graham, of Baltimore, spent Tuesday at Skipnish, where they were guests of friends.

Messrs. Ed. and Nathan Browning, who visited their brother, Reuben Browning, Esq., near Bloomington, Ill., for ten days, returned to their respective homes in Garrett county this morning.

A notable improvement in the electric light service has been in evidence the past few nights, an employe of the electric company having given the globes a long delayed and very much needed bath

Prof. "Teddy" Mason, who completed a course in embalming at a school in Cincinnati, O., a few days ago, returned to Oakland Saturday night and will probably locate here as an embalmer and undertaker.

LOST.—A small pocket book, containing a sum of money; also the owner's name. Was lost Aug. 29, between First National Bank, Oakland and McHenry P. O. Finder will be rewarded if sent to S. K. Glass, Box 12 McHenry, Md. 1t*

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell and their guests, Mrs. Joseph S. M. Basil, Mrs. Charles Feldmyer and Miss Emma Feldmyer, of Annayolis, and Dr. E. J. M. Button and Mrs. Eva Mitchell, of Oakland, spent yesterday at Bond as the guests of Col. N. U. Bond.

Mr. Ross C. Durst, of near Grantsville, accompanied by his sister, Miss Dora Durst, drove to Oakland last Thursday and spent the following two days at Mountain Lake Park and at the home of Mr. Bruce Durst south of town returning to Grantsville Sunday evening.

Harvest is over and the grain and fruits have yielded well. It is now about time for us to hear from some one who has raised the greatest number of bushels of grain to the acre, the longest ear of corn, a pumpkin of greatest circumference, of a potato the largest. Who will be the first to report?

Mr. Edmund L. Manges, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges, who spent the summer with his parents in Oakland, left here Monday morning for Gettysburg, Pa., where he will enter the Theological Seminary for a three years' course, having graduated last spring from the college in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Browning, of Bloomington, Ill., arrived in Oakland yesterday afternoon for a visit of five weeks' duration to their kindred and friends in Garrett county. Mr. Browning is a son of the late Allen Browning, who moved from Sang Run to Bloomington nearly half a century ago.

Hon. S. A. Kendall returned to Meyersdale from Roseburg, Ore., where he spent the past few weeks looking after the interests of the Kendall Bros. and the Kendall Lumber Company. The former own and operate the water works and electric lighting plant, while the latter have extensive timber interest there.

Dr. W. L. Davidson, Superintendent of the Mountain Chautauqua and manager of the National Chautauqua Bureau, Washington. D. C., who has been at the Park taking a well-earned rest since the close of the Assembly there, will leave for Washington tonight, expecting to return to the mountains shortly and remain two or three weeks.

Mr. Ernest Ashby, who was on a visit to friends on the Eastern Shore, has returned to his home in Oakland and expects to leave shortly for the State of Oregon, where he will engage in teaching. The young man will be followed by the best wishes of his host of Garrett county friends for a successful life in his chosen profession.

Messrs. Roy and Arthur Custer, sons of the late Emanuel Custer, of near Hoyes, were in Oakland Monday returning from a visit to kindred and friends in West Virginia. The former, who is engaged in the real estate business in Baltimore where he is making an excellent showing, left the same night for the Monumental City, while the latter returned to his home at Hoyes.

Miss Helen Jordan of North 41st street, Philadelphia, and Miss Carrie Louise Ziegler of North Charles street, Baltimore, have terminated their summer's visit at "Uplands" near Deer Park, and left for their homes. Both young ladies were guests of Miss Irene Haulenbeek. They spent a very enjoyable summer, and received much benefit from their stay in the mountains.

Misses Mamie, Elizabeth and Edith Weber, of near Oakland, left here for Toledo, Ohio, last Thursday night where they went as delegates to the convention of the Millenial Dawn society, being held in that city week. Delegates to the convention are present from nearly every civilized country in the world, the number in attendance approximating more than two thousand.

The Deer Park Inn, conducted by Mr. E. H. Smouse, has amongst its guests Mr. Alfred Bagby, Jr., a member of the Baltimore Bar. Mr. Bagby is taking a much needed rest and enjoying every moment of his time. The view from Eagle Rock, on old Backbone mountain, he characterizes as one of the finest elevated views he ever witnessed, and as to Deer Park, he regards it as ideal in every way. Garrett county, he says, is not fully appreciated by Marylanders.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Brown, of Kingwood, and Mr. A. W. Handsche, of Bellingham, Washington, who is Mr. Brown's guest at the Deer Park Hotel, were in Oakland Monday, driving from here to Fort Pendleton, this county, where Mr. Brown's maternal grandsire settled and raised his family in the early years of the past century. Mr. Handsche is the cashier of the leading bank at Bellingham, in which Mr. Brown as well as some local capitalists are interested.

Mr. Bert Hinebaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Hinebaugh, of Oakland, left here Tuesday night for Chicago, from which city he will go to Agujita, State of Coahuila, Mexico, where he will have charge of a coal washery for a mining company at very remunerative wages. His family, consisting of his wife and an infant son, will remain here for the present, expecting to go to Mexico shortly after the holidays. The town of Agujita is located on a short line railroad connecting with the Mexican International Railway at a point about seventy-five miles south of the Rio Grande River and Eagle Pass, Texas. The country to which Mr. Hinebaugh goes is one of perpetual summer where strawberries grow and mature every month in the year, where rain seldom falls, but still a country of exceeding productivity.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m, and 7.30 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 8 p. m.
Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sunday at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Sunday school 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League at 7 p. m.
Mt. Lake Park—Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.; Class meeting at 3.30 p. m.; preaching at 7.45 p. m.
All are welcome.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Deep Creek—Preaching at 3.30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9.15 a. m.
Communion service 10.30 a. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

Lecture.

Rev. C. W. Hudson will deliver his lecture "On a Plantation in Old Virginia," at the Elder Hill school house next Saturday evening for the benefit of the Woman's State Missionary Society.

Prof. Murdaugh Reappointed.

Prof. E. D. Murdaugh has been reappointed principal of the Frostburg Normal School by the State Board of Education.

The Republican for Job Work.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Arthur Townshend,

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND COUNTRY PRODUCE

First National Bank Building, Main Street, Oakland, Md.

Matting.

To close out our Matting will give you bargains.

$1 Lace Curtains for 75cts

BEAUTIFUL LINE OF

Summer Underwear

and beautiful line of

WOOL GOODS

CHEAP.

Dimities, Percales, Seersuckers, etc.

American and Beauty

CORSETS,

Medium and Long Waists.

Are You Thinking

of taking a course in a School of Music, a School of Expression, a School of Fine Arts, a School of Commerce and Administration, or a School of Railroading and Telegraphy?

West Virginia Wesleyan College

offers you able instructors, good buildings, ample facilities, reasonable rates. For catalogue and full particulars write

DR. CARL G. DONEY, PH. D., President. Buckhannon, W. Va.

or call on W. L. MASON at Mt. Lake Park during August. 22-3t

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould in to the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. Telephone Comp'y

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Subscribe for The Republican.

mystery would solve itself so quickly as she thought of the long day's ride before her.

But in this thought she was wrong, for, although the key was accompanied by a larger dictionary and she found the few rules absurdly simple, these were but part of the mystery.

The book laid stress upon accents as essential to the understanding of the words, and Sinclair's letter was entirely wanting in accents, nor could she find some of his words in the dictionary.

It was not until late in the afternoon that she stumbled upon the explanation. "Shlosllo" she could not find, but under the accented S's she found "slos," meaning a lock, and "llo," an instrument, and decided that a lock instrument was a key. With this clew as to the surplus h's which required the accents on preceding letters soon had the translation written. It read:

"Dear Myra—Perhaps even with the aid of this key you will have some small difficulty in getting at the sense of this letter, but I know that you like to puzzle over enigmas, and it is for this reason that I am sending you this note. It is to tell you what you will not let me tell in person. I love you, dear, and you will make me the happiest man on earth with the one word 'Yes.'"

Myra allowed the paper to flutter to the floor as she stared out of the window on the glory of the western sunset toward which they were flying. She was half pleased, half angry, at the declaration. This was her first season in society, and she was not minded to give up her liberty so soon, and for that reason she had evaded Sinclair's declarations. She did not wish to say yes so soon, and she could not say him no.

She remembered how Nancy Baldwin had been the belle of one season and during the next had been almost completely monopolized by Ben Trayer. Myra had planned to have another year of freedom before she should be led captive by Cupid.

But in the end an amused smile played about her lips as she thought of Sinclair's strategy, and when the porter came through the car to light the gas she procured a telegraph blank and wrote out a one word message, "Yes."

Her uncle was at the station the next morning to greet her and to hand her a yellow envelope.

"This came just as I was leaving the house," he said. "I hope that it does not contain bad news."

Myra tore open the envelope and read the short message.

"I am coming on," Sinclair wired, "to tell it over again in English and pantomime."

"It's good news—very good news," said Myra, smiling softly, as she looked up into her uncle's anxious face, for, after all, pantomime, not Esperanto, if properly expressed, is the universal language of love.

Afraid of Safety Pins.

It is not easy to realize the bondage to fear under which barbarous people live on account of their superstitious ignorance. Mrs. Theodore Bent tells in her book, "Southern Arabia," how she tried to make a present of a safety pin to a native woman and what a storm of indignation was occasioned by her act. On our arrival at our camping ground and while we were waiting for our tents to be ready I was surrounded by women all masked. They seemed highly astonished at a safety pin which I was taking out, so I gave or, rather, offered it to an old woman near me. She wanted to take the pin, but several men rushed between us and roared at us both and prevented my giving it to her. I stood there holding it out and she stretching out her hand, and one or two men then asked me for it for her. I put it down on a stone, and she took it away and seemed pleased, but a man soon brought it back to me on the end of a stick, saying they did not know these things and were afraid of them.

The Opium Habit.

In an article on Robert Louis Stevenson's horror of the opium habit the Rev. W. E. Clarke in the chronicle of the London Missionary society gives a letter which the novelist sent when on the island to the native king of Samoa on the subject, in which he said: "Nothing is more quickly learned than the opium habit. It passes from one to another like a song. Nothing is so pernicious; it feeds upon unaccustomed races like a fire upon dry wood. And I assure your majesty no race appears less able to stand the results of this drug than that to which your majesty belongs and over so great a portion of which your majesty is called upon to rule."

Stevenson concludes a long letter by suggesting to the king that "any foreigner other than a doctor or a missionary acting as a doctor who shall be found to have distributed the drug either for money or as a gift" should at once be deported from the islands.

A Nature Study.

I like to watch the old fool hen that's tied beside my door. She has of little chickens ten and thinks she has threescore. Of all the blamed important things that ever fussed around she is the worst. All day she sings and claws the dirt around. She thinks she has the only chicks, and so she clucks and humps. All other chickens are gold bricks; all other hens are chumps. She sees a foe in every friend and drives that friend away. Her feathers always are on end; she's mad the livelong day. And so I watched the old fool hen, and still she seems to me like many chuckle headed men whom every day I see. This life to them's not worth a cuss, no pleasure it affords, because they fume and fret and fuss about their little hoards, with bile and envy in their souls pursue their narrow plan and ever guard their dirty rolls and hate their fellow man.—Emporia Gazette.

Sinclair's Strategy.

By HENRY HAVEN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Our dance, I believe, Miss Trent."

Dick Underby whisked Myra away, and to Fred Sinclair, with a declaration of love trembling upon his tongue, it seemed that Myra went with ill omened eagerness. Underby hurried Myra off to the dancing floor, but Sinclair remained in the conservatory and made rude remarks to the tiny fountain playing in the fern lined basin.

All the season it had been a race between himself and Underby for Myra's favor, and now the season was closing with the Dagmar dance, yet neither of the two men had been skillful enough to evade Myra's innocent stratagems and make his avowal of love.

Both had come to the dance determined to put his fate to the test, for on the morrow Myra was to leave town for a long visit to distant relatives. Perhaps had there been but one suitor his persistence might have been rewarded by opportunity, but Underby and Sinclair unconsciously aided Myra in her evasions by interrupting the other at crucial moments. When the last dance had been played and the guests were departing Sinclair realized, with sinking heart, that his opportunity was lost.

Underby, too, was heart heavy with disappointment, and chagrin still showed in his face when he came to the station the following afternoon to see

SHE WROTE OUT A ONE WORD MESSAGE, "YES."

Myra Trent off. Sinclair was there, but upon his face was a smile of such satisfaction as made Underby wonder if perhaps Sinclair had found his opportunity, after all.

There was a stir as the train pulled in, and under cover of the confusion Sinclair handed a package to Miss Trent.

"It's the newest detective story," he explained. "I know that you like all sorts of mystery stories. I have taken the liberty of adding a homemade puzzle in case you find the book too short."

Myra smiled appreciatively. She preferred cryptograms to chocolates, riddles to roses. She had won many magazine contests of this sort in her youth. She found Sinclair's present more acceptable than Underby's violets, and as soon as she had settled herself in her Pullman section she unwrapped the book.

As she ran over the pages an envelope dropped out. It contained a single sheet of note paper, and in Sinclair's copperplate handwriting was this note:

Kara Myra—Eble, ech kun helpo de tin-chi shlosllo, vi trovos lom da maifacileco komprenl la sencon de tin-chi senditajho, sed mi scias ke vi shatas labori je enigmoj, kay pro tio mi sendas al vi tuin chi letercton. Ghi scligos al vi tion klon vi ne permesas ke mi scliju al vi persone. Mi vin amas, karullno, kaj vi igos min la plej felicia viro en la mondo per la unu vorto "Jes."

Myra smiled as she studied the odd jumble of words. Many of them looked familiar. There was no mistaking "enigmoj." "Mondo" was clearly the "world," and "laborl" was "labor." Other words were of familiar aspect, and then there were some that were totally strange.

It might be a combination of the "hog Latin" of childhood days and the real Latin of the college course, but an hour's study showed many words not to be accounted for on any such hypothesis. The more she studied the more firmly convinced was Myra that this was some new form of cryptogram invented by Sinclair to divert her on her two day trip.

She was still studying the slip of paper when the porter came around to make up her berth, and in the troubled sleep which broke the night journey strange combinations of letters danced before her eyes.

When she came back from breakfast in the diner the next morning the porter approached with a small package.

"A gemman done tole me gib you dis here in de mo'nin'," he announced as he handed the package to Myra. The girl's face brightened as she recognized Sinclair's handwriting. "This" evidently contained the key. She would not have to puzzle longer.

From the package dropped a small booklet with "Esperanto Key" on the cover page. Myra had heard of the "universal language" and had heard also that it required but half an hour to become familiar with the grammar. So, after all, her mystery was nothing but a letter in Esperanto, and the unraveling would come in a brief hour. She was half inclined to regret that the

In Defense of Horse Race Betting.

By AUGUST BELMONT, Financier and Racing Magnate.

HORSE RACING IS A NATURAL MEANS TOWARD THE EVOLUTION OF FINE HORSES. THE THOROUGHBRED IS THE BEST KIND OF HORSE, AND RACING IS THE WAY TO BRING OUT HIS BEST QUALITIES. IT IS THE SAME WITH DOGS. TO GET A GOOD DOG YOU MUST BREED HIM, AND IF, INCIDENTALLY, THE HORSE OR THE DOG IS THE OCCASION OF TROUBLE OR MORAL INJURY TO MEN CONNECTED WITH IT THAT IS NOT A CONTINGENCY WHICH SHOULD CONTROL OUR ATTITUDE IN THE MATTER.

There has ALWAYS been betting on horse races and always will be. So far as the race track is concerned, it seems better that wagers should be laid in the open than otherwise. If a man is apt to forget himself in liquor it seems best to keep him in the open street. He will be less apt to forget himself there than in private. A MAN HAS HIS OPINION UPON A RACE, AND HE IS DISPOSED TO BACK IT WITH HIS MONEY.

* * *

But in my view only a small percentage of people who attend races do bet to any visible extent. I should say NOT MORE THAN 10 PER CENT BET, and the remainder of the persons who attend have some right to be considered. It is said that I never bet. I will not say that. I have made bets, but I do not care about it. That instinct has been left out of my head for some reason. I do not place my abstinence on any other ground. Besides, my position as a racing manager makes it expedient that I should not be a bettor. Cases are liable to be called before me, and if I were a bettor it might influence my decision. It is as necessary that A MAN SHOULD NOT LEAN TOO FAR BACKWARD as that he should not incline in the other direction. The thing for him is to be upright.

* * *

BUT, UPON THE WHOLE, MY IDEA IS THAT WE CANNOT CONTROL OR ROOT OUT QUALITIES IN OUR NATURE WHICH HAVE ALWAYS BEEN THERE AND WHICH ON MOST ACCOUNTS IT WOULD BE A GREAT MISFORTUNE TO BE WITHOUT. THIS WOULD BE A VERY TIRESOME WORLD IF THE QUALITY IN US WHICH MAY SHOW ITSELF IN MAKING BETS UPON OCCASION WERE LEFT OUT OF US ENTIRELY.

Demand For Money A Sign of Prosperity.

By AUGUST BLUM, Vice President of the First National Bank of Chicago.

IT is right to say that money is firm and demand for accommodation on banks is very strong. This condition, far from being alarming, is simply the result of an ACTIVE AND PROSPEROUS BUSINESS CONDITION throughout the United States. Manufacturers and merchants saw the opportunity of an active and prosperous business by increasing their operations, and hence STRETCHED their credit as far as circumstances would permit.

Such a condition could not last and if continued would probably have resulted in disaster. Banks recognized this state of affairs and used every means within their power to curtail this expansion of credit. As a result A CHECK HAS BEEN PUT ON AN EXPANSION OF BUSINESS, leading to a so called recession. I believe this condition of credit has terminated what otherwise might have been a DISASTROUS CRISIS.

* * *

I look for an improvement in monetary conditions and for a material easement during the early part of January, when funds generally flow back to centers.

IT IS WORTHY OF NOTE THAT ALL THROUGH THE PRESENT CRISIS THE CONDITION OF COUNTRY BANKS HAS BEEN THE MOST POTENT FACTOR IN PREVENTING A SERIOUS SETBACK. THE SMALL BANKS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, AND ESPECIALLY IN THE MIDDLE WEST, ARE PROSPEROUS, DEPOSITS ARE INCREASING AND LOCAL DEMAND IS LESSENING.

As a result the country banks have been the largest buyers of commercial paper and thereby have SUSTAINED THE INDUSTRY OF THE COUNTRY, which otherwise might have been exposed to a dangerous curtailment.

No Man Lives For Himself Alone.

By Cardinal GIBBONS.

WHEN it is a question of charity, THAT VIRTUE KNOWS NO RELIGION. Charity knows no faith nor nationality nor color. The only question we have to propose to ourselves is, "He is the victim of SUFFERING humanity, and it is our duty on such an occasion to extend to him the right hand of fellowship and of mercy."

The religion that Christ presented to us was not merely for admiration, but for an example that NO MAN IS SUFFICIENT UNTO HIMSELF. The bonds of social intercourse are as closely intertwined as are the physical bonds of the human body.

WE MUTUALLY DEPEND UPON ONE ANOTHER. OF WHAT AVAIL IS ALL RICHES TO A MAN IF HE HAVE NO FRIEND TO GRASP HIM BY THE HAND, NO COMPANION TO CHERISH HIM, NO SERVANT TO MINISTER TO HIM? IS NOT SUCH A MAN POOR AND MISERABLE AND BLIND AND NAKED?

What would it avail any of you to possess the coal mines of West Virginia and Pennsylvania if there were no hardy sons of toil TO MINE THOSE COALS and carry them to the marts of commerce? What would the entire wealth of the Island of Manhattan avail you IF THERE WERE NO ONE TO SHARE IT WITH YOU?

We must help one another to THE BEST OF OUR ABILITY, thus making life's burden the easier to bear. Do not say to me: "What have I to do with my brother? Am I my brother's keeper?" You ARE your brother's keeper, and you will be responsible to God as such. We would all of us today be groping in the DARKNESS OF IDOLATRY if we were not our brother's keeper, and we would be deprived today of the inestimable blessings of our civilization.

HONEST ABE, U. S. M.

Finds True Love Flourishes In Country as Well as in Town.

HIS VERSES ARE IN DEMAND.

Bashful and Hesitating Swains United With the Aid of the Muse of Uncle Sam's Famous Representative—He Earns Gratitude.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

For the first half dozen houses on my route the other day everything went well and everybody was happy, but then I bumped up against it. The good wife of Farmer Ben Johnson was at the gate to receive a letter, and after she had made sure that it was from her sister in Nebraska she turned to me, and in a confidential voice she said:

"Abe, I'm afraid we are going to lose our lamb."

"I didn't know that you kept sheep," I answered.

"We don't. I refer to our daughter Jess."

"Oh, I see. Well, has Jess got another soft corn?"

"Don't make fun of me, Abe. This is serious business. She and Harry

"SAY, ABE, I'M A DYING MAN!"

Day have had a falling out, and goodness only knows how it is going to end. He has given out that he is going to enlist for a soldier and go off to the Philippines. Jess is just worrying herself sick, and you've got to do something."

"But I can't take him by the neck and bring him back."

"No, but you can write some poetry, and you've got to do it. You must write something to scare him and at the same time melt his heart. There's cold milk and a big piece of pie awaiting you in the kitchen. As for Jess, she's still abed and won't see anybody."

I went in, and when the milk and pie had been disposed of I tuned up my muse and wrote what I called "The Shriveling Maid," as follows:

They tell me that my cheek is pale—
That, like a lily drooping,
I now seem going to my grave
Instead of gayly whooping.

My eyes are dim with bitter tears;
My cheeks are sunk and hollow;
My weight has sadly fallen off,
And there is more to follow.

I dream and dream of various things—
Of frogs and toads and gators—
I dream of centipeds and rats
And vile impersonators.

I dream to wake and wake to dream,
And in my dreams I'm falling,
And in my waking hours I find Myself for Harry calling.

They say he's given me the shake;
That I'm a maiden jilted;
That, like a broken big sunflower,
I'm withered and I'm wilted.

But I shall believe my Harry true.
Come back, my love; come hither.
And do not leave your Jess to fade
And shrivel up and wither.

"Abe," said the good woman as she wiped the tears from her eyes, "you've struck it!"

"I believe I have, Aunt Liza."

Saved Their Lamb.

"I know it. You've appealed to that young man's feelings as no seventeen preachers could. You have saved our lamb, and if I don't be a sister to you all the rest of your days I hope to be hung. Yes, sir, when Jess copies them verses off and sends them to Harry there's going to be something doing. His conscience is going to cry out until he will come over here on the run."

I don't know how fast he ran, but next day I heard that the quarrel had been made up and that the shriveled maiden had ceased to shrivel.

I was driving along and feeling how unjust it was of the postmaster general to feel jealous of my poetry when it was doing so much good, when Farmer Joe Smith's hired man beckoned me from the barn. I had heard that he had an affair of the heart on hand, and I drew up and descended.

"Say, Abe, I'm a dying man," he said with a quicer of the lip.

"Been taking paris green?" I asked.

"No. It's what they call unrequited love. I'm in love with Sarah Jackson, and if she won't have me it'll be a case of suicide for sure."

"But have you asked her?"

"Not—not yet. I dasn't, Abe. She's too proud and horty. I'm afraid she'd throw me over."

Wanted to Melt Her Heart.

"Then how in thunder are you going to fix it? She won't ask you if you wait a thousand years."

"I know it, but I want something to prepare the way—to sorter melt her heart. When I see that she's melted I'll ask her. Gimme some o' your poetry, Abe. I've got to have it or you will be responsible for my death."

He was pale and trembling, and, his chin sinking and seeing what a hard case it was, I sat down and wrote the following, the same being intended to appeal to both her humorous and pathetic side:

Oh, the roses come, and the roses bloom,
And the roses droop and die,
And the sad south wind it wails around
The spot where the hollyhocks lie.

Oh, life of earth is a sad, sad life!
We meet today, and we part.
Today we gather the roses and laugh;
Tomorrow there's grief in the heart.

At midnight I wake to think of my love,
To list to the wind as it blows,
To hope that my Sarah won't fall out of bed
And land on the floor on her nose.

My love she has had for many a month—
The love of a strong married man,
The love that endures the fat pork and beans
Devoured by her Jimmie McGann.

I pray that my love is rewarded in kind;
That Sarah has thoughts of her Jim;
That he is not driven by blackest despair
To go hang on a hickory limb.

He Was Grateful.

When I drove on I left the most grateful hired man in the whole country behind me, but whether the poem melted Sarah or not I have yet to find out. There was one more case. At Farmer Beecher's the mother told me about the same as Mrs. Johnson had done. Her daughter Nell had quarreled with her feller and he was threatening to go off to Panama and catch the yellow fever, and so I had to sit down to another poem. I am happy to record that it worked in the same prompt and satisfactory manner:

I have loved him long and tender;
I have loved him long and well;
I have never loved another man
As I love Billy Dell.

He swore he did return my love
And caused my heart to flutter
And made me lose my appetite
For toasted bread and butter.

He led me on to believe he'd pop
The question I was waiting—
The question that is always asked
Before there is a mating.

But, ah, alas, he turned away—
He turned to Betty Baker!
And could I do aught else but say,
"You chump, but go and take her?"

I've tried full hard my love to kill;
I've sought to quench the feeling;
I've wept and pulled my nose so much
That it is sadly peeling.

It can't be done. The only thing
Is river or cold pizen;
A rope a-hanging o'er a limb,
And I am free from prison.

And Billy Dell will gaze some day
Upon the weeping willer,
A-drooping o'er my resting place,
And tears bedew his piller.

M. QUAD.

She Couldn't Be Stopped.

"Cousin Jane is so obtuse."

"What's the matter with her?"

"Why, you know her folks have been threatening to visit us all summer. To head her off I telegraphed this morning, 'Don't come; weather too warm for comfort.' And what do you suppose she replied?"

"Give it up."

"'It's hotter here!'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good Use For It.

"Alas!" she said. "What shall I do? I feel that I have a heart of stone."

"Possibly," he suggested tentatively, "with my help you might make it the cornerstone of a matrimonial structure."

After all, there's nothing like a resourceful man. She said so herself.—Chicago Post.

Feline.

Miss Pechis—I was quite surprised at Mr. Sloman last evening. He was discussing American beauties, and he paid me quite a compliment—

Miss Gaellus—Well, that was surprising. I never before heard of him paying anything before it was due.—Philadelphia Press.

Of Service.

"Do you think the flying machine will ever perform any important service to the public?"

"It is already performing an important service," answered Miss Cayenne, "it is something to talk about."—Washington Star.

Just Kids.

"What yer got dat rag fastened up dere fer?"

"Gee, but you is a landlubber! Dat's to show dat de owner's aboard."—New York World.

Terrible Tests.

"So you are still looking for an honest man?"

"I am," answered Diogenes.

"What is the lantern for?"

"That's to test him with. I am going to lend him the lantern, and if I brings that back I'm going to try him with an umbrella."—Boston Post.

The Return Trip.

"Will you have plenty of fresh fruit at that farm where you go, Alice?"

"Yes; Arthur says he will bring a big basketful every night."—Detroit Free Press.

We Are Persecuting, Not Prosecuting, Corporations.

By the Right Rev. DANIEL S. TUTTLE, Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

I AM not inclined severely to criticise the present administration or the attitude of our people at present. It has been my observation that AT INTERVALS the people of this country rise in a great clamor which is very far from their SOBER SECOND JUDGMENT. This is what is happening now. We have a great popular uprising against certain corporations in which the president and the federal administration are leading.

Now, this is EXAGGERATED. The judgment of the officials and the people is not what it will be when there comes the second sight into the matter.

WE AT GREAT LENGTH DECLARE THAT WE ARE BEING OPPRESSED, STRANGLED, IF YOU WILL, BY MONOPOLIES. THIS IS NOT SO. AND, TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THIS CRY, WE HAVE ACTIONS AGAINST THESE CORPORATIONS WHICH ARE NOT PROSECUTIONS. THEY REALLY ARE PERSECUTIONS TO A CERTAIN EXTENT.

In a little while, I know not just how long, we will begin to see that we are rushing ahead TOO FAST—going at the thing too harshly. We and the president will find that there is ANOTHER SIDE TO THE FIGHT and that the corporations have much to say. We will have our second thought, our sober judgment, on the thing.

We wish no monarchy here, no COMMERCIAL MONARCHY legalized by any means. It is dangerous. I think we shall find that our railroad presidents, our corporation heads, will begin to see that the Bible rule of brotherly love is JUST AS STRONG NOW AS IT EVER WAS, and if they wish to prosper they will have to live up to it.

Society's Thirst For Pleasure.

By Father BERNARD VAUGHAN, English Preacher.

OUR god is mammon. WE PRAISE, REVERENCE AND WORSHIP WEALTH; hence the rush for quick returns, for dividends, for ready money. Men and women alike admit that they measure happiness by wealth, and by wealth they measure respectability. And so down some of them drop IN PROSTRATE ADMIRATION BEFORE THE GOLDEN CALF, to which they are prepared to offer any sacrifice, provided only the oblation will secure for them an immediate return of gold.

* * *

WHAT IS THE EXPLANATION OF THIS RUSH FOR THE FLASH OF GOLD? DO PEOPLE WORSHIP WEALTH FOR ITS OWN SAKE AND SEEK IT FOR THE MERE EXCITEMENT OF MAKING IT? NO; BESIDES LIKING WEALTH SO MUCH FOR ITS OWN SAKE, WE PURSUE IT AS FIERCELY AS WE DO BECAUSE WE WANT PLEASURE MORE. THERE IS A FEVER THIRST FOR PLEASURE.

We are altogether too fond of amusement, and as we cannot have amusement without money people must have money, and, as money is mostly in the hands of men, WOMEN WILL DO ANYTHING TO GET SOME OF IT from them, and if you venture to exhort them to stand in the rear of their affections and to hold themselves a little DEARER they will calmly turn round and reply that seemly behavior is too dull, that LIFE IS NOT WORTH LIVING unless they can get into the swim and taste of what fruit they want and drink at whatever fountain they wish and stoop to any villainy that is handy.

Rich Men Hold Their Wealth Only In Trust.

By the Right Rev. ARTHUR F. WINNINGTON INGRAM, Bishop of London.

HAVE you ever thought WHY THERE ARE RICH AND POOR IN THE WORLD AT ALL? At open air meetings when I looked down on the faces of the crowd I have often asked myself the question, "How can one reconcile a belief in God loving his children with the fact that there are a million people in the east end of London who feel that they have been DESERTED BY GOD?"

I had to face that question then, and I have had to face it ever since. There is but one answer. THE RICH MINORITY OF HUMAN SOCIETY HAVE WHAT THEY HAVE MERELY IN TRUST. Stewardship, not ownership, is God's command for every one of us.

You are not your own. Nothing that you have is your own. We have not learned the lesson of the Christian religion if you have not learned the lesson of STEWARDSHIP.

THE MAN WHO THINKS HE OWNS WHAT HE HAS IN HIS KEEPING IS A MADMAN. THIS APPLIES ALIKE TO THE BOY AND HIS POCKET MONEY AND TO THE MILLIONAIRE AND HIS MILLIONS.

If every man considered himself a steward there would be no object in dishonesty. Stewardship would do away with the TYRANNY of capital. No man who is really a Christian would soil his Christian hands with one dollar the possession of which he could not justify in the sight of heaven.

Let every man, RICH OR POOR, ask himself how he gains his money and how he distributes it, and let him test his stewardship by those questions and his answers to them. And the same great message must be applied to ALL THE OTHER GIFTS AND POSSESSIONS WHICH A MAN HAS—his influence in the world, his natural gifts, his talents.

Spring Truants

By W. F. BRYAN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Where are you going, Buster?" Halvord looked down upon the sturdy figure of Dick Bennington, otherwise "Buster," with a twinkle in the kindly gray eyes.

"Playin' hookey," explained Buster promptly. "Wanter come fishin'?"

For a moment Brian Halvord regarded the boy with judicial gravity.

"You know very well," he began, "that after such a confession it is my bounden duty to see that you are delivered into the tender clutches of Miss Spofford," he reminded. "And yet here I am seriously considering sharing in your crimes and your pleasures, Buster. It's not only schoolboys who play hookey. I think I shall become your accomplice and play hookey myself."

Buster looked up in surprise. Halvord was a grown man! Men did not play hookey. Halvord read the question in the big blue eyes.

"There is a report that I should get out today," he explained. "Not to fulfill business promises is playing hookey just the same as staying away from school."

"The fish are bitin' fine. Jimmy Morrow got 'leven yesterday," said Buster defensively. "I got two lines. I brought one for Bud Schenck, but Bud was 'fraid."

"Clearly this is the intervention of Providence," declared Halvord laughingly. "Lead on, my youthful tempter! But suppose we stop for lunch first."

"BUT IT WILL BE NEXT SATURDAY, WILL IT NOT?"

Halvord's boarding place was just around the corner, and soon he had an ample lunch put up to supplement Buster's well filled box. Together they turned their steps from the village across the fields to where the "river," scarcely more than a brook, tumbled over the rocks in its haste to join the larger stream beyond.

They found a little nook in the rocky wall where the gray rocks widened slightly to form a grassy lawn fringed with trees just unfolding their leaves. There was still sufficient hint of chill in the air to lend sparkle to the sunny warmth, and to Halvord, long buried at his desk and the intricate analysis which formed his work, it seemed although he had become a boy again as he dug angleworms with a bit of broken branch and placed them in a box.

Never on his fishing trips during vacation time had he enjoyed half the sport with costly rods and reels that he found in the grimy length of line which Buster extracted from his pocket. It required some surgical tailoring to remove the barb of the hook, which had fastened itself in the lining, and Halvord watched the proceeding with eyes suddenly grown young.

It was too early in the season for the fish to be finical as to fare, so the worms were more eagerly accepted than the fanciest flies would be later in the season. By noon the two had caught a goodly string, and Halvord, finding a suitable place of slate in the stream, decided to add some of the fish to their picnic fare. So he built a rude stove with the flat slab of slate for the broiler.

Buster, delighted with this novelty, assisted with a will, and they were so engrossed with their task that neither noticed the approach of a slender girlish figure until a laughing voice demanded an explanation of Buster's presence so far from the schoolhouse.

"We're playing hookey," explained Halvord shamelessly. "Won't you play hookey, too, Miss Bennington? If you will you may have some of the fish."

As he spoke he pointed to the contents of the combined lunch boxes spread upon a stone and proffered a well broiled fish upon a bit of clean birch bark. Margaret Bennington looked, hesitated and was lost.

"I suppose that I should make Dicky go right to school," she said severely, "but I haven't the heart."

"I should be at work," Halvord admitted, "but, like Buster, I have the fishing fever, and I am a worse truant than he. The morning has been well worth it, though, and there is still the long afternoon."

As he spoke he deftly lifted other fish from the flat top of the improvised stove and announced that lunch was served. The salt packed for the hard boiled eggs also served to season the fish, and to two of the trio at least the exertions of the morning gave added zest to appetite.

Margaret, too, seemed to fall under the spell of the day, and after lunch Halvord resigned his line to her, well content to merely superintend her fishing.

Ever since he had come to Chester he had worshiped Margaret Bennington from afar, but he had absorbing work in hand and had not been able to contest with the younger members of her court. Margaret, on her part, finding Halvord at first decidedly entertaining, had in pique decided that he was an old man and oblivious to her many charms. And here she found him as much a boy as her ten-year-old brother. His unexpected enthusiasm and obvious capacity for enjoyment captivated her. It was all so different from the affectation of world weariness which was the approved pose among the wealthy youth of Chester.

The sun was dropping toward the west before Buster reluctantly wound up his lines and thrust them, all dripping, into his long suffering pockets. Even then the trio lingered to gather flowers, and it was twilight before they reached the road at last and came to a parting of the ways.

"It has been a most pleasant afternoon," said Margaret as she extended her slim, cold hand to Halvord. "I am very grateful to you."

"It is I who should be grateful," said Halvord softly, forgetting to relinquish her hand. "May I hope that some time again"—

"It sets a bad example to Dicky," she said laughingly, "but some Saturday when he does not have to play truant we may come again."

"Saturday is a long way off, four days," Halvord said dismally. "But it will be next Saturday, will it not?"

"Next Saturday," she promised as she withdrew her hand.

"Gee," exclaimed Buster as he and Margaret swung down the tree arched lane, leaving the chemist-author standing, hat in hand, "but I've had a bully day! Aren't you glad you came?"

He held up his string of fish, thrilling with pardonable pride.

"I've got a fine catch too!"

The girl looked straight ahead into the purple twilight.

"Yes, Buster, dear; I'm glad I came. And I think we made a fine catch."

Full Grown Children.

"At an out of the way little station," said a railway guard, "a party of workingmen wished to book to a town in the midlands to see a football match. Unfortunately the booking clerk had only a limited number of tickets for that journey at his disposal. Eventually he got out of his difficulty by dividing the pieces of pasteboard and issuing children's tickets to the party, at the same time explaining to me how matters stood.

"'They've paid the full fare, of course,' he remarked, 'so you must see 'em through.'

"I had almost forgotten the matter when a ticket examiner at B. came to me and remarked, with a sorrowful shake of the head:

"'This under age dodge is getting too warm!'

"'What's the matter?' I asked.

"'Matter?' he echoed disgustedly. 'Why, here's a whole carriage full o' children wot plays cards, drinks whisky and wears whiskers!'"—London Tit-Bits.

A Subtle Distinction.

Ned, the friend of Bill, the fish merchant, surveyed him reproachfully.

"Bill," he said solemnly, "I ain't the chap to round on a pal, but that there fish you sold my missus this mornin' was—well, the cat ain't been near the house since and"—

"Ned," replied the friend of his youth sadly, "mine's a difficult job. I've got to make a living, and if the fish is good I sells it and does pretty well. If it ain't good I sells it and does pretty well also. It ain't my fault; I never sent the stuff wrong. But you're a pal o' mine, and I'll let you know 'ow you can find out for yourself 'ow things are."

"Yes," said Ned eagerly.

"If you 'ears me shout 'Fine fresh fish!' you can reckon it is fresh fish, but if I shout 'Fish, oh!'—well, it is fish, oh!"—London Tit-Bits.

Moon Blindness In Horses.

It is said that "moon blindness" in a horse is caused by "wolf teeth"—two small surplus teeth just in front of the first upper premolars, one on each side of the upper jaw. An authority says: "The 'wolf teeth' do not cause eye disease or any other harm and usually are not discovered until the eye disease appears. The eye trouble is 'periodic ophthalmia' (moon blindness), which is hereditary and incurable. Thousands upon thousands of horses suffer from this eye disease, yet have not a 'wolf tooth' in their heads. The important matter to remember in connection with periodic ophthalmia is not the significance of the 'wolf tooth,' but the necessity and importance of rejecting from breeding operations all afflicted with periodic ophthalmia, or cataract, which results from repeated attacks."

Do You Count Your Steps?

Do you count your steps? It is a silly and useless practice, but at the back of his head this writer is always counting his steps. He can tell you the number of steps that lead from his flat in Kensington to South Kensington station (there is an unlucky thirteen at the station) until he has mounted to the office window. And when he put the question to his wife she could not tell the number of the stairs she had climbed (they are twenty) for three years to the first floor flat.—London Chronicle.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest. Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
[illegible] STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND MD.

How the Poor Fail to Get Justice.

By WILLIAM H. TAFT.

THE INEQUALITY THAT EXISTS IN OUR PRESENT ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE AND THAT SOONER OR LATER IS CERTAIN TO RISE AND TROUBLE US AND TO CALL FOR POPULAR CONDEMNATION AND REFORM IS IN THE UNEQUAL BURDEN WHICH THE DELAYS AND EXPENSE OF LITIGATION UNDER OUR SYSTEM IMPOSE ON THE POOR LITIGANT. ONE REMEDY MUST BE REFORM IN OUR JUDICIAL PROCEDURE, WHICH IS NOW TOO CUMBERSOME. ANOTHER WOULD BE MORE EXPEDITION ON THE PART OF JUDGES IN RENDERING THEIR OPINIONS. DELAY ALWAYS WORKED TO THE DETRIMENT OF THE POOR AND THE BENEFIT OF THE WEALTHY LITIGANT.

As to appeals, "the court of first instance" and the intermediate appellate court should be for the purpose of finally disposing in a just and prompt way of contentions between litigants.

THE APPELLANT JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF LAST RESORT SHOULD BE LIMITED TO THOSE CASES WHICH ARE TYPICAL AND WHICH GIVE TO IT IN ITS JUDGMENT AN OPPORTUNITY TO COVER THE WHOLE FIELD OF THE LAW.

I believe that a great reform might be effected, certainly in the federal courts, and I think, too, in the state courts, by a mandatory reduction of the court costs and fees. The salaries of the court officers should be fixed and should be paid out of the treasury of the county, state or national government, as the case may be, and fees should be reduced to as low a figure as possible.

I THINK ANOTHER STEP IN THE DIRECTION OF THE DISPATCH OF LITIGATION WOULD BE THE REQUIREMENT OF HIGHER QUALIFICATIONS FOR THOSE JUDGES WHO SIT IN THE CASES INVOLVING A SMALL PECUNIARY AMOUNT.

Place Criminals on Farms, Not In Jails.

By Professor C. R. HENDERSON of the University of Chicago.

WHEN THE DEVIL WANTS TO MAKE A MAN A CRIMINAL ALL HE HAS TO DO IS TO KEEP HIM IN IDLENESS AND LET HIM ASSOCIATE WITH CRIMINALS. WE MAY TALK ALL WE WANT TO ABOUT PROGRESSIVENESS, BUT WE HAVE LITTLE RIGHT TO BOAST AS LONG AS OUR JAILS ARE LEFT SO OLD FASHIONED AND BARBAROUS.

The jail is no place for serving a sentence. If the offense is felonious the man should be sent to the penitentiary, and if not he should be put out on a farm. Cooped up in the jail he does nothing but play cards and make the acquaintance of men who sooner or later drag him down. The farm has been tried successfully in Switzerland, in Holland and in Cleveland, O.

Industry in the lockup is a prime necessity. NOT ONLY SHOULD MEN AND WOMEN BE GIVEN EMPLOYMENT WHILE SERVING A SENTENCE, BUT THEY SHOULD ALSO BE KEPT BUSY BEFORE CONVICTION. Many of those arrested are poor and would be willing to earn money while waiting for their trial. In some cases men are confined in the county jail almost a year. With no employment to pass the time THIS BECOMES A PUNISHMENT THAT IS NEARLY INHUMAN.

All cells should be arranged so that every prisoner could have a separate compartment and that every one should have a window through which the rays of the sun came directly.

THE PROPOSITION IS NOT A MERE THEORY. IT HAS BEEN UNIVERSALLY ADOPTED IN EUROPE, AND WE HAVE IT IN SOME MEASURE HERE. WE TAKE THAT KIND OF CARE OF OUR PIGS AND OTHER LIVE STOCK. WHY SHOULDN'T WE DO AS MUCH FOR OUR HUMAN BEINGS?

Should the Vice President Step Down to the Cabinet?

By United States Senator BACON of Georgia.

IF Mr. Bryan should be elected and should invite the vice president to sit as a member of the cabinet, the fact would be accomplished if the latter accepted the invitation. NO LEGISLATION WOULD BE REQUIRED. In fact, no legislation could require the president to receive the vice president as a member of his cabinet, and no legislation could compel the vice president to serve as a member of the cabinet. It could only be accomplished by the voluntary action of both the president and the vice president.

The president can invite the vice president to sit at his council board if he wishes to do so, and the vice president could accept or decline at will. It is scarcely possible, however, that such an invitation will ever be extended to a vice president or that any vice president would accept the invitation if tendered.

IT WOULD BE NOT ONLY A STEP DOWN, BUT MANY STEPS DOWN, for a vice president to become a member of the president's cabinet. From the vice president, a constitutional officer, the president of the senate and standing next in succession to the president of the United States, it is a far cry to a seat in a cabinet, the members of which, as such, have literally no power save that approved by the president, who can, furthermore, at any moment remove any one of them upon any whim or caprice.

I THINK IT UNFORTUNATE THAT UNDER OUR SYSTEM THE CABINET HAS NOT GREATER POWER AND THE PRESIDENT LESS, BUT THE FACT IS AS I HAVE STATED IT.

Aside from the consideration mentioned, the constitutional duties of the vice president in presiding over the senate are engrossing during the sessions of congress, and he would have no time to attend cabinet meetings or to attend to other duties devolving upon cabinet officers.

THE OFFICE OF VICE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES IS ONE OF GREAT DIGNITY AND IMPORTANCE, AND NO ADDITIONAL FUNCTIONS ARE NEEDED TO MAKE IT MORE SO.

BEST VACATION MONTH IS HERE

September Is the Ideal Month For Taking Vacations and Properly Enjoying Life.

September, the most beautiful month in all the year, unless its rare beauty be excelled by May, is at hand and with its beginning begins the early fall. September colors the leaves in the forests and elsewhere with many tinges of yellow, red and gold, and prepares them for the herald of winter to reap them in harvest and scatter them broadcast far and wide as restless messengers to announce the coming of the Storm King.

There is no grander month in the year during which to take a vacation although many make the mistake of getting their vacation over during the hot weather, when they can do nothing else but sit under a tree with a fan and complain of the heat. Such a vacation is laughable. It is a burlesque on the word to call such a time a vacation, even though the word is defined "to be free from duty for awhile."

In the present month there are many campers, who have been out in camp for several weeks past, breaking their camp and coming home. On the other hand there are many just starting out. These latter are the wiser campers as they are taking their vacation in the ideal month. They are taking them in the month when the cool, invigorating, healthful air of the month fills them with vivacity and life and stimulates them to do things; to do anything to give free rein to that life within them; to hunt coons; to fish, to run, to squirrel hunt and every thing else that makes camp life worth living. This is very much better than lying in a hammock and sweltering away the heated term.

September is the 9th month of the year, but in the olden times the month was the 7th of the Roman calendar. It fell on Tuesday, which day is named after Tyr or Tiw, one of the War Gods.

Sub-District E. L. Convention.

September 8th and 9th there will be an Epworth League Convention held in the M. E. church at Hoyes, Md. An excellent program has been arranged and the public is invited to attend.

J. B. WORKMAN,
District President.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. E. L. Beach, Harry Bowers, Edw. Brendel, William Cole, Joseph Hartman, Mrs. Lucian Hendrickson, J. Keler, M. C. Kidd, Miss Bessie Maloney, Stephen Short, Harold Tuturn, Miss Marie Wilson (3).

SHERIFF'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., the same being No. 16 Judgments to September Term, 1908, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of John Feity against Elizabeth Smith, I did sieze and take into execution all that lot or parcel of ground known as

Military Lot No. 1065,

being the same lot described in a deed for the same from John A. Williams and wife to the said Elizabeth Smith, date the 16th day of April, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 388, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and I hereby give notice that I will on FRIDAY,

the 26th Day of September,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock p. m., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Md., offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder all the real estate described in said deed above referred to. Said land lies in District No. 10.

Said land will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

WOOD'S SEEDS.
Best qualities obtainable.

Winter or Hairy Vetch

makes not only one of the largest-yielding and best winter feed and forage crops you can grow, but is also one of the best of soil-improvers, adding more nitrogen to the soil than any other winter crop.

Wood's Descriptive Fall Catalogue gives full information about this valuable crop; also about all other

Farm & Garden Seeds

for Fall planting. Catalogue mailed free on request. Write for it.

T. W. WOOD & SONS,
Seedsmen, - Richmond, Va.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

TAX SALES

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Sections 51 and 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and by said section 52 as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

SATURDAY,

the 19th Day of September,

1908, AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M., at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2.—LOT NUMBER THREE THOUSAND AND TWENTY-SIX IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association as recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, page 800, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the same lot of ground which was conveyed to Upton Cuppett by Clarence E. Michaels et al. by deed dated the 21st day of January, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 394, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Upton Cuppett.

No. 3.—LOTS NUMBERS THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO AND THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, folio 800, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and being the same lots which were conveyed to Lydia S. Swearingen by Mountain Lake Park Association by deed dated the 8th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 213, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said lots are located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lydia S. Swearingen.

No. 5.—ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF THREE-QUARTERS OF AN ACRE, located in Crellin, in District No. 14 of said Garrett county, and more particularly described as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of the Preston Railroad and running thence North 86½ degrees West, 194 feet to a stake, thence West 9½ degrees North, 200 feet to a pine stump, thence South 75 degrees East, 241½ feet to a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of said railroad, thence 25½ degrees West, 166½ feet to the beginning, being the same land which was conveyed by John Connell et al. to Lula B. Loraw by deed dated the 26th day of February, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lula B. Loraw.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser, the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

H. R. DEWITT,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., August 28, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

We have just receive a car load of Extra Clear Red Cedar Shingles direct from the Pacific Coast. C. M. RATHBUN & SONS, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 22

TRUSTEE-MORTGAGEE'S FORECLOSURE SALE

OF VALUABLE

COAL MINES

AND

Village Property

AT

Stoyer, Garrett County, Md.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa., Trustee-Mortgagee.

By virtue of the power of sale to the undersigned mortgagee, a corporation, as set out in the mortgage from the STOYER RUN COAL COMPANY of Garrett county, Maryland, to it, dated the first day of April, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, page 46, of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Md., default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay said moneys secured by said mortgage when due, the said THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia, Pa., in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage, will, on

SATURDAY,

The 12th Day of September,

1908, at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett county, Md., commencing at twelve o'clock, noon, sell at public sale as a whole coal and mining plant, all the real, leasehold and personal property, rights, franchises and privileges of said Stoyer Run Coal Company, particularly described and set out in the mortgage aforesaid, the same being more particularly described as follows:

First—All that piece of ground lying near Stoyer in said county, being a part of a tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

resurveyed for William W. Hoye July 13th, 1886, described as follows: Beginning for said part at a stone marked "X" standing near the East margin of the county road at Stoyer and South 25 degrees East, 181½ feet from a hemlock tree, which stands at the end of the first line of a part of said tract called "Addition to Paradise" which was conveyed by William Whitmore to John P. Stoyer, by deed dated March 7th, 1902, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 19, folio 353 of said land records, and running thence South 55 degrees East, 133 feet, South 35 degrees West, 194 feet to the north limits of the Western Maryland Railroad Company's right of way and with said limit, North 61½ degrees West, 82 feet, North 25½ degrees East, 240 feet to the beginning, containing ⅝ths of an acre more or less.

Second—All that other part of the tract of land called

"Addition to Paradise,"

aforesaid lying at said Stoyer, beginning for the same at a stake standing North 55 degrees West, 40 feet from the aforesaid planted stone marked "X," standing at the beginning of the first parcel just above described and running thence North 85½ degrees West, 940 feet to a planted stone marked "2," then South 5½ degrees West, 550 feet, South 82 degrees West, 127 feet to a large stone marked "X," then South 20 degrees East, 165 feet to the northern limits of right of way of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, then with said limits in an easterly direction about 1250 feet to the intersection of a line drawn South 25½ degrees West, from the beginning thence reversing said line North 25½ degrees East, 213 feet to the beginning, containing five acres more or less.

Third—All that other part of said tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

beginning for the same at a point on the southern limits of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is South 25½ degrees West, 279 feet from the beginning of the second parcel just above described, and running thence South 25½ degrees West, 200 feet to a stake standing on the north side of the North Branch of the Potomac River thence up the said River North 28½ degrees West 162 feet to the mouth of Stoyer Run, then North 43 degrees West, 179 feet to the south limits of the right of way of said railroad, and with it, in an easterly direction, about 200 feet to the beginning, containing ⅝ths of an acre, more or less.

Fourth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under which said lots and leased land are adjacent to and near the three parcels just above described, being the same lots and premises, which were leased by and described in the lease from John P. Stoyer and wife to H. M. Datesman dated the 29th day of June, 1903, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 32, of said Land Records, to which lease reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the same.

Military Lots Nos. 203 & 199,

Fifth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under a tract of land known as lying West of Stoyer in district No. 8 of Garrett county, which is particularly described in and leased by a lease for the same from the Bayard Coal and Coke Company to Harris M. Datesman, dated July 31st, 1903, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 219, of said Land records. For a more particular description of which property reference is made to said lease.

"Addition to Paradise,"

All the above described parcels of real and leasehold property being particularly referred to and conveyed by a deed from William H. Thomas, Trustee, to the said Stoyer Run Coal Co., dated the 13th day of June, 1905, and recorded among said Land Records in Folio E. Z. T. No. 49, p. 331.

Sixth—All and singular the personal property of the said Stoyer Run Coal Company owned by it at the time of said mortgagee since acquired by it, situate at or in said Village of Stoyer or at or in the coal mines at said place and upon the aforesaid properties or used in connection with said coal mines and mining plant of said coal company, consisting principally, but not wholly of the following, viz.: 51 ton thirty six inch gauge mine cars, twenty three tons of steel rails, one set of Fairbank's track scales, one full set of blacksmith tools, a large lot of mining tools, two mules and harness, two large boilers with pumps, several engines and all appliances appurtenant thereto, all tramways, hoists, gas engines, mine props, and all other tools, appliances and equipment constituting a first class plant for the mining and shipping of coal, together with all other goods and chattels and personal property of said mortagor now owned by it and situate on any of the aforesaid properties.

Seventh—All the corporate franchises, rights and privileges of said mortgagor, and all rights in connection with said property and coal mines and coal thereunder given by the aforesaid deeds and leases.

Said fee simple properties are improved by one large two and a half story superintendent's house, twenty two-story houses or cottages for miners' dwellings, twelve large shanties, one large store building 60 by 20 feet deep with dwelling attached and office room, one storehouse, ice house, magazines, stable for twelve head of mules, coal tipples, blacksmith shop, dumps and tramways.

The mines are said to have a coal area of about FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ACRES of coal with three mine openings. Mine No. 1 is in the Lower Kittanning vein of about 4½ feet coal. Mine No. 2 is in the Masontown Seam with a vein of about 6 feet. Mine No. 3 is worked by plane with engine and is in the Upper Freeport Seam.

These mines lie on the Western Maryland Rail Road and have a siding costing over $2,000.00. Said mines are equipped with modern machinery, engines, pumps, boilers, tramways, hoists, etc. The storeroom is a fine stand for a store.

All the aforegoing will be sold as ONE WHOLE PLANT, including all the aforesaid real, leasehold, personal and mixed property, the same being open to inspection by purchasers without warranty by the Mortgagee-Trustee as to contents, quality or otherwise.

Reference is hereby made to the terms of the said recorded Mortgage as to the power of the Trustee-Mortgagee to adjourn the sale, the right of purchasers to use bonds in part payment of purchase money, and other provisions affecting the sale.

TERMS OF SALE.—$1000 cash on day of sale and the balance within ten days after the ratification of the sale by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, subject to such terms as may be prescribed by the Court, or announced by the Trustee at the time of sale.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Trustee and Mortgagee.
WM. R. NICHOLSON, President.

ORDER NISI.

H. R. Dewitt, Late Treasurer, vs. Jesse S. Severe.

No. 161 on Miscellaneous Docket. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

It is ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., this 18th day of August, 1908, that the tax sale made and reported in the above entitled cause, by H. R. Dewitt, late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Md., be ratified and confirmed; unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper printed in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $55.45.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON.
True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Ada Bowser, et al., vs. Cyrus Bowser.

No. 152 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Amos Bowser, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown or before the 18th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $3050.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.
True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

William Hachman, et al., vs. Caroline Gontz et al.

No. 1340 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Edward H. Sincell and Gilmor S. Hamill, trustees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three sucessive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $72.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.
True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves in debted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."
Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $80 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog givin full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for parculars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

Subscribe for the Republican.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1908. NUMBER 28

A VAST POWER PROJECT IS TO BE UNDERTAKEN

Capitalists Interested In Mammoth Enterprise for Garrett County.

WERE ON A TOUR OF INSPECTION

Their Scheme to Yoke the "Yough" and Carry the Power to Pittsburg—Development of Their Coal Property in Progress

Traveling amid luxury that an Oriental potentate might envy, in the beautiful private car "Magnet," attached to the rear of the Duquense, a party of Eastern capitalists, interested in the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co., and identified with another vast manufacturing project now in a formative tage, but which when carried to completion, means millions added to the wealth and development of Garrett county, passed through this city yesterday evening, en route to New York. In the party were C. L Pullen, of New York, vice president of the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co.; Heber Crane, of New York, treasurer of the same company; J. Richard Tennant, of New York, the secretary; J. Thompson Baker, president of the Union National Bank, of Lewisburg, Pa.; B. Brooks, of New York, general superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company; C. W. Wells, of New York, attorney for the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co.; C. M. Moody, W. G. Earnshaw and W. H. Yerkes, Jr., capitalists of Philadelphia, and Col. John Bogart, of New York, a world famous engineer, who designed and built the Niagara Falls power plant, and the dam and power plant on the Tennessee river at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The gentlemen were joined here yesterday morning by Mr. De Warren H. Reynolds, who is counsel for the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co., and [illegible]day was spent inspecting the company's coal property and other holdings [illegible]ity of Friendsville, Garrett [illegible]Youghiogheny river, and [illegible]the Confluence and Oa[illegible]. The company owns 10,000 [illegible]and on each side of the [illegible] and is constructing tip[illegible]eadings, building houses [illegible]s, preparatory to an extension of the property. [illegible]ears the company expects [illegible]y output of three thousand [illegible]ining superintendent is C. [illegible] Englishman versed in the [illegible]hod of mining and having [illegible] years experience in a mine [illegible]s England. The i prove[illegible] development of this vast [illegible]g tract are being undertaken at great cost and the work is proceeding expeditiously.

The presence of Col. Bogart, the expert consulting engineer with the coterie of capitalists was to obtain his views as to the feasibility, possible advantages and probable cost of constructing a large power plant on the company's property by damming the Youghiogheny. Col. Bogart made careful observations and announced that by building three dams, one thirty feet high, and another seventy-five feet high and a third one hundred feet high the accumulated water if passed through turbine wheels would develop 15,000 horse power. The plan proposed is the same as that pursued at Niagara Falls, where the monster turbines connect with great dynamos and electric power thus generated is transmitted by copper cables for a distance of 200 miles, with a remarkably small waste of power.

The promoters of the local enterprise, propose to at once organize a company, enlist the requisite capital, and promptproceed to the completion of this gigantic engineering task, which as previously inferred will cost over a million of dollars. In Pittsburg, but fifty miles distant, the company sees a market for its power, a small portion which will be used for electric haulage, etc., in its mines.

In conversation with a Daily News representative, member of the company last night expressed themselves as greatly pleased, not only with the coal property and its development as it has thus far progressed, but with the power project, which they consider a business proposition rich in prospective profits.—Cumberland News.

FIRE DESTROYS SAW MILL.

And Frightfully Burned the Night Watchman Saturday Night.

The large steam saw mill belonging to F. H. Whaley, located in Garrett county opposite Henry, West Va., was burned to the ground last Saturday night, the fire being of unknown origin, and the night watchman, Levi Wilkins, was so horribly burned that his life is dispaired of by his friends.

The fire, from what can be learned from a source considered authentic, caught in the engine room of the mill and burned so rapidly that the watchman rarely escaped with his life. When found by the mill hands, who were awakened by the fire, the watchman was found a hundred yards from the mill, a mass of flames, his clothing having been burned from his hips up.

In addition to the destruction of the saw mill Mr. Whaley's planing mill and the office attached to the mill were also consumed, the books and papers, however, being enclosed in a strong safe, were but slightly damaged.

When you come to town don't forget to call at the Gold Mine Store. Candy, tobaccos, fishing tackle, 2 bottles pop for 5c. Geo. M. Mason, Prop'r.

William J. Bryan to be at Mountain Lake Park

Next Sunday Afternoon at 2:30 O'clock When He Will Deliver His Famous

Lecture, "THE PRINCE OF PEACE"

The Day Being the Sabbath Nothing of a Political Nature Will be Countenanced by Mr. Bryan ---His Talk Purely Religious.

The people of Oakland and Garrett county and the whole country surrounding it will no doubt be greatly surprised to learn that on Sunday afternoon next at the hour of half past two, Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, will deliver his famous address or lecture "The Prince of Peace," in the amphitheatre in Mountain Lake Park, arrangements for the appearance of Mr. Bryan at the Park having been made yesterday by The Republican through Col. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, West Va., whose guest Mr. Bryan will be at Deer Park on Sunday, and by consent of the Mountain Lake Park management, who gladly placed the great auditorium at the disposal of Mr. Bryan and his expected thousands of auditors.

When the fact became known that Mr. Bryan would be Col. McGraw's guest at his Deer Park mansion on Sunday, arriving at that place from Cumberland late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, The Republican got into communication over the long distance telephone with Col. McGraw in Grafton and suggested to that gentleman that the people of this community, irrespective of party or religious belief, would be delighted to hear the great Commoner deliver the great lecture which has held thousands spellbound, and stating that the auditorium, with a capacity of five thousand or more, could be secured for the purpose. Col. McGraw immediately fell in with the idea and gave The Republican authority to state that Mr. Bryan would at Deer Park on Sunday as his guest and would be at Mountain Lake Park at the hour above stated and deliver the lecture "The Prince of Peace."

In this address there is nothing whatever of a political nature, the lecture teeming with deep religious thought and Bible teachings. It has been delivered by Mr. Bryan in all parts of the United States to thoughtful thousands of all political creeds and to all denominations.

The only time the lecture has heretotore been delivered in this State was at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held in Baltimore last spring, at which time the papers of the country generally commented upon it as being one of the greatest efforts of a modern thinker and speaker.

The whole people of Garrett county should be present. It is worth coming miles to hear. Nothing of a political nature will be countenanced by Mr. Bryan on the Sabbath, as he gives that day entirely to things of a more elevating nature.

THE MARYLAND STATE FORESTERS ARE AT WORK.

Maryland Bureau Studying County Wooldands.

THIS STATE IS THE PIONEER.

Forester Besley Is Securing Data And Figures Of Timberland in Western Counties of Maryland—Other Counties To Be Surveyed

Maryland, according to State Forester Besley, who returned to Baltimore Saturday from field work in Garrett county, is really the pioneer in forestry. While other State depend upon census statistics and lumbermen's figures, the Maryland State bureau is giving careful attention to the respective counties, its representatives traveling over the bypaths to secure first-hand information.

All this work is being done quietly, with a strict adherence to details and the verification of everything that is reported. Hearsay information or the opinions of the oldest inhabitants are given very scant consideration.

The Conservation Commission in Washington is endeavoring to secure as much as possible of this detailed information and has requested Mr. Besley to spend a week or two there in preparing this for publication and distribution.

With two assistants, Mr. Besley spent practically the whole summer in St. Mary's, Calvert, Allegany and Garrett counties, and made forest surveys and maps. He also made maps of two of the Garrett county forest reserves. Speaking of the Garrett tracts, Mr. Besley said there is more timber there than he had imagined. The largest tracts there, he said, have been cut down repeatedly and it is only a question of a few years before all of the original growth will be cut out.

"The forestry question," he said, "has been brought down to a scientific basis, so that a man can figure out in dollars and cents, and not by guess work. There is a certainty of information that counts, so that in the next five years there will be a strong inclination to invest in forest lands because of the revenue to be derived from the timber.

"One setback has been the danger of forest fires. But by the forest warden system, as established in this State and conducted by the Government in the West, this disadvantage has reduced to a minimum. Last year's reports show a damage from forest fires of less than $20,000, but years before we had the system working the average loss from fire in this State was more than $150,000 a year. This enormous saving has not cost the State more than $500."

Tomorrow the State Bureau will begin surveys in Wicomico and Queen Anne's counties and expect to have the maps finished shortly. In addition to these two counties, complete surveys have been made of nine other counties, and by the end of 1910 it is expected to have the entire State completely covered regarding forests, their species and other forest data. The counties so far surveyed and mapped are Garrett, Allegany, Harford, Prince George's, Calvert, St. Mary's, Kent and Worcester. When the last county has been finished a State map will be prepared.

According to Mr. Besley, the development of the forestry question has been the principal factor in various other investigations of the nation's resources. The conservation of the forests at the head of streams controls, in fact, the success or failure of the irrigation projects of the Government. As much as $5,000,000 has been spent on one of these irrigation propositions. Forestry also plays an important part in the drainage of swamp lands.

Mr. Besley spoke in high terms of the work of the State Experimental Station. A timber treating plant was installed there last summer for treating inferior woods with preservatives, such as creosote. By this means the durability is expected to be increased so much that the use of such woods will be good economy.

At the experimental station 20 species are now under test. The specimens are treated and placed in the ground in a row along with untreated woods. A complete record will be kept of each set, so that in the course of a year or two the State will have accurate statistics as to the durability of the various woods.

The farmers of this State, who own the greater part of the timber lands, are regularly requesting various information and instruction as to the care of their trees, and the forestry agents advise them just what timbers should be sacrificed for the betterment of the better woods on the land. In addition, advice is given as to how this may best be done and with the least expense.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. J. F. PRITCHARD.

Mrs. J. F. Pritchard, wife of Rev. J. F. Pritchard, pastor of the Loch Lynn and Pleasant Valley U. B. churches, died at her home near Pleasant Valley church last Saturday morning after and illness of a few minutes of heart failure. Besides her husband she leaves an infant child. Her remains were shipped from Oakland Sunday morning to Weston, West Va., her former home, where the interment was made.

E. L. Social.

On Friday evening, Sept. 11th, at 8 p. m., the Epworth League of Ryan's Glade will hold a social at the home of Mrs. E. W. Kelso. All are cordially invited to attend.

DIXON & KELSO

Have Replenished Their

FEED AND GRAIN

Stock and can Name the Following Prices :

Corn, Oats and Barley Chop	per hundred	$1.65
Wheat Bran . . .	" "	1.45
White Middlings . .	" "	1.65
Cracked Corn . .	" "	1.90
Sucrene Dairy Feed . .	" "	1.40
The best White Oats we have had for years, per bushel		.60
Winter Wheat Patent Flour in wood, per bbl.		5.50
" " " " "	24½lb bags	.70

Our Feed is put up in 100 lb. bags and not in 94 lb. sacks, whichh some of our competitors are selling.

Fertilizer! Two cars Wheat Fertilizer unloaded this week. Have sufficient stock to supply all comers.

JARS FOR APPLE BUTTER!

Have about 3000 gallons Stone Jars to offer cheap.

P. S.---We can use a few hundred bushels of Potatoes at 60c per bushel.

Come and See

DIXON & KELSO.

GREAT GATHERING OF FEMININITY

Young Woman's Christian Association Inter-State Conference.

A glorious close to a fine season took place at Mountain Lake Park last week. Following the Chautauqua, which wound up in a blaze of glory on August 28th, came a merry group of girls to the number of almost three hundred, representing thirty-eight of the colleges and universities of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland.

They were delegates representing the Young Woman's Christian Association at xiliaries connected with these various institutions of learning. They took possession of the cottages and hotels of Mountain Lake Park. The verandas were decorated with the colors of the colleges and pennants were flying in every direction.

The Convention opened on the 28th of August and continued until the 6th of September.

The mornings were given to class study along various important lines: Bible work, Home and Foreign Missions, Student's Volunteer Movement were brought to the front under the direction of compenent and enthusiastic leaders. The evenings were given over to inspirational services. The afternoons were devoted to athletics, boating, basket ball and long walks to interesting mountain scenes in the near neighborhood of Mountain Lake Park.

The first Sunday was devoted to sermons by Rev. Charles Frederick Goss, of Cincinnati. The second Sunday Rev. C. A. R. Gauvier, of Philadelphia, filled the pulpit. The afternoon of September 2nd was made memorable by a procession of these girls, each group marching separately. Some were arrayed in fantastic dress, college colors were prominently displayed and great pennants were flung to the breeze. Each college group presented some impromptu stunt to the great delight of the thousands of spectators. It took place in the Chautauqua Park. College songs were sung, the welkin rang with college yells. No prettier sight has ever been witnessed at Mountain Lake Park.

The many buildings, including the amphitheatre, Assembly Hall, Auditorium, and Hall of Philosophy make Mountain Lake Park an ideal spot for gatherings of this character.

It is understood that the college branches of the Y. W. C. A. will meet again next year at Mountain Lake Park, and that the number of delegates will be greatly increased.

ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Prof. J. C. Beahm, of Accident, Placed Under Bonds

Yesterday Prof. J. C. Beahm, of Accident, who has been principal of the public schools at that place for a number of years, was placed under arrest by Sheriff Brown and brought to Oakland on a warrant charging him with an offence of a very serious nature, his alleged victim being a girl named Bowser, whose age is said to be fifteen years and who resides with Mrs. Wm. Englehart at Accident.

Prof. Beahm waived a hearing after his arrival in Oakland and was released on bond amounting to $700 for his appearance before the Circuit Court in December to answer the charges against him.

For many years Prof. Beahm has been the principal of the Accident school and has been looked upon as one of the leading educators of Garrett county. He is married and the father of a number of bright and interesting children.

Horse for sale cheap, rather than winter. Good to work anywhere. Address R. G. Richardson, Mt. Lake Park.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL

CLOTHING

NOW COMING IN.

The best stock I have ever had. Fine line of BOYS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in the best styles. Plenty to select from.

And don't forget, I have the best line of SHOES in the county.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1908. NUMBER 28

A VAST POWER PROJECT IS TO BE UNDERTAKEN

Capitalists Interested In Mammoth Enterprise for Garrett County.

WERE ON A TOUR OF INSPECTION

Their Scheme to Yoke the "Yough" and Carry the Power to Pittsburg —Development of Their Coal Property in Progress

Traveling amid luxury that an Oriental potentate might envy, in the beautiful private car "Magnet," attached to the rear of the Duquense, a party of Eastern capitalists, interested in the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co., and identified with another vast manufacturing project now in a formative tage, but which when carried to completion, means millions added to the wealth and development of Garrett county, passed through this city yesterday evening, en route to New York. In the party were C. L. Pullen, of New York, vice president of the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co.; Heber Crane, of New York, treasurer of the same company; J. Richard Tennant, of New York, the secretary; J. Thompson Baker, president of the Union National Bank, of Lewisburg, Pa.; B. Brooks, of New York, general superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company; C. W. Wells, of New York, attorney for the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co.; C. M. Moody, W. G. Earnshaw and W. H. Yerkes, Jr., capitalists of Philadelphia, and Col. John Bogart, of New York, a world famous engineer, who designed and built the Niagara Falls power plant, and the dam and power plant on the Tennessee river at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The gentlemen were joined here yesterday morning by Mr. De Warren H. Reynolds, who is counsel for the Western Maryland Coal and Coke Co., and the day was spent inspecting the company's coal property and other holdings in the vicinity of Friendsville, Garrett Co., on the Youghiogheny river, and traversed by the Confluence and Oakland R. R. The company owns 10,000 acres of coal land on each side of the Youghiogheny and is constructing tipples, driving headings, building houses for the miners, preparatory to an extensive development of the property. Within two years the company expects to have a daily output of three thousand tons. The mining superintendent is C. B. Gould, an Englishman versed in the English method of mining and having had several years experience in a mine at Cornwall, England. The improvements for the development of this vast coal bearing tract are being undertaken at great cost and the work is proceeding expeditiously.

The presence of Col. Bogart, the expert consulting engineer with the coterie of capitalists was to obtain his views as to the feasibility, possible advantages and probable cost of constructing a large power plant on the company's property by damming the Youghiogheny. Col. Bogart made careful observations and announced that by building three dams, one thirty feet high, and another seventy-five feet high and a third one hundred feet high the accumulated water if passed through turbine wheels would develop 15,000 horse power. The plan proposed is the same as that pursued at Niagara Falls, where the monster turbines connect with great dynamos and electric power thus generated is transmitted by copper cables for a distance of 200 miles, with a remarkably small waste of power.

The promoters of the local enterprise, propose to at once organize a company, enlist the requisite capital, and promptproceed to the completion of this gigantic engineering task, which as previously inferred will cost over a million of dollars. In Pittsburg, but fifty miles distant, the company sees a market for its power, a small portion which will be used for electric haulage, etc., in its mines.

In conversation with a Daily News representative, member of the company last night expressed themselves as greatly pleased, not only with the coal property and its development as it has thus far progressed, but with the power project, which they consider a business proposition rich in prospective profits.—Cumberland News.

FIRE DESTROYS SAW MILL.

And Frightfully Burned the Night Watchman Saturday Night.

The large steam saw mill belonging to F. H. Whaley, located in Garrett county opposite Henry, West Va., was burned to the ground last Saturday night, the fire being of unknown origin, and the night watchman, Levi Wilkins, was so horribly burned that his life is dispaired of by his friends.

The fire, from what can be learned from a source considered authentic, caught in the engine room of the mill and burned so rapidly that the watchman barely escaped with his life. When found by the mill hands, who were awakened by the fire, the watchman was found a hundred yards from the mill, a mass of flames, his clothing having been burned from his hips up.

In addition to the destruction of the saw mill Mr. Whaley's planing mill and the office attached to the mill were also consumed, the books and papers, however, being enclosed in a strong safe, were but slightly damaged.

When you come to town don't forget to call at the Gold Mine Store. Candy, tobaccos, fishing tackle, 2 bottles pop for 5c. Geo. M. Mason, Prop'r.

William J. Bryan to be at Mountain Lake Park

Next Sunday Afternoon at 2:30 O'clock When He Will Deliver His Famous

Lecture, "THE PRINCE OF PEACE"

The Day Being the Sabbath Nothing of a Political Nature Will be Countenanced by Mr. Bryan ---His Talk Purely Religious.

The people of Oakland and Garrett county and the whole country surrounding it will no doubt be greatly surprised to learn that on Sunday afternoon next at the hour of half past two, Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, will deliver his famous address or lecture "The Prince of Peace," in the amphitheatre in Mountain Lake Park, arrangements for the appearance of Mr. Bryan at the Park having been made yesterday by The Republican through Col. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, West Va., whose guest Mr. Bryan will be at Deer Park on Sunday, and by consent of the Mountain Lake Park management, who gladly placed the great auditorium at the disposal of Mr. Bryan and his expected thousands of auditors.

When the fact became known that Mr. Bryan would be Col. McGraw's guest at his Deer Park mansion on Sunday, arriving at that place from Cumberland late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, The Republican got into communication over the long distance telephone with Col. McGraw in Grafton and suggested to that gentleman that the people of this community, irrespective of party or religious belief, would be delighted to hear the great Commoner deliver the great lecture which has held thousands spellbound, and stating that the auditorium, with a capacity of five thousand or more, could be secured for the purpose. Col. McGraw immediately fell in with the idea and gave The Republican authority to state that Mr. Bryan would at Deer Park on Sunday as his guest and would be at Mountain Lake Park at the hour above stated and deliver the lecture "The Prince of Peace."

In this address there is nothing whatever of a political nature, the lecture teeming with deep religious thought and Bible teachings. It has been delivered by Mr. Bryan in all parts of the United States to thoughtful thousands of all political creeds and to all denominations.

The only time the lecture has heretotore been delivered in this State was at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held in Baltimore last spring, at which time the papers of the country generally commented upon it as being one of the greatest efforts of a modern thinker and speaker.

The whole people of Garrett county should be present. It is worth coming miles to hear. Nothing of a political nature will be countenanced by Mr. Bryan on the Sabbath, as he gives that day entirely to things of a more elevating nature.

THE MARYLAND STATE FORESTERS ARE AT WORK.

Maryland Bureau Studying County Wooldands.

THIS STATE IS THE PIONEER.

Forester Besley Is Securing Data And Figures Of Timberland in Western Counties of Maryland—Other Counties To Be Surveyed

Maryland, according to State Forester Besley, who returned to Baltimore Saturday from field work in Garrett county, is really the pioneer in forestry. While other State depend upon census statistics and lumbermen's figures, the Maryland State bureau is giving careful attention to the respective counties, its representatives traveling over the bypaths to secure first-hand information.

All this work is being done quietly, with a strict adherence to details and the verification of everything that is reported. Hearsay information or the opinions of the oldest inhabitants are given very scant consideration.

The Conservation Commission in Washington is endeavoring to secure as much as possible of this detailed information and has requested Mr. Besley to spend a week or two there in preparing this for publication and distribution.

With two assistants, Mr. Besley spent practically the whole summer in St. Mary's, Calvert, Allegany and Garrett counties, and made forest surveys and maps. He also made maps of two of the Garrett county forest reserves. Speaking of the Garrett tracts, Mr. Besley said there is more timber there than he had imagined. The largest tracts there, he said, have been cut down repeatedly and it is only a question of a few years before all of the original growth will be cut out.

"The forestry question," he said, "has been brought down to a scientific basis, so that a man can figure out in dollars and cents, and not by guess work. There is a certainty of information that counts, so that in the next five years there will be a strong inclination to invest in forest lands because of the revenue to be derived from the timber.

"One setback has been the danger of forest fires. But by the forest warden system, as established in this State and conducted by the Government in the West, this disadvantage has reduced to a minimum. Last year's reports show a damage from forest fires of less than $20,000, but years before we had the system working the average loss from fire in this State was more than $150,000 a year. This enormous saving has not cost the State more than $500."

Tomorrow the State Bureau will begin surveys in Wicomico and Queen Anne's counties and expect to have the maps finished shortly. In addition to these two counties, complete surveys have been made of nine other counties, and by the end of 1910 it is expected to have the entire State completely covered regarding forests, their species and other forest data. The counties so far surveyed and mapped are Garrett, Allegany, Harford, Prince George's, Calvert, St. Mary's, Kent and Worcester. When the last county has been finished a State map will be prepared.

According to Mr. Besley, the development of the forestry question has been the principal factor in various other investigations of the nation's resources. The conservation of the forests at the head of streams controls, in fact, the success or failure of the irrigation projects of the Government. As much as $5,000,000 has been spent on one of these irrigation propositions. Forestry also plays an important part in the drainage of swamp lands.

Mr. Besley spoke in high terms of the work of the State Experimental Station. A timber treating plant was installed there last summer for treating inferior woods with preservatives, such as creosote. By this means the durability is expected to be increased so much that the use of such woods will be good economy.

At the experimental station 20 species are now under test. The specimens are treated and placed in the ground in a row along with untreated woods. A complete record will be kept of each set, so that in the course of a year or two the State will have accurate statistics as to the durability of the various woods.

The farmers of this State, who own the greater part of the timber lands, are regularly requesting various information and instruction as to the care of their trees, and the forestry agents advise them just what timbers should be sacrificed for the betterment of the better woods on the land. In addition, advice is given as to how this may best be done and with the least expense.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. J. F. PRITCHARD.

Mrs. J. F. Pritchard, wife of Rev. J. F. Pritchard, pastor of the Loch Lynn and Pleasant Valley U. B. churches, died at her home near Pleasant Valley church last Saturday morning after and illness of a few minutes of heart failure. Besides her husband she leaves an infant child. Her remains were shipped from Oakland Sunday morning to Weston, West Va., her former home, where the interment was made.

E. L. Social.

On Friday evening, Sept. 11th, at 8 p. m., the Epworth League of Ryan's Glade will hold a social at the home of Mrs. E. W. Kelso. All are cordially invited to attend.

DIXON & KELSO

Have Replenished Their

FEED AND GRAIN

Stock and can Name the Following Prices:

Corn, Oats and Barley Chop	per hundred	$1.65
Wheat Bran . . .	" "	1.45
White Middlings . .	" "	1.65
Cracked Corn . .	" "	1.90
Sucrene Dairy Feed . .	" "	1.40
The best White Oats we have had for years, per bushel		.60
Winter Wheat Patent Flour in wood, per bbl.		5.50
" " " " " 24½lb bags		.70

Our Feed is put up in 100 lb. bags and not in 94 lb. sacks, whichh some of our competitors are selling.

Fertilizer! Two cars Wheat Fertilizer unloaded this week. Have sufficient stock to supply all comers.

JARS FOR APPLE BUTTER!

Have about 3000 gallons Stone Jars to offer cheap.

P. S.---We can use a few hundred bushels of Potatoes at 60c per bushel.

Come and See

DIXON & KELSO.

GREAT GATHERING OF FEMININITY

Young Woman's Christian Association Inter-State Conference.

A glorious close to a fine season took place at Mountain Lake Park last week. Following the Chautauqua, which wound up in a blaze of glory on August 28th, came a merry group of girls to the number of almost three hundred, representing thirty-eight of the colleges and universities of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland.

They were delegates representing the Young Woman's Christian Association at xiliaries connected with these various institutions of learning. They took possession of the cottages and hotels of Mountain Lake Park. The verandas were decorated with the colors of the colleges and pennants were flying in every direction.

The Convention opened on the 28th of August and continued until the 6th of September.

The mornings were given to class study along various important lines: Bible work, Home and Foreign Missions, Student's Volunteer Movement were brought to the front under the direction of compenent and enthusiastic leaders. The evenings were given over to inspirational services. The afternoons were devoted to athletics, boating, basket ball and long walks to interesting mountain scenes in the near neighborhood of Mountain Lake Park.

The first Sunday was devoted to sermons by Rev. Charles Frederick Goss, of Cincinnati. The second Sunday Rev. C. A. R. Gauvier, of Philadelphia, filled the pulpit. The afternoon of September 2nd was made memorable by a procession of these girls, each group marching separately. Some were arrayed in fantastic dress, college colors were prominently displayed and great pennants were flung to the breeze. Each college group presented some impromptu stunt to the great delight of the thousands of spectators. It took place in the Chautauqua Park. College songs were sung, the welkin rang with college yells. No prettier sight has ever been witnessed at Mountain Lake Park.

The many buildings, including the amphitheatre, Assembly Hall, Auditorium, and Hall of Philosophy make Mountain Lake Park an ideal spot for gatherings of this character.

It is understood that the college branches of the Y. W. C. A. will meet again next year at Mountain Lake Park, and that the number of delegates will be greatly increased.

ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Prof. J. C. Beahm, of Accident, Placed Under Bonds

Yesterday Prof. J. C. Beahm, of Accident, who has been principal of the public schools at that place for a number of years, was placed under arrest by Sheriff Brown and brought to Oakland on a warrant charging him with an offence of a very serious nature, his alleged victim being a girl named Bowser, whose age is said to be fifteen years and who resides with Mrs. Wm. Englehart at Accident.

Prof. Beahm waived a hearing after his arrival in Oakland and was released on bond amounting to $700 for his appearance before the Circuit Court in December to answer the charges against him.

For many years Prof. Beahm has been the principal of the Accident school and has been looked upon as one of the leading educators of Garrett county. He is married and the father of a number of bright and interesting children.

Horse for sale cheap, rather than winter. Good to work anywhere. Address R. G. Richardson, Mt. Lake Park.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL

CLOTHING

NOW COMING IN.

The best stock I have ever had. Fine line of BOYS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in the best styles. Plenty to select from.

And don't forget, I have the best line of SHOES in the county.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

CYNICAL BOOK STIRS CHICAGO

Sneering Definitions of Wife, Husband, Home and Friends.

Stung by the cherub it had nursed, Chicago society is denouncing Joseph Medill Patterson because of his book, "The Little Brother of the Rich." Here are some of Mr. Patterson's definitions:

Wife—"A woman who is willing and ready to buy position with money, who refuses to be a mother for fear of missing a season or spoiling her figure."

Husband—"A combined pearl fishery and diamond mine, married only for his money."

Home—"A marble palace tenanted by a woman whose husband knows things about her which would surprise her."

Friends—"Toadies and sycophants who pretend to like a man for himself, but would have no use for him if he were plain 'John Smith.'"

Happiness—"What is it? Who has it?"

Social Position—"The chance to go to parish or vulgar houses of surething gamblers, to puzzle yoursevles stupid and talk putrid pseudo-sentiment to their empty-pated doll-women."

The marriage of Paul Potter, the unheroic hero, is a piece of grim writing. He falls in love another man's wife and while her husband is away calls on her in her apartments. There the two are discovered. The husband turns to Potter and says: "You are not by any means her first lover. Oh, I came prepared. Here are three letters that were written to my wife by three different men. Read these letters—one from a boy, one from a man and one from a grandfather—and put any other but one construction on them if you can."

The husband then tells Potter he will get a divorce and that he can marry the woman, saying: "You can never be sure of her. You will start three on your honeymoon—you, she and suspicion."

Blanche, a chorus girl, says to Potter: "Well, it's you and other men that make girls wear tights. Girls don't wear them for the fun of it, but because you men pay them to. And they've got to have money to live on. You pay a girl $6 to stand up all day and sell goods and $18 a week to wear tights. Let me tell you one thing. Mr. Man, if I had to do it over again I'm ——— if I'd ever go to store work at all—I'd light out straight for the stage. You pay us three times as much for showing our legs as for selling your wives hardware.

This is said of the rich corporations: "You live uselessly. The world were better without you. You should be swept away, you and those like you. You add not one jot of knowledge, or wisdom, or happiness, or wealth, or health, or virtue to the world, and yet, by the skillful crooked trick of your vicious trade you have filched from it ease, emolument, respect, luxury and power, and you sit above the rest of us, drawing away in your hideous pride that you may not be contaminated by our touch."

There is another reference to social position: "To whom does society owe position? To me, who give it education and recreation and thought and happiness, or to you who take from it everything you can swindle it out of and return to it sneers, corruption, evil example, depraved tastes and debased amusement?"

And again: "The sun and the wind touches the bosom of the earth; to her awakening crops sprang forth abundantly to the tillage of millions of men and horses and machines, grimy gnomes toiled in the dark underground to bring fuel to the light; keen-witted and resourceful railroaders guided their lightning caravans across continents; children of five years spun clothing for the race, and two and one half hundred aristocrats of the Handball Club guessed about the prices of stocks in the happy compact with fate that if they guessed wrongly they needed but draw a check or two against bank accounts which had descended upon them freely and copiously, like manna, from the days of their minorities."

In the end Potter meets Sylvia, his first love, who, disciplined by pain and suffering, tries to show him how tawdry and selfish are the values he is giving his soul for. He shakes his head. "I can't. I know its all rotten and false, but it's too late to change. I am nearly forty years old. My life is settled; my ways are fixed. It is too late." She held out her had to him. "Goodby."

This ends the tragedy of disillusion.

Ira D. Sankey's Creed.

My creed may be stated in a few words. I believe in the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, the Tribune of God, these three are One and His name is Love. My hope of heaven is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood and righteousness.

I believe that God so loved the world that He gave His own beloved Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. I believe that over nineteen hundred years ago the Holy Child Jesus was born of the Virgin Mary in the little town of Bethlehem of Judea, and that He grew to be a strong, beautiful, stalwart man, and that at Nazareth he lived and toiled at the carpenter's bench for years, and there dignified honest labor by working with His own dear hands for His daily bread; that from there He came to Jerusalem and was crucified, to atone for the sins of the whole world, and that after the nails were in His feet, and the cruel crown of thorns on His brow, He gave up the ghost, and was buried by Joseph of Arimathea in his own newly made tomb; that after three days He burst the bars of the grave and appeared in human form again to His disciples; that He went to the Mount of Olives, and from these ascended to heaven and took His seat at the right hand of the Father, where He now intercedes for all his children, and from whence He will return with His holy angles to gather His loved ones home. My Heavenly Father gives me songs in the night in the house of my pilgrimage; one of my favorites is "Saved by Grace," beginning,

"Some day the silver cord will break,
And I no more as now shall sing;
But, oh, the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the King."

The other is "There'll be no dark valley when Jesus comes to gather his loved ones home." The latter will be my last song on earth before I join the ransomed of the skies.

My bark is on the bounding billows, but Jusus is my Guide and Pilot, and soon I'll cross the bar and anchor in the haven of eternal rest, where I will take up my harp again and join with Watts and Wesley, Frances R. Havergal, Philip P. Bliss, Robert Lowry and many more that I have known and loved, in singing the song of redemption around the throne of God in heaven. "God is Love."

IRA D. SANKEY,

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

REPUBLICAN PARTY UNITED IN THIS STATE

Chairman Thomas Parran Expresses Confidence in Maryland Outlook.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3.—The Republican State Central Committee met in the club room at the Rennert Hotel at noon today, elected Thomas Parran, the chairman, as treasurer under the provisions of the corrupt practice act, discussed the provisions of the new law and organized committees in two Congressional districts.

In calling the meeting to order Mr. Parran said there were no Republican dissentions in Maryland as far as he knew, and it was the duty of every Republican to do all in his power for the election of Taft and Sherman, and each one of the six Congressional candidates to be nominated. Independent Democrats were, he added, giving the party every encouragement,

"We have with us," continued Mr. Parran. "Ex Senator Louis Putzel, who will explain the corrupt practices act, Any question that may be put to him by anyone present will be answered. In the past two elections the Democrats have spent $5 to every $1 by us. If this corrupt-practices act had been in force last fall George R. Gaither would now be Governor of this State. The Democrats spent ten times as much money as we did in that campaign. They have boasted of the amount they had, while the Republicans did not have the cash to pay the expenses at heaquarters.

When Mr Parran concluded his remarks a resolution was offered naming him as treasurer of the committees and fixing his bond at $10,000. The choice was unanimous, several of those present offering motions designating Mr. Parran, but the matter was finally settled by adopting a resolution offered by Laban Sparks of Baltimore county. The committee authorized Irving Dickey, the secretary, to cast the ballot, which he did.

It was at this point that Mr. Parran rapped for order, using as a gavel the big stock carried by Congressman W. H. Jackson, and introduced Mr. Putzel as the man to make clear the provisions of the corrupt practice act. He had hardly gone well into the subject before questions were asked, and Mr. Putzel referred to the disputed points as to whether the act referred to the registration of voters.

"The father of this bill, like most fathers," said Mr. Putzel, "thinks it goes a little deeper than it really does go. He thinks it applies to the registration of voters. I do beg to disagree with him. I not think it was ever intended to apply to the registration, and an examination of this title will, I think, bear me out in this."

He said, furthermore, that the law was not in all cases perfectly plain, and he thought it lost time to go over it fully, as those upon whom the duty of abiding by its provisions would fall should have printed instructions to guide them. It was pointed out that while a man could not be paid for instructing the voters, still he could be paid for delivering printed instructions to the voters.

"Any man who is paid to deliver the instructions ought to be charitable enough to explain," was a comment on this, which was greeted with laughter.

Many questions were asked and there was some confusion until it was finally suggested by Gist Blair that Mr. Putzel prepare instructions. Congeessman Mudd objected. It was better, he said, to wait until the Attorney General has issued his interpretations. Then, said Mr. Mudd, if the Republicans think they can offer a better interpretation of the law than the Attorney General it will be time enough to act. It was finally decided to ask Mr. Putzel to submit instructions to Mr. Parran, who would consult with whomever he chose concerning them before he decided to distribute them broadcast.

The Republican for Job Work.

BANKS MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Financial Institutions Have Assets More than Sufficient to Provide Security for Additional Circulation Under New Bill.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The summary of reports of the condition of the national banks at the close of business July 15, 1908, shows the total of the item "bonds, securities, etc." held by the banks to be $765,875,220.

With a view to determining the amount of assets of this nature that would be available security for the additional circulation provided for by the Aldrich-Vreeland bill, in the event of an emergency, the controller of the currency has made a classification of the items which shows that the assets in question are ample in amount to provide security for additional circulation to the limit authorized by the Aldrich-Vreeland bill without resorting to commencial paper.

The country banks or those not located in reserve cities are shown by this statement to own nearly 70 per cent. of the state, municipal, etc., bonds, over 48 per cent of railroad and other corporation bonds and over 53 per cent of the combined investments of this character.

During the month of August, 1908, twenty national banking associations with total capital of $1,445,000 were authorized to begin business. Ten were banks with industrial capital of less than $50,000. The number of banks chartered since March 14, 1900, is 3,967, with authorized capital of $235,508,300, of which 2,567 were incorporated under the act of that date, and 1,400 with capital of $168,637,600 under the act of 1864. From the date mentioned to August 31, 508 state banks were converted into national banks, 1,268 state and private banks reorganized as national banks and 2,119 organized independently or others banks.

There were in existence at the close of business August 41, 6,870 national banks, with authorized capital of $934,835,275 and circulation outstanding secured by bonds of $625,986,993.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

A TRANSFORMATION.

Although Jones Shot a Deer, His Friends Are Skeptical.

Jones would like to meet the man that did it. He says that if the party who took the deer will disclose his identity he may keep the animal for his trouble. But it is not likely the guilty wretch will come forward, as he dislikes to attract attention. Jones returned day before yesterday from northern Michigan, where he had been on a hunting trip. He claims that he shot a deer while he was there and brought it home with him. At any rate, he had one with him when he got back. This much the neighbors are willing to testify to, as he was careful to hang the deer on the back porch, where the whole neighborhood could not help seeing it.

One neighbor has been unkind enough to insinuate that one of its legs was broken and that there were other indications to prove that the deer had been caught in a trap and clubbed to death. Unfortunately, this point must always remain in doubt unless the guilty person comes forward and adds his testimony regarding the facts in the case.

Jones, after seeing that the deer was hung where the neighbors could see it, went downtown, collected a party of friends and lured them up to the house by promising them some of the venison. On their way there they were vastly entertained by his vivid account of how he killed the deer by making a shot that was next to impossible. He took them around to the rear of the house, only to find that some one had substituted a dead calf in its place. It is hard to tell which makes Jones the maddest, the loss of the deer or the doubt that his friends express whether he really did kill a deer, as he says.—Detroit Free Press.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

TO A SUMMER GIRL.

Maiden of the matchless
Form and face divine,
You have turned this thatchless
Cranium of mine,
And with love I'm frantic,
Though 'tis true that I've Reached the unromantic
Age of forty-five.

There's a rather clumsy
Youth of twenty-two,
And when summer comes he
Dances after you.
With him you play tennis,
Golf and row and drive,
And my name is Dennis,
For I'm forty-five.

Feigning to instruct you
How to dive and swim,
Often has he ducked you—
How I envy him!
Would I were your teacher
When you learn to dive!
But, unhappy creature,
I am forty-five.

So my love I'll smother,
Bitter though it be,
And I'll woo your mother,
Who is fond of me.
She's a rich and merry
Widow, and I'll strive
To win her, though she's very Fat and forty-five.

—J. Adair Strawson in Puck.

Force of Habit.

"John! John!" called the excited little wife.

"W-what is it, Lucy?" muttered the big baseball player as he drowsily turned over in bed.

"Why, there is a man downstairs."

"W-what's he doing?"

"He—he's trying to reach the plate."

"Trying to reach the plate? Put him out, Kelly; put him out at third!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Flying Steak.

"Fine airship you have, old man," said the friend. "What do you call her?"

"The Porterhouse," replied the sky pilot.

"Named after a beefsteak. Well, well, well! Isn't that rather unusual"

"Not at all. I named her that because she is always rising."—Chicago News.

He Had Evoluted.

"I could a tail unfold"— began the newly fledged frog.

Then he paused and seemed to be wrapped in meditation.

"But," he concluded, "that is a thing of the past. I'm no longer a tadpole."—Denver News-Times.

Mutually Unintelligible.

"Bliggins and his wife seem to have a deep respect for each other's superior wisdom."

"Yes. He talks to her about nothing but baseball, and she talks to him about nothing but fashions."—Washington Star.

Nearly on the Shelf.

"That thin woman's face is familiar."

"Yes; that's Mrs. Snifkins."

"'Mrs.,' eh? She hasn't been married long, has she?"

"Well, not as long as she has been longing to be."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Full House.

Friendly Actor—Did you draw a full house last night?

Star Actor—Yes; but, curse my luck, my understudy stayed and drew four kings and took the pot.—Bohemian Magazine.

Natural Courtesy.

"Why do they talk of the rudeness of nature?"

"I don't know. To my idea, nature is very polite. Look at the dip of the waves, the bend of the river, the boughs of the trees."—Town and Country.

Tippitts' Failings.

Rickwell—I shall have to give Tippitts a talking to. He's too hard on my shirts.

Treadway—Tippitt is your laundryman, is he?

Rickwell—Laundryman? No; he's my valet.—Chicago Tribune.

Not That Kind.

"So John is at college?"

"Yes."

"I suppose, then, he's busy sowing his wild oats?"

"No; John is at an agricultural college."—Town Topics.

Especially if Ned Is Calling.

Love does not usually laugh at a parrot which says, "Now, George, you stop!" although, to our mind, this is much funnier than the average locksmith.—Detroit Free Press.

Freddy's Idea.

It was raining hard and Freddy was looking out of the window. In a minute, clapping his hands in delight, he exclaimed, "Oh, mother, the raindrops are kissing the puddles!"

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, MD.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigar

Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones. 4

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from B. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

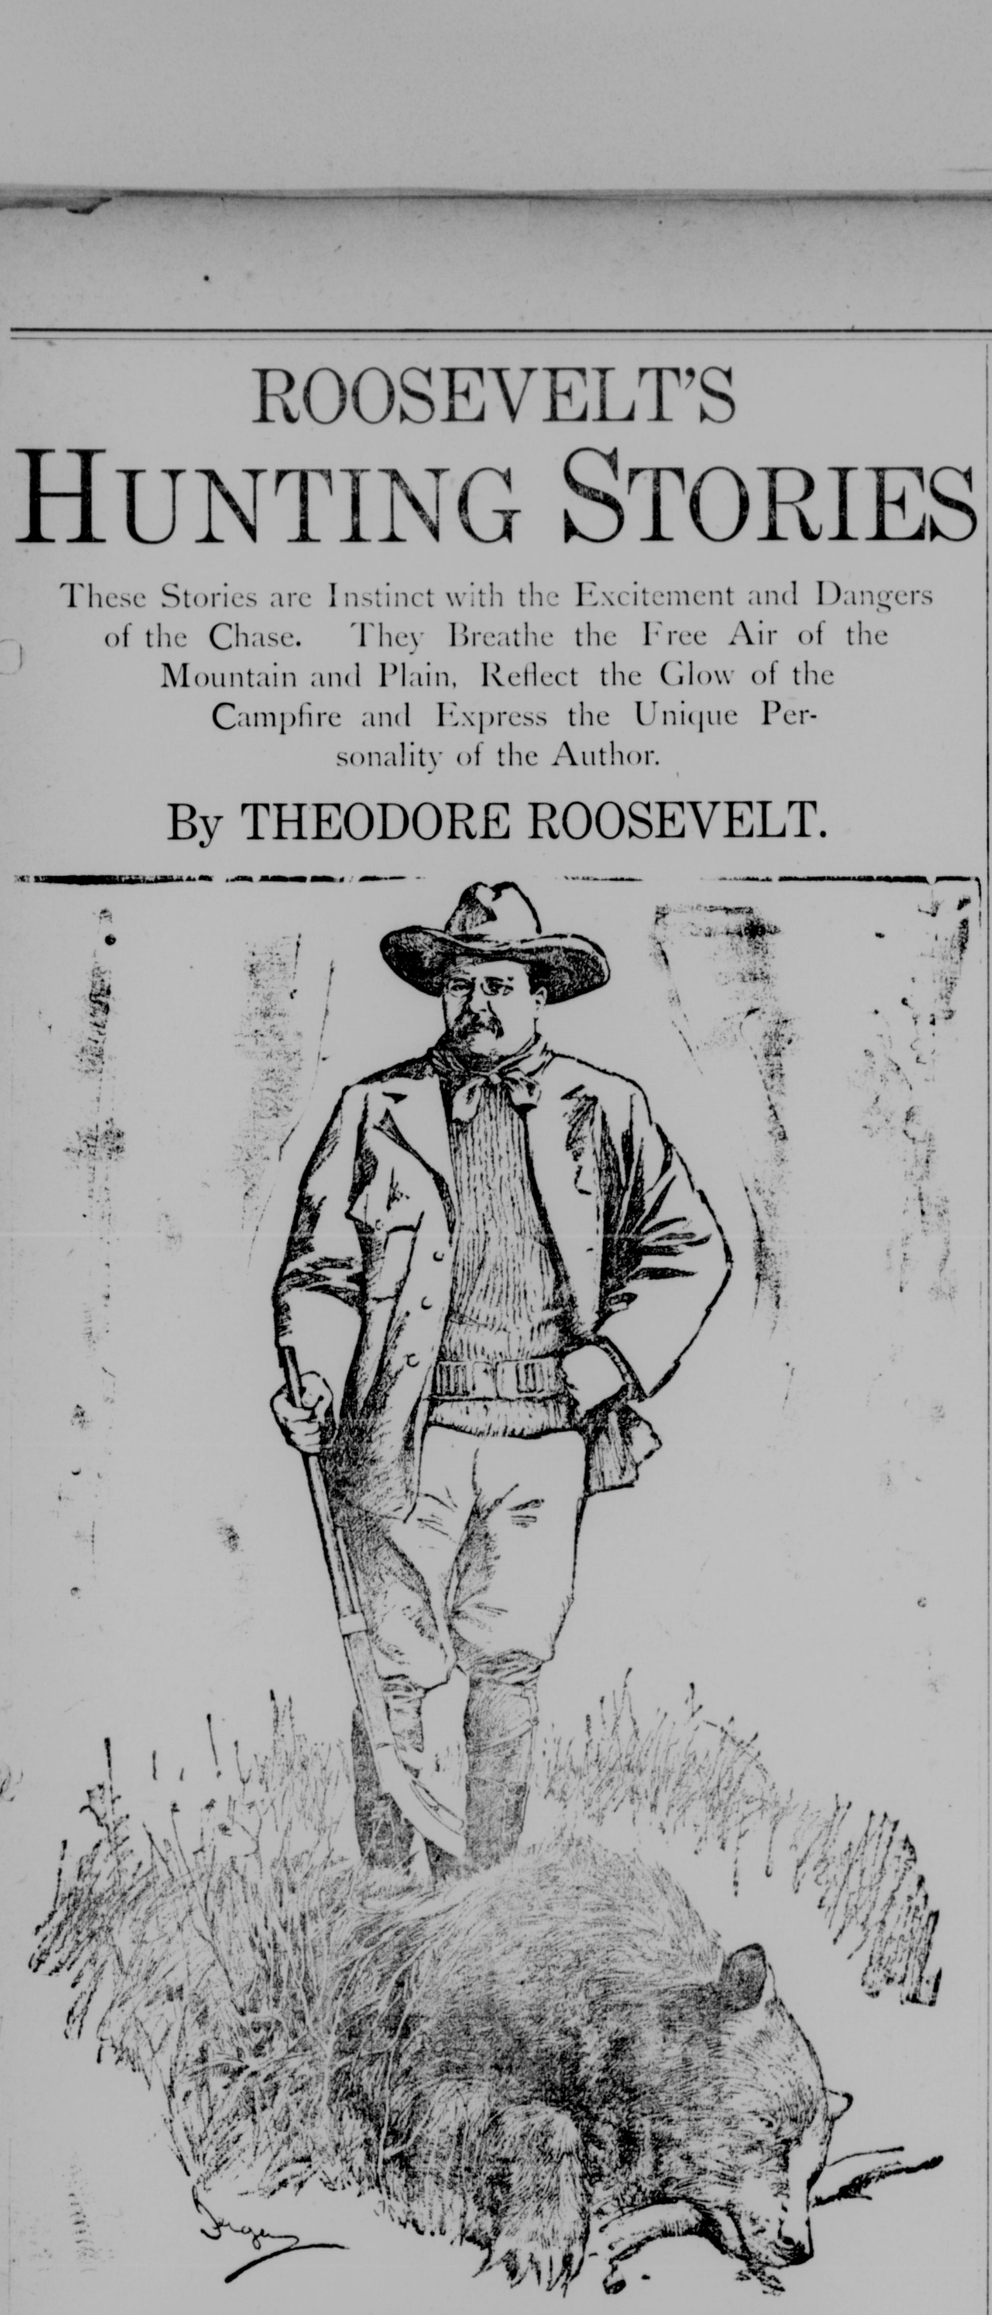
Given under our hands this 28th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSSER,
Administrators.

ROOSEVELT'S
HUNTING STORIES

These Stories are Instinct with the Excitement and Dangers of the Chase. They Breathe the Free Air of the Mountain and Plain, Reflect the Glow of the Campfire and Express the Unique Personality of the Author.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.



ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING STORIES

Written by Himself

Illustrated by Parker and Jones, with one page of double column cuts by Berger and Ryder

Most interesting stories of outdoor life ever written.
Each story will be published complete.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S deal with the Scribners for the publication of his jungle hunting stories puts him at the top notch as a popular writer. Not even Mark Twain has received the princely sum of $2.00 a word for his writings, the price it is figured Roosevelt will be paid.

Will Begin in These Columns Shortly

Up Country.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1908, by Alice Louise Lee.

SHE boarded a Broadway car at Fourteenth street, New York, being blown and jerked through the doorway and into the only empty seat space left.

It was an exceedingly narrow space, encroached upon on one side by a big red faced man and on the other by a dark hued son of Hungary.

Joy, being small, occupied the edge of the middle ground and stood her dripping umbrella in front of her. Then she leaned over the load of schoolbooks hugged under one arm and surveyed the hem of her skirt. It was damp.

"Oh, dear," she mourned inwardly, "I can just see it shrink, and it's the one Jim liked best!"

She squeezed herself farther back on the seat with a feeling of guilt. Three months before she had not had Jim's preferences so clearly in mind, but three months in New York had altered Joy's standpoint.

"OH, DEAR, I CAN JUST SEE IT SHRINK!"

She choked back the tears—they lay so near the surface now—and opened a book, but her thoughts would wander back to the "up country" which she had left, not content to settle down in the village school—or in a village home either, for that matter—after graduating from a normal college.

"Twenty-third street!" called the conductor.

Joy looked forlornly out into the early wet darkness and gave a sudden exclamation.

A car from the West Twenty-third street ferry had disgorged a crowd of transfers that were making a rush for her car. These the conductor met by the monotonous command, "Let 'em off—let 'em off!"

The crowd paused, held in check by a young man with a general appearance of squareness. His shoulders were square. So were his firm lower jaw and his tanned forehead.

As to his dealings, Joy could testify that they also were square, too square sometimes in that he had taken her at her word and for three dreary months remained silent.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "it's Jim!"

Fortunately neither the large man nor the son of Hungary understood the English language or the language of tones or they would have suspected that a Klondike had suddenly been rolled to the feet of the damp little public school substitute between them.

Impulsively she struggled to her feet under the impression that she was going to meet Jim and as impulsively sat down again, remembering that she could not. Would he see her? She waited breathlessly, with parted lips, when he entered.

In looking for a seat his eyes traveled straight past the now trembling little substitute without seeing her. A big lump rose in her throat. Perhaps he did not wish to see her. Perhaps he had been in the city for weeks and had not looked her up. It was just as well, she reasoned, that he had not, because her landlady had recently rented the parlor, so there would have been no place for him to sit, but—but she wanted to be remembered just the same.

The lump in her throat increased in size, and the lights blurred. "Up country" she had been of too great importance to be overlooked.

The square young man had found a seat on the same side of the car, and nothing of him was visible from Joy's position save the hand bag at his feet. Joy had not noticed this before. It proclaimed the fact that he had just arrived, and she was suddenly enabled to swallow the lump in her throat.

At Thirty-first street an old colored mammy boarded the car and, after one look at the full seats, clung to a strap. There was an instant's pause, and then Joy's eyes glowed softly and Joy's heart beat warmly.

"That's like Jim," she whispered to herself. "That's the way they do up country," for the square young man was clinging to the strap and the colored mammy was seated.

His back was toward Joy now—his straight, square shouldered back. It rested her just to look at it. She had not realized before how tired she was. Being only a substitute, she was the natural prey of every grade in the great school building where her task was the unenviable one of taking the place of absent teachers, one day in this room, one day in that, a stranger to every pupil, who celebrated her advent by a display of all the tricks known to the east side youth.

"Forty-second!" called the conductor.

Joy arose, trembling. She wondered if she could speak to Jim without crying. She had such a silly desire to cry. Jim solved her problem unexpectedly by reaching over, picking up his hand bag from between his feet and pushing his way out ahead of her, little dreaming for whom he was making a path.

He did not know until he stood on the curb and raised his umbrella. Then he discovered that it sheltered two, and the other was looking up with an adorable expression of timidity in her face and a little timid quaver in the voice which said, "How do you do, Jim?"

"Joy!" cried Jim.

Down went the hand bag hard on the wet pavement, and Joy's damp gloved hand was enveloped in a big dry one and held there tightly while Jim's eyes, thrown off their guard by the unexpectedness of the meeting, said things he had resolved they never should repeat, while he answered her greeting with an emphasis which brought the color to her pale cheeks.

"I'm doing very well—now—thank you."

Then they both laughed, Joy with a little girlish giggle which sounded strange to her own ears. It had been so long since she had laughed out of sheer happiness.

Some one pushing against them brought them back to a realization of time and place. Jim released her hand, asking vaguely, "And is everything well with you, Joy?"

Joy hesitated. Could she answer the question without giving way to the pent up feeling of three months?

"Oh, I"— she began and paused, looking away.

Jim, glancing down at her averted face, suddenly remembered things. There was an abrupt change in his manner. Stooping, he picked up his grip, saying dryly, "A foolish question to ask after hearing some of your letters read."

Then, without looking at her, he asked, "Which car do you take?"

"Crosstown east," she replied in a muffled tone.

As Jim signaled a car he volunteered the information stiffly, "I'm in the city on business."

"Oh!" faintly from Joy, but she smiled.

Within the car there was but scant seating room, and Joy snuggled back behind Jim's shoulder, saying to herself: "Such a foolish boy! Such a dear, foolish boy!"

Aloud she asked quietly, "Jim, what did you mean about my—my letters?"

Jim sat bolt upright, looking through the opposite window. "Your aunt read me some of them that told how you were enjoying yourself down here and how much livelier New York life is than our 'up country' life. I believe you wrote that the people here called it 'up country?'"

"Yes," came in a low tone from behind his shoulder. Joy's pride had dictated those letters.

"And then you wrote about the school—what a magnificent building you were in and how fine it is to be part of a school with fifty teachers instead of an insignificant six."

"Oh!" exclaimed Joy. "Did I say that?" But she knew without asking. She had been so determined that no one up country should suspect her regret.

Jim nodded, staring persistently out of the opposite window, and continued steadily, "Then she read one, the letter about your boarding house and what nice people are there"—

"Oh," interrupted Joy, "did she read you that letter?"

Jim squared his shoulders defiantly. "She did."

Behind his arm Joy was smiling faintly, while into her eyes crept an expression of mischief as she peered around the aggressive shoulder at the face set aggressively toward the window.

"Let's see"—Joy's tone was softly speculative—"what else did I write in regard to the boarders?"

No reply.

"I think it was in that letter I told about the lawyer who sits opposite me at table, but perhaps auntie didn't read you that part," demurely.

STARING OUT OF THE OPPOSITE WINDOW.

Only an indistinct affirmation from Jim.

"A very bright man," observed Joy.

"So you said in the letter," grimly.

"Rather nice looking."

If Jim had not been so intent on the opposite window he would have detected the smile in Joy's tone.

"Handsome, the letter said."

"He addresses his remarks almost exclusively to me."

"Exclusively, the letter said."

"Madison avenue!" called the conductor.

A moment later Jim and Joy stood on the curb under one umbrella waiting for a blockaded car. Jim stood straight and stiff, holding the umbrella high over their heads, admitting the cold, wet world to their conference.

"Jim!" said Joy softly, glancing up. "Jim."

His face relaxed at her tone, but his voice was still grim and the umbrella held high. "Well?"

"The schoolhouse is a handsome building on the outside, just as I wrote; but, Jim, the pupils up country are so much nicer. Because I'm only a substitute they act—oh, you never saw such actions!"

Jim's muscles stiffened suggestively. "I'd just like to get at 'em," he muttered.

"And, Jim"—Joy's tone was fainter and her face hidden—"it's true, of course, that life here is livelier than it is up country for some, but not for me. All I do is to go to school in the morning and go back to my hall bedroom at night. Oh, I hate it!" with suppressed vehemence.

The umbrella wavered and dropped lower over their heads. Jim's face was eager, but his voice sounded a jealous note as he prompted, "But there are all the nice people at the boarding house."

Joy shook her head. "It takes so long to make acquaintances here, Jim. I don't really know any of the boarders—that is, any one worth knowing."

Again the umbrella wavered, dropped a little lower, but rose again as Jim hesitated jealously, "That lawyer, Joy?"

Joy smiled and glanced bravely up, although her eyes were moist. But behind the tears gleamed the mischief as she replied:

"I—I didn't tell all the truth about the lawyer, Jim. He—he has a wife out west suing for a divorce, and I don't blame her a bit."

The umbrella wavered no longer, but dropped promptly close above their heads. A car, escaping the blockade in front of the Grand Central station, came groaning around the curve and stopped. All the waiting transfers save two scrambled on board. Those two were not aware of the existence of that car or the one which followed, so successfully did the big umbrella from "up country" shut out the cold, rainy world.

THE BIG UMBRELLA SHUT OUT THE WORLD.

The Persians.

The people of Persia are intelligent, adaptable, hospitable and sociable. They have kindly and generous instincts. They are very sensitive to the opinions that their neighbors have of them, particularly in matters intellectual. Their amour propre is seldom for their country, but more often for themselves, their town or their religion. Still, it is a strong feeling. In moral matters it is easier to induce them to exceed their duty than to perform it strictly. They are very commercial in their ideas, but their notion of commerce is rather to effect a coup, and whether in business or in ordinary behavior a transaction where you simply do the right thing without seeking either much advantage or much credit will always strike them as hopelessly banal. They are therefore very unreliable and appear to the western to be lacking in character. They are extraordinarily apt at imitation, and they quickly conform themselves to any change of circumstances. This seems to be partly owing to their lack of depth and to the usual absence of a desire to change anything under the surface, but this lack of depth is only comparative. A Persian is not a fool, and on certain matters that are thrust before his eyes he sees much more deeply than the European.—Contemporary Review.

A Spanish Street Scene.

In nothing is the illiterate condition of Spain shown as in the numerous writing booths which line the streets of Barcelona. Spain has preserved much of the picturesque life of past ages, and even at the present day in many of its towns may be seen the watchman, with pike and lantern, going his nightly rounds not far from a fine street brilliantly illuminated by the electric light.

In the Rambla, the principal street of Barcelona, may be seen several of these writing booths of the public scribes. There for a small consideration the illiterate or any one else may have anything indited from the poetry of a love epistle to the prosaic application for a situation. The front of each booth is placarded with the name of the scribe and the services he is prepared to render to his customers. Some scribes combine the art of painting with that of writing, and all add to their activities the business of registry offices for servants.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK,

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

HUGHES ON BRYAN.

It would possibly be expecting too much of Mr. Bryan to have him throw up the sponge and declare for the election of Mr. Taft. It is surprising, however, to clear-headed people that he should still cling to his proposals. The scimetar of argument, plied by Mr. Taft and now by Mr. Hughes, has reduced to tatters the net with which he had expected to capture the votes of the country. Never since Mr. Bryan was buffeted about by the economists and financiers of the country for his silver views has he been so scathingly analyzed and found wanting as in the Youngstown speech of Governor Hughes. We call for popular election of senators, says Mr. Bryan. So does Mr. Taft, replies Governor Hughes, but to bring this to pass requires a constitutional amendment and is hardly a subject upon which to elect a president. We declare against the tyranny of the speaker of the House, says Mr. Bryan. And would substitute the tyranny of a minority! replies Governor Hughes.

It is when the New York Governor riddles the larger proposals of Bryan, however, that the particular qualities of his clear slightedness appear. For the curbing of the trusts Mr. Bryan would have placed upon the free list all articles coming into competition with those controlled by the "trusts," which, aptly responded Mr. Taft, might destroy the trusts, but would assuredly crush the small competitors of the trusts. Now, Governor Hughes adds that Mr. Bryan has wiggled out of his platform by saying he has other trust-curbing propositions up his sleeve and might not invoke the one in the platform. "What then," asks Governor Hughes, "becomes of the essential justice of the proposal, and what part does it play in immediate revision"? A knotty question for anyone who is not an adept in political juggling."

When the speaker discussed the Bryan trust-busting scheme of a federal license for any corporation controlling more than 25 per cent. of the product and the prohibition of control of more than 50 per cent. he showed the fallacies that make surprising Bryan's claim of benefits. Governor Hughes is not impressed by the magician wand of Bryan and disillusions the candid-minded of the charm cast by the Nebraskan's eloquence and argument. Pointing out the ambiguity of the Bryan expression, "any product consumed in the United States," he asks, "does it refer to a class of commodities or to each separate article of commerce?" If the latter, then "what account does this proposal take of the skill and initiative of manufacturers who have built up a more or less exclusive trade in particular objects often protected by trade-marks, although in most active competition with other articles designed for the same general purpose and seeking the same market?" In an effort to correct business evils are we, he asks, to "place an embargo upon honest endeavor whose activities present none of the causes requiring remedies?" How long is the rule of excess of production to apply? What system "shall be devised by which suitable information may be furnished in the way of danger signals, so that the manufacturer may know when he is about to exceed the ratio?" Many articles are covered by trade-marks. Are the patent laws to be wiped out in order that there shall be no "indefensible private monopoly?" Then should the Bryan proposition go into effect, how about the dismemberment of plants when their production exceeds 20 per cent.? How about the loss of employment to those suffering the reduction of output and the consequent idleness of capital? "The proposal is in utter disregard of the fact of business." Such is the summary made by Mr. Hughes.

In like manner the speaker punctured the bank-guarantee proposal. He showed that, no matter how the bank losses might be made good, the plan placed a premium upon dishonesty and recklessness, and that there would be a great increase in bank failures. On the other hand, Bryan has nothing to supply the demands for an elastic currency. Certainly the great bulk of the people will sheer far off from the Bryan proposals and accept the statement of Mr. Hughes: "It is to the Republican party under its wise and experienced leadership that we must look in the present exigency for proper guidance."

MR. TAFT'S APPEAL TO THE SOLID SOUTH.

The solidity of the South is about the only political relic we have still with us of the war between the States. There are social problems, indeed, and most serious; but they are the relics of the institution of slavery, primarily; not of the war. The Democratic South alone recalls the schism of the sixties.

Judge Taft is right when he appeals to the south to end this condition. There is no longer excuse for it. Time was when it was fondly hoped that the glorious response of the Southern States to the call of the Spanish War would end the old sectional feeling, but thus far it has not done so to the extent of changing the political complexion of any of the States.

There is nothing in present political and economic issues to justify the solidarity of the South. The South is not solidly opposed to protection; its marvelous industrial development rather has inclined it more and more to protection. It stands with the North for the new moral issues in affairs; for more effective control of great industrial forces; for such division of government burdens between the State and Federal governments as will make possible effective administration within the Constitution.

The South ought not to continue a Democratic Gibraltar. Its own interest demands that it assume a different and more liberal attitude. Its economic questions—aside from that of races are the same as those of the rest of the country.

Certainly the last decade should have assured the South that the North sympathizes with it in its race problem. Certainly it should be convinced that the day is past when there is danger of a Republican Congress imposing "negro domination" on the South by process of force bills or legislation to reduce Southern representation. True, in the last session of Congress idiotic counsels prevailed with a few partisan bigots and induced them to lug in this ancient threat; but nothing came of it, and nothing ever will. If this is what the South fears, can it not realize that it would be safer if it were divided between the two parties on other questions, but always ready to present a solid front on this one?

The truth is that the whole country, and the South especially, would recognize, ten years hence, that the breaking up of the solid South was a great achievement, if it could be accomplished this year. The Democratic party is hamstrung and hopeless so long as it is tied to this issue. The party, the country, and particularly the South, would be better for the dissolution of the anachronistic solidarity which keeps alive an unworthy tradition of sectional opposition.

THE GERMAN VOTE.

The Washington Star, a thoroughly independent newspaper, does not believe that Mr. Bryan will receive the solid German-American vote. The Star of Saturday says:

The following appears in a Lincoln dispatch published in this morning's newspapers:

"Mr. Bryan secured much gratification over the hour's consultation he had at Fairview today with Herman Ridder, of New York, and head of the Democratic German-American bureau. Mr. Ridder told Bryan that the German-American vote, which has never been for Bryan, is being swung to him as a unit this year on the tariff issue."

This is plainly a campaign exaggeration. Mr. Ridder, we may all be sure, never gave Mr. Bryan any such assurance. He is a man of influence, and the paper of which he is the editor, the New York Staats Zeitung, printed in the German language, is supporting Mr. Bryan zealously. It is in fact Mr. Bryan's sole New York city reliance so far as the press is concerned, the World's support being eccentric, and qualified with a hundred ifs, buts and ands.

But Mr. Ridder would not assume to speak for the German-American vote. That, he well knows, is not swung, or swingable, as a unit by anybody, to anybody on any issue. It is a thinking vote, and as a rule shows on election day the courage of its thoughts. This has sometimes been disputed, but never successfully. Men reputed to carry the German-American vote in their vest pockets have never delivered it as per. Candidates giving heed to such claims have always been disappointed.

Why should the German-American vote go as a unit to Mr. Bryan on the tariff issue? The majority of voters of German birth or descent are not free traders, but protectionists. Past elections when the tariff was an issue determined that. States where such voters were numerous ranged themselves in the Republican column. The German-American, so-called—on political issues he thinks and acts solely as an American—is in many cases a prosperous business man, and issues like the tariff and sound money appeal to him on his practical side. Talk to him about free trade or a fifty-cent dollar and he shakes his head at once and vigorously. He wants none of either.

Tariff revision is a certainty. The German-American knows that as well as the next man. With him as with the next man, the only question relates to the form of revision. Shall it be on lines preserving the principle of protection, or on those leading by degrees and rapidly as possible to free trade? Mr. Bryan wants the dog's tail amputated just behind the animal's ears. The German-American protectionists knows where the dog's tail proper ends.

No, the German-American vote is not to be swung as a unit to Mr. Bryan on the tariff issue, nor the labor vote to him on the injunction issue, nor the Jewish vote to him because Judge Taft in passing through Russia paid his respects to the czar, nor the negro vote to him because of the Brownsville episode. The American electorate—fortunately for the country—is not divisible in any such tom-fool fashion.

MR. BRYAN'S SCHEME FOR MAKING THE FARMERS PROSPEROUS

Mr. Bryan talked to the farmers of Nebraska on Friday, and the press reports say that he made a great hit. The feature of his address was his advice to farmers to go to Congress. Could anything be more like Mr. Bryan? If his advice means anything, it means that if enough farmers could get into Congress to affect legislation they could legislate themselves rich. That is the old Bryan theory. It is the free-silver business over again. Legislation, legislation, and then more legislation, as a panacea for all ills.

The Government is now doing something for the farmers. It tells the railroads that they shall not charge him more than a certain price for transporting his products. It tells the beef and pork packers that they shall not combine in order to force down the price of what the farmers sells. It tells the manufacturers of machinery and twine and other things the farmer buys that they shall not combine and charge him more than should be charged for what he buys. Of course, it hoodwinks him by giving him a tariff to protect him from foreign competition that does him about as much good as if he were competing with the planet Mars. But even in the matter of the tariff things seem to be coming the farmer's way. At least both parties have promised to revise the tariff, and it does not seem possible that there can be a revision that will not be advantageous to the farmers. In addition, the Government spends millions of dollars annually on the rural mail delivery, which takes the farmer's mail right to his door.

On the whole, it would seem that the farmer is getting about his fair share of good things. Of all men the farmer seems at this time to be least in need of sympathy. The price of cattle, hogs, sheep, of corn and wheat is soaring. Pretty much everything the farmer sells is sky high. Why does Mr. Bryan try to imbue him with the idea that he can't be happy unless there is more legislation in his behalf? We can imagine but one reason, and that is Mr. Bryan's perfect mania for curing all ills that affect humanity by legislation. Legislation can't make the rain fall or the sun shine or crops to thrive here while they languish elsewhere. Legislation has nothing to do with the hundred and one details that enter into the question of the farmer's productiveness. It is a pity that so eloquent a talker as Mr. Bryan should use his great talents to imbue unthinking people with the idea that the Government and legislation have so much to do with their success or failure in life.

How little Mr. Bryan really represents what we have always been taught to believe in the Democratic doctrine that that country is best governed which is least governed!

Resolutions of Respect.

At a recent meeting of Swanton Grange No. 194, held at Swanton, Garrett county, the following resolutions on the death of James H. Wilhelm, of Blaine, a member of the Grange, were unamiously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Allwise Father to remove from our midst a patron of husbandry in the person of our dearly beloved Brother James H. Wilhelm, who departed this life on September 2, 1908; therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and invoke the blessing of the Allwise Father to rest upon them, believing their loss to be his gain; and be it further

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days and a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our order; that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased and also to THE REPUBLICAN and to the Business Farmer.

There is never a heart that knows no care,
Nor eyes that are always bright;
Nor lips that are always smiling fair—
Nor a day without a night.

But there are hours of bliss so sweet—
They more than outweigh life's sorrow,
And the path that is rough today for our feet
Will be bright with bloom tomorrow.

J. G. FRIEND,
EDWARD SHANK,
A. F. GEORGE,
Committee.

Attend To It Now.

Septemt er or October should see your cemetery lot beautified. Let us erect a monument before the snow comes. Make a selection from our stock at Frostburg, or at our Cumberland Yard, No. 99 North Centre street, or wait for one of our salesmen. Our stock of finished monuments at Cumberland is said to be the finest in the State. 27-3t

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., AUG. 19, 1908.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1890, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intends each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

F. E. Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Theophilus George, Republican, Judge of Election, Swanton.

Gus Harvey, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Clarence Sweltzer, Republican, Clerk of Election, Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Thos. Fike, Sr., Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; W. M. Frazee, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Charles Fike, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; W. F. East, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Noah Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Jacob S. Fresh, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Clarence E. Stanton, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Charles Zehner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Thomas Michael, Democrat, Judge of Election, Westernport; Grant Hershberger, Republican Judge of Election, Bloomington.

S. F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

P. J. Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Amaziah Turney, Republican, Judge of Election, Strawn, Pa.

Charles C. Schlossnagle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, R. F. D. No. 2; Asa Beachley, Republican, Clerk of Election, Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Wm. G. Mattingly, Democrat, Judge of Election, Hoyes; James W. Wilburn, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Edgar F. Jinkins, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Cranesville; D. W. Fraker, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

James L. Barnard, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Thomas Callis, Republican, Judge of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Edward F. Smouse, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park; Warren Rathbun, Republican, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

John L. Harvey, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gormania; Joseph M. Conneway, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

Mortimer G. Williams, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gormania; James Aronhalt, Republican, Clerk of Election, Wilson, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Robert C. Minick, Republican, Judge of Election, Finzel.

Pat Hoye, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg; T. A. Werner, Republican, Clerk of Election, Finzell.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

P. J. Lohr, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

T. J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; Wilford Chadderton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

George S. Warwick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Hugh Weir, Republican, Judge of Election, Lonaconing.

Jonas Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bond; John T. Green, Republican, Clerk of Election Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Thompson Gilpin, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bittinger; Albert Brenneman, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Perry Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; C. L. Beltzel, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

H. L. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Kitzmillerville; John H. Rafter, Republican, Judge of Election, Kitzmillerville.

David S. Sharpless, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville; H. L. Price, Republican, Clerk of Election, Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

James A. Delawder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Raymond Saucer, Republican, Judge of Election, Crellin.

Wm. F. King, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; R. C. Townshend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

D. M. MASON, Pres.,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

REPUBLICAN MEETINGS

Grand Republican Meetings will be held at the following named places and dates:

Sang Run, Monday, Sept. 14,
At 2 o'clock P. M.;

Accident, Monday, Sept. 14,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.;

Bittinger, Tuesday, Sept. 15,
At 2 o'clock P. M.;

Grantsville, Tuesday, Sept. 15,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.;

Friendsville, Wednesday, Sept. 16,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.,

Swanton, Thursday, Sept. 17,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.;

Kitzmillersville, Friday, Sept. 18,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.;

Deer Park, Saturday, Sept. 19,
At 2 o'clock P. M.;

Bloomington, Saturday, Sept. 19,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.

Come out and hear the Issues of the Campaign ably discussed by the Hon. Geo. A. Pearre.

LADIES SPECIALLY INVITED.

Republican State Central Committee.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m, and 7.30 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows: Sunday school at 9.15 a. m.
Preaching 10.30 a. m., by Rev. W. L. Davidson, D. D., of Washington, D. C.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHS

Services next Sunday as follows:
Mt. Lake Park—Class meeting 10 a. m., preaching 11 a. m., Sunday school at 2.30 p. m., Epworth League 7 p. m., preaching 8 p. m.
Deer Park—Sunday school 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m.; Epworth League at 7 p. m.
Wesley Chapel—Sunday school at 9.30 a. m., and preaching at 10.30 a. m.
All are cordially invited to attend.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

See The Republican for Job Printing

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$277,285 68
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		113,000 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		708 62
Due from State Banks and Bankers		2,150 80
Due from approved reserve agents		43,914 65
Checks and other cash Items		364 75
Notes of other National Banks		475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$30,591 70
Legal-tender notes	5,250 00	35,781 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$582,485 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,686 45
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	3,482 92
Due to State Banks and Bankers	104 02
Dividends unpaid	100 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,677 84
Time certificates of deposit	202,695 63
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 58
Total	$582,485 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. J. G. Nine, of near Bayard, was a business caller at this office yesterday morning.

Dixon & Kelso have added a Bell telephone to their office fixtures. 2t

State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of near Bayard, was a visitor to Oakland last Saturday.

Capt. Robert H. Gordon, of Cumberland, was in Oakland Tuesday on professional business.

Mrs. E. Fundenburg and daughter Miss Tecla, of near Deer Park, were in Oakland yesterday afternoon shopping.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

Mrs. Herman Creutzburg and Miss Orlie Dunham, who spent ten days at Atlantic City, have returned to their homes in Oakland.

Miss Sallie Fairfax and Mrs. R. W. Monroe, of Kingwood, are guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell in Oakland.

Mr. Wallace Mason returned to Buckhannon, W. Va., yesterday morning to resume his studies in the West Virginia Wesleyan College

Messrs. Milton and Edward Sincell returned to Gettysburg College Monday morning after having spent their vacation in Oakland with their parents.

Mrs. Laura Trippett, formerly of Kingwood, spent Tuesday and yesterday in Oakland with friends, leaving yesterday for Baltimore, her present home.

Mr. Samuel Mosser, one of Accident's merchants, was in Oakland last Friday and Saturday on business, being accompanied here by Mr. Hartman, of the Cove.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnished or unfurnished.

Misses Mabel Porter and Eleanor Peddicord and Rev. J. B. Workman attended the Epworth League Convention at Hoyes Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Mr. J. N. Robinson and family, who have been occupying the Episcopal rectroy during the past summer, will move on the 17th inst. to the Mr. Horace R. DeWitt's house on Second street.

Mr. Ernest L. Ashby, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Ashby, of Oakland, recently graduated from Western Maryland College, left here on Sunday night for Pineville, Oregon, where he will take the principalship of the public school in that town.

Mrs. J. Wilson Humbird, who has been here for a number of weeks as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Offutt, left for a ten days' visit to Atlantic City Tuesday evening. At Cumberland Mrs. Humbird was joined by Miss Anna Spier who will accompany her on the trip.

Plans have been prepared by Mr. John Ault for a new residence to be erected yet this fall by Mr. John Yelloly on his lot opposite the new jail. Mr. Yelloly's old house, recently torn down, was one among the oldest buildings in town, it having been erected more than half a century ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Delawder and children, of Washington, D. C., who were guests for several days of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Weimer in Oakland, left here yesterday afternoon for their home, accompanied by Mr. Delawder's mother who will spend the winter in Washington.

Capt. Maulsby, commander of the famous Maulsby Battery which during the Civil war did such terrific work for the cause of the Union, is suffering with rheumatism of the heart at his home in Mountain Lake Park. He is being cared for by members of his family and a corps of trained nurses.

Ex-Sheriff Lloyd C. Shaffer, of Carmel, Preston county, W. Va., accompanied by his brother, Mr. Richard Shaffer, of Baltimore, were in Oakland a day or two this week, having driven to Oakland from Baltimore in a Pullman auto, Messrs. Shaffer Bros. being the sales agents for this machine for Maryland and West Virginia.

Messrs. J. M. Davis & Sons, the hardware merchants, have a force of men at work clearing off the ground in the rear of their store building for an addition 15X40 feet. The addition will be two stories high with a seven-foot basement. A heating plant will be installed from which heat will be conveyed to the store and also the residence of Rev. John M. Davis.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

A NEW COAL COMPANY

To Operate in Garrett County, Formed Under the Laws of Delaware.

Last Monday the Thompson Coal and Coke Company of Garrett county, with a paid up capital of $300,000, was incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware for the purpose of mining coal and manufacturing coke in Garrett county.

The offices and directors of this corporation are Joseph W. Thompson, president and general manager; W. R. Tyler, secretary and treasurer. Joseph W. Thompson, W. R. Tyler, Thomas D. Coulston and M. M. Murcel, of Philadelphia, C. E. Hilleary, of Gorman, this county, and W. I. N. Lofland, of Dover, Del., directors.

The main office of the new company will be located in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McCandlish, of Friendsville, accompanied by Mrs. U. B. McCandlish, of Piedmont, who was the guest of the former at their home in Friendsville for two weeks, drove up to Oakland Saturday afternoon, where they were joined that evening by Mr. U. B. McCandlish, the party spending Sunday and Monday here.

LOST—Ladies brooch. Pink enameled flower and small barouque pearl. Reward if returned to First National Bank.

Mr. Rizer Shrout, who lives just on the outskirts of Oakland on the west where he farms in a small way, brought to this office last Saturday afternoon several specimen potatoes of the White Elephant variety. The tubers are shapely, of an even size and averaging in weight one pound each. The largest of those brought in by the donor weighing one pound and two ounces.

Messrs. A. F. George, of Swanton, and Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, two of the three members of the Republican County Committee, were in Oakland last Saturday where they in conjunction with Col. A. G. Sturgiss, the third member of the committee, arranged for a series of political meetings to be held at various points in the county beginning Monday afternoon of next week. For places and hours of the meetings see advertisement elsewhere in this paper today.

Two horses for sale. Apply to Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md.

Maj. Edward A. Weed, the "Pacific Coast Rough Rider," claiming to be the oldest international cycle tourist in the world, passed through Oakland this morning enroute from New York, which city he left on May 28th, to San Francisco. Maj. Weed expects to reach his destination in about three months. From Oakland the cyclist, who is a Grand Army man, started for Grafton over the West Union and Northwestern Turnpike. Thus far in his journey he has traversed 2725 miles, an average of about 26 miles per day.

Mr. Charles E. Hilleary, of District No. 8, was in Oakland Monday of this week on business and told of an experience which befel him the other morning. Farmer folks at this season of the year are generally very early risers. It seems that Hilleary had just hired a new harvest hand and along about 4 o'clock in the morning he called the men as well as the members of his household. The new man came down the stairway, grip in hand, and when asked where he was going surprised Hilleary with this rejoinder: "I'm going some where to stay all night but will be back in the morning in time to go to work." That particular harvest hand is not disturbed so early in the morning now.

The Picnic a Great Success.

Last Thursday the picnic held at the Bradley Farm by the Presbyterian and Lutheran Sunday schools jointly, was a grand success, more than three hundred persons being present. The day was spent joyfully by all in attendance. Dinner was spread in picnic fashion under the great oak trees in the grove above the farmhouse which was enjoyed hugely by all. Som were present who had not been at such a gathering in a quarter of a centry and to them the day was one of unalloyed pleasure. After dinner games were indulged in and later in the afternoon the return home was made.

Ladies Visit Camp.

On last Tuesday a party of Oakland ladies composed of Misses Beatrice Heyward, Sue Littman, Anita Poling, Pearl Lawton, Margaret Lawton, Prema Bolden, Bess Ward, Bess Hinebaugh and Ona Lantz spent the day in camp with the Y. C. C. boys who are located down on the Yough river. During the day all the pleasures of camp were indulged in and at evening a big camp fire was built, corn roasted, after which the girls departed for home.

Harvest Home Services.

The annual Harvest Home services were held last Sunday morning in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, when Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the church, delivered a sermon fitting the occasion. The church was tastily decorated with sheaf grain, corn, vegetables, fruits and evergeens, the colors of the fruits and vegetables in contrast with the finish and furniture of the church being very beautiful. Dr. J. G. Robinson presided at the organ, rendering excellent service.

MASONS WILL LAY CORNERSTONE

Of The New Baptist Church at Loch Lynn Heights.

The Masonic Fraternity of Oakland has received and accepted an invitation from Rev. C. W. Hudson, pastor, to officiate at the laying of the cornerstone of the proposed new Baptist church at Loch Lynn Heights, opposite Mt. Lake Park.

The date for the laying of the stone not yet been definitely fixed, but it will occur some time during the first week of October.

Married.

Harvey—Browning—In Cumberland Monday morning at nine o'clock, Miss Blanche Browning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Browning, of near Oakland, became the bride of Mr. William A. Harvey, of Gorman, this county. After the ceremony the couple went to Hagerstown and later will go to Washington, where the honeymoon will spent. They will be at home at Gorman after the 20th inst. The bride is one of Garrett county's charming daughters and the groom is a progressive business man. They have the best wishes of The Republican and a host of friends for a long and prosperous married life.

SHAFFER—HART—One of the most beautiful church weddings ever solemnized in Oakland was that which took place at ten o'clock yesterday morning in St. Peter's Catholic church when Miss Anna Elizabeth Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hart, of Oakland, became the bride of Mr. Daniel Leo Shaffer, also of Oakland, but residing for the present in Wheeling, West Va. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James E. Connell, pastor of St. Peter's church, with the nuptial mass. The church was beautifully decorated with hydrangeas, smilax, ferns and plams. The bride entered the church accompanied by her father and was attended by Miss Alice Hart as maid of honor and by Misses Josephine and Estella Hart, Marie Helbig and Annie Lowenstein as bridesmaids. At the chancel rail the bride was met by the groom who was attended by Mr. Edward Shaffer, his brother, as best man. The ushers were Messrs. Edward Helbig, Harry McComas, William W. Grant and Roy Hammond. The bride was handsomely gowned in white satin and carried a boquet of bride's roses and smilax. The maid of honor wore pink, while the bridesmaids were gowned in white and carried bouquets of hydrangea. After the ceremony a reception was tendered the couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hart at which quite a number of friends and relatives were present. The couple left for the east on train No. 14 yesterday afternoon and will return to Wheeling shortly where they will be at home to their friends after October 1st. They have the best wishes of a hosts of friends for a long and prosperous happy married life.

Is it a Joke?

For the past two or three days the town has been strewn with handbills announcing in high flown language that a meeting of the Democrats and the conservatives of all parties will be held in Hart's Hall tonight to organize a Bryan and Kern Club. The matter is looked upon as a huge joke by all except the ultra Democrats. We'll bet a handful of pied type that if a conservative, whatever that may be, appears at the meeting he'll receive the stony stare.

Estray Notice.

There came to my farm, the Walsh place, five miles north of Deer Park on the Paradise road, two yearling and two spring pigs, all being marked with cropps off left ear and underbits out of right ears. Owner will please come forward, pay all costs and damages and take the animals away.

28-3t. C. W. MOON.

Dedication at Dodge.

The new Methodist Episcopal church, five miles north of Oakland on what is known as the Hooppole road, will be dedicated to the service of God by District Superintendent Ward on Sunday Sept. 20th, 1908, at 11 a. m. Come everybody. A good time is expected. Former pastors that can do so are respectfully invited to attend.

A. ENGLE, Pastor.

Sale of Coal Lands.

By advertisement printed elsewhere in this paper today it will noticed that Mr. Charles E. Hilleary, mortgagee, will offer at public auction in front of the First National Bank in Oakland on Thursday, October 1st, all the coal underlying nine hundred and thirteen acres of land located in Election District No. 8 of this county. The coal is valued at about $45,000.

Call for Your Letters.

Miss Mary T. Davis, Mr. M. R. Frantz, Miss Fanny Jackson, Mr. Marshall Lee, Miss Ruby McNeely, Mrs. Elizabeth Menel, Mrs. J. A. Thompson.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants, Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Orders taken for Aubrey Sisters famous Beautifier, tint, massage cream, depilatory powder, soaps, etc., at Oakland Hotel. 19-tf.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments gives them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C. & P. Telephone Comp'y

Subscribe for The Republican.

VESUVIUS CALMED.

By J. LUDLUM LEE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Arthur Southgate had never married. Putting it mildly, his temper was not an even one, and he argued that, combining his own obstreperous disposition with the inborn obstinacy of all women, something would surely give way. So he clung to single life as the lesser of two evils.

On this particular Sunday afternoon he was chatting with several of his best friends in the smoking room of the Royal club. Pulling out his watch, he saw that it was 5 o'clock—just two hours late for his engagement with Irene Arlington.

"Jumping Jehoshaphat!" he cried as he pushed back from the table. "I'll catch it—just two hours late and a woman in a frenzy waiting for me at the other end of the line. By-by, boys," and he was off.

Jumping in his waiting car, he urged the chauffeur to make haste, and when he rang the bell of the Arlington home Irene herself opened the door.

"Hello, honey," she greeted him.

Southgate was speechless. He had expected a volley timed to "Why didn't you?" and "How dare you?"

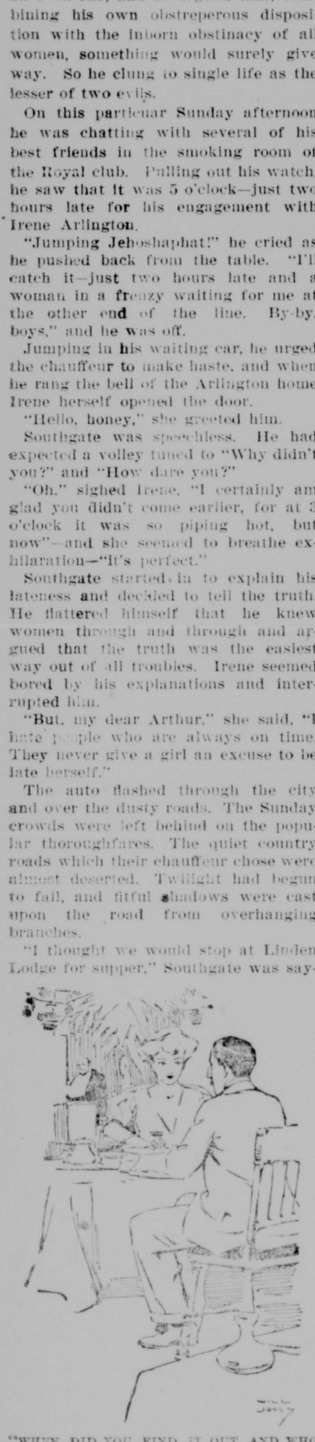
"Oh," sighed Irene, "I certainly am glad you didn't come earlier, for at 3 o'clock it was so piping hot, but now"—and she seemed to breathe exhilaration—"it's perfect."

Southgate started in to explain his lateness and decided to tell the truth. He flattered himself that he knew women through and through and argued that the truth was the easiest way out of all troubles. Irene seemed bored by his explanations and interrupted him.

"But, my dear Arthur," she said, "I hate people who are always on time. They never give a girl an excuse to be late herself."

The auto flashed through the city and over the dusty roads. The Sunday crowds were left behind on the popular thoroughfares. The quiet country roads which their chauffeur chose were almost deserted. Twilight had begun to fall, and fitful shadows were cast upon the road from overhanging branches.

"I thought we would stop at Linden Lodge for supper," Southgate was saying. "I told Jack Gormley and Mrs. Jack to look us up there." Then, as if expecting a protest from his companion, he added, "Of course if you want to go somewhere else"—



"WHEN DID YOU FIND IT OUT, AND WHO IS THE GIRL?"

"Oh, I love the lodge," exclaimed Irene, "and"—

A sharp report from behind, and her sentence was lost. The machine came to a standstill. Southgate and the chauffeur both jumped out. A tire had burst beyond mending. Southgate swore roundly at the chauffeur, who stolidly began the hour's task of taking off the old tire and putting on a new one.

"I don't blame you for being furious, Irene," began Southgate. "I tell you this automobile business is rotten to the core. It's"—

"But I'm not furious. I'm rather glad we broke down!" cried Irene. "We've been speeding so that I've lost my breath, and anyway just back there are some lovely wild flowers I want to pick, and, oh, I love to see mechanics work, and when I get my flowers I'm coming back to watch your man."

She gathered up her fluffy skirts and jumped out on the ground. Southgate opened his eyes and looked sharply at the girl to make sure he heard aright. He felt like the small boy who wanted to pinch himself to see if he were awake.

"Do you mean it?" he gasped.

She assured him that she did, and together they walked back and gathered the flowers. A scientific man would have had difficulty in figuring out which were the thickest, the wild flowers or the mosquitoes which feasted on the newcomers.

"I'm eaten alive with these beastly pests," said Southgate as he slapped one flat on his wrist. "I can't stand it another minute—and really with that thin dress of yours"—

"Oh, mosquitoes are no worse than other pests," said Irene. "My little brother has white mice that get out of the cage and run all over the house. Our colored cook has the ugliest black cat you ever saw that scratches me every time I pat her."

Southgate thought the heat must have affected his companion and made no reply. They returned to the car to find the new tire on and again started out. They speeded along the dusty road and were nearing the lodge when the machine stopped and refused to move. Investigation proved that the gasoline had given out.

Once more the chauffeur heard Mr. Southgate's opinion of him in rather pertinent language. There was nothing to do but to walk to Linden Lodge, so Irene and Arthur started out for the jaunt. The distance was short, but Irene was dressed for riding and not for walking. Her dainty slippers with high heels were little support, and, suddenly turning her ankle, she uttered a little cry.

"Are you hurt?" exclaimed Southgate with some concern. There was certainly something very congenial about Irene Arlington, he decided.

"Not a bit," answered Irene, "only the heel of my slipper has come off."

"What the deuce shall we do now?" he cried. She smiled, and before she could answer he added, "For heaven's sake don't tell me that you 'just love to hop on one foot.'"

"Not that," laughed Irene, "but do you go and get a stone and knock the other heel off; then I can walk in slippers without heels, as the kiddies do."

Arthur Southgate had never learned the cobbler's trade, but as he took off the old slipper he almost wished he had. The heel was knocked off, and he put back the slipper, took off the other and pounded the nails flat, replaced that, and in a few minutes they were on the porch of Linden Lodge.

Arthur sent off a man from the garage with a fresh supply of gasoline for his man down the road. Irene set her hat aright and awaited Arthur's return.

"We're pretty late, I guess," he said as he joined her, "for I can't seem to find Jack and Mrs. Jack anywhere. Are you comfy all right?"

"Yes, indeed," assured Irene, "but I do wish you would telephone mother that we will be a bit late. You know mothers will worry."

Arthur called an attendant.

"Call 967 Terrace, will you? And when you get them I'll talk."

"Beg pardon, sir," began the man, "but the telephone ain't workin' today. Anything else, sir?"

"Yes; get out of here!" roared Southgate. "Well—I'll be—jiggered! What next, do you suppose?"

"Dinner, I hope," said Irene, with a hearty laugh. "I'm a weeny bit hungry."

At the table Arthur Southgate ate little. He never could tell himself in after years whether it was his appetite that played him false or whether some new quantity came into his being and left no room for anything else.

But during that meal Arthur's idea of women in general and one in particular seemed to pass through a metamorphosis, at least. Perhaps all women were not spitfires. He knew one who was not at least. Perhaps all women were not hysterical and unreasonable—and a lot of other disagreeable qualities with which he had always attributed them.

The hot soup was almost cold, the iced asparagus was lukewarm, and the after dinner coffee was rather bitter, but Irene ate with a ravishing appetite and said everything was just right.

It was a lovely ride home, without any mishaps, and Arthur sat gazing at Irene. Two or three times he started to say something, but for some reason the resourceful Mr. Southgate could not frame his sentence just right. Finally he leaned a bit closer to his companion.

"Irene, I'm in love—in fact, I've been in love for some time, and I only found it out lately."

"Oh, how nice!" exclaimed Irene. "When did you find it out, and who's the girl?"

"Just found it out about an hour ago, and, well—I wouldn't have to get out a search warrant to find the girl."

Irene was glad the darkness hid her blushes.

"Do you think that a girl with the most heavenly disposition in the world—a disposition that absolutely nothing could ruffle—would consent to marry a prickly bear?" faltered Arthur.

"Oh, I should think she'd just love to tame him!" cried Irene before she realized the significance of the remark. But the prickly bear lost no time in hugging his victim, and her taming methods were as oil upon the troubled waters of life.

The Club Mother's Amends.

The clubwoman closed her book on "domestic responsibility" and, with a tinge of remorse, went out on the lawn, where her children were at play.

"Mary," she informed her children's nurse, "I've neglected my young ones for the clubs too much these last few years, and I'm going to try to make amends. Now, this afternoon I intend to dress one of them with my own hands and take it for an outing in the park."

It was quite late that afternoon when the reformed clubwoman, after pushing a gocart containing the youngster she had selected and prepared for its outing about the spacious public park for several hours, started toward home. She had hardly come within sight of it when the nurse rushed up, palpably agitated.

"Oh, mum"—

"The child's all right, Mary," the mother announced by way of assurance. "I humored it all afternoon with candy and fruit."

"But, mum," cried the nurse, endeavoring to regain her breath, "Mrs. Smith, next door, has been scared into a fit, the perlice has been notified and—oh, Lawd, mum!"

"Don't act so, Mary! Why should you get so excited over that hysterical Mrs. Smith?"

"You've gone an' took her child, mum!"—Bohemian.

Should We Send Our Fleet to the Pacific?

By JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Representative From Mississippi.

I THINK sending our fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific is a VERY GOOD WAY OF TRAINING OUR NAVAL OFFICERS AND SAILORS to the work of handling ships en fleet.

THEY MIGHT JUST AS WELL BE DOING THAT AS DOING VIRTUALLY NOTHING.

By MARTIN B. MADDEN, Representative From Illinois.

I think there is just as much reason why the north Atlantic fleet should be sent to the Pacific as that the army should continue its maneuvers.

What we need in our navy is the HIGHEST POSSIBLE DEGREE OF EFFICIENCY, and if to obtain it we must send the fleet to the Pacific I am in favor of it.

THE FACT THAT SOME ARE LED TO BELIEVE THAT JAPAN MAY CONSIDER THE MOVE A HOSTILE ONE SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN A MOMENT'S THOUGHT.

By CYRUS A. SULLOWAY, Representative From New Hampshire.

I wish we had three times as many vessels to cruise in Pacific waters. We should know whether our so called battleships and cruisers are cheeseboxes to be destroyed by our enemy or whether they have CAPACITY AND ENDURANCE to stand up against anything that floats.

THE CHILDISH TALK OF EXPENSE IS DEVOID OF PATRIOTISM, NATIONAL PRIDE AND DUTY. WE HAVE GREAT INTEREST AND THE SAME RIGHTS IN THE PACIFIC THAT WE HAVE IN THE ATLANTIC.

By JOHN F. LACEY, Representative From Iowa.

CERTAINLY THE DEMONSTRATION OF OUR NAVAL POWER IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN COULD NOT FAIL TO STRENGTHEN OUR PRESTIGE THERE.

The most vital effect of sending the fleet there would be the demonstration of OUR POWER TO SPEEDILY TRANSFER OUR NAVAL STRENGTH FROM ONE OCEAN TO ANOTHER in advance of the completion of the Panama canal.

By GEORGE L. LILLEY, Representative From Connecticut.

IN addition to the expense and deprivation of the fleet from its regular target practice and drills, which CANNOT BE KEPT UP DURING THIS TRIP, we have no means of repairing the fleet and keeping it in repair when it arrives in San Francisco, as none of these battleships can get up to Mare Island navy yard.

NO ONE CLAIMS OR HAS CLAIMED THAT THERE IS A WARRANT FOR THE MOVE, THE DISCLOSURE OF WHICH WOULD BE AGAINST PUBLIC WELFARE.

By LEONIDAS F. LIVINGSTON, Representative From Georgia.

I cannot see any good reason for such a display of our fleet at this time. Of course to those on the inside there may be. THE EXPENSE AND RISK WILL BE VERY GREAT. The benefits from any standpoint are not within my comprehension now.

By WILLIAM BOURKE COCKRAN, Representative From New York.

I DO NOT FAVOR, BUT MOST DEEPLY DEPLORE, SENDING THE NORTH ATLANTIC FLEET TO THE PACIFIC THIS WINTER. AT THE SAME TIME, I CAN UNDERSTAND WHY THE PROPOSAL MAY APPEAR COMMENDABLE TO ITS AUTHORS.

Having stooped to perpetrate the COLOSSAL FOLLY of dissipating stupendous sums in constructing so many ships, useless for any purpose except mischief, it is entirely consistent with such a policy—if not a necessary feature of it—that they should be sent to the field of WIDEST POTENTIAL MISCHIEF, where expenditure of money will certainly be heaviest and where the maximum of ill feeling is likely to be provoked.

By WILLIAM RICHARDSON, Representative From Alabama.

It appears to me that the dispatch of sixteen battleships to the waters of the Pacific would be in effect PROVOCATIVE AND AN UNBECOMING DISPOSITION TO EXPLOIT AND DISPLAY OUR POWER and strength before a nation we are at peace with.

"Affinity" Only a New Word to Cloak Crime.

By General WILLIAM BOOTH, Head of the Salvation Army.

IF I had a wife I believe that nothing but death could part me from her. I believe that divorce is allowable IN SOME CASES—that is, there are cases which do not require my condemnation.

"Soul affinities" are something NEW to me. They have been invented, created, imagined or discovered since my last visit to America. I am not competent, I fear, to discuss them.

The couple who have solved the problem of loving their neighbor as themselves and who enjoy the PERFECT UNDERSTANDING that unites them so closely that differences of opinion do not suggest the divorce court, would, I should think, be near to what you Americans would term "soul affinities."

AS THE TERM SEEMS TO BE APPLIED OVER HERE, IT SEEMS TO ME TO BE AN EXPRESSION USED TO COVER A MORE DISAGREEABLE WAY OF SPEAKING OF A CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY.

DOWSER THE SAILOR.

Takes a Trip on Bounding Billows With Unfortunate Results.

VICTIM OF THE STORMY SEA.

Elected a Member of the Old Salts' Club, He Has His First Outing Despite Wife—Carried Home on a Stretcher.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

When the Bowsers came up from dinner the other evening Mrs. Bowser intended to ask Mr. Bowser to call with her at a neighbor's, but before she could introduce the matter he excused himself and passed upstairs. Half an hour later, when he came down, she gasped in astonishment and exclaimed:

"Mr. Bowser, but what have you done with yourself?"

Mr. Bowser had on a sailor's hat.

He was dressed in a yachting costume.

Such a costume as is seen in a melodrama and nowhere else.

He had on white canvas shoes, and the salty air in the room made the cat sneeze.

"Some more tomfoolery?" queried Mrs. Bowser as he stood smiling before her.

"Don't get excited, Madam Bowser," he quietly replied. "This, as you probably recognize, is the costume of a sailor."

"But what are you doing with it?"

"Because I am a sailor, or shall be tomorrow. I take great pleasure in informing you, my dear, that I have been elected a member of the Old Salts' club, and tomorrow we hold our annual outing. That is, we go for an all day's sail on the bay.

"OH, A LIFE ON THE OCEAN WAVE."

"Oh, a life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,
A billow to lay my head upon
As the gale it rocks me to sleep!

"What, ho, there! Strike your main topsails and haul in the lee bowsprit!"

"You mean to tell me that you are going sailing?" asked Mrs. Bowser as he ceased waltzing around.

"Aye, aye, shipmate. Weigh anchor and let's be off."

"Why, you have never even sailed across a goose pond in your life, and you'll be sure to be seasick."

"Down with the outer jib! Hoist away on that—on that!"—

Mrs. Bowser looked at him and calmed his enthusiasm somewhat and then said:

"You had better go and take those circus clothes off and let the Old Salts go along by themselves. Just as sure as you get out in a boat and there's any sea on you will come home a wilted rag and lay it all to me. It's worse than your rigging yourself out to ride horseback."

"Madam," he replied, "I have been elected to membership with the Old Salts. I am going out with them tomorrow. There will be a sea on, for the paper tonight predicts high winds for tomorrow, but there will be no wilted rags to come home. The more sea the better I shall like it. We shall take along several remedies against seasickness. I anticipate one of the most enjoyable occasions in my whole life. Cast off the lee clew lines of the hind topsail! Bonnet that jib and jibe the main topmast!"

Appears In Sailor Suit.

Mrs. Bowser said no more. It would have been words wasted. Mr. Bowser would go in spite of all, and she was rather glad to anticipate what would surely happen. He was feeling good natured and after strutting about the [illegible] awhile he showed himself at [illegible] door and kept his ears open [illegible] remarks. They soon came. A hoodlum caught sight of him and yelled to other hoodlums at the top of his voice.

[illegible] boys, but here's a zebra or gi[illegible] out of the zoo! Let's r[illegible] down and get the reward!"

With the crowd of boys [illegible] tramping with a rolling gait. [illegible] showed that he was a sailor [illegible] Mr. [illegible]'s heart warmed [illegible] He had a ten cent piece [illegible] the man struck [illegible]

"Ahoy, old ship!" [illegible] tranquer.

"Ahoy there!"

"Who's he [illegible]"

"Fifty-sev[illegible] the port quarter."

"Ah ha [illegible] Say, captain, you look very [illegible]ailor. I spotted you clear from [illegible]orner."

Mr. Bow[illegible]ve him a second ten.

"That's a [illegible]dy uniform you've got, and it's a dandy man inside it. Lord, but I do love the salt air clinging to your clothes! Going to start on another voyage soon?"

"I'm going for a sail tomorrow," was the reply as two nickels were passed over.

"That's right, sir—that's right. I'll bet you've sailed a small boat many a thousand miles. Captain, if your ship was sailing on a nor'west by west course and you wanted to shift your helium to a sou'-sou'east course, what orders would you give?"

"I'd tell 'em to haul in on the sta'board cathead and slack away on the left hand piston rod."

"Right ye are, my hearty. If I had any doubts before they are gone now,' said the man as he patted Mr. Bowser on the shoulder.

Mr. Bowser had just given him a quarter when Mrs. Bowser came to the door. At sight of her the fellow made his way down to and out of the gate with all sails drawing, and after watching him around the corner she queried of the Old Salt beside her:

"Do you know who that person is?"

"He's been mate of a ship, I should say."

"He's the man that carries out the ashes next door. He's about as much sailor as you are."

The boys set up another yell and began hunting around for stones to throw at the "escaped," and Mr. Bowser struck his topsails and backed into the house. Mrs. Bowser looked for a row, but none came. He read and smoked, and they finally went to bed. She was hoping that he had given up the salty excursion, but soon discovered to the contrary. He had scarcely fallen asleep when he began to sing out, "Man overboard," "Lower away the main deck," "See that the pumps are in order," "Burn a blue light," and so on. At midnight he roused her up by singing in his sleep:

"Oh, the raging sea it roars around,
And the foam goes sweeping by,
And the gale is howling up aloft
As we race for the sunset sky!"

Mr. Bowser was up an hour ahead of time and was in such a hurry that he ate only a few mouthfuls of breakfast. Twenty minutes after leaving the house he was aboard of one of the club boats holding six men. There was a strong gale blowing and a good sea on, and many members as they came along were in favor of putting the sail off to another day. It was Mr. Bowser's words that decided the matter, and they were taken down in pencil to be framed and hung on the walls of the club. When asked for his opinion he replied:

"Down with the sta'board cathead and up with fo'sail boom! See that the rudder is greased with fat pork, and send aloft your heaviest anchor and let us get out of here. The man that won't face this wind and sea is no sailor and no shipmate of mine!"

Bowser Becomes Seasick.

Then they set out to brave the dangers of the briny. They had proceeded about a cable's length from shore when Mr. Bowser began to think of Mrs. Bowser.

Then of his stomach.

Then of his swimming head.

He tried to think of something heroic and was surprised to find that he could not.

Mrs. Bowser had told him that he would be sure to be seasick, but he would show her that—

"Look at Bowser!" shouted one of the men.

"He's a goner!" added another.

"There he goes, fellers!"

And Mr. Bowser went. He collapsed like a hinge and lay in the bottom of the boat.

Then he called upon Mrs. Bowser.

And upon his fellow members.

And upon heaven itself, and offered millions and millions of dollars to be set ashore, even among rattlesnakes and centipeds.

At high noon four men bearing a stretcher on which rested a human body arrived at the Bowser house. The human body was Mr. Bowser's.

"Shipmates, is he dead?" asked Mrs. Bowser from the steps.

"Not dead, matey," replied one of them, "but he won't want to see a boiled dinner again before snow flies. Better let him do his sailing in a bathtub after this." M. QUAD.

Sandy's Confession.

"You were a college man?" interrogated the lady in the vine covered bungalow.

"Yessum," replied Sandy Pikes as he tackled the wedge of peach pie.

"And took degrees?"

"Yessum."

"How many degrees did you take?"

"Ninety-one, mum. I stole de college thermometer one summer day."—Detroit Tribune.

In Dogland.

"Ghoul! You've been robbing the dead!"

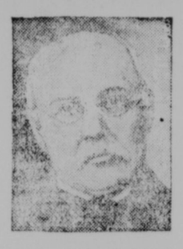
"Go on! I buried this bone yesterday."—Harper's Weekly.

Two Opinions.

"So you've stopped calling upon Miss Pert," said Gaussip. "She has rather a pretty face, but I consider her nose too long, don't you?"

"Huh!" snorted the rejected one. "I found her 'noes' entirely too short—and emphatic."—Catholic Standard and Times.

School Children Neglected At Home.



By WILLIAM H. MAXWELL, Superintendent of Schools, New York City.

PERHAPS where a child has A PLEASANT HOME AND A CHEERFUL NURSERY to play in his education need not begin at six years, which is the age at which children are admitted to the New York public schools.

We take them in the kindergartens at four, and the sooner a child of the tenements goes to school the better it is for his welfare. His surroundings are VASTLY IMPROVED, and he is compelled to go through a course of PHYSICAL exercise which trains and strengthens his body as it would never be developed at home. Games occupy a considerable space on the young child's programme in our schools, and altogether he is much better looked after than he would be if he remained at home. But he is not looked after well enough.

CHILDREN IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS SUFFER FROM FOUR PRINCIPAL EVILS—MALNUTRITION, ADENOID GROWTHS IN THE THROAT, DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT AND DEFECTIVE TEETH. EVEN WHERE PARENTS ARE FINANCIALLY ABLE TO PROVIDE PROPER NOURISHING FOOD THEY OFTEN FAIL THROUGH IGNORANCE TO DO SO.

I believe there should be attached to every public school a kitchen to provide the children with nourishing food at cost. Many school children suffer from adenoid growths in the throat which have a direct and deleterious effect on the nervous system. There should be a law passed COMPELLING PARENTS TO SUPPLY PROPER MEDICAL ATTENTION for the evil as well as to insure care of the eyes and teeth, and the board of education should have a corps of physicians to look after the health of those NEGLECTED children whose parents even the rigors of the law FAILED TO REACH.

We Must Have a Fleet of Air Warships.

By PARK BENJAMIN, New York Lawyer and Naval Expert.

IF the United States is to remain in the first rank of world powers we must have a fleet of war airships. The United States is MILES BEHIND the other countries in the matter of aerial warfare inventions. France and England have huge fighters of the air that have proved their worth after many tests, but not the United States.

IN FUTURE YEARS, BEYOND DOUBT, WARS WILL BE PARTLY CONDUCTED IN THE AIR, AND EVERY COUNTRY THAT WANTS TO HOLD HER PLACE AMONG THE POWERS MUST BE ABLE TO MAKE A SHOWING WITH AIRSHIPS.

What chance would a battleship or a fort have against half a dozen great airships SOARING OUT OF RANGE OF THEIR GUNS AND DROPPING DYNAMITE DOWN ON THEM?

The only way to fight aerial war craft is to build similar craft.

We have had a cheerful way in some matters of WAITING FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES TO DO THINGS and then trailing along. What we must have is a corps of warships in the air as well as on the sea.

Evils of Race Suicide.

By CARDINAL GIBBONS.

MARRIAGE, ACCORDING TO THE CHRISTIAN DISPENSATION, IS NOT INSTITUTED FOR SELF INDULGENCE, BUT FOR THE REARING OF CHILDREN IN THE KNOWLEDGE AND FEAR OF GOD.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the two or three children of the small family who receive all the advantages and all the INDULGENCES that their parents can bestow are going to become the best men and women. There are a DISCIPLINE AND A TRAINING IN THE LARGE FAMILY, where the feelings and rights of others have constantly to be reckoned with, which are much more effective in preparing the right sort of men and women to meet the conditions of real life.

The race has not improved, but has SUFFERED DISASTER IN BOTH NATIONS AND COMMUNITIES where the procreation of children has not been looked upon as a matter far too SACRED AND MOMENTOUS to be left to the control of individual appreciation of its manifold and perplexing problems. The accidental occurring case of exceptional hardship for the mother, where physical health is gravely compromised, has been made far too much of. ALL IMPORTANT GENERAL LAWS BEAR HARD AT TIMES UPON THE INDIVIDUAL.

Effect of the Pure Food Law on Prices.

By Dr. HARVEY W. WILEY, Government Food Expert.

THE whole situation may be summed up in a few words. Pure and wholesome food, prepared in the most careful manner, is WORTH MORE than foods prepared from inferior raw materials and in an insanitary manner. Pure foods are worth more and should bring higher prices in the markets than the debased foods. Any LEGITIMATE RISE IN THE PRICE OF SUCH FOOD products is a BENEFIT to the consumer rather than the producer, and such an increased price should be regarded by the consumer as a blessing and not a curse.

THE PRICE OF FOOD PRODUCTS HAS NOT BEEN AFFECTED AT ALL BY THE PURE FOOD LAW, EXCEPT SO FAR AS THE UNNATURAL COMPETITION OF THE DEBASED PRODUCT HAS INCREASED THE COST OF THE PURE PRODUCT. THE LAW GIVES THE CONSUMER THE OPTION OF BUYING THE PURE, NATURALLY HIGH PRICED PRODUCT OR THE MIXED, ADULTERATED, LOW PRICED PRODUCT. THE LAW DOES NOT PROHIBIT THE SALE OF THE MIXED, IMPURE OR IMITATION PRODUCT PROVIDED NO DELETERIOUS SUBSTANCES ARE USED IN ITS MANUFACTURE.

THE LADY OF THE PARASOL.

By Martha Cobb Sanford.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

So far as Tom Brewster was concerned, feminine accessories were fashioned for the sole purpose of frightening masculine beholders. If, for instance, when walking on the avenue in town he saw a mass of dancing plumes and feathery streamers about to swoop down upon him, he shied as would a nervous thoroughbred at the sight of fluttering paper.

This timidity was due both to his temperament and his circumstances. His mother had died when he was very young, he had had no sisters, had never cared for women's society, and last, but far from least, had never availed himself of the privilege of studying the eternal feminine in the abstract—that is, by gazing into shop windows.

And so it happened that Annette Avery, with her ruffly gowns and alarum supreme, her whirling parasol, terrified Tom to the point of paralysis. From the hotel veranda, painfully conscious of his own ineligibility, he watched other men from time to time stroll off with her, all of them adepts in the art of parasol manipulation.

Ordinarily such an exhibition of flippant superiority would not have piqued him. It would have either roused his disdain or escaped his observation altogether. But for some reason wholly unintelligible to himself the thought of any other man's holding Miss Avery's parasol sent him into a state of feverish emotion.

Tom was nothing if not ingenious and persistent. In the seclusion of his 9 by 9 hotel bedroom he practiced twirling a carefully poised umbrella over his shoulder. The idiocy of it tickled his demure sense of humor, and the results were very gratifying.

Whether the bewildering presence of Miss Avery beside him would upset this heroically acquired equilibrium could only be discovered by putting himself to the actual test. He decided to risk it.

"Miss Avery"—he ventured on having the good luck to find her alone on

"THEN ACCEPT ME, DEAREST," TOM PLEADED.

the veranda in the early part of an idyllic summer day—"won't you let me paddle you up the creek a bit this morning?"

Gracious as was Miss Avery's acknowledging smile, it could not quite conceal the astonishment in her wide open blue eyes. This Tom noticed, meeting the implication gallantly.

"You see," he explained, endeavoring to toss off the words with worldly ease, "you are so discouragingly popular, Miss Avery. This is the first time I ever found you—detached, as it were."

Annette Avery laughed with delightful ingenuousness.

"I'd love to go, Mr. Brewster," she assured him. "It's too glorious a morning to spend waiting for some one who does not show up."

"Oh," said Tom, crestfallen, "then you're not really detached, after all?"

"Absolutely," was Annette's emphatic reply. "A laggard in—a laggard," she finished weakly, "isn't worth waiting for. When shall we start?"

"Right away," urged Tom. He was apprehensive of that "laggard."

"All right," agreed Annette. "Just wait till I run in and tell mother."

"Bring your parasol," Tom cried after her and then stood dumfounded at his own temerity. But by the time Annette reappeared he had braced himself literally for the shouldering of this formidable responsibility. What matter if on their way to the boathouse he did carry the frivolous thing at an angle diametrically opposed to its protective purpose? He was happily unconscious of it, and Annette, blinking heroically, was too magnanimous to disillusion him.

The canoe launched, Tom, with some show of savoir faire, tossed the cushions into it and extended his hand to Annette. At length, with a long, graceful sweep of the paddle, they were off.

The shimmering radiance of the sea marshes as they followed the windings of the little creek soon subdued their outbursts of admiration, and they fell by mutual consent into dreamy silence.

Suddenly in her excitement at sight of a "blue" crab scuttling sidewise beneath the canoe Annette lost hold of her parasol. Before Tom could rescue it with his paddle a yelping mongrel of a dog sprang out of the tall grasses and dashed into the water after it.

"Bravo, old fellow!" called Tom. "Here, here, sir."

But to the victor belong the spoils, and the dog made off with his capture. Pursuit was impossible through the wet marshes. Powerless to avert the catastrophe, they watched the dog's fiendish demolition of the fragile contrivance.

"It's an outrage!" exclaimed Tom. "And it's your favorite sunshade too."

At this Annette burst into a merry peal of laughter. What other man among all her conventional friends would have used that quaint word "sunshade?" It tickled her fancy.

"How do you know?" she asked him teasingly.

"Because you always carry it," was Tom's candid admission.

"That's because I haven't any other," Annette informed him. "But it doesn't matter, really. It was just a garish cretonne thing."

Of these extraordinary specifications Tom took rapid mental note. The next day found him scouring the rural metropolis of Greenville for something that corresponded to Annette's description and to his own visual recollection of the ill fated parasol. But nowhere had such a novelty as a "garish cretonne sunshade" ever been heard of.

He told Annette so when, weary and disgusted, he returned to the hotel. She laughed at him mercilessly.

"Is it so funny?" he asked her wistfully.

"Well, you are," she enlightened him; "cretonne is quite a new thing for parasols to be made of. It's generally used for covering chairs and cushions and window boxes and things like that. So very probably all the shopkeepers over in Greenville thought you were crazy when you asked them for a cretonne para—sunshade."

"They acted so," was Tom's feeling comment.

A few days later, forearmed with this wealth of "cretonnic" information, Tom took his way confidentially up to town. Annette comforted herself with the thought that nothing short of very urgent business had forced him to postpone even for a day their morning paddle up the creek, which had come to be for each of them an accepted and anticipated pleasure.

On his return, although (or more likely because) it was late in the evening and full moonlight, Tom sought out Annette in the gay chatting groups on the hotel veranda and quietly signaled to her.

"Get something to throw around you, Annette," he directed, "and let's go down on the beach for a stroll. The moonlight is beautiful on the water."

Annette, her heart fluttering prophetically, acquiesced without a moment's hesitation.

When they had found a sheltered nook on the lee side of a picturesque old rock, Tom took off his overcoat and spread it for Annette to sit upon. As he did so a long, narrow package dropped on the sand at his feet.

"What's that?" asked Annette suspiciously.

"Something I picked up in town," Tom chuckled. "Want to see it?"

With exasperating deliberation Tom unrolled the wrappings.

"Of course," answered the truly feminine girl, perched on the rock.

"There!" he exclaimed at length, unfurling the treasure. "Do you like it?"

"Oh, what a beauty!" gasped Annette. "I never had such a—I mean I never saw such a lovely one. But, Tom, cretonne would have been all right."

Tom shook his head as one who knows whereof he speaks.

"No," he told her boastfully. "The cretonne ones aren't in the same class with this. I know because I've got two awfully garish ones of that kind for you up at the hotel."

"Why, Tom Brewster!" reproved Annette in astonishment. "Really, I can't accept"—

"What?" interrupted Tom calmly as with the slender tip of the parasol, which was all one mass of exquisite filmy flowers, he made marks in the smooth sand, upon which the moonlight shone with unmistakable distinctness.

Annette, her eyes tracing with fascinated wonder the written words, "I love you," almost forgot Tom's question.

"I couldn't accept but one," she suddenly roused herself to answer.

"Then accept me, dearest," Tom pleaded, smiling up at her.

As to what happened then under the sheltering "sunshade" even the man in the moon was left to imagine.

"Cut Off With a Shilling."

We often hear of the threat of being "cut off with a shilling" by our peculiar and crotchety relatives, but the following clause of a will is a literal execution of it which would not be considered by many of us to be a very effective salve for the pain attending their demise:

"Whereas it was my misfortune to be made very uneasy by Elizath M., my wife, from our marriage by her turbulent behavior, for she was not content with despising my admonitions, but she contrived every method to make me unhappy; she was so perverse in her nature that she would not be reclaimed, but seems only to be born to be a plague to me. The strength of Samson, the knowledge of Homer, the prudence of Augustus, the cunning of Pyrrhus, the patience of Job, the subtlety of Hannibal and the watchfulness of Hermogenes could not have been sufficient to subdue her, for no skill or force in the world could make her good. And as we have lived separate and apart from each other for eight years and she having perverted her son to leave and totally abandon me, therefore I give her 1 shilling only."—London Telegraph.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department

Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
J. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agent & Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Mr. J. W. Giffin is home on a visit to his family.

Mr. Lloyd Deane, of Homestead, Pa., is shaking hands with his many friend.

Mrs. U. B. McCandlish returned to her home in Piedmont, W. Va., after a visit of a couple of weeks to her sister, Mrs. R. C. McCandlish, who accompanied her as far at Oakland.

Miss Oliyette Shartzer, of Oakland, is spending a week with her brother, Mr. Ernest Shartzer.

Miss Annie Welch, of Mt. Lake Park, is visiting at the home of Mr. Orval A. Welch.

Mr. VanZant returned from a trip east last Sunday bringing with him his sister Mrs. Gray. They expect to occupy the Chas. Frederick home in a few days.

Mrs. H. N. McQuilkin returned to her home in Glen Campbell last week after an extended visit to her mother, Mrs. W. Holman.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Humberson spent Sunday with Mrs. H.'s sister Mrs. Geo. Dunham and family.

BITTINGER.

The board of viewers and county surveyor were in this section last Monday viewing and locating a new road in this district.

Mrs. Sallie Ralston had a new piano installed in her home last week.

G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, is spending this week with his parents at this place.

The unfavorable condition of the weather prevented the success of the festival held here on last Saturday evening.

C. J. Beachy, of Blaine, W. Va., spent last Sunday with relatives here.

George Yommer and family, of Grantsville, are visiting here this week.

Attorneys Hamill and Peddicord, of Oakland, were here last week on professional business.

The Bunkard minister baptized eleven persons in the Casselman river near Levi Reshe's on last Sunday afternoon in the presence of many spectators.

P. Y. Lohr, who has been employed in this neighborhood for some months, left for new fields last week.

The first general frost of the season was visible in this section Friday morning, September 4th.

FIKE.

Several of the farmers have already sowed wheat.

The weather this week has been very nice.

Boiling the sweet juice of apples is now the work on hand and quite a number are boiling every day.

Mr. David Thomas, wife and little daughter were in this section last Saturday and Sunday visiting Mrs. Wm. L. Thomas.

There was a Sunday school convention held at Fairview, Pa., near this place on last Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Fike drilled Mr. Wm. H. Thomas wheat on last Wednesday.

Mr. Christian Thomas died on Sept. 1, 1908, at his home near Markleysburg, Pa., at the good old age of 92 years, 4 months and 15 days. The funeral took place the day following his death and was attended by a large number of people as he was well known. The body was taken to the cemetery immediately after the service and interment was made.

Mrs. Kity Anne Fike died at her home near Tissue, Pa., on Sept. 1, 1908, of typhoid fever. Interment was made at this place in the Barnthouse cemetry. She is survived by four children who mourn her loss. The crowd that attended the burial was very small owing to the fact that the date of burial was changed and few knew of it.

CARTER.

GORTNER.

Quite a number of people of this place attended the services held by Revs. Idleman and Kidwell, last Sunday on the crest of the great Back-bone Mountain, known as Alleghany Heights. The services were very interesting as well as instructive.

Mr. and Mrs. B S. Forman and children of near Crellin, were calling on H. L. Killius Sunday.

Our young friend Joshua Brenninger, of near here, went to Terra Alta Wednesday to join his company of militia there. He belongs to Co. M, First W. Va., which will leave for Fort Benj. Harrison, Ind., Thursday for their annual encampment of one month While we regret his absence for so long we join in wishing him a very pleasant trip.

J L. Shettler and family are now occupying their new residence, recently constructed near Gortner.

Mrs. Annie Erwin and children, who spent a few months here as the guests of Mrs S. F. Erwin, returned to their home at Pittsburg last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gortner, of Oakland, and Mrs. Mary McCloskey, of Altoona, Pa., were visiting relatives Sunday.

Preaching next Sunday at 9:30; Sunday school at 10:30 a. m. and Bible reading at 7:30 p. m.

WILLIE.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

NOTICE OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS,
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 8, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 34, as amended by the acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election District of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, September 29,
Tuesday, October 6,
and on
Tuesday, October 13,
for revision only

(No one can Register after Tuesday, October 6.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all others duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration of the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election Distict Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Andrew Mullen's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Martin Storeroom corner Third and Oak Streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration of the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Charles R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of G. W. Engle in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the West building, Alder street in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM TURNER,
JOHN A. WRIGHT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

JASPER GUARD,
WALTER G. MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

DANIEL W. DORSEY,
ELISHA B. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

STEPHEN F. BROADWATER,
HENRY BARNARD,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

ADAM J. RICHTER,
CONRAD SPIKER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

W. H. BARTLETT,
GEORGE D. WHITE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
RICHARD McKENZIE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

SEBASTIAN HINERAUGH,
BENJAMIN F. THRASHER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH BROADWATER,
HUGH McMILLAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

O. C. BUCKLE,
URNER BEACHY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

LEWIS C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

JOHN O. THAYER,
BERT C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

D. M. MASON,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Coal Property
AND
Mining Rights

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph W. Thompson and wife to the undersigned, bearing date the 10th day of March, 1908, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 55, folio 348, &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due, the undersigned, in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage mentioned, will on

THURSDAY,
the 1st Day of October, 1908

at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, at 11 o'clock a. m., sell at public auction all of the coal underlying all that tract of land known as the Thompson and Hilleary farm, situate, lying and being in Ryans Glade, Garrett County, Maryland, the same being a part of the tract of land called

FERTILE MEADS,

and also including certain other lands which have been claimed, occupied and held in peaceable possession for more than twenty years; the whole

Containing About 931 Acres,

and is fully described in a deed executed by Sophronia E. Hilleary and others to the said Joseph W. Thompson, bearing date the 10th day of March, 1908, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 55, folio 348, one of the Land Records of said Garrett County, to which deed reference is hereby made for a description of the land under which the coal hereby to be sold lies.

Said property is supposed to consist of

Three Veins of Coal,

ranging from four to six feet in thickness, and adjoins the coal property of the Stoyer Run Coal Company, and is in easy access to the Western Maryland Railroad, and the same offers a rare opportunity to any one desiring to invest in coal property. The property can be inspected by persons contemplating bidding on same and a map of the premises can be seen by calling on the undersigned. The property is undeveloped and will therefore be sold without warranty as to contents or quality.

TERMS OF SALE.—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

CHARLES E. HILLEARY,
Mortgagee.

SHERIFF'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., the same being No. 16 Judicials to September Term, 1908, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of John Felty against Elizabeth Smith, I did sieze and take into execution all that lot or parcel of ground known as

Military Lot No. 1065,

being the same lot described in a deed for the same from John A. Williams and wife to the said Elizabeth Smith dated the 16th day of April, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 588, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and I hereby give notice that I will on

SATURDAY,
the 26th Day of September,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock p. m., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Md., offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder all the real estate described in said deed above referred to. Said land lies in District No. 10.

Said land will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Sections 51 and 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and by said section 52 as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

SATURDAY,
the 19th Day of September,

1908, AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M., at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2.—LOT NUMBER THREE THOUSAND AND TWENTY-SIX IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association as recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, page 800, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the same lot of ground which was conveyed to Upton Cuppett by Clarence E. Michaels et al. by deed dated the 21st day of January, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 394, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessmeht Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Upton Cuppett.

No. 3.—LOTS NUMBERS THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO AND THIRTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, folio 800, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and being the same lots which were conveyed to Lydia S. Swearingen by Mountain Lake Park Association by deed dated the 8th day of February, 1899, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 213, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said lots are located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county, and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lydia S. Swearingen.

No. 5.—ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND CONTAINING THE QUANTITY OF THREE-QUARTERS OF AN ACRE, located in Crellin, in District No. 14 of said Garrett county, and more particularly described as follows: Beginning for the same at a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of the Preston Railroad and running thence North 86½ degrees West, 194 feet to a stake, thence West 9¼ degrees North, 200 feet to a pine stump, thence South 75 degrees East, 241½ feet to a stake standing 25 feet from the centre of said railroad, thence 25½ degrees West, 166½ feet to the beginning, being the same land which was conveyed by John Connell et al. to Lula B. Loraw by deed dated the 26th day of February, 1890, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 26, folio 410, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Lula B. Loraw.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser, the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

H. R. DEWITT,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., August 28, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

We have just receive a car load of Extra Clear Red Cedar Shingles direct from the Pacific Coast. C. M. RATHBUN & SONS, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 22

(Benj. A. Richmond, Cumberland, Md., and Fred. A. Thayer, Oakland, Md., Solicitors.)

Stoyer Run Coal Company
TRUSTEE-MORTGAGEE'S FORECLOSURE SALE
OF VALUABLE
COAL MINES
AND Village Property
AT
Stoyer, Garrett County, Md.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa., Trustee-Mortgagee.

By virtue of the power of sale to the undersigned mortgagee, a corporation, as set out in the mortgage from the STOYER RUN COAL COMPANY of Garrett county, Maryland, to it, dated the first day of April, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, page 46, of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Md., default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay said moneys secured by said mortgage when due, the said THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia, Pa., in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage, will, on

SATURDAY,
The 12th Day of September,

1908, at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett county, Md., commencing at twelve o'clock, noon, sell at public sale as a whole coal and mining plant, all the real, leasehold and personal property, rights, franchises and privileges of said Stoyer Run Coal Company, particularly described and set out in the mortgage aforesaid, the same being more particularly described as follows:

First—All that piece of ground lying near Stoyer in said county, being a part of a tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

resurveyed for William W. Hoye July 13th, 1880, described as follows: Beginning for said part at a stone marked "X" standing near the East margin of the county road at Stoyer and South 25 degrees East, 18½ feet from a hemlock tree, which stands at the end of the first line of a part of said tract called "Addition to Paradise" which was conveyed by William Whitmore to John P. Stoyer, by deed dated March 4th, 1882, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 19, folio 353 of said land records, and running thence South 55 degrees East, 133 feet, South 35 degrees West, 194 feet to the north limits of the Western Maryland Railroad Company's right of way, with said limit, North 61¼ degrees West, 92 feet, North 25¾ degrees East, 210 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ths of an acre more or less.

Second—All that other part of the tract of land called

"Addition to Paradise,"

aforesaid lying at said Stoyer, beginning for the same at a stake standing North 55 degrees West, 46 feet from the aforesaid point of beginning marked "X," standing at the beginning of the first parcel just above described, and running thence North 84¾ degrees West, 946 feet to a planted stone marked "2," then South 35¾ degrees West, 550 feet, South 82 degrees West, 127 feet to a large stone marked "X," then South 36 degrees East, 163 feet to the northern limits or right of way of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, then with said limits in an easterly direction about 1200 feet to the intersection of a line drawn South 25¾ degrees West, from the beginning thence reversing said line North 25¾ degrees East, 215 feet to the beginning, containing five acres more or less.

Third—All that other part of said tract called

"The Addition to Paradise,"

beginning for the same at a point on the southern limits of the Western Maryland Railroad, which is South 25¾ degrees West, 275 feet from the beginning of the second parcel just above described, and running thence South 25¾ degrees West, 200 feet to a stake standing on the north side of the North Branch of the Potomac River thence up the said River North 28¾ degrees West 162 feet to the mouth of Stoyer Run, then North 43 degrees West, 170 feet to the south limits of the right of way of said railroad, and with it, in an easterly direction, about 260 feet to the beginning, containing ⅞ths of an acre, more or less.

Fourth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under which said lots and leased land are adjacent to and near the three parcels just above described, being the same lots and premises, which were leased by and described in the lease from John P. Stoyer and wife to H. M. Datesman dated the 24th day of June, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 82, of said Land Records, to which lease reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the same.

Military Lots Nos. 203 & 199,

Fifth—All that coal lease and leasehold estate with all the covenants, rights, mining rights and privileges therein which leases the coal under a tract of land known as lying West of Stoyer in district No. 8 of Garrett county, which is particularly described in a lease from the Stoyer Coal and Coke Company to Harris M. Datesman, dated July 31st, 1905, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 219, of said land records. For a more particular description of which property reference is made to said lease.

"Addition to Paradise,"

All the above described parcels of real and leasehold property being particularly referred to and conveyed by a deed from William H. Thomas, Trustee, to the said Stoyer Run Coal Co., dated the 13th day of June, 1905, and recorded among said Land Records in Folio E. Z. T. No. 49, p. 381.

Sixth—All and singular the personal property of the said Stoyer Run Coal Company owned by it at the time of said mortgage since acquired by it, situate at or near the village of Stoyer or at or in the coal mines at said place and upon the aforesaid properties or used in connection with said coal mines and mining plant of said coal company, consisting principally, but not wholly of one following viz.: 51 ton thirty six inch gauge mine cars, twenty-three tons of steel rails, one set of Fairbank's track scales, one full set of blacksmith tools, a large lot of mining tools, two mules and harness, two large boilers with pumps, several engines and all appliances appurtenant thereto, all tramways, hoists, gas engine, mine props, and all other tools, appliances and equipment constituting a first class plant for the mining and shipping of coal, together with all other goods and chattels and personal property of said mortagor now owned by it and situate on any of the aforesaid properties.

Seventh—All the corporate franchises, rights and privileges of said mortgagor, and all rights in connection with said property and coal mines and coal thereunder given by the aforesaid deeds and leases.

Said fee simple properties are improved by one large two and a half story superintendent's house, twenty two-story houses or cottages for miners' dwellings, twelve large shanties, one large store building 60 by 20 feet deep with dwelling attached and office room, one storehouse, ice house, magazines, stable for twelve head of mules, coal tipples, blacksmith shop, dumps and tramways.

The mines are said to have a coal area of about FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ACRES of coal with three mine openings. Mine No. 1 is in the Lower Kittanning vein of about 4½ feet coal. Mine No. 2 is in the Masontown Seam with a vein of about 6 feet. Mine No. 3 is worked by plane with engine and is in the Upper Freeport Seam.

These mines lie on the Western Maryland Rail Road and have a siding costing over $2,000.00. Said mines are equipped with modern machinery, engines, pumps, boilers, tramways, hoists, etc. The storeroom is a fine stand for a store.

All the aforegoing will be sold as ONE WHOLE PLANT, including all the aforesaid real, leasehold, personal and mixed property, the same being open to inspection by purchasers without warranty by the Mortgagee-Trustee as to contents, quality or otherwise.

Reference is hereby made to the terms of the said recorded Mortgage as to the power of the Trustee-Mortgagee to adjourn the sale, the right of purchasers to use bonds in part payment of purchase money, and other provisions affecting the sale.

TERMS OF SALE.—$1000 cash on day of sale and the balance within ten days after the ratification of the sale by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, subject to such terms as may be prescribed by the Court, or announced by the Trustee at the time of sale.

THE LAND TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Trustee and Mortgagee.
WM. R. NICHOLSON, President.

ORDER NISI.

H. R. Dewitt, Late Treasurer, vs. Jesse S. Severe.

No. 161 on Miscellaneous Docket. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

It is ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Md., this 18th day of August, 1908, that the tax sale made and reported in the above entitled cause, by H. R. Dewitt, late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Md., be ratified and confirmed; unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper printed in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $85.45.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON.
True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Ada Bowser, et al., vs. Cyrus Bowser.

No. 152 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Amos Bowser, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of September, 1908; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $300.00

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

William Hachman, et al., vs. Caroline Gontz et al.

No. 150 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 20th day of August, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale made and reported in the above entitled cause by Edward H. Sincell and Gilmor S. Hamill, trustees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of September, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, once a week for three sucessive weeks before the 11th day of September, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $270.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves in debted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $90 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

Subscribe for the Republican.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1908. NUMBER 29

SCHOOL BOARD TRIAL.

Prof. Beahm, Principal-elect of Grantsville School, Will Be Given Hearing,

Prof. J. C. Beahm, until recently principal of the Accident public school, and at present principal-elect of the Grantsville public school, whose arrest on a criminal charge took place Wednesday of last week, as stated in these columns last Thursday, will be given a hearing before the Board of School Commissioners in Oakland on Saturday when the Board will decide whether or not the charges standing against Prof. Beahm are of a nature sufficiently serious to exclude him from filling the position to which he has been elected by the trustees of the Grantsville school.

On Monday Mr. Beahm appeared at Grantsville for the purpose of opened the school at that place, but the trustees, so it is reported, refused to allow him to teach, hence the higher grades in the school are without an instructor and will so remain until the Board acts either by exhonerating Mr. Beahm or employing an instructor to take his place.

Told by W. H. Taft.

"There was a lawyer in Cincinnati who was noted for the strength of his lungs and the vehemence with which he would roar out his remarks to the court," said Mr. Taft. "He had a case down for argument one morning, but was unable to be present. A clerk appeared and asked the judge to put over the case until 2 o'clock that afternoon. 'Where will Mr.—— be just before 2 o'clock?' queried the judge, 'In his office, your honor,' replied the clerk. 'And that is how far from here?' continued the judge. 'About three-quarters of a mile,' said the clerk. 'Tell Mr.——not to bother coming way up here to court,' said the judge. 'Let him make his argument right from his office. We can hear him just as well as though he were in court.'"

Leap Year Social.

A leap year social will be given Saturday evening, Sept. 19th, 1908, on the veranda of the Mountain Lake Hotel, for the benefit of the U. B. church.

For every letter in your name,
The Ladies' Aid from you will claim
—A penny.
And to repay your kindness there will be —Maidens many.
So attend our social on this date, where music fine will entertain and please you;
Refreshments, too, will be on hand,
Served to you by our faithful band;
And that will surely cheer you.

COMMITTEE.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

THE NATIONAL CAMPAIGN OPENED IN GARRETT CO.

Representative Pearre Addressed Large Crowds at Various Points.

TAFT AND SHERMAN CLUBS FORMED

At Each of the Meetings—All of the Clubs Started Out With a Goodly Number of Members and Are Enthusiastic.

The National Campaign, in so far as Garrett county's electorate is concerned, opened on Monday afternoon with a rousing meeting at Sang Run, followed on Monday night with a similar meeting at Accident. Tuesday afternoon a meeting was held at Bittinger. Tuesday night one at Grantsville and last night the series in the northern end of the county closed at Friendsville with a tremendous outpouring of the people.

The above mentioned meetings were addressed by Col. George A. Pearre, candidate for Congress, and State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, on the National issues as laid down in the Republican platform. Col. Pearre, as he usually does, drove his arguments home with facts that cannot be successfully contradicted and aroused much enthusiasm at all the meetings. Senator Brown spoke encouragingly of the outlook for Republican success and was instrumental in forming Taft and Sherman clubs with large enrollments of members at each of the meetings. The Sang Run club started off with 35 members; that at Accident with a membership of about 50, a like number at Bittinger and Grantsville, while at Friendsville nearly a hundred members were enrolled.

This afternoon the speakers will arrive in Oakland from Friendsville and go from here to Swanton, where a meeting will be held.

Col. Pearre is accompanied by Mrs. Pearre, whose charming personality has won the friendship of many Garrett countians.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

Circuit Court.

The non-jury term of the Circuit Court convened in Oakland Monday with Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd presiding, when a number of unimportant cases were disposed of. Wednesday Associate Judge Henderson presided, Judge Boyd returning to Cumberland.

A CONFESSION THAT FAILED TO CONFESS.

"Timothy Pepper" Strongly Ridicules the "Open Confession" of "A Republican."

The following well written communication from a correspondent of THE REPUBLICAN in answer to a letter appearing simultaneously last week, in the Mountain Democrat and the Garrett Journal, the two Democratic organs of this county, is given space in these columns, answering, as it does, the spacious arguments and showing up the inconsistencies of the individual signing himself "A REPUBLICAN," granting that the correspondent is or was a member of the Republican party, which is a question in the minds of many who read the communication:

THE REPUBLICAN'S correspondent says:

In the Mountain Democrat and Garrett Journal of Sept. 10th, there was published what was styled "An Open Confession," said to have come from the pen of "'a life-long Republican," and signed "A Republican." Even a casual reading of the article above referred to will reveal the utter fraud and deplorable inconsistency of the writer and his ill concealed purpose. If the writer of that "Open Confession" ever was a Republican, which appears very dountful from the tenor of the article, he surrendered all right to claim the title of a Republican as soon as he enrolled himself among the supporters of Bryan and the Democratic platform, which means an acceptance of Democratic principals, and thus became a full-fledged Democrat. Therefore in signing his article a Republican he was untrue to himself and to his fellowmen, seeking by false and faulty arguments and appropriating for campaign purposes, the influence of a title not his own. Such articles cast into the face of the public are an insult to the intelligence of the American voters and a reflection upon the manhood of Garrett county's citizens, therefore seeing that the article was conceived in fickle fancy and put forth in a cloak of partisan deception, it behooves every true man to review the several articles of that "open confession" lest in it may lurk other misleading statements.

If, as the writer declares, there is no difference between the platforms of the Republican and Democratic party, then the Democratic party can only claim credit for having copied what has been the product of Republican brains, and if they claim to stand on the same principles as the Republicans, then they are deserters from their traditions and Bryan himself not a Democrat. But no well informed person will assert that the parties are identical. The platforms differ essentially and behind it all the principals differ radically, and the supporters of Taft support not the Republican platform alone, but also all Republican principals, and the same is true of the other party; therefore, he who makes he candidates the issue rather than party principles fails to see the situation. The "open confession" praises with many words his ideal, W. J. Bryan, as a noble example of manhood, to which we make no objection, but before we can place him as the peerless statesman and leader we must see proofs of statesmanship and hear of him leading his followers to something more than repeated defeat. Bryan is said, in the same article, to be sincere above all things, which claim is hard to prove in the face of the many abandoned theories that gentleman has buried along his public career.

After saying these and several other fine things about Bryan, the "open confession" deals out a budget of false statements about Taft, making unwarranted assertions regarding Taft's personal views on religious subjects, which, in a country and under a government whose fundamental principle is personal liberty of opinion, is utterly absurd and reason may truly ask such an one, where is your boasted right to worship after the dictates of your own conscience, when you would rob a fellow citizen of that right and would even deny him the right of citizenship because of a religious opinion. I am convinced that the author of the article in question does not know Mr. Taft's private religious views and whatever they may be he has the same right to them as his critic has to his. Taft may deal with his own question of conscience, and his record proves him fully able to cope with the duties of the presidency, and if those who are so fearful of supporting him from a religious standpoint will be sincere with themselves they will see that they are swallowing a camel and pretend to be choking to death over a gnat.

TIMOTHY PEPPER.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnished or unfurnished.

BENTLY POST, ARMY OF THE PHILIPPINES

Composed of Veterans of the Spanish-American War and Philippine Insurrection.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Capt. Geo. H. Bently Post, No. 9, is just a year old. It was organized last August by Geo. L. Armstrong of Lawton Post, and A. U. Betts of Egbert. This first birthday finds it walking alone and able to exist without the bottle as soon as the Philippines "go prohibition."

There are forty-three members in good standing and more coming. The veterans in the 26th Infantry are the backbone of the Post-men who pay their dues and attend meetings; when the ambulance from Camp Daraga rolls up before the Post Hall in Legaspi Saturday nights there is "something doing in the V. A. P."

The Post was fittingly named in honor of the brave Virginia captain of the 47th Volunteers, Geo. H. Bently, who was mortally wounded here in the shadow of Mauon Volcano. Capt. Bently was in command of the troops which held the Daraga church in this city when a howling mob of insurgents came in from the hills one night in 1900, set fire to and completely consumed one of the finest towns in these Islands—all for the purpose of getting light to kill two American soldiers. He was wounded in this fight by a bolo cut and afterwards shot from ambush while leading an expedition thru the hills nearby.

During the past year Bently Post collected and expended for charity more than P230, almost as much for public entertainments, and it has about the same sum deposited as a reserve fund in the savings bank. It has an excellent hall and club rooms in the International Chamber of Commerce building in Legaspi. It organized the Albay Memorial Day celebration, marched in the Independence Day parade, and expects to do great things in this neck of Luzon in the future.

The members discuss neither politics nor religion in public. They are all Taft men now, and as for religion, well they are rather quiet on that subject, yet the Post has a Bible a foot thick, and Chaplain Betts combines the dignity of an Episcopal clergyman with the bald 'cad of a Catholic priest; the members live in a continuous round o brotherly love, with hands always ready to assist comrades in need and to welcome visitors.

The Post is ably commanded by the great and only Republican boss of Albay province and adviser of the Chinese Empire in Legaspi, Capt. Goddard.

The officers are: Commander, Capt. L. S. Goddard; vice commander, Col. Peter Borseth; adjutant, Charles E. Hoye; quartermaster, Charle K. Bradbury; commissary, William J. Walker; surgeon, Dr. Shannon Richmond; chaplain, Ex. Gov. A. U. Betts; officer of the day, John R. Corfield; officer of the guard, William C. Farr.

C. E. HOYE.
Albay, P. I., Aug. 4, 1908.

K. OF P. DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Garrett and Allegany County Lodges to Meet at Frostburg, October 21.

Delegates from the Knights of Pythias lodges of Allegany and Garrett counties, which comprise the first district of Maryland, met at Nickel's hall last Wednesday evening to make arrangements for the holding of the third district meeting. The following delegates were present: Cumberland Lodge No. 60, of Cumberland, Messrs. L. C. Madore, T. R. Palmer and B. F. Shaffer; Frostburg City, No. 88, of Frostburg, D. J. Williams, William Lewis and John B. Rees; Rising Sun Lodge, No. 86, Lonaconing, James Picken and Robert Hutchinson; Monterey Lodge, No. 90, of Barton, Karl Lindauer and Nicholson Eilbeck; Garrett Lodge, No. 113, of Oakland, Wm. Newman; Queen City Lodge, No. 136, of Cumberland, and Anchor Lodge, No. 111, of Midland, were not represented, not having received notice in time.

The district convention will be held Wednesday, Oct. 21, at Frostburg. It is proposed to have an afternoon and an evening session. Addresses will be delivered by prominent members of the order and grand lodge officers. The evening session will be devoted to conferring of degrees and exemplification of the secret work. The honor of conferring of the degree work will be bestowed upon the team of Garrett Lodge, Oakland. This convention promises to be a great time among the Knights of Pythias of this and Allegany counties. Committees have been appointed to look after the different work to be done. Danial J. Williams has been appointed district deputy grand chancellor for the first district.

The Republican for Job Work.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN ON THE MOUNTAIN TOP

Spent Sunday as Guest of Col. McGraw at Deer Park.

DECLINED TO DELIVER LECTURE

Candidate Disappointed a Large Crowd at Mountain Lake Park Who Had Gathered to Hear Him—A Day of Rest for Mr. Bryan.

The Democratic candidate for the Presidency, William Jennings Bryan, spent Sunday at Deer Park as the guest of Col. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, West Va., after ending a week of strenuous labor, leaving for Baltimore after midnight Sunday, his special car arriving in the Maryland metropolis about eight o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. Bryan and his party reached Deer Park just before midnight on Saturday night having left Cumberland for that point immediately after the meeting held there. Arriving there he was driven to the pretty cottage of Col. McGraw, who is national committeeman from West Virginia, whose guest Mr. Bryan and his party were for a few days previous to Sunday.

Besides Mr. Bryan and his traveling companions, who included ex-Governor Jennings, of Florida, his cousin, Colonel McGraw had as his guests a number of prominent West Virginia Democrats, among them ex-United States Senator Henry Gassaway Davis and his brother, Col. T. B. Davis, formerly a member of Congress from West Virginia. Mr. Davis was the candidate for Vice-President four years ago on the ticket with Judge Parker. He and Mr. Bryan took a long drive together Sunday afternoon and displayed great cordiality toward each other. Senator Davis would not discuss the national situation. Notwithstanding his 85 years Senator Davis is hale and hearty and vigorous, and says he feels in excellent health. He got into the carriage with Mr. Bryan with an alertness equal to that of the candidate, and insisted on Mr. Bryan climbing in first.

Sunday morning Mr. Bryan took an automobile ride over the mountains and returned to Deer Park enthusiastic over the beauty of the scenery of Garrett county. On effort was made to induce him to consent to deliver his "Prince of Peace" lecture at Mountain Lake Park in the afternoon, and the report that he would do so had been spread about the county. At Cumberland, however, Mr. Bryan concluded that he would not speak at all. A crowd of nearly 2,000 people had gathered in the auditorium with the expectation of hearing Mr. Bryan. Most of them had been waiting for hours.

Mr. Bryan, when he arrived, had no intention of getting out of the carriage, but was induced to say a word or so. He told the crowd that it was a day of rest, and that he could not address them, but that he would be glad to shake hands, and was busy for half an hour greeting the hundreds that crowded about him.

Mr. Bryan spent the evening quietly at the cottage and on the porch of the hotel. This is the fag end of the season at Deer Park, and there are few guests left, but nearly all of these met Mr. Bryan.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MISS REBECCA RIDGLEY.

Miss Rebecca Ridgley died on the 5th of September, 1908, at her quiet home, three miles south of Grantsville, in Garrett county, of an illness of two years, aged about 85 years. She died at the spot she was born, and where she lived happy all her many years. She was the youngest child of the late Elie Ridgley, one of old Allegany's most prominent and worthy citizens. She was tenderly laid to rest in the family cemetery on the old home farm, according to the rites and forms of the Catholic church. The family in all consisted of nine members—seven daughters and only two sons, all now deceased. Only a few years ago, Isabelle, a devoted sister, died at the same ancient mansion, in her ripe eighties. These two unmarried sisters lived together in the old hospitable Ridgley stone mansion, and conducted the ample farm in a business manner. All the other sisters were married and left a number of children, many of them well known. Among them: Dr. H. S. Bevans, of Grantsville, and Levi S. Hilleary, of Cumberland. These two last and youngest sisters chose lives of singleness, and so lived happily all their many years in quietude, comfort, purity and respect. They were ladies in the good sense of the term; no ill expressions or feelings could be held or expressed for either of the two. All who knew them well know and feel they have suffered a loss in these two deaths.

By the death of this worthy lady the Ridgly name, that had been prominent in the county for a century, suddenly became extinct, but the family blood yet flows in many warm veins.

OLD ACQUAINTANCE.
Cumberland, Sept. 14, 1908.

CHARLOTTE DAY.

Died, Sunday, September 13th, Charlotte, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Day, near Deer Park. The funeral took place Tuesday, the 15th inst., interment being made at the Deer Park cemetery. Many friends were present to show their sympathy for the bereaved parents. May God give them comfort and peace. The funeral was conducted by the writer.

C. W. HUDSON.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO
have just received a
Carload of Underwear

All sizes and kinds, and as usual the price will be the lowest.

Clothing! Clothing!

We have a complete line of Children's, Boys' and Men's Clothing. Come and see our Men's $15.00 Suit that we are selling for . . . $10

Shoes! Shoes! Shoes!

The largest and best stock of Shoes in town. Our fnll line just opened and is complete and will please you in Style Price and Quality.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

P. S.---Will pay 60c for Potatoes. Will guarantee this price for two weeks.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL
CLOTHING
NOW COMING IN.

The best stock I have ever had. Fine line of BOYS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in the best styles. Plenty to select from.

And don't forget, I have the best line of SHOES in the county.

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

COL. PEARRE NOTIFIED

Regrets Opponent Used Personalities In Speech.

SAYS HE HAD AUDIENCE OF 20

Republican Candidate For Sixth Term Defends His Long Tenure In the House.

Col. George A. Pearre, renominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Sixth district for a sixth term, was formally notified Thursday at the Queen City Hotel, Cumberland. Col. John R. Rouzer, of Frederick county, chairman of the committee, made a most complimentary speech, informing Colonel Pearre that a renomination, coming to him as it did by acclamation, was an honor rarely conferred by a convention in Maryland. State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of Garrett county, and Mr. Harman Nolte, of Cumberland, representing Allegany county, were the other members present. Others present were Horace P. Whitworth, chairman of the Republican County Committee, and F. Brooke Whiting, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Allegany County.

Before the party adjourned Colonel Pearre arranged with Messrs. Whiting and Whitworth for a joint meeting of the committees in Cumberland on Monday evening, September 21, at which time the candidate will be present. Colonel Pearre meets the Republican committee of Washington county at Hagerston on Saturday afternoon and all this week will be devoted to stumping in Garrett county.

In his speech of acceptance Colonel Pearre indorsed the national platform of the Republican party. He criticised the size and personnel of the Democratic convention at Oakland, saying the speech of his Democratic opponent was made before 20 people, "the total attendance of the Oakland convention." He regretted that the Democratic candidate saw fit in his speech accepting the nomination "to inject a personal feature in this campaign." "He makes but one issue between the Republicans and Democrats of the Sixth Congressional district in this campaign," continued Colonel Pearre, "and that is, first whether it is legal, and second, whether being legal is it wise for a Congressional constituency to send a representative to the Congress of the United States for a longer period of time than one term.

"He intimates that it is in violation of the spirit of the Constitution because, if its framers had intended that a representative in Congress should be sent for more than one term of two years, they would have said so in that instrument. This statement contained in both the resolutions of the Oakland convention and in the speech of occeptance of it nominee, both doubtless penned by the same hand and conceived by the same mind, reflects little credit upon tha legal discernment of the Democratic candidate and less upon his sincerity.

"If the framers of the Constitution had intended or desired to limit the number of terms a representative in Congress they could easily and would undoubtedly have done so.

"We are promised by the Democratic candidate in the closing remarks of his speech of acceptance a further expression of his views upon other matters of public interest, and these views we will await not only with curiosity, but with the hope that he may be perfectly frank with the people, and declare, as does his great chief, the Hon. William Jennings Bryan, that the platform of his party is binding not only in what it states, but in what it omits. We may then be regaled by a brilliant discussion of his unequivocal belief in the advocacy of the Government ownership of railroads and other political vagaries which have consumed so much of his time and attention.

"With Mr. Bryan at the head of the Democratic ticket no more fitting candidate could have been found in the Sixth district of Maryland to carry the Democratic banner in this campaign. And it can be stated with the assurance of a moral conviction that he will follow his leader, who, while patriotic and personally pure, is looked upon by most careful thinkers as a dreamer of dreams, a chaser of stars and the advocate of every political vagary that promises an increase of votes."

Upon the conclusion of the formal exercises Colonel Pearre entertained the committee at lunch.

NEW ACCOUNT OF BRADDOCK'S DEATH

Mr. Stewart Tells What Was Handed Down by His Grandfather.

Mr. Albert Stewart and son, Mr. Frank Stewart, arrived in Cumberland last night on their return to their home in Washington, D. C., in their Reo car, 18-20 h.-p. They had been to Uniontown, Pa., and Confluence, Pa., with Mrs. Albert Stewart, who took the train from Confluence back to Washington. Mr. Albert Stewart is a native of Uniontown, but he has been living in Washington for some years. He is a grandson of Abram Stewart, who was superintendent of the Braddock road, a route to the West before the days of the National pike. Mr. Stewart tells an interesting story of the death of Braddock, handed down by his grandfather, which has never heretofore been published.

He says his grandfather had a force of men working on the Braddock road about eight miles this side of Uniontown when there suddenly appeared from the bushes Thomas Fossett, a noted deer hunter in his day. Fossett to'd the men if they would dig further down they would come upon the body of Gen. Braddock. They did as suggested and the body was exhumed and was reinterred amid a clump of trees nearby and it still rests at the same spot which is marked with a tablet. Young Mr. Stewart took a photograph of Braddock's grave on this trip. Fossett then explained to Mr. Stewart's grandfather the manner in which Gen. Braddock met his death. And right there Fossett confessed that he killed Gen. Braddock and with the trusty deer rifle, which he was then carrying. The French and Indians were all in ambush. Braddock was conceited and arrogant and knew nothing of indian warfare. He wanted to fight in the open. He was exposed when he was shot as were many of the English soldiers who were completely bewildered by the Indian method of fighting. Fossett was behind a tree, as he was acquainted with Indian warfare and he was fighting the redskin after Indian style. Fossett's brother was also behind a tree picking off Indians. Gen. Braddock happened to see him and he upbraided him for not fighting in the open and hit him over the back with the broadside of his sword. This so angered Thomas Fossett, who saw what had happened that he fired on Gen. Braddock and he fell mortally wounded. This happened near Braddock, Pa. In the retreat the wounded general was carried to a point near Uniontown, where he died and the body was hastily buried at the point Fossett had pointed out to prevent its falling into the hands of the Indians.

Mr. Stewart says it is a known fact that Gen. George Washington laid out the town of Perryopolis, Pa.

Mr. Stewart and his son, who spent the night at the Windsor, leave this morning for Washington. The latter is an enthusiastic motorist. He says he ran from Washington to Frederick on the high gear, covering territory with great rapidity with little expenditure of gasoline. He has made 305 miles on this trip without the least mishap and he expects to run into Washington this evening "none the worse for the wear."—Cumberland News.

AN INTERESTING LIST OF NAMES

Of Early Settlers on Military Lots in This County.

COMPILED BY MR. JACOB BROWN

The Able Local Historian of Allegany and Garrett—Located and Surveyed in 1787 Francis Deakins and Assistants.

An alphabetical list of the settlers upon the military lots, westward of Fort Cumberland, when they were surveyed and located in 1787, by Francis Deakins, and his assistants:

A—Wm. Ashby, Anthony Able, George Anderson, Ralph Adams, Jno. Arnold of A., Jno. Arnold of John, Anthony Arnold, Moses Ayres, Sr., and Moses Ayres, Jr.

B—Patrick Burns, Charles Boyles, Thomas Baker, Philip Bray, Miller Brumsteader, John Beall, John Blair, John Brindige, Peter Bonham, Norman Bruce, Samuel Barrell, George Barcus, Frederick Bray, Thomas Barcus, Ben J. Biggs, Benjamin Brady, John Beehman, Michael Bumm, Wm. Barnes, Andrew Bruce, Robert Boyd, Mathew Ball, Frederick Burgett, Josiah Bonham, Micajah Bonham, Amariah Bonham, Jacob Beall, John Buckholder and John Briefly.

C—Benjamin Codington, Michael Conn, Elie Clark, Edmund Cutter, Nathan Corey, Godfrey Corbus, Wm. Codington, Peter Crawl, Thomas Cordray, Henry Crosby, John Cruise, Daniel Cresap, Sr., Daniel Cresap, Jr., Robert Cresap, James Cresap and Joseph Cresap.

D—Aaron Duckworth, John Durbin, Nicolas Durbin, Wm. Durbin, John Domer, Joseph Davis, Levi Davis, Stroven Davis, Samuel Dawson, Sr., Samuel Durbin, Peter Doogan, Edward Davis, Jacob Dutro, Sr., Jacob Dutro, Jr., Peter Deveemon, Francis Dyall, Barney Devitt, Joseph Dye, Thomas Dawson, Edward Dawson, Sr., Edward Dawson Jr., Samuel Dawson, William Dawson, Sr., and Wm. Dawson, Jr.

E—John Elbin, Samuel Ellison, John Eckhart, George Eckhart, David Eaton, Adam Eckhart, Samuel Elliott, John Ervin.

F—Gabriel Friend, John Friend, Joseph Friend, Charles Friend, Geo. Fidler, Henry Franks, Hezekiah Frazier, John Firman, Geo. Fazenbaker, Josiah Frost and Harman Frazee.

G—Richard Green, Daniel Green, Thomas Greenwade, Salathial Goff, John T. Goff, John Glaze, John Gary, John Glassman, Evan Gwynn, James C. Goff, Benjamin Geeen, John Great, Paul Grimm, Edward Grimes and Brant Gaines.

H—Andrew House, Elisha Hall, Moses Hall, John Harshan. Nicholas Holsbury, Charles Huddy, Richard Hall, George Harness, Samuel Humphreys, Edward Huston, James Henderson, John House, Paul Hoye, Wm. Howell, George Haever, Jacob Hagullwood, Abraham Hite, Samuel Hutton, Adam Hechsenbaugh, Benjamin Hull and Richard Harcout.

J—Samuel Jackson, Wm. Jones, Wm. Jacobs, John Jonas, Wm. Jonas, Conrad Coleman, Albert Johnson and Evan James.

K—Jacob Kruger, Leonard Kimble, John Kelley, Jacob Koontz, Henry Kemp, Henry Kite and John Keyser.

L—Wm. Logsdon, George Laporte, Ralph Logsdon, Elisha Logsdon, Zacharia Linton, John Lynn, David Lee, William Logsdon, John Lowdermilk, David Levitt, Jacob Lower, Rosemond Long and Joseph Lee.

M—Wm. Moose, James Montain, John Mathews, Jr., Jacob Miller, Alex Moore, David Moore, Moses McKinsey, Conrad Miller, Elias Majors, Thomas Mathews, James M. Pipe, John Metz, Joseph McKinsey, Solomon Monroe, Moses Monroe, Philip Michaels, Henry Mattingly, Henry Myers, Stephens Masters, Gabriel McKinsy, John ——, Jr., John Montgomery, Christopher Myers, James McMullen, Nathaniel Magruder, Josiah Magruder and Samuel McKinsey.

N—John Neff, John Nepton and Peter Ninirick.

P—Samuel Postelwait, Michael Paugh, Margaret Poling, John Poster, Samuel Poling, Martin Poling, Richard Poling, John Price, Martin Poling, Henry Pittinger, Nicholas Pettinger, Gabrie Powell, Robert Parker, Johannes Paugh, Hezekiah Pound, Stephen Pierson, Peter Poling, John Furguson, Henry Peter, George Preston, Moses Porter, Henry Porter and George Paine.

Q—Charles Queen.

R—John Ryan, John Rhodes, Jno. Rattan, Adam Rhodes, David Robinson, Daniel Reckner, John Rubash, John Richards, Wm. Ridgeford, Godfrey Richards, Benjamin Rush, Enoch Read, Roger Robertson, Aaron Rice, Michael Raway and John Ragan.

S—John Stuck, Mathew Singleman, John Strickler, Garrett Snedeger, Jno. Stover, George Sapp, Jacob Storm, John Simkins, Peter Stuck, Wm. Shaw, Joseph Scott, Simon Speed, Mathew Smooke, John Sigler, William Stagg, James Schimmer, John Streets Moses Spicers, Able Sergeant, Adam Sigler, Jacob Sigler, John Sibley and Jonathan Stritchfield.

T—Jesse Tomlinson, John Trimble, John Tomlinson, Jacob Tustlinger, Moses Tinlonel, Richard Telton, Ezekiel Totten, Peter Teter, Sr., David Troxell and John Trotter.

U—James Utter, Sr., James Utter, Jr., Wm. Utter, Thomas Umberson and Charles Uhl.

V—John Vanbuskirk, David Vansickle and John Vincent.

W—John Workman, Henry Woodger, Wm. Wells, Moses Williams, Andrew Workman, Jacob Workman, Stephen Workman, Thomas Williams, Joseph Warnick, John Whiteman, W. Workman, Isaac Workman, Geo. Wadingule, Alpheus Wigmine, James Woodinger, George Winters, Samuel Wicoff, James Witts, Jacob Wicoff, Peter Wikoff, George Wilhelm, Alexander Wilhelm, John Wikoff, Jesse Walter, Arthur Watson and Archibald White.

BLOCK SIGNALS ON B. & O. R. R.

More Appliances for Safety on the Washington-Philadelphia Division.

On account of the large number of trains that are run between Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington daily on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, these aggregating more than 130 east and westbound, automatic block signals have been in operation for some time past on this part of the road, this method of signaling being regarded by signal experts as the most reliable for the operation of busy sections of road. Records shows that the percentage of efficiency of these signals averages 99.98 per cent., the remaining .02 percent. being the percentage of failures, which it will be noted that the operation is very close to perfect.

The road is divided into what are known as blocks, usually about a mile in length and the signals are so constructed that the engineer knows the condition of the track two blocks in advance of his train. When a train enters a block protected by an automatic signal, a red light is displaved at night and the arm, by which enginemen are governed, by day, assumes a horizontal or "stop," position. This indicates to the engineer of a train following that the block is occupied and that he must under no circumstance proceed while the signal remains in this position. This is known as the "caution" indication, advising the engineer of a following train that the first block is clear and that the second is occupied by a train and that he may proceed cautiously prepared to stop at the next signal. As the train passes from the second block into the third block the signal at the entrance of the first block will display a white light and the arm will indicate in a vertical position or parallel with the post on which it is suspended. This tells the engineer of an oncoming train that the track is clear two blocks in advance and that the train may continue at its usual speed.

In addition, these signals also show the condition of the track and roadbed and should a rail break in a block the signal will immediately indicate "stop" and will remain so until the track is repaired. Likewise should a car be left standing on the main track through an oversight on the part of a train crew, the signal will indicate "stop," thus preventing a train from colliding with it from the rear. As an extra precaution against accidents the signals are so consrtucted that should they fail to operate at any time, due to the mechanism getting out of order, they will indicate "stop."

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

All the News Everything that happens in the home town; the births, marriages, deaths, the social affairs, the comings and goings of the people—your neighbors; the notes of the schools and churches; all these and many other new and interesting things this paper will give you All the Time

A TRANSFORMATION.

Although Jones Shot a Deer, His Friends Are Skeptical.

Jones would like to meet the man that did it. He says that if the party who took the deer will disclose his identity he may keep the animal for his trouble. But it is not likely the guilty wretch will come forward, as he dislikes to attract attention. Jones returned day before yesterday from northern Michigan, where he had been on a hunting trip. He claims that he shot a deer while he was there and brought it home with him. At any rate, he had one with him when he got back. This much the neighbors are willing to testify to, as he was careful to hang the deer on the back porch, where the whole neighborhood could not help seeing it.

One neighbor has been unkind enough to insinuate that one of its legs was broken and that there were other indications to prove that the deer had been caught in a trap and clubbed to death. Unfortunately, this point must always remain in doubt unless the guilty person comes forward and adds his testimony regarding the facts in the case.

Jones, after seeing that the deer was hung where the neighbors could see it, went downtown, collected a party of friends and lured them up to the house by promising them some of the venison. On their way there they were vastly entertained by his vivid account of how he killed the deer by making a shot that was next to impossible. He took them around to the rear of the house, only to find that some one had substituted a dead calf in its place. It is hard to tell which makes Jones the maddest, the loss of the deer or the doubt that his friends express whether he really did kill a deer, as he says.—Detroit Free Press.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building,
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.54 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBDELAND and Way Points. Depart §10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m. Arrive §9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO. Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.). Depart *6.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., †4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING. Depart §9.26 a. m. (local), *5.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.). Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive §10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS. Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars

Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Real Estate Bought and Sold.

Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Augz., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSSER,
Administrators.

ROOSEVELT'S
HUNTING STORIES

These Stories are Instinct with the Excitement and Dangers of the Chase. They Breathe the Free Air of the Mountain and Plain, Reflect the Glow of the Campfire and Express the Unique Personality of the Author.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING STORIES

Written by Himself

Illustrated by Parker and Jones, with one page of double column cuts by Berger and Ryder

Most interesting stories of outdoor life ever written.
Each story will be published complete.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S deal with the Scribners for the publication of his jungle hunting stories puts him at the top notch as a popular writer. Not even Mark Twain has received the princely sum of $2.00 a word for his writings, the price it is figured Roosevelt will be paid.

Will Begin in These Columns Next Week.

... A ... Postponed Funeral.

By Curran Richard Greenley.

Copyright, 1908, by Curran R. Greenley.

OVER ridge and swamp and along the reaches of the Barraclaw the buds were swelling on the topmost branches of oak and cypress, and the lush grasses that stand up straight and tall in the dark red pools later on in the year began to send their first green shoots to herald the spring. There was a troublesome rumor going the rounds, ominous and dread. Men said that the new levee was treacherous, that it might hold, but all knew that a mighty river was sweeping down from the north, jealous of its ancient prerogatives over the valley. Would the narrow line of earth hold out against it?

Jake Alders heard the news when he was doing his trading down at Wash Evans' store. On the way home he fell in with little groups of men who jogged along discussing the probability of an overflow, not that it was a new thing on the Barraclaw, for many times and often had the Father of Waters swept his royal way across the land, but their little holdings had been heavily taxed to build the levee that was to protect them, and now, thanks to the gods of red tape, Father Messasable had challenged it and the levee was not.

Jake rode along slowly. He was turning a problem over in his mind. Amanda, his wife, had been one of the annual victims to the dread swamp fever, dying in the early winter. She had made him promise to have her funeral preached in the spring "when the woods is a-gittin' green an' things is a little mite more cheerful." Jake had just made arrangements for the funeral and that day had received a message from the parson to the effect that he would be on hand the following Sunday, and now, if the water came, there was no telling when the funeral could be preached.

Jake swung along the yellow ribbon of road, around the big bend and across the long bridge over the bayou thinking deeply. The first bluebird of the year fluttered ahead of him into a nearby cotton field. Over his head a robin wheeled, chattering to his mate. Against the dark gray green of the winter woods the red bud blazed its crimson banners and the nipping wind ruffled the brown breast of the river to scales of golden armor. He gathered himself together, gave the mule a sharp cut and began to whistle—he had made up his mind.

Miss Josie Derr whisked the broom sharply over the steps, shook out her starched purple calico skirt and settled herself on the gallery to enjoy the morning sunshine. There was some little appearance of thrift around the comfortable little log cabin of two rooms and the lean-to kitchen at the back, its well fenced yard and clapboarded outbuildings. Miss Josie herself, spare, gray haired and active as a well intentioned hornet, was known throughout the Barraclaw as a "bustlin' woman, if she is an old maid." Her sixty acres of land were well managed, and, though contrary to custom, she never worked in the cotton herself, at the end of the year she was usually ahead of those who did.

As Jake Alders came in sight, a limp and dejected figure astride of the patient mule, she stood up and peered under her hand. "Why don't the fool straighten up and use the back his God give him? He'd be right decent lookin' if it wan't for his slouchy ways." And Miss Josie pulled her own shoulders a trifle straighter as she walked slowly down the path.

"Howdy, Jake? How's the children and what's the news from the water?"

The mule came to a halt. "Well, now, Miss Josie, I was jes' a-sayin' to myself as how I was a-goin' to ask your advice this very mornin' along of the children. You heard tell how Mandy was a wantin' her funer'l preached in the spring? Sorter foolish. Lord! Wimmen folks has their notions, an' I'm a man what believes in humorin' 'em, dead or alive. Parson Arms, he 'lowed he'd get here a-Sunday, an' we was a-layin' off to have the funer'l preached down at the bayou; but, Miss Josie, them kids ain't got one rag what's decent to wear to their ma's funer'l, an' what I'm a-goin' to do 'twixt now an' then God knows!" Jake paused and looked hopefully at Miss Josie; then he went on, "Seein' as you be such a fine manager, I was a-thinkin' you might kinder help me out, and if"—

"Now, see here, Jake Alders! Do you think I'm a woman or a Christmas tree? How do you reckon I can make clothes grow on them six kids 'twixt now an' Sunday, an' this heah's Tuesday? Man, you've plum lost your senses."

Jake fidgeted with his rope bridle. "I didn't know but what you was"—

"Shut up, Jake Alders. You know you've been plannin' all along the road as how you was a-goin' to dump them kids an' their fixin's on my conscience, an' now you've been an' gone an' done it. Yes, I'm a fool for meddlin', but I'll get 'em ready, but don't you ask me nothin' more, 'cause I ain't goin' to do it." Miss Josie trailed this last over her shoulder as she disappeared into the house, and Jake grinned knowingly as he jogged down the road.

During the remainder of the week he made himself as scarce as possible about the straggling two room cabin that owned him as master. Miss Josie took possession of it and the six small Alders, whose tow heads were subjected to a process of yellow soap and rainwater and later to innumerable little rolls of paper. Meanwhile Miss Josie's machine clattered unending miles of pink calico and domestic, and her energetic tones stirred the Alders progeny to something like industry, so that the cabin shone with unwonted cleanliness as Saturday afternoon deepened into twilight.

The parson was to spend the night, and Jake had gone to the station to meet him. Miss Josie was preparing to go home, having completed all the arrangements, even to laying out the finery in six little heaps on the bench that ran along the wall. There were rolls of light bread and a jelly cake, two roasted fowls and some of Miss Josie's own pies, all destined to do duty as the funeral baked meats.

Miss Josie started down to the gate, trailing a torrent of minute instructions to the forlorn little group in the doorway. Away up the road she heard the clatter of hoofs and the rattle of the ancient buggy that Jake had borrowed from the squire, and it was coming faster than Jake Alders' old mare mule had ever traveled that road before. Jake was leaning over the dashboard in the effort to hurry old Mag along. He shouted something—nearer—and Miss Josie stood stock still. "The water's a-comin'! Levee's broke at Carter's end. Bend Nigger Wool swamp's plum full! She'll be here by daylight!"

Jake tumbled out, and the parson, a thin, active man, jumped to the ground and began to unharness the mule. Miss Josie started down the road in a run, but Jake yelled after her: "Don't be skeered. I'll be down there 'fore mornin'. You ain't got no men folks to be a-hailin' and a-liftin'. Them shif'less niggers will be a-lookin' out for their own fool necks. I'll put your chickens an' things in the loft an' your stock on my mound an'"— But the dark had swallowed Miss Josie.

Jake was roused from his careless ease. Other years had left their lesson. Aided by the parson, he drove his cattle into the field where the old Indian mound afforded a refuge. A dugout that had done duty as a trough in front of the cabin was wrenched from its posts and a pair of paddles hastily rived out. From under the cabin Jake dragged out an old bateau that with a little patching was made passably safe. Then a pile of rough planks was transferred to the front gallery from the corner of the yard where Jake had "'lowed" to build a crib in readiness for the building of a false floor should the necessity arise. They piled firewood in every inch of available space, even upon the flat part of the roof. "She'll be in the Barraclaw by mornin'," said Jake as he toiled in with the last load.

The hush of dawn was in the air when they ceased their labor. The parson straightened up. "It is the Sabbath morning, Brother Alders, but truly the ox is in the ditch before us Sister Derr needs our help."

"B'gosh!" Jake slapped his thigh. "If I didn't go and forget all about that woman clear as a whistle, an' me a-promisin' so big. Come on, parson."

She was waiting for them, her preparations all made. She had collected her cattle into the barnyard, tied the chickens by the legs ready to be transferred to the barn loft, and her trunk stood locked and strapped.

"How deep you reckon it will go?" she questioned.

Jake scratched his chin. "Can't say, Miss Josie. Last water I had to put a false floor in my house, an' they do say this'll beat that holler."

Miss Josie collapsed helplessly into the splint bottomed rocker. "If I'd the sense God gave geese I'd stayed back in them old red hills of Georgy 'stead of comin' to live in a frog pond."

The parson shook his head. "Now, my sister, you're tasking the Almighty with shortcomings. Every country has its drawbacks, but the Barraclaw folks never failed a stranger in trouble yet. Here's Brother Alders willing to take care of you and"— Jake coughed and looked at the parson, and the parson understood. He went to the door and stood peering into the brightening east.

"Miss Josie"—Jake twirled the ragged hat between his fingers and moved a step nearer to the sobbing woman in the chair—"parson heah has jes' about put into words what I been a-tryin' to say all this week. I'm a-needin' you terrible bad, me an' the chillun, an', though I 'low I ain't much to look at, Mandy was mighty fond of me, an' you know there never was nuthin' I wouldn't do for Mandy. Miss Josie, this ain't no time for a woman to be livin' alone with God A'mighty's ragin' floods comin' over her head. Can't you make up your mind to come along with me?"

The sobs had hushed, but the apron still sheltered Miss Josie, when the parson turned. "Brother Alders, I would suggest that you send Lem to the station as soon as he gets back and telegraph the clerk to issue the license. It's a little irregular, but I can make the return next time I go to Grayson. I'm here now, and it is not a time to stand on ceremony as to the manner of doing things."

Miss Josie jerked the apron down. "You two men are a-fixin' the whole thing an' a-plannin' it out without me gittin' a word in, as if a woman didn't have the right to settle about her own marryin.' Go ahead. But there's one comfort. I'll be on hand when the time comes to see that Mandy's funer'l goes off all right."

"Thanky, Miss Josie. There's comfort in them words, an'"— Jake's mouth hung open and his eyes widened as he tore out the door. One look at the river whispering, bubbling and creeping visibly up the bank. "She's here! Hustle with your traps, Miss Josie. There ain't no time to lose." And he fell to work.

As an example of muscular Christianity the parson was no laggard and the gospel of works was fully demonstrated that March Sunday when he laid down rod and staff to help Jake Alders rescue cattle and hogs.

The sun was climbing over the cypress brakes when they arrived at Jake's cabin. The children, breakfastless and forlorn, were huddled upon the doorstep. At sight of Miss Josie and her leather trunk on Jake's shoulder they came swarming about her skirts. "Oh, goody, she's goin' to stay!" announced Jemina, Jake's eldest, as she planted the baby in Miss Josie's arms with a gesture of finality.

All day long the muddy tide crept over the land. It entered the dusty road in thin streams, widening until road and dooryard, barnyard and pasture disappeared. Jake stood eying the pile of lumber as the water sucked and gurgled beneath him. The parson squared his shoulders. "Yes, Brother Alders, there is no time like the present," and the sound of hammer and saw rang over the rippling tide as the parson wrought for these sheep of his pasture. Ten o'clock saw the last nail as the high March wind sent the first wave over the cabin sill. Miss Josie settled the children and the household belongings with some degree of comfort, but the parson and Jake could not stand upright under the low rafters.

The irregular beat of dugout paddles came around the bend, and the parson stepped outside, while Jake stood fingering his hat and glancing sidewise at Miss Josie where she sat in the low rocker, bending over the drowsy baby. The other children slept upon the mattress. She lifted her head as the parson paused in the doorway, a bit of yellow paper between his fingers, and behind him, peering over his shoulder, the station agent and Jake's young brother Lem.

"Brother Alders, the clerk wires me that he has issued the license."

Miss Josie arose, the sleeping baby against her shoulder. The warm little body nestling there in drowsy helplessness stirred and woke the primal woman, virginal and shy, that slept below the crest of years. Her keen gray eyes softened with a new light above the sallow cheek, where the long banished blushes burned beneath Jake's ardent brown gaze. At her feet his children slept.

The parson raised his hand, and Jake blundered to Miss Josie's side, his tall head stooping to avoid the rafters. Over the lap-lap of the waves beneath them, over the keening of the wind in the cypress brakes, the parson's voice rose in solemn sentences, and then he was saying goodby, and the faces were gone from the doorway. Miss Josie took refuge behind the sleeping baby as she knelt to place it with the other children, and down the road she heard the parson singing as he paddled into the night.

And when the long May days came to the Barraclaw, newly risen from the chrism of the waters and teeming with the gifts of Father Messasabe, the first Mrs. Alders received due meed of song and service, thoroughly ordered by Mrs. Alders the second.

Fully Equal.

Aunt Mandy is an old colored woman who for years has done washing for several East Orange families. She has had several matrimonial experiences, and when her last husband died one of her customers attempted to condole with her.

"I was very sorry to hear of your husband's death, Aunt Mandy," she said.

"Ya'as, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He was a pow'ful good man."

"What did he die of?"

"Ah really don't know, ma'am."

"You don't know! Gracious! Couldn't the doctor tell you?"

"Ah didn't have no doctah, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He jes done died a natch'ral death."

It wasn't long, however, before Aunt Mandy had another husband.

"I hear you are married again," remarked her patron one day.

"Ya'as, ma'am," giggled Aunt Mandy. "Ah was done married las' Sunday."

"And is your new husband equal to the last?"

"Ya'as, indeedy, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He's jes as equal if not equaler."—New York Times.

Division of Labor.

"What do you want here?" asked the warden of the penitentiary.

"I should like to spend a few days in this institution," said the caller.

"What for?"

"I wish to see how the inmates live."

"What is your object in that? Are you writing a book?"

"Not at all."

"Detective story?"

"Nothing of the sort."

"Story for the Sunday papers?"

"No, sir."

The warden reflected.

"I suppose," he said, "you are what they call a sociologist."

"No, sir," said the caller. "But my brother is. All I do is to study the conditions. He formulates the theories."—Chicago Tribune.

Her Request.

A lady complained to her milkman of the quality of milk he sold her.

"Well, mum," said the milkman, "the cows don't get enough grass feed this time o' year. Why, them cows are just as sorry about it as I am. I often see 'em cryin'—regular cryin' mum—because they feel as how their milk don't do 'em credit. Don't you believe it, mum?"

"Oh, yes, I believe it," responded his customer, "but I wish in future you'd see that they don't drop their tears into our can."

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK,

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

BRYAN VAGARIES.

Mr. Bryan has come and gone. He spent a whole day in this city Saturday and made two speeches. He cannot complain that he was not accorded the respect due him as a candidate for the highest office within the gift of the people of the United States. At both his afternoon and evening meetings a large number of Republicans were present and he was listened to with respectful attention. He has gone and we doubt if he made a single convert. Indeed it is more than likely there are fewer Bryan Democrats in Allegany county now than there were before he came. The special features of Mr. Bryan's speeches were a comparison of "my platform" with the Republican platform; insurance guarantee for bank deposits and the tariff or economy in the public expense. As to the difference between the two platforms it must have struck his auditors that the chief difference between the Republican and the Democratic platforms is the difference which has heretofore been seen between the policies of Mr. Roosevelt and those which have been advocated by the Democratic candidate. Mr. Roosevelt's policies have been progressive and regulative; Mr. Bryan's destructive. Mr. Roosevelt has favored regulation of the business in which evils have grown up so as to stamp out the evils and permit the business to continue. The tendency of Mr. Bryan's proposals has generally with respect to which he is demanding reform. Mr. Roosevelt would compel the trusts to conduct their business in a lawful manner and secure the benefits of their operation and the maintenance of the prosperity of the country of which they are important part; while Mr. Bryan would extirpate and destroy the entire business in order to stamp out the evils which they have practiced.

As to his insurance for bank deposits when you stop to think it over, it is a long step forward from a government guaranty of the fifty-cent dollar to an insurance guaranty for bank deposits. As an economist Mr. Bryan is progressing favorably on the whole.

As to his tariff and economy views they have a purely geographical sincerity. His epigrams and startling conundrums are especially designed to meet local demands. Of this nature are all his views on tariff and taxation.

Mr. Bryan's proposition that every time a trust is formed a tariff schedule should be repealed, and every time a trust is dissolved a new duty should be added, is too funny even for comic opera.

If on March 4 next Mr. Bryan should become President, with a Democratic Congress in both houses, and should actually place upon the statute books the financial and economic vagaries delivered by him in his speech last Saturday night in the Academy of Music here, it would plunge the nation into bankruptcy and bring on industrial chaos. If he should begin by repealing the duty on sugar to punish the sugar trust, he would upset the national finances by losing $60,000,000 a year in revenues, and would stir up a revolution in Louisiana, Utah, Colorado and Michigan. Then, if he should repeal the duty on cotton goods, because some hustling manufacturers of New England or the Carolinas were dumping goods in China in rivalry with with England and Germany, he would divert other millions from the treasury and invite still further industrial ruin.

But, of course, Mr. Bryan would do none of these things, any more than he will invade the solid South and summon the cohorts of Democracy to the defense of the Constitution with the battle cry "Shall the People Rule?" Mr. Bryan simply does not mean what he says. What he utters with Chadbandian unction in the North he repudiates with Pecksniffian duplicity in the South. In the East we may expect to hear another policy to fit the great manufacturing interests of that section. Vacillating, uncertain Bryan! —Cumberland News.

THE DAY AFTER.

Following Mr. Bryan's visit to Baltimore on Monday of this week the issue of the Sun of the following day contained this editorial utterance:

"Mr. Bryan, the Democratic candidate for President, addressed a meeting at the Fifth Regiment Armory in this city last night. A large number of people gathered to hear his words and receive his message with respectful attention. It will doubtless recur to the minds of many that when Mr. Bryan was a candidate for the Presidency 12 years ago he spoke here to one of the greatest outpourings of people that this city had ever seen at a political meeting, and that shortly afterward Baltimore gave a majority against him of 21,098 votes.

"The Sun has never failed to give Mr. William Jennings Bryan full credit for all his private and personal virtues. The Sun is, however, constrained to oppose him for the Pres dency because we do not believe that the best interests of the country would be promoted by his election. The people of the United States have had enough of panics, enough disturbance of business. They now desire above all things the return of normal business and industrial conditions and industrial peace. The working people want employment and good wages. We do not believe that these things can be attained by the election to the highest and most powerful place in the gift of the people of a man who has won prominence, not by sound and enlightened statesmanship, but by ceaseless agitation, by ceaseless strivings after something new and strange.

"In opposing the election of Mr. Bryan The Sun ia not opposing true Democracy or true Democratic principles. The time honored principles of that historic party are in strange company when associated with some of the planks in the platform upon which Mr. Bryan is making his campaign. Those planks are little more akin to the platforms upon which Tilden and Cleveland were elected than the Republican platform is. Indeed, one of those planks is in effect a declaration in favor of centralization, and Mr. Bryan to that extent stands committed to the doctrine of the centralization of power in the Federal Government as completely as the candidate of the Republican party. It is the fundamental principle of the Democratic party that all men should stand equal before the law. Mr. Bryan does not uphold that doctrine in demanding special privileges for special classes.

"Mr. Roosevelt has just proclaimed Mr. Taft his heir, but no one who knows Judge Taft will have any fear that he will indulge in any violent or extreme methods if he is Chief Executive. His whole record and character negative any such fear. No one who knows Mr. Bryan has any hope that he would cease to be an agitator if elected to the Presidency or that he would cease to recommend to Congress the extreme doctrines which he is known to entertain and which are largely expressed in the freak constitution of Oklahoma. No one who knows him can entertain a hope that he would be more conservative than Mr. Roosevelt. Indeed, the only criticism which he seems to have passed upon the President is that the views and doctrines which have alarmed capital and deprived labor of its employment were his (Bryan's) doctrines and stolen from him, and that they were not pressed with sufficient energy.

"The country is in no condition to stand four more years of violent vituperation and tempestuous haranguing from the White House. It wants railroads and interstate corporations regulated, but not strangled, and monoplies curbed, but it does not want its business interests destroyed by frenzied political crusades. Mr. Taft will carry out fearlessly and faithfully the policies which the people demand, but he will not consider it necessary to throw the country into bankruptcy and business stagnation in order to make it virtuous. The choice is not so much between parties as between men. The country does not want the man who would out-Roosevelt Roosevelt and batter business with a legislative bludgeon in the effort to make it good. On the other hand, what the country does want is a man who is strong, temperate and patriotic, who is pledged to promote the best interests of the whole country, without regard to class or section, and who, while protecting the country from the impositions of predatory wealth, will protect it from the greater—because more insidious—danger of predatory politicians. The people, we believe, will decide in favor of restoring prosperity through Mr. Taft, rather than in turning prosperity from the door through Mr. Bryan."

Almost a Joke.

The organization of the Bryan-Kern-Lewis club in Oakland last Thursday night, after a week's advertising in the two Democratic organs of the town and by handbills promiscuously scattered through the town and county generally, proved to be almost a joke. The members numbered thirty-one, officered as follows: President, Gilmor S. Hamill; vice presidents, John W. Hart and Thomas Little; secretary, A. S. Teats; treasurer, D. M. Mason.

Some Fine Apples.

Yesterday morning Mr. William Frush, of near town, left several specimens of an apple grown on his farm near Oakland. One of the apples weighs fourteen ounces; three of them two pounds and ten ounces—an even average of the first one weighed. What name the variety bears we are unable to state, having exhibited them to several farmers, all giving different brands. We are content to call them apples of a superior kind.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONVENTION

An Interesting Event to Local Epworthians.

The Sub-District Epworth League convention for Oakland district convened at Hoyes, Md., on Tuesday, September 8th, 1908, at 7 p. m., with a goodly number of delegates present from the different churches of the district.

A short devotional meeting was held by the local president, Chas. B. Callis, after which Rev. A. S. Wolfe introduced the district president, Rev. J. B. Workman of Oakland, who acted as chairman of the convention. W. E. Bishoff was elected secretary in the absence of the district secretary. G. E. Bishoff then delivered the address of welcome in behalf of the local chapter, making the visitors feel at home and fortelling of the rich feast to be enjoyed, responded to by W. W. Sweet of Swanton, in words glowing with the spirit of Christianity, and accept the welcome in behalf of the delegates. The choir sang an anthem which was followed by a few remarks by Rev. A. S. Wolfe, who introduced the symposium consisting of the following subjects: 1, What has the League Accomplished?; 2. What is the Purpose of the League?; 3, How Does the League Propose to Reach Its Desired End? Rev. E. J. Westfall of Mt. Lake Park, took up the discussion giving a short account of the League history, and bringing out as the keynote of his speech that the purpo e of the organization is to train and develop boys and girls to work for Christ, thus leading to the final aim: to evangelize the world. Rev. J. B. Workman discussed the third part of the symposium, pointing to the fact that the League does not expect to accomplish its end by deceitful method, nor by petting and flattering, neither by sheer force; but by discovering to workers the r own powers; by revealing a vision of the world's need, and their opportunities, and by developing them intellectually and spiritually.

On Wednesday morning a devotional service was held by W. E. Bishoff in which fervent prayers were sent to God and a few hymns sung. The topic for consideration was "Essentials Needed in Organizing an E. L. Chapter." This subject was ably discussed by Rev. H. E. Friend. He stated that the first essential is to have officers fully equipped to conduct a League. These officers must be trained, must be consecrated to God, and must be in sympathy with the doctrine of the M. E. Church. The subject was enthusiastically discussed by Revs. E. J. Westfall, W. M. Lister, A. S. Wolfe and Mr. W. W. Sweet. "The Right and the Wrong Kinds of Socials" was remarked upon by several leading men and valuable suggestions were dropped that we hope may sink into the minds of the young people. "Difficulties in League Work" was next approached in symposium, the first part of which was discussed as to difficulties in the country League by W. E. Bishoff, in which the following questions were presented: "How shall we get the four departments of the League to work in harmony?" "How shall we keep the machinery of the League in good running order?" Rev. W. M. Lister presented the difficulties in the town chapter, among which are: Many attractions in town lodges, etc. The general discussion which followed as to finding remedies for these difficulties was very interesting, instructive and productive of good results.

On Wednesday afternoon the session was opened with a short devotional ser- by F. D. DeWitt, after which the chairman took charge and appointed a committee on resolutions composed of H. N. Cuppett, W. M. Lister and Mabel Porter. H. N. Cuppett then opened the discusssions on "The Pastor's Duty to the League." His address hinged on the points that the pastor should see that the League is well organized, and that the right men are elected as president and vice presidents. The discussion was continued by several ministers and laymen who also, took up "The League's Duty to the Pastor." "How to Prepare for and Conduct an E. L. Devotional Service" was handled in a very practical manner by Rev. J. W. Engle of Terra Alta. He left an impression of the importance of the leaders preparation for the devotional meeting, both prayerfully and mentally, so that the meeting may be both interesting and helpful. An Epworth League experience meeting was the next part of the exercises. In this were included the answers to the following questions: "Who are you?" "Where are you from?" "What is your destination?"

The closing session was opened promptly at 7.30 p. m. with songs and a prayer by Rev. E. J. Westfall. The committee on resolutions then reported, in which they extended the thanks of the Convention to the officials of the Hoyes church, to the choir, to the people who opened their homes to the delegates, and to the officers of the local and district Leagues. Their report was adopted. The next in order was a collection to defray the expenses of the convention, and the result showed a surplus which was given to the District League.

After a beautiful anthem by the choir Rev. J. W. Engle preached a sermon on the text: "Despise not the day of thy youth." This was a most eloquent and forceful appeal to the youth of our land to righteous living and was inspiriag to all present. This discourse was followed by a consecration service conducted by Rev. E. J. Westfall, which served as an admirable climax to a convention conducted throughout in such a spiritual manner, and which sent visitors and local members to their homes cherishing grateful memories of this mingling of God's people.

WM. E. BISHOFF, Secretary.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. Wm. Mickey, Sr., assistant trainmaster W. M. R. R., at the West Virginia Junction, who has been spending his vacation at Atlantic City, returned home this week. He was accompanied by his wife and youngest daughter.

Mr. Grant Hershberger, boss miner at the Marsteller mines, at Hampshire, is home after spending a few days at Elkins, the guest of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Green.

Congressman George A. Pearre is billed for a speech in town on the evening of Sept. 19. The date for Hon. David J. Lewis' debut has not been fixed.

All the reports from farmers and country people in this section of Garrett and Mineral counties, state the chestnut crop this season to be nearly an entire failure. Only a tree here and there in the large orchards around the Chestnut Grove settlement is found to be bearing.

Mrs. Edward Warnick is home after a week spent visiting her parents at Tunnelton.

The work at the different mines in this vicinity is almost at a standstill. Nothing of the kind has ever been experienced before and many miners and mine employes are compelled to seek employment elsewhere.

Miss Clara Tibbetts returned home this week from a visit to friends in Winchester, Va. She was accompanied on her return by Miss Pleasant Howard, who has been appointed assistant teacher in the public school here.

Rev. J. R. Creek will conduct religious services in Burke's Park, at Hampshire, on next Sunday afternoon.

Mr. O. Tibbetts superintendent of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., at Beryl, left this week in his automobile for Harper's Ferry. He was accompanied by his son Charles, Charles Barker, of Piedmont, and James La Rue, of Beryl. The party are bent on sport and will try their luck at bass fishing along the banks of the historic Shenandoah river.

Miss Adelaide Phillips, the popular Piedmont milliner, was in town during the week.

Mr. Martin Abernathy, of Grafton, spent a few days of this week visiting his aged mother at Windom.

Mr. and Mrs. George Macfarlane, of Barnum, left the first of the week for Tonawanda, Pa., on a visit to his home folks and friends in that city.

Mrs. Albert Ingram and two daughters, of Davis, have returned home after visiting relatives and friends in this place and Piedmont.

News came to town early yesterday afternoon of the sudden death of Mr. Albert Warnick of Elk Garden. He was working in mine No. 6, one of the group of mines owned and operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Co., at Elk Garden, when without warning, about 2 o'clock the roof gave way, crushing him to death. He was completely covered by the fall of bone rock and slate, and his fellow miners had to work for nearly two hours before his body was extricated. Mr. Warnick was born and raised on a farm a few miles from town, and was about fifty years of age. He was well and favorably known to all our citizens and up to five or six years ago, when he moved to his present location, was a resident of the town. He leaves a widow and eight children, three brothers, Messrs. Edward and George Warnick of this place, the latter a well known groceryman; Mr. Truman Warnick, of Cleveland, Ohio, and two sisters, Mrs. Ida Duckworth, of Westernport, and Mrs. Gertie Jeffries, of Altamont.

Misses Edith and Mildred Pickett, of Fairmont, daughters of the late John Pickett, some years ago a well known freight conductor on the Third Division of the B. & O., and later an agent of the road at Fairmont, are in town this week, visiting their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Pattison.

Mr. Hiram Calkins, engineer on the W. M. R. R., between Elkins and Grafton, spent Monday and Tuesday in town, the guest of the Cleary family.

Miss Blanche Schreckengast, of Memphis, Tenn., and her sister Miss Carrie, of Dallas, Texas, both expert typewriters and stenographers, arrived at Bond on Friday and will remain there a month, visiting their two brothers and father.

Col. N. U. Bond, of Bond, is visiting relatives at Brockwayville. During his absence the management of the plant is under the care of Stephen Ashby, of Oakland.

Call for Your Letters.

Lewis Dewitt, Capt. John Buckey, Mrs. Robt. J. Carroll, Miss Vina Fray, Harry Rese, Dr. J. P. Shepherd, Miss Lilia Shrout, John Williams, H. L. McElelowerly, Miss Marie Wilson.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank
Of Allegany County.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

Republican Meetings

Grand Republican Meetings will be held at the following named places and dates:

Kitzmillersville, Friday, Sept. 18,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.;

Deer Park, Saturday, Sept. 19,
At 2 o'clock P. M.;

Bloomington, Saturday, Sept. 19,
At 7:30 o'clock P. M.

Come out and hear the Issues of the Campaign ably discussed by the Hon. Geo. A. Pearre.

LADIES SPECIALLY INVITED.

Republican State Central Committee.

Plan the right heating, too!

If you are planning a new house, don't forget how important the heating question is. There isn't any other feature which will save you so much or give you equal comfort as

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS

These outfits, for Low-Pressure Steam or Hot Water, will repay their cost in coal savings, hea' protection, safety, lower insuran absence of repairs. If property is sold, you get paid back their full value, or 10% to 15% higher rental. The outfit will outwear the building.

All ash-dust, soot, smoke, and coal-gases are kept out of living-rooms — saving housework and wear and tear on furnishings. Then, too, think of the comfort of having full enjoyment of every nook and corner of the house on cold or windy days! Ask for estimate and free book.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
OAKLAND, MD.

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$277,285 68
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	113,010 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	708 02
Due from State Banks and Bankers	2,170 80
Due from approved reserve agents	43,914 65
Checks and other cash items	264 65
Notes of other National Banks	475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $30,530 70
Legal-tender notes 5,250 00	35,784 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation	2,500 00
Total	$572,485 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	55,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,696 45
National Bank notes outstanding	48,540 00
Due to other National Banks	3,482 92
Due to State Banks and Bankers	101 02
Dividends unpaid	100 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,657 84
Time certificates of deposit	262,605 05
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 36
Total	$572,483 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. D. Y. Morris, of Kingwood, is here this week visiting relatives.

Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill spent last Saturday evening in Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Wolfe, of Kingwood were Oakland visitors Sunday.

Mr. Gilead Broadwater, of near Grantsville, was a court visitor to Oakland Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Milton Scherr and sister, Miss Alma, of Eglon, spent Sunday in Oakland with relatives.

County Commissioner Otho S. Fike was a business caller at this office yesterday afternoon.

Justice A. S. Teats was in Cumberland last Saturday, where he went to attend the Bryan gathering of the great "unwashed."

Mr. James W. Leathers left Oakland yesterday for Parkersburg where he will visit relatives and friends until Sunday, when he will return home.

Mrs. R. W. Monroe and Miss Fairfax, of Kingwood, who spent a week in Oakland as the guests of friends, returned to their home Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Spedden and family, of Crellin, spent Sunnay in Oakland as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer.

Miss Lydia A. Hauger, who is employed as postmistress at Thomas, W. Va., is enjoying her vacation here as the guest her sister, Mrs. Clyde Liller.

Miss Anna Gonder, who spent the summer vacation with her parents in Oakland, returned on last Sunday morning to St. Mary's College, St. Mary's county.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman R. Sanner and children, of Thomas, W. Va., who spent a week with friends and relatives in Deer Park and at Lake Brown, returned to their home Tuesday.

Among the out-of-town attorneys attending the non-jury term of court in Oakland Monday were Capt. R. H. Gordon, ex-Judge Ferdinand Williams and Mr. R. T. Semmes, of Cumberland.

Messrs. A. J. Wilkinson and Joseph Mason, of this city, attended services at the Presbyterian church in Oakland on Sunday. They also took a look at Col. Bryan, at Mountain Lake Park, in the afternoon.—Grafton Republican.

Mr. Henry Speicher, of Accident, was in Oakland Monday en route to points in West Virginia where business called him.

Mr. Edward Leary, who was recently awarded the scholarship in Western Maryland College, Westminster, left Oakland for school Tuesday morning.

Miss Annie Renninger, of Pittsburg, Pa., who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs Julius C. Renninger in Oakland, for a week or two, returned to her home last Sunday morning.

Mrs. M. L. Scott, of the Baltimore Store has just returned from the east with a new stock of goods and is accompanied by Miss E. V. Catheil, who is an experienced trimmer and saleslady.

Among the improvements completed at the City Roller Mills this fall are bolting cloths for the bolting machines and new rolls in the mills, which will improve the quality of the products.

Editor James M. Litzinger, of the Grafton Leader, wearing a smile that couldn't be brushed off in anticipation of shaking hands with his idol, William Jennings Bryan, was in the city Saturday and Sunday.

WANTED—A girl for general house work, Dunkard preferred, to accompany a lady to Baltimore. Situation permanent for right party. Address, F. W. B., care Republican office, Oakland.

Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, of Baltimore, came up to Oakland last Friday night, when he met his family, who had spent the summer at Accident, and on Saturday accompanied them to Baltimore, where they will remain during the winter.

Miss Nell Workman left Tuesday morning for Buckhannon, West Va., where she will enter the West Virginia Wesleyan College as a student. She was accompanied by her father, Rev. J. B. Workman, who returned to Oakland last night.

Charles Vaughn, for a number of months an employe of this office, left Oakland last Friday morning for the home of his parents at Glady, West Va., and after spending a few days there went to Buckhannon, W. Va., where he entered school.

Two horses for sale. Apply to Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

SCHOOLS OPENED MONDAY

Enrollment In Oakland Numbered Three Hundred and Twenty-Three.

The public schools of the county opened Monday of the present week for a term of seven and one-half months. From reports received in Oakland the attendance at the various schools in the smaller towns and rural districts is up to the average, some cases being in excess of the enrollment last year.

In Oakland the number of scholars enrolled in the several departments equal the highest reached any previous year, totaling three hundred and twenty-three, classified as follows:

1st grade, Miss DeWitt	72
2nd grade, Miss Miller	42
3d grade, Miss Browning	52
4th grade, Miss Loughridge	32
5th grade, Miss Dunhan	36
6th and 7th grades, Miss Leary	42
High School, Messrs. Palmer and Bishoff	47
Total	323

Mr. G. A. Shirer, who is slowly recovering from the terrible burns he sustained at the time his stable was burned a number of weeks ago, is slowly improving and will soon be able to be out.

The Sunday school of the Ferndale Baptist church will enjoy a picnic in the grove near the church next Friday afternoon. The ladies of the church will serve refreshments and supper for the benefit of the Woman's State Mission Society.

Dr. James Nydegger, a Garrett countian to the manor born, now in the Government service as a surgeon in the Marine Hospital, New York City spent yesterday in Oakland, going from here to Elkins, W. Va., where he will visit relatives two or three weeks before returning to his duties.

Dr. R. B. Ward, superintendent of Oakland District M. E. church, has returned to his home here from Youngstown, Ohio, where he officiated last Sunday in the services attending the dedication of a new M. E. church in that city of which his brother is the pastor.

Dr. W. L. Davidson, of the Mountain Chautauqua, preached very acceptably to a good audience in St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland. His discourse was very favorably commented upon by many of his auditors. At the evening service Rev. W. M. Lister delivered the sermon, who also made a favorable impression.

Attention is directed to the new advertisements appearing in this paper this week, namely: Oakland Pharmacy, A. D. Naylor & Co., and Baltimore Store. Also to the notice of sale of valuable properties located at Mountain Lake Park which will be sold under foreclosure proceedings by Mr. D. J. Blackiston, attorney for the mortgagee.

Dr. W. L. Davidson, who has been sojourning quietly at his Mountain Lake Park cottage since the close of the Chautauqua season, went to Cleveland, Ohio, Tuesday evening to attend the Ohio Conference of the M. E. church, of which he is a member. On Friday Dr. Davidson expects to return to the Park and accompany his family to Washington, their winter home.

Last Saturday afternoon and evening the Independent Order of Red Men at Mountain Lake Park held a festival at Assembly Hall for the benefit of the local lodge. Some of the members, dressed in costume, with paint and feathers, presenting a truely aboriginal appearance, were driven to Oakland in a hay wagon and created some interest. A neat sum was realized at the festival.

To improve sanitary conditions along Wilson creek, the municipal authorities had a large quantity of lime and other disinfectants scattered along the channel of the stream last Saturday, which has had a good effect in keeping down, for the time being at least, the unwholesome odors arising therefrom, the water being at such a low stage as to be insufficient to carry off the sewage flowing into it.

Mr. Bernard Gonder, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gonder, who has been at home for a month past visiting his parents and other relatives, will leave for Butte, Montana, Sunday night, where he will resume his position with the Northern Pacific Railway Company in the capacity of telegraph operator. On his journey west he will be accompanied the major portion of the way by Mr. Richard K. Maroney, who goes to Couer d'Alene, Idaho, to visit his brother-in-law Mr. "Dick" Browning, who has been in the west for a year or more.

Capt. Joseph Washington Thompsor, of Philadelohia, who is one of the bondholders of the Stoyer Run Coal Company, whose property was sold in Oakland last Saturday under foreclosure proceeding by the mortgagee the Land Title and Trust Company, of Philadelphia, was in Oakland attending the sale and purchase the property for the bondholders, paying therefor $21,00 . Capt. Thompson left for Philadelphia immediately after the sale and as soon as the proper transfers are made to the purchaser by the mortgagee, the mine will be reopened and operations resumed.

LOST—Ladies brooch. Pink enameled flower and small barouque pearl. Reward if returned to First National Bank.

Horse for sale cheap, rather than winter. Good to work anywhere. Address R. G. Richardson, Mt. Lake Park.

For the Boys and Girls.

To the Editor of The Republican:

A rare opportunity for a superior education is offered to a boy or girl in this county. The Anne Arundel Academy was founded in 1855 and incorporated in 1856. Since that date it has given a fine chance to hundreds of boys and girls many of whom have had great success in the business of life, as ministers, teachers, merchants, farmers, mechanics &c. Recently the Trustees have been able to offer the benefits of the Academy more extensively and liberally than before.

To one boy or one girl from each county and to three from Baltimore City the Academy offers a free scholarship worth $100 per year. The purpose of this offer is to give the boys and girls of old Maryland an opportunity to secure an education which will fit them for useful and distinguished careers in life. The Academy is finely equipped for its work.

The Academy gives a good English education. It also prepares for business and for any college in the country.

One evidence of the excellent character of its work is the fact that last year Mr. L. Wilson Wallis of Forest Hill, Harford county, entered into the competition for the Rhodes Fellowship at Oxford University, and won the prize. This prize is £250 or $1250 per year for three years end enables the successful man to go through Oxford University, the most noted seat of learning in England. In a letter to the President of the Board of Trustees, the Rev. Charles W. Baldwin, D. D., of Baltimore, Mr. Wallis attributes his success to the splendid preparation he got at the Anne Arundel Academy and is warm in his gratitude to the Academy and its teachers.

The school is located in Anne Arundel county and its grounds for a fourth of a mile are bound by the new and splendidly equipped trolley line, known as the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railroad. The cars of this road pass every hour both ways. Baltimore and Washington may be reached in 40 or 45 minutes, and Annapolis in less than 15. It is in a beautiful and healthful region about two miles from the historic Severn river. The community is moral and intelligent and well supplied with churches. The school owns about 75 acres of farming land from which the table is partially supplied

Any boy or girl wishing to secure the valuable scholarship offered for this county should write at once to the principal, Mr. G. Gordon Newell, Millersville, Md.

CHAS. W. BALDWIN,
Pres't Board of Trustees.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9.15 a. m.
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Reception of new members, preparatory service and communion, 10.30 a. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.
Deer Park—Reception of new members, preparatory service and communion at 3 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Mt. Lake Park—Class meeting at 9.30 a. m.; preaching 10.30 a. m., followed by communion; Sunday school at 2.30 p. m., Epworth League 6.30 p. m.; preaching 7.30 p. m.
Deer Park—Sunday school 10 a. m., Epworth League at 7 p. m.; preaching at 8 p. m.
The Fourth Quarterly Conference will be held at Mt. Lake Park Saturday at 3 p. m.
All are cordially invited to attend.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

UNITED BRETHREN.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Lyndale—Preaching at 10.30 a. m.
Pleasant Valley—Preaching at 3p. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
A cordial welcome to all.

J. F. PRITCHARD, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Deep Creek—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

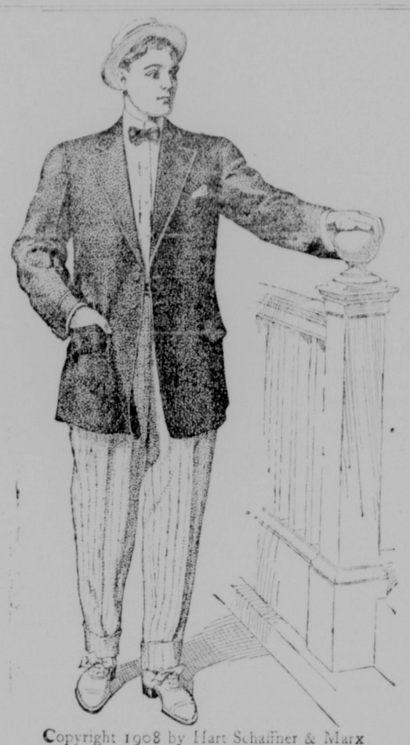
C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Attend To It Now.

Septemt er or October should see your cemetery lot beautified. Let us erect a monument before the snow comes. Make a selection from our stock at Frostburg, or at our Cumberland Yard, No. 99 North Centre street, or wait for one of our salesmen. Our stock of finished monuments at Cumberland is said to be the finest in the State. 27-3t

Subscribe for The Republican.

H. C. Sincell & Co.



Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

FALL and WINTER OPENING OF TRIMMED and UNTRIMMED HATS and MILLINERY NOVELTIES

THURSDAY and FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 24th and 25th

MRS. M. L. SCOTT,
THE BALTIMORE STORE.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

STOVES FOR SALE CHEAP—1 Southern Queen cook stove; 1 double heater hard coal; 2 open grate, either hard or soft coal. J. L. POLLOCK.

AUNT ADRA'S APOLOGY.

By LILLIAN LEE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Jimmie, Aunt Adra's come."

Little Mrs. Boxley's voice was dull and lifeless.

"I don't think that she likes me," was the additional remark, which explained the depression.

"My dear child, she must! She is the only member of my family with money, and I was her favorite nephew. If she does not approve of my marriage it's all off. But she's got to like you, Dolly," he added fondly. "How could any one help liking you?"

"But she has done nothing except sit and glare at me," wailed the little woman. "I phoned Bess for an extra ticket for the concert tomorrow, and when I told Aunt Adra that we were going she just said 'Uh-hu' like that."

"She'll say you're the best little woman in the world before you get through," declared Jimmie as he put his arm about her shoulders and went in to welcome Aunt Adra.

"IT IS MY TREAT AND MY APOLOGY."

Jimmie was genuinely fond of his maiden aunt, even if she did call him James. Sometimes he wished that he did not have "expectations" from her so that he might insist upon her calling him Jimmie.

It was the first time since his marriage that he had seen her. He married Dolly because he could not help it. From the moment that he had set eyes on her as she stepped on the stage at a studio recital Jimmie had told himself that she was the one woman in the world whom he wanted for a wife. After that he was in the hands of fate.

Two months later they were married, and it was not until they had sat themselves down to address the wedding invitations that Jimmie even thought of asking Aunt Adra's permission.

A long letter of explanation had gone with the invitation, and the response had been a plated berry spoon and a promise from the old lady to pay them a visit.

Now, she was none the less welcome because she had come unannounced, and there was real sincerity in Jimmie's greeting. Aunt Adra unbent a little as he came in, but as they went out to dinner Jimmie was conscious of a certain air of disapproval which bore down on his spirits.

For Jimmie was proud of the little woman he had married and wanted all the world to approve his choice. Indeed he could not understand how one could do otherwise.

All through the evening this feeling wet blanketed their pleasure. For the first time the little parlor seemed distasteful to him. For the first time Discontent was a guest.

It was not that Jimmie was discontented with his wife. It was the first time that he was discontented with his home. The tiny parlor was no longer the center of paradise, and as Jimmie kissed Mrs. Jimmie good night he whispered that the visit would not last long, since Aunt Adra was clearly as unhappy as themselves.

But the visit did endure far beyond the first week. It was well toward the end of the first month that Jimmie was startled by the appearance of Aunt Adra at the office.

"Is there anything the matter with Dolly?" he gasped.

Aunt Adra shook her head.

"She is well, so far as I know," she answered coldly. "I want you to come out and have lunch with me. That is the purpose of my visit here."

It was the work of a minute to arrange with the managing clerk for a little additional time at lunch, and Jimmie led the way to the quiet cafe where he had often entertained his aunt before.

Then they had been jolly little occasions; now she sat grim faced and silent, while her nephew devoted himself to his lunch. Not until the table had been cleared and only the coffee cups were left did she speak.

"I have kept silent as long as I could, James," she began. "But this morning something occurred that I felt you should be informed of.

"I have tried to like your wife because she is your wife. I have withheld criticism and have sought to indorse your choice even while the first glimpse told me that you have been roped in by a designing woman. Don't say anything," she commanded hurriedly as Jimmie sought to make objection. "I know what I am talking about. There never was a man who was a match for a woman.

"I made up my mind to overlook the extravagant taste in dress that leads her to wear silks and satins. I overlooked the fact that you have a piano that is of a far more expensive make than I could afford to purchase. She even had the audacity to tell me that the piano was loaned her by the maker.

"Then she made you put in a telephone, and her extravagance about concert tickets is something shocking. James, there are hundreds of concert programmes in her room and even tickets that she purchased and did not use. They cost $1 and $2 a piece.

"All that I could stand—though such an extravagant woman never will get a chance to waste my money as she has yours—but today I insisted on going downstairs after my mail, in spite of her protest, and there in the box was a letter addressed to some one else. Your wife blushed when I handed it to her, but later I saw her reading it, and later still I heard her at the telephone telling a Signor Marascreck that she had his letter and would come right down.

"James, that shameless woman is meeting strange men, and you know what those foreigners are, and she is getting letters addressed to an alias. It is Dorothy Chappelle. If you want to get a divorce, I will pay all expenses, but not a penny of my money shall you have otherwise."

Miss Boxley settled back in her seat with a determined nod that made the plumes on her hat dance vigorously. Jimmie lay back in his seat and choked with laughter. Miss Boxley, supposing it to be hysterics, regarded him pityingly.

"It is all Dolly's fault," explained Jimmie at last. "She was afraid that you might be prejudiced against her profession, and she wanted to win your affection before we told you. Auntie, do you know that Dolly would love to own some gingham dresses, but that she can't afford them?"

"She might sell the piano," suggested Miss Boxley, with a sniff.

"But that is only loaned," explained Jimmie. "Here's the way it goes. Dolly is a concert singer and teacher. She has no pupils through the summer, so she closed her studio and had the piano moved over to the flat. It is loaned by the makers, and she pays for it by recommending it to her pupils. Her work also explains the concert tickets. The singers send her tickets free and are only too glad to have people like us come and lead the applause."

"And the dresses? They are also loans?"

"Not much! They were given to her by rich women who love to patronize struggling artists, but they give her only evening gowns. Dolly has one good street dress, but in the house she feels she ought to wear out this half worn finery. She can't afford to give the dresses away, and they would not bring a dollar apiece secondhand. You see we are paying for a little home in the country, and every penny goes into that fund.

"That is why we live so cheaply and that is why Dolly is trying to get a steady appointment at the conservatory. The fact that Maraschеck sent for her argues that she has landed it. It is good news, Aunt Adra, not bad, that you bring me. But to think that you have accused poor Dolly of wearing frivolous clothes when she loathes her 'glad rags' as she does."

Jimmie went off into another gale of laughter, then sobered down to tell the sacrifices they had made to earn a home that should be their very own. When he had finished the old lady's eyes were suspiciously moist, and as they rose to go she looked at him pleadingly.

"You will forgive a meddling old fool, won't you, Jimmie?" she pleaded, and Jimmie kissed her twice—once in token of forgiveness and once for the title "Jimmie."

That night as he let himself into the tiny flat he found the two women poring over samples and fashion sheets. Aunt Adra was sitting in the Morris chair, and Dolly was perched on its arm, the brown head against the gray. Miss Boxley looked up, with a smile, as Dolly flew to greet her husband.

"After this," she said dryly, "Miss Dorothy Chappelle is still going to wear silks and satins, but Dolly Boxley is selecting what she wants for her home use. It is my treat and my apology."

The Faster Nag.

A writer, relating some of the incidents of General Grant's last days, tells in the Century Magazine this anecdote of the ex-president. He was, as every one knows, very fond of horses and while spending a summer at Long Branch was accustomed to take a daily drive behind a noted trotter.

By courtesy, although often against his wish, he was always given a free and open course. One day while jogging along he noticed in a casual way a farmer and his wife, who, with a single horse and errand wagon, were just ahead, evidently returning from market.

On attempting to "draw alongside" and pass the couple there was a race on in a moment.

The farmer chirped in a peculiar way, and his horse squatted into a long gaited and easy trot. Altogether it was a veritable surprise to the other driver, with his "professional trotter" and light road wagon. But the farmer kept the lead in spite of General Grant's efforts to overtake him.

Occasionally through the dust he could see the farmer's wife look back to note their relative positions. Finally, after a mile heat, the farmer slowed up a little to allow the general to come within hearing distance.

"Did you know who it was?" General Grant was asked.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "The man simply said, 'General, you've got a good one,' and then I allowed him to go on."

With Mechanic's Aid Future of Aeroplane Assured.

By Captain THOMAS S. BALDWIN.

THE AEROPLANE IS NOW IN THE EXPERIMENTAL STAGE, AND THE IDEA OF SUCH A MACHINE HAS BEEN WORKED ON ONLY BY DREAMERS WHOSE INVENTIONS SO FAR ARE BUT THE TOYS OF MILLIONAIRES. The automobile was developed through various competitions of endurance and speed, for which valuable prizes were offered by wealthy men.

THE SAME RAPID DEVELOPMENT WOULD RESULT IF SUCH CONTESTS WERE HELD WITH AIRSHIPS.

WHEN THE PRACTICAL MECHANIC GETS TO WORK ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE AIRSHIP, THEN YOU CAN LOOK FOR RESULTS THAT WILL BE STARTLING.

Today a man carrying aeroplane weighs from six hundred to nine hundred pounds. WHEN THE MECHANIC STARTS TO REFINE THESE CRUDE MACHINES I THINK THERE WILL BE BUILT AN AEROPLANE THAT WILL WEIGH BUT TWENTY POUNDS FOR EACH MAN CARRIED.

OF COURSE A GREAT DEAL OF MONEY WILL NECESSARILY BE LOST BEFORE THIS RESULT IS ATTAINED, FOR IT WILL ONLY FOLLOW REPEATED AND VERY COSTLY EXPERIMENTS.

No Substitute In Work World For Sterling Common Sense.

By JOHN A. HOWLAND, Chicago Journalist.

USE your brains—if you have any! Failing in this a few times, recognize the fact that it wasn't intended for you to take the initiative in the world's work. Then it will be time enough for you to line up with the army of the unemployed, working absolutely under direction.

AT A TIME WHEN MORE ADVICE TO THE YOUNG MAN IS PRINTED THAN EVER BEFORE IN HISTORY IT STRIKES ME THAT THIS MODERN YOUNG MAN NEEDS MORE THAN EVER BEFORE TO GET HIS OWN BEARINGS UPON HIMSELF IN RELATION TO HIS PARTICULAR WORK. THE WHOLE EQUATION IS PERSONAL AND SPECIFIC. GENERALITIES COVERING RULES OF CONDUCT ACCORDING TO CONVENTIONAL CATECHISMS MAY BE WORTHLESS. THEY MAY BE EVEN CONFUSING AND MISLEADING.

The situation is that the young man has work before him. With certain modifications, perhaps, he is the man to do it. The employer asks only that the work be done satisfactorily.

I read the other day a catechismic dissertation upon how every young man may succeed in life. It was in effect that, having true courage, this young man would recognize no obstacle in his way as unsurmountable; that, having no fear of failure, he would press on always to the accomplishment of anything he might attempt to do.

Fundamentally I DON'T KNOW OF ANYTHING SILLIER than the promulgating of any such philosophy as this. That young man who gets such a distorted idea into his head, believing it to be of practical, everyday value to him, must find DISAPPOINTMENT AND FAILURE INEVITABLE. There are a million commonplace things in business life that are impossible. Things that were possible yesterday are impossible today, and things possible today will be impracticable tomorrow.

"Learn to obey orders" is one of the old reiterations of the conventional teacher who fancies that an idealized philosophy should apply to every relation in the life of the employee. Yet there are men every day losing positions because of a fool's obedience to the letter of a rule.

Time was when an office boy would have been discharged if he had not untied carefully the twine binding a package and carefully preserved both string and paper. Today the boy who can cut the wrappings from such a package and drop them deepest in a wastebasket in the shortest time proves his efficiency.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE IN THE WORKING WORLD FOR A STERLING COMMON SENSE. THERE IS NO COURAGE TO COMPARE WITH THAT WHICH MAY BE DISPLAYED BY THE YOUNG MAN WHO SAYS TO HIMSELF, "I'LL GIVE THIS UP RIGHT HERE," AND WHO AFTERWARD CAN JUSTIFY HIS MOVE.

Man's Nature Makes It Necessary to Be Ready For War.

By Premier ASQUITH of Great Britain.

AS long as man's nature continues what it is it will be necessary for prudent statesmen to provide for war. National security must always have first place in the thoughts and plans of the government of any country.

BUT, ADMITTING THAT ALL, THE PLAIN FACT REMAINS THAT THERE IS NO ENTERPRISE MORE WORTHY OF THE EFFORTS OF GOOD MEN THAN TO DEVISE PRACTICABLE MEANS NOT ONLY FOR MINIMIZING THE RISKS OF INTERNATIONAL QUARRELS, BUT FOR PROVIDING A RATIONAL SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES BY WARFARE.

Among the various means of progress in this direction the first is the growth of international agreements.

I use the word agreements because alliances sometimes have the contrary effect. The second is the SUBSTITUTION OF INTERNATIONAL LITIGATION FOR THE BARBAROUS METHODS OF SLAUGHTER. The translation of these principles into practice is beset with difficulty, though not, in my opinion, insurmountable difficulty.

Of course there is a delicate sphere of international relations. The main thing is that the nations should get to know and understand one another.

POLICE SAVE BOWSER

Wife Telephones to Them When Swindler Calls to Defraud.

HOW PLAN WAS WORKED.

According to the Proposition, Victim Was to Be One of the Subjects In a Book of Heroes—Old Man Gets on His Dignity.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

That Mr. Bowser had something on his mind when he came home the other evening was as plainly evident to Mrs. Bowser as the rain on the ground. He had a nervous wiggle and an absentmindedness about him that gave him away within five minutes. All through dinner he was much preoccupied, but it was not until half an hour after the meal had been finished that he concluded to make a full breast of it. Then in a half ashamed way he looked up from his paper and said:

"There was a gentleman in the office today that had a proposition to make me."

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Bowser. "It is coming along toward summer, and I suppose you are thinking of buying another new milk cow."

"There you go the first thing—throwing out an insult! It's mighty funny that I can never sit down and talk with you as other men do with their wives."

"I THINK YOU WOULD LOOK WELL IN A ROMAN TOGA."

"But you can, dear. I mentioned the cow because you called out in your sleep the other night and woke me up saying: 'So, boss. Hist over.' You were probably dreaming of milking."

"I wasn't probably doing anything of the kind, and you know it. I was going to tell you something and ask your advice, but now I'll be hanged if I do!"

"You are foolish to feel that way, Mr. Bowser. I think the gentleman was here this morning soon after you left. He was a tall man with black whiskers and wore a silk hat and carried a cane. He asked for you, and I sent him to the office. Of course he had no cow to sell."

"Yes, that's the man," said Mr. Bowser, forgetting his indignation in a moment. "I expect him here about 8 o'clock this evening. Can you talk with me about ten minutes without insulting me?"

"Certainly, dear. What is it?"

"Well, he is getting up a history of the martyrs and heroes of America for the last hundred years."

"And he wants you in it?"

"Y-e-s—that is, he will give me a chance to come in if I want to. There is just one place left in his book, and that is beside Lincoln. I have got to give him my answer this evening, as a score of other men are anxious to take the space."

"Are you to go in as a hero or as a martyr?"

"As a hero, of course. I'm more or less a martyr, as is every other husband, but I don't care to publish the fact to the world."

"What is his charge for a page? I suppose he won't give you space for nothing."

"Of course not. It's $100 without and $150 with a photo. By the way, have I got a photo around?"

"Not one. The last half dozen you had you threw into the fire. You said they made you look too squatty."

"That's a gratuitous insult, but we'll pass it by for the moment. I can have another taken for the occasion. The question is, Shall I take a page or not?"

"As a hero of American history, do you mean?"

"Of course I mean it. I'm not going in as a hero of negro or Indian history, am I?"

"I was wondering," said Mrs. Bowser, after a moment's reflection, "what you had ever done to be classed with the heroes."

"Done? Humph! That's a nice way to talk about your husband. Done? Why, I ran over a few years of my life with the man, and he said there was material there for a dozen pages. I may be no hero to you. A husband never is to his wife, but to the public it's altogether different."

"Would you mind mentioning a few heroic incidents in your life, Mr. Bowser? If I have skipped them I want to apologize. Being you have asked my opinion"—

Wife Stirs Up Things.

"Being I haven't done anything of the kind!" he shouted as he promenaded up and down. "By the seventeen mules that brayed before Caesar, but this is too much—too much! When the gentleman calls I'll tell him that I have sent my wife to the idiot asylum and everything is off!"

"You are a very strenuous and impatient man," she replied, with a sigh. "If there are heroic incidents in your life I ought to be told of them, so that I can feel duly proud. However, if you want to keep them a secret until the book is out I shall have to submit. Yes, you can get a special photo taken, and if you want any help in getting up the article I shall cheerfully give it to you. In addition to that, I shall feel proud to see you go down to history beside such a great and good man as Lincoln—Lincoln and Bowser, Bowser and Lincoln, Abraham and Samuel, Samuel and Abraham!"

Mr. Bowser was mad all the way through, but this salved his hurts. A smile came to his face, and he said:

"I'm glad you see the point at last. Shall I pay a hundred or a hundred and fifty?"

"Why, the article will look better with a photo, of course—that is, if you can get one to please you. If I was going into the book as a hero I should drape for the picture. I think you would look well in a Roman toga, but you can ask the man what he thinks. That must be his ring at the bell. Don't pay him any money in advance until you are certain that he is an honest man. You know you lost $50 on just such a scheme a couple of years ago."

Mr. Bowser flushed up and scowled and wanted to stop and argue the point, but the caller rang the bell again and was admitted and taken to the library and the door shut and locked. Mrs. Bowser waited two minutes and then went to the telephone and softly called up police headquarters and was then switched on to the nearest station. Then the following conversation occurred:

"This is Mrs. Bowser of Chestnut place."

"Well?"

"I see by the papers that a man who calls himself Darling has swindled a dozen different people by getting money in advance to publish their histories in a book."

"Yes, ma'am. As a swindler he's a tiptopper. We have been on his trail for a month. What do you know about him, please?"

"Is he still wanted?"

"For sure. There are men who'd give $500 to have him arrested."

"Well, he's right here in the house this minute talking to my husband."

"You don't say! Tall man with black whiskers?"

"Yes."

"Wears a plug hat and carries a cane and is a soft talker?"

"Yes."

"And he wants to get your husband into the book? Good! We'll send up a couple of detectives and nab Johnny on the spot. They will be there within fifteen minutes and knock softly on the front door. Thanks to you."

Planned an Arrest.

The two officers were there within the time specified, and, having obtained some additional particulars, they took seats to wait for Mr. Darling's appearance. He and Mr. Bowser had a long and interesting conversation behind locked doors, and it was finally agreed that the latter should pay half cash in advance on the morrow and that Mrs. Bowser should know nothing about it.

Then they emerged, and the detectives gave the publisher of heroes and martyrs the collar.

Mr. Darling stood on his dignity.

Then Mr. Darling blustered.

Then Mr. Darling made a jump for the door and liberty, but was brought up like a calf at the end of a rope.

Then Mr. Bowser stood on his dignity and blustered and declared and threatened, but one of the officers showed him complaints from five or six victims, and he subsided, and the swindler was led from the house. When it was all over he and Mrs. Bowser stood for a moment and looked at each other. Then she queried:

"Well?"

"Woman," he said in a stage hiss, "you have a mother?"

"I have."

"She lives at Springdale?"

"She does."

"And by beginning to pack now you can get away on the 10:10 train in the morning. Good night to you, Mrs. Bowser; good night!" M. QUAD.

Working For It.

"Miss Belle Towne may be a pretty woman, but she has such a fixed countenance."

"Of course she has. It takes her half her time to fix it."—Baltimore American.

Too Sweet.

He—Isn't she a seraph?

She—Yes, indeed! Just too sweet for anything!

He (after a pause)—Did you think I said sirup?—Harper's Weekly.

"A Friend at Court."

The Genuine Article.

Joakley—Now, he's got what I really call "horse sense."

Coakley—How, for instance?

Joakley—He never bets on one.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Financial Stringency Caused by Lack of Confidence.

By JAMES SPEYER, New York Banker.

AS regards financial affairs generally, I do not think that America need concern itself very much or have any fears as to matters in Europe; but, on the other hand, we need not expect any favors or much assistance from there either. WE MUST AND CAN RELY UPON OURSELVES TO GET THROUGH THE PRESENT TROUBLES.

THE CAUSES FOR THE STILL PREVAILING FINANCIAL STRINGENCY ARE NOW PRETTY WELL UNDERSTOOD. THEY ARE LARGELY INTERNATIONAL AND OF A MORE OR LESS TEMPORARY CHARACTER. THIS STRINGENCY HAS BEEN AND IS FELT MOST ACUTELY BY THOSE COUNTRIES THAT HAVE HAD THE GREATEST INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT—VIZ. THE UNITED STATES AND GERMANY. IT SEEMS TO ME THERE IS BOUND TO BE A CONTRACTION OF THIS GREAT ACTIVITY, WHICH IN ITSELF WILL TEND AUTOMATICALLY TO RELIEVE THE MONEY MARKETS.

With us here the monetary stringency is intensified at present by a LACK OF CONFIDENCE, the signs of which are clearly apparent.

This lack of confidence is PRIMARILY due to investigations and subsequent disclosures. Some things have been brought to light here which the majority of business men will be loath to defend, but many matters have been GROSSLY EXAGGERATED by the sensational press for political purposes.

THESE ATTACKS, COMING AT A TIME OF INTERNATIONAL MONETARY STRINGENCY AND WHEN THE MINDS OF MANY HAVE BEEN DISTURBED THROUGH RECENT DISCLOSURES, HAVE HAD AND ARE HAVING A VERY UNSETTLING EFFECT ON CONFIDENCE.

This agitation has already resulted in a good deal of hasty legislation against railroads in various states, which, together with the fear of more hostile measures, has accentuated the fall in the prices of securities by which MILLIONS OF INNOCENT HOLDERS OF SMALL MEANS HAVE SUFFERED SEVERELY.

Make the Philippines And Hawaii Neutral.

By Former United States Senator CHARLES A. TOWNE.

THERE can be no doubt that we should take a very active part in the commerce, SOON TO REACH HUGE PROPORTIONS, of the far east. American enterprise will naturally and inevitably seek to do so. The policy of the government must contemplate this. Under no circumstances should we make any disposition of the Philippine Islands that would leave us without a NAVAL AND COMMERCIAL BASE adequate to the protection and advancement of our material interests in the orient.

MY OWN OPINION IS THAT WE SHOULD IMMEDIATELY SOUND THE CHANCELLERIES OF THE GREAT POWERS ON THE SUBJECT OF AN INTERNATIONAL NEUTRALIZATION OF THE ISLANDS. THE ALTERNATIVE TO THE NEUTRALIZATION OF THE ISLANDS IS TO MAKE THEM PRACTICALLY IMPREGNABLE IN CASE OF ATTACK.

To put Subig bay in such a condition would require in the neighborhood of $60,000,000. The same amount would be necessary to put the city and harbor of Manila in a similar situation.

The two places would need to be garrisoned by an aggregate of not far from 75,000 men. I cannot but believe it A MATTER OF PRESSING CONCERN to the statesmanship of the United States that our diplomacy should undertake at once the question of so treating this GREAT SUBJECT as to place it beyond the sphere of a growing national menace.

The same is EQUALLY TRUE OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS. It is substantially true to say that under existing or in all probability proximate conditions no United States fleet could leave either our Pacific coast or the Hawaiian Islands and arrive on the China coast in condition to fight. A NEARER BASE for repairs and for supplies of coal and other necessities is an absolute prerequisite.

Conditions Are All Unfavorable For a Panic.

By WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

WHILE there will be readjustments from time to time, I do not look for any GENERAL PANIC, because the industrial and financial conditions do not indicate it. We had a panic in 1893 because the prices had been FALLING for a period of years. Securities were decreasing in value, and men could not pay their debts. Today the conditions are JUST THE OPPOSITE. Prices are RISING instead of falling, and the purchasing power of the dollar is diminishing all over the world. While in some cases speculation may have raised prices above the normal level, the general level of prices is likely to continue to rise, and so long as people can sell their property for more than they paid for it THERE WILL BE NO PANIC.

When financial institutions have been MANAGED BADLY people may lose confidence in them, but this is not likely to injuriously affect the general public.

Because all immorality in business must finally be punished and because in the punishment the innocent often suffer with the guilty EVERYBODY ought to be interested in preventing business immorality.

IF NEW YORK FINANCIERS WERE AS ANXIOUS TO PREVENT THESE DISCLOSURES BY PREVENTING THE WICKEDNESS WHICH IS DISCLOSED AS THEY ARE ANXIOUS TO REMEDY THE DANGERS AFTER THEY ARE EXPOSED THEY COULD DO A GREAT DEAL IN THE WAY OF RESTORING CONFIDENCE, BUT THEY ALLOW HIGH FINANCE TO RUN RIOT UNTIL IT DOES SOME DANGEROUS THING, AND THEN THEY TREMBLE FOR THE PUBLIC WEAL.

Knowing Miss Knowlton

By MARSHALL LEONARD.

Copyright, 1907, by William Darcy.

It seemed to Travers that life really began for him when he came to Lester to superintend the building of the electric works, for until then life had been uneventful, and he had not known of Ada Knowlton.

Even now he merely knew of her, for Travers was not a ladies' man. He was too terribly in earnest to shine in society, and, though he had been in Lester for nearly two months, he seemed as far from his goal as ever. Every Sunday he went to church and sat where he could watch the choir where Ada sang, the stained glass forming a background for the shapely golden head. The Rev. Josiah Rumford watched approvingly the expression of rapt interest that was upon Travers' face all through the sermon. He could not notice that the keen blue eyes of the young contractor were upon the choir rather than upon the pulpit, and he felt gratified that he should hold his auditor so well.

So it happened that the Rev. Josiah stopped at the new factory one morning and extended an invitation to Travers to join a church picnic the following week.

"It is almost a family affair," he explained as Jimmie's hand went down into his trousers pocket. "I am not selling tickets. It is purely by invitation and only for the members of the Sunday school, but I thought that perhaps you might like to meet some of the young people and get acquainted."

Jimmy beamed upon the kindly old man as he thought of Ada Knowlton and accepted the invitation with an effusiveness that caused the minister to wonder at certain comments he had heard regarding the unsociability of the newcomer.

"He is most cordial," he told his wife. "I am sure that he needs only to get acquainted to be a decided addition to our little society. I am sorry that I did not look him up earlier."

Travers echoed the same sentiment as he went about his work. Surely at the picnic he should meet Miss Knowlton, and meeting Miss Knowlton had almost become an obsession with him. He climbed over the stagings and platforms with a light heart as he imagined the manner in which they should meet. He rather fancied an introduction under the trees. He would advance with bared head and bow low over her hand. Then she would give him one of those sunny smiles that almost seemed to be her habitual expression, and they would go walking together in the leafy shade. Over and over he mentally rehearsed this scene until it became almost real to him.

"DON'T MOVE," SAID A GENTLE VOICE.

But at the last moment there came a complication at the factory, and it was after 11 when Travers finally got away. He lost his way trying to drive out in a livery buggy, and when at last he came to the lake lunch was over and the merrymakers had scattered through the woods.

The minister and his wife insisted that he have something to eat, and then motherly Mrs. Rumford took him in charge and introduced him to every one in sight, but Ada Knowlton was nowhere to be seen.

He made himself agreeable to the others, but his eyes continually sought a sight of the pink dress and golden head that had been the attraction. He had seen them drive past on their way to the lake, and he had carefully noted the dress, but not a glimpse of it did he get until well along in the afternoon.

Here and there the surface of the lake was dotted with small boats and canoes, and in one of the latter he saw the flash of pink that seemed to communicate its color to his face. Miss Knowlton, and alone! And she was paddling in to the landing!

With assumed carelessness he directed his steps toward the tiny wharf to which the boats were tied. He would be on hand to assist her from the canoe, and perhaps after he had introduced himself there might be a chance for the walk after all.

He had just reached the dock and the frail craft was but twenty yards away when some one called to the navigator, and she turned to respond with a wave of her paddle. As she did so the canoe tipped over and she was spilled into the water.

White with horror, Travers stripped off his coat and his low shoes and dived to her assistance. He was a splendid swimmer, and his heart beat high as he thought of the opportunity that had been offered him.

Then something loomed dark above his head. There was a shock, and all became black. It was half an hour later that Travers opened his eyes again and looked up into Ada Knowlton's face bending anxiously over him. His head throbbed with pain, and he was conscious that it was done up in bandages.

"Don't move," said a gentle voice. "You will be all right in a few moments. You were struck on the head by the canoe."

"You were the rescued instead of the rescuer," laughed Dr. Pyfrom. "Miss Knowlton brought you to shore."

"I am so sorry," she said, bending over. "I was pushing the boat in front of me and did not notice that any one had dived after me. I should have been more careful, but I never supposed that any one would imagine that I was in danger."

"You see," explained the doctor, "the lake is only three or four feet deep, and when we spill out we just walk ashore."

"And I, like an ass, didn't know that," murmured Travers. "I only saw that Miss Knowlton had gone overboard, and I did not know but what she might be in trouble. She seemed to be struggling."

"That was my skirt," explained the girl. "It caught in the gunwale, and I had to detach it before I could find my footing."

"I guess that's about explanation enough," put in the physician. "I don't want to have you come down with a cold on top of a cut scalp. I guess you'd better drive into town. Miss Knowlton needs to go too. She is soaked. Do you think you can handle your horse?"

"I'm all right now," declared Travers, rising to his feet with the doctor's aid. The crowd melted away, and Dr. Pyfrom and the minister led him to his buggy. Miss Knowlton climbed in after him, and they started off.

"I suppose," said Travers as they cleared the grove, "you must think that I am lacking in courtesy in not thanking you for saving my life, but I am so upset."

"You ought to scold me for injuring you," she declared. "It was very awkward of me."

"You couldn't know that I was going to swim out to you," he reminded. "I think I should apologize for being in the lake at all."

The girl's laugh rang out at the suggestion. "I'm rather glad that you were there," she said, "though I am sorry that you were injured. I never was rescued before."

"Nor performed a rescue," he reminded. "I don't suppose that you can claim a gold medal for life saving."

"I don't want a reward," she insisted. "You should be entitled to the reward, if any one was, because you did not realize that a rescue was not dangerous."

"I am sufficiently rewarded in that I know you," he declared. "I have been wanting to meet you for some time."

Miss Knowlton blushed and changed the subject. She could not admit that she, too, had felt an interest, but in her heart she was glad that they knew each other, and when Travers took advantage of his unconventional introduction to call frequently it was not long before she consented to reward him with her hand in the conventional fashion decreed by custom.

"It's such a short courtship," she said, "but I feel that I have known you for years."

"It all depends upon the introduction," said Travers smilingly. "Bless that boat!"

Everybody Has Met Him.

The melancholy man looked more than usually downcast—so depressed, in fact, that one of his acquaintances was rash enough to ask him what was the matter.

"Oh, everything!" replied the melancholy man.

"Market been against you?"

"No-o, not exactly," was the rejoinder, "but I'm considerably worried over what may happen next week."

"Sickness at home?"

"Not yet," replied the melancholy man, "though I'm afraid that I'm getting ready for my regular touch of malaria about this time of year."

"Forewarned is forearmed," returned the other with as much cheerfulness as he could summon up under the circumstances. "I see. Some one of your friends is in trouble, and it's preying on your mind."

"Friends?" sniffed the melancholy man. "Much good it would do my friends if I gave them advice. Think of them? Of course I do, but for all the benefit they derive from what I tell them I might as well never give them any thoughts at all."

"Well, what in thunder is it?" asked the other, coming back to first principles.

"Oh, everything," replied the melancholy man as he despondently turned away.—New York Press.

The Wisdom of Dorothy.

Dorothy does not relish being left alone to go to sleep. One night after she is tucked in bed by her mother, who then leaves her, she calls to her father and asks if he isn't coming to bed after he finishes his dinner.

"Yes; I'll go to bed as soon as my dinner digests."

"All right; come upstairs now. Your dinner will digest upstairs just as well as down," argues the young hopeful.—Judge's Library.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
C. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices

Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows

AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agent and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, Md.

IN A BAD FIX.

Marrying For Money Gets a Man Into Serious Trouble.

Stringer had married his wife for no other reason in the world except that she had money, though he lied to her like a pirate, and she thought it was a love match. Naturally wedded life did not agree with him, or, rather, it was not as sweet as he had hoped, and Stringer was getting the bitterest end of it. One day he met a friend.

"By George," he exclaimed, "that wife of mine will drive me crazy!"

"What's the matter now?" inquired the friend consolingly.

"You know my wife has $150,000, and you know I married her for it and got it. There is no use lying about that any further."

The friend bowed in acquiescence.

"Well, do you know that she has divided the whole thing up into sums of $100 each and proposes to have me arrested 1,500 times for obtaining money under false pretenses? Think of that, will you? Did you ever hear of such a woman?" And Stringer went into a spasm.

The Helpmate.

The author's young wife burst in on him joyously.

"Oh, Milt," she cried, "I know now why Scribblers' Magazine has returned all your stories."

Milton Wiskar seemed to see light.

"Why is it?" he demanded, with hopeful eagerness.

"It is because you have always inclosed stamps," said the young woman. "Haven't you ever read the notice on the editorial page, which says that no MSS. are returned unless stamps are inclosed?"—New York Press.

Excavating.

Caddie (to golfer, who has been digging gashes in the turf all the way around the course)—You be a stranger to these parts, I suppose?

Golfer—Well, not exactly a stranger. I was born here, and all my folks are buried hereabouts.

Caddie (as the golfer skies another piece of turf with his driver)—I doot you'll no get deep enough with your driver; you'd better tak' your iron.—Glasgow Bailie.

No Limit.

Gunner—She's a very progressive young lady. She is going to enter the field of journalism and start a paper.

Guyer—Yes, and she is going to call it the Rumor. Don't you think that is rather an unusual name?

Gunner—Not at all. When a rumor is started by a woman it always gains a wonderful circulation.—Chicago News.

Chollie's Awful Mistake.

Marie—Wasn't it shocking about Chollie Worthington! He fell out of his new airship when it got stalled a half mile up in the air!

Lilian—How did Chollie come to fall?

Marie—He thought he was in his automobile and jumped out to push it back home.—Philadelphia Press.

The Very Thing.

"Mornin', boss! Movin' out, eh?" said the seedy tramp, who had stopped to watch the operation. "Is dey anything you don't need dat I might take?"

"Yes," snapped the grouchy suburbanite, tossing a bundle into the van, "a bath!"—Houston Post.

Not a Bidder.

"Do you intend to make a bid for public applause?"

"Certainly not," answered Senator Sorghum. "You don't have to bid for applause. It is one of the few things needed that you can get for nothing."—Washington Star.

Confidence.

Cynicus—I love——

Miss Anteek—Ah! I've suspected it all along—you naughty man!

Cynicus—I love the delicious freedom of bachelorhood.

Miss Anteek—Brute!—Ohio State Journal.

A Positive Defense.

Wife—This looks black against you. Husband—What?

Wife—The note I found in your pocket—"Ribbon for my typewriter."

Husband—Black! I was sure I ordered purple ink.—Baltimore American.

The Cleanly Hen.

A little girl staying in the country for the first time saw a hen scratching in the garden.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "there's a hen wiping her boots! Do look!"

Size No Advantage.

Marcia (sighing)—How little men understand women!

Shortleigh (bitterly)—They don't understand them any better than big ones.—Smart Set.

BITTINGER.

Our people are suffering from a continued drought and there is a scarcity of water in some localities.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp were visiting relatives over in West Virginia last Saturday and Sunday.

G. W. Engle and family returned to Baltimore last Saturday afternoon.

Our public school opened last Monday morning with E. S. Brenneman in charge and reached an enrollment of 23 the first day.

William Miller, of Accident, went spinning through this village last Saturday in his new automobile.

W. F. Frederick & Co., of Cumberland, have salesmen placing pianos in this community.

Daniel Orendorf and family, of Mt Lake Park, spent Sunday in this village

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hendershot were made exceedingly happy last week by the arrival of an infant son at their home.

There is a vacant seat in the corner grocery since Frederick M. Bittinger has to stay at home in the evening to rock the baby boy.

HUTTON.

Merchant W. R. Pendergast and Miss Marie Grusendorf were guests of Hotel Lantz, Aurora, on a recent Sunday.

School opened this week with Misses Marion Leary and Blanche Miller in charge.

Joseph Pendergast, son of M. W. Pendergast, has entered Rock Hall College at Ellicott City.

Frank Palmer returned to Charlotte Hall Sunday night.

Regular monthly appointments are maintained here by Rev. Bone of Terra Alta, and Rev. Manges of Oakland.

The B. & O. R. R. Co. has established a telegraph office and block at Corinth and is using a helping engine to push all east bound freights through 58-cut here, increasing the train load from 1400 tons to 1960 tons.

The freight shipments from this point are the largest on record, averaging about 20 carloads daily. On one day last week the railroad delivered 37 empties to the Kendall Lumber Company for loading.

Off for School.

Among Oakland's young people who left for school in the various parts of the country recently were Henry Leichty, who went to the West Virginia Wesleyan College, Buckhannon, W. Va.; Stanley Mitchell and Fred Townshend to Randolph-Macon Academy, Front Royal, Va.

Estray Notice.

There came to my farm, the Walsh place, five miles north of Deer Park on the Paradise road, two yearling and two spring pigs, all being marked with cropps off left ear and underbits out of right ears. Owner will please come forward, pay all costs and damages and take the animals away.

28-3t. C. W. MOON.

Dedication at Dodge.

The new Methodist Episcopal church, five miles north of Oakland on what is known as the Hooppole road, will be dedicated to the service of God by District Superintendent Ward on Sunday Sept. 20th, 1908, at 11 a. m. Come everybody. A good time is expected. Former pastors that can do so are respectfully invited to attend.

A. ENGLE, Pastor.

Lecture,

There will be a lecture at the Deep Creek Baptist church by the pastor on Saturday evening at 8 p. m., for the benefit of the Woman's State Mission Society. Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE Telephone Comp'y

Col. Wm. Jennings Bryan met with a very pleasant reception upon his arrival at the Deer Park Hotel station on Saturday night. Col. John T. McGraw was there with his carriage, but in addition, a bevy of beautiful young ladies from Deer Park. These young ladies had been spending the evening at the residence of Miss Vauda Thrasher, and as the time drew near for the arrival of No. 7 train it was proposed that all go over to the hotel station and give Col. Bryan a real Garrett county greeting. This was done and it was successfully carried out, Col. Bryan shaking hands with the party. Miss Vauda Thrasher, Dr. and Mrs. Hurley, the Misses Orbello, Miss Morse and Miss Irene Haulenbeck were present. G. W. H.

NOTICE OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS,
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 8, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election District of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, September 29,
Tuesday, October 6,
and on Tuesday, October 13,
for revision only

(No one can Register after Tuesday, October 6.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all others duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration of the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election Distict Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Martin Storeroom corner Third and Oak Streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration of the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Charles R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of G. W. Engle in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the West building, Alder street in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM TURNER,
JOHN A. WRIGHT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

JASPER GUARD,
WALTER G. MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

DANIEL W. DORSEY,
ELISHA B. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

STEPHEN F. BROADWATER,
HENRY BARNARD,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

ADAM J. RICHTER,
CONRAD SPIKER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

W. H. BARTLETT,
GEORGE D. WHITE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
RICHARD McKENZIE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

SEBASTIAN HINEBAUGH,
BENJAMIN F. THRASHER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH BROADWATER,
HUGH McMILLAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

O. C. BUCKLE,
URNER BEACHY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

LEWIS C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

JOHN O. THAYER,
BERT C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

D. M. MASON,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisiors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Coal Property
AND
Mining Rights

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph W. Thompson and wife to the undersigned, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 55, folio 348, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due, the undersigned, in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage mentioned, will on

THURSDAY,
the 1st Day of October, 1908

at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, at 11 o'clock a. m., sell at public auction all of the coal underlying all that tract of land known as the Thompson and Hilleary farm, situate, lying and being in Ryans Glade, Garrett County, Maryland, the same being a part of the tract of land called

FERTILE MEADS,

and also including certain other lands which have been claimed, occupied and held in peaceable possession for more than twenty years; the whole

Containing About 931 Acres,

and is fully described in a deed executed by Sophronia E. Hilleary and others to the said Joseph W. Thompson, bearing date the 8th day of March, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. 56, folio 415, one of the Land Records of said Garrett County, to which deed reference is hereby made for a description of the land under which the coal hereby to be sold lies. Said property is supposed to consist of ranging from four to six feet in thickness, and adjoins the coal property of the Stover Run Coal Company, and is in easy access to the Western Maryland Railroad, and the same offers a rare opportunity to any one desiring to invest in coal property. The property can be inspected by persons contemplating bidding on same and a map of the premises can be seen by calling on the undersigned. The property is undeveloped and will therefore be sold without warranty as to contents or quality.

Three Veins of Coal,

TERMS OF SALE.—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

CHARLES E. HILLEARY,
Mortgagee.

SHERIFF'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., the same being No. 16 Judicials to September Term, 1908, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of John Feity against Elizabeth Smith, I did sieze and take into execution all that lot or parcel of ground known as

Military Lot No. 1065,

being the same lot described in a deed for the same from John A. Williams and wife to the said Elizabeth Smith dated the 16th day of April, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 588, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and I hereby give notice that I will on

SATURDAY,
the 26th Day of September,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock p. m., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Md., offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder all the real estate described in said deed above referred to. Said land lies in District No. 16.

Said land will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
In Mountain Lake Park,
Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale in two mortgages from Annie L. Felty and Henry E. Felty to George W. Clauson, one dated March 14th, 1903, and one dated August 2nd, 1905, the first of which is recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, in Liber No. 45, folio 382, and the other is recorded among said Mortgage Records in Liber Number 51, folio 134, default having been made in both of said mortgages, the undersigned as attorney named in said mortgages, in execution of the power of sale in said mortgages mentioned, will on Saturday, October 10th,

1908, at 10 o'clock a. m., offer at public sale at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following property to wit:

FIRST—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, in Garrett County aforesaid, known as

LOT NO. 909,

on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, and fronting on H street, and more particularly described in the deed for the same from John Felty, Jr., and wife to Annie B. Felty dated March 4th, 1905, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid.

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building, with Storeroom and Warerooms on the First Floor and Dwelling above, and is near the Auditorium at the Park.

SECOND—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, Garrett County, Maryland, known and described as

LOT NUMBER 911,

on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, which said plat is recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, said property being known by the general name of

"HIGHLAND HALL,"

and being the same property which was conveyed to Annie L. Felty by Robert R. Henderson and A. J. Willison by deed dated August 8th, 1902, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid, in Liber Number 42, folio 583.

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building called the 'Queenwood Hotel' and is now occupied and run as a hotel and has been for several years. It is a large commodious building.

Both of these properties are comparatively new and are in the most desirable and thickly populated part of Mountain Lake Park, and are in good repair.

TERMS—Cash on day of sale.

D. J. BLACKISTON,
Attorney named in Mortgage.

SEALED PROPOSALS FOR MUNICIPAL BONDS.

$60,000 TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, BONDS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, until

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908,

for the purchase of SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FIVE PER CENT. WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE BONDS.

These bonds will be in denominations of $500 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year, and dated on the first day of their issue. They shall be numbered serially, and Bond No. 1 shall be due and payable two years from date of issue, and thereafter each bond shall mature and be payable each consecutive year from the maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland to have the right to redeem any or all outstanding bonds twenty-five years from date of issue.

All of said bonds to be exempt from municipal and county taxation.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Address, Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST,
Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM,
Clerk.
Sept. 17—5t

Fine Toilet Articles!

Soaps, Sponges, Bath Brushes, Tooth and Hair Brushes, Toilet Water and Powder, Shaving Goods and Sundries generally, you will find here, with the qualities high and the prices low at all times.

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., August 28, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

BIDS FOR WATER WORKS AND A SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, will be received until SEVEN O'CLOCK P. M., MONDAY, OCTOBER 12th, 1908, for the construction of a SYSTEM OF WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Plans and specifications and full information, for both water and sewerage, can be obtained upon application to the Clerk to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, or to Pennlman and Fairley, engineers, Baltimore, Md.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST,
Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM,
Clerk.
Sept. 17—5t

TAX SALES
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
IN GARRETT COUNTY

Under and by virtue of the power vested in the Treasurer of Garrett county, Maryland, by Sections 51 and 52 of Chapter 566, of the Acts of General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1890, title "Garrett County," sub-title, "County Treasurer," and by said section 52 as amended by the General Assembly of Maryland for the year 1898, Chapter 144, the undersigned as late Treasurer in and for Garrett county, Maryland, will on

SATURDAY,
the 19th Day of September,

1908, AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M., at the front door of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest bidder, all the following pieces and parcels of land lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, to-wit:

No. 2.—LOT NUMBER THREE THOUSAND AND TWENTY-SIX IN MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK as shown on the Plat of the Mountain Lake Park Association as recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 6, page 800, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and being the same lot of ground which was conveyed to Upton Cuppett by Clarence E. Michaels et al. by deed dated the 21st day of January, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 394, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county. Said land is located in Election District No. 7 of said Garrett county and will be sold to satisfy and pay the taxes due and in arrear thereon for the years 1906 and 1907 as is charged on the Assessment Books of said Garrett county in the name of the said Upton Cuppett.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale. The right of redemption extends to six calendar months from day of sale by paying to the purchaser, the amount of the purchase money with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and all costs. Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

H. R. DEWITT,
Late Treasurer of Garrett County.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator.
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."
Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.
THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $80 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contagious diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1908. NUMBER 30

PRESIDENT MAKES APPEAL FOR JUDGE TAFT

Executive Says His Defeat Would be a Calamity to the Country.

A LOYAL NATIONAL CONGRESS

Wants Elected a Body Pledged to Support Him as Only Way to Perpetuate Policy of Government as Now Carried On.

The following letter from President Roosevelt to Hon. William B. McKinley, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, bearing upon the national campaign, urging the election of Judge Taft and a Republican congress, should be carefully read. The President regards the perpetuation of the policy of government, as now carried on, as most important. The President says:

Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, N. Y.
September, 20, 1908.

Hon. Wm. B. McKinley, Chairman, Republican Congressional Committee, St. James Building, New York, N. Y.:

My Dear Sir: I have received your letter of August 28th. I agree with all that you say as to the amount of affirmative and constructive legislation for the social economic benefit of our people which has been accomplished by the Congress during the last seven years. The law establishing a national system of irrigation was of vital importance, and stands in its line as second only to the homestead law. The interstate commerce law has been amended so as to make it a new law, with three-fold the efficiency of the old law. The enactment of the pure food law was of almost of quite equal importance. The creation of the Department of Commerce and Labor together with the creation of a Bureau of Corporation, which marks the beginning of Federal control over the huge corporations doing an interstate business, the employers' liability law, the safety appliance law, the law limiting the working hours of railway employees, the meat inspection law, and denatured alcohol law, and the anti-rebate law, the laws increasing the powers of the Department of Justice in dealing with those, regardless of wealth and power, who infract the law, the law making the Government liable for injuries to its employees, the law under which the Panama Canal was acquired and is being built, the Philippines administration, and the navy developed, the laws creating a permanent Census Bureau and reforming the consular service and the system of naturalization, the law forbidding child labor in the District of Columbia, the law providing a commission under which our currency system can be put on a thoroly satisfactory basis, the laws for the proper administration of the forest service, the laws for the admission of Oklahoma and the development of Alaska, the great appropriations for the development of agriculture, the legal prohibition of campaign contributions from corporations—all these represent but a portion of what has been done by Congress, and form a record of substantial legislative achievement in harmony with the best and most progressive thought of our people.

It is urgently necessary, from the standpoint of the public interets, to elect Mr. Taft, and a Republican Congress which will support him; and they seek election on a platform which specifically pledges the party, alike in its executive and legislative branches to continue and develop the policies which have not merely profest but acted upon during these seven years. These policies can be successfully carried thru only by the hearty co-operation of the President and the Congress in both its branches, and it is therefore peculiarly important that there should obtain such harmony between them. To fail to elect Mr. Taft would be a calamity to the country; and it would be folly, while electing him, yet at the same time to elect a Congress hostile to him, a Congress which under the influence of partisan leadership would be certain to thwart and baffle him on every possible occasion. To elect Mr. Taft, and at the same time to elect a Congress pledged to support him, is the only way in which to perpetuate the policy of the Government as now carried on. I feel that all the aid that can be given to this policy by every good citizen should be given; for this is far more than a mere partisan matter.

Both your Committee, and the National Committee, of which Mr. Hitchcock is Chairman, are endeavoring to secure the active co-operation on the stump of Senators and Congressmen, party leaders and independent citizens generally. I most heartily join in urging the importance of such co-operation. I hope that every disinterested private citizen, whose sole concern in politics is to have the right kind of man carry out the right kind of policy, will join in backing up your Committee as well as the National Committee in this movement. No service is as effective, as valuable, as the disinterested service given in such manner by men whose one concern is for the triumph of the principles in which they believe; and I appeal with all the strength there is in me to such men to give such support.

Sincerely yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

A Festival.

The members of the Armistead M. E. church will hold a festival at the church on Saturday evening, September 26 for the benefit of the church. Refreshments will be on sale on the grounds. All are invited.

A. T. BROADWATER DIED AS RESULT OF ASSAULT

Made Upon Him Monday Evening By George Warnick and Two Sons.

TWO ASSAILANTS ARE IN JAIL

Animosity of Long Standing Between the Dead Man and the Warnicks Given As Cause of Fight Monday—Broadwater Died Yesterday in Cumberland.

Ashford T. Broadwater, known by his associates as "Bud" Broadwater, of Bond, this county, died at the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland yesterday morning at 9.30 o'clock, his death resulting from a number of injuries he received at the hands of George Warnick and his two sons, William and Lester, of near Bond, who, it is alleged by a number of witnesses to the affair, assaulted Broadwater without provocation.

The dead man is about fifty-two years of age, and for a long time there has been bad blood between the Warnicks and Broadwater, culminating on Monday morning by the arrest of Broadwater on a peace warrant sworn out by George Warnick. Broadwater was given a hearing Monday by Justice Teats who bound him over to keep the peace. The Warnicks were in Oakland at the hearing and all departed on the east bound accommodation for their homes, Bond being their destination. At Bond Junction on the B. & O. the party got off the train and while at the station there the quarrel was renewed.

According to a witness while the men were thus engaged George Warnick without a moment's warning struck Broadwater a blow behind the ear and knocked him down. Broadwater upon regaining his feet caught up a club and struck Warnick a glancing blow on the shoulder. The three Warnicks, it is alleged, then closed in on Broadwater and Donald Simpson, who accompanied him, and thumped and kicked the two men unmercifully, rendering Broadwater unconscious, in which condition he remained until death, and closing one of Simpson's eyes and otherwise abusing him.

As soon as possible physicians from Bloomington and Piedmont were summoned to Bond Junction to rendered aid to Broadwater. They worked with him all Monday night and on Tuesday he was taken to the Cumberland hospital where efforts were resumed to restore him to consciousness, but without avail. The physicians in the latter city did all they could for the injured man. They trephined the left side of his skull and removed therefrom a large piece of shattered bone. When the physicians raised the bone a large quantity of blood shot into the air. The right side was entirely paralyzed and the left brain was badly lacerated as a result of the rough usage he had received. The physicians at Cumberland stated that the fracture to Broadwater's skull extended from just above his left ear down and backward to the base of his brain.

The morning following the fight George and Lester Warnick came to Oakland with the intention of swearing out a warrant for the arrest of Broadwater, but the officers here having been apprised of the serious condition of the man the two Warnicks were placed in jail and a warrant was issued for the arrest of William Warnick. Up to the time of going to press this morning Deputy Sheriff Brown, who went to Bond yesterday morning to serve the warrant had not returned to Oakland.

The body of Broadwater was prepared for burial yesterday after a post mortem had been held by State's Attorney Robb of Cumberland, and will arrive at Bond this morning. An inquest will be held there today which will be conducted by Justice A. B. Gonder, who left for that point at 10 o'clock, accompanied by State's Attorney Renninger and Sheriff Austin Brown.

A number of people witnessed the assault made upon Broadwater, all of whom have been summoned and who will appear at the inquest this morning, among them being Mr. and Mrs. John Lantz, the former being B. & O. agent at Bond; George Grow, engineer on the Bond railroad; Mrs. Ashford Broadwater and Carrie and Emma Warnick.

Attend To It Now.

Septemt er or October should see your cemetery lot beautified. Let us erect a monument before the snow comes. Make a selection from our stock at Frostburg, or at our Cumberland Yard, No. 99 North Centre street, or wait for one of our salesmen. Our stock of finished monuments at Cumberland is said to be the finest in the State. 27-3t

A GRANTSVILLE DREAMER.

Ignoble Attack on Judge Taft's Pe-lion Scored by a Correspondent.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

Intoxicated by the wooing of a false muse, a Grantsville worshipper at the throne of Bryan, dreamed that mighty dream which occupied so much space in the columns of last week's issue of the Mountain Democrat, under the heading of "A Christian Man."

In that tremendous flight of his imagination the Grantsville correspondent would fain have borne his darling Bryan beyond the clouds of earth and had him prematurely entroned among angels. It was a noble effort, but the wings of fancy failed him, and as he came crashing back to earth, he, as others had done before him, resorted to the ignoble expedient of breaking down the bulwarks of individual liberty and rushing madly into the sacred precincts of Judge Taft's inalienable and God-given rights, and with the black hand of calumny would throttle the very soul of a fellow-man, hoping to win favor for his "Peerless Champion" by a base assault upon his opponent.

Every sense of right and every principle of justice and manhood is arrayed against the practice of small and unprincipled tactics in any competition between men, but in the present campaign, when two great men—noble sons of America—are before the people as the chosen candidates of the two great political parties, the pulpit, the press, and every source of human expression are lending themselves as tools for the purpose of creating a false and undeserved sentiment against the Republican candidate for the presidency on account of his religion. It would not be proper to publicly discuss Judge Taft's religious views, or possible, for it is as much as one man can do to know his own mind on that sacred subject, but the religion by which men are now and will hereafter be judged, is the religion which they live rather that which they profess and all who are most intimately associated with, and those who have watched most closely the daily public and private life of Judge Taft have no criticism to make on that point. It is a sacrilege to carry such a matter into a political issue and in direct opposition to the constitution to connect it in any way to the right of citizenship, which is not complete without the right to hold office.

Let the Grantsville dreamer and all the scavengers of Democracy ask themselves whether Democracy is any the worse for the atheism of Jefferson, or whether the unshackeling of four million souls from bondage was any the less noble because of Abraham Lincoln's peculiar religious views, and were the tears shed by the American people over the grave of the martyred Garfield any the less sincere for a like reason.

Bryan himself must blush at the absurdity of men who have not sufficient executive ability to manipulate a wheelbarrow and yet who consider these great men fools.

The dream ends with another flight heavenward and from the clouds are brought nosegays of mist robed for Mr. Bryan and promises to the people of great reforms.

The "Peerless" is an unparalleled reformer. Everybody knows how he forms a theory and rides it at a breakneck speed through one campaign and when it fails to land him in the White House he reforms it and it is an entirely different looking "critter" when he takes his next canter.

The dream passes away with a plea for the support of the party which has always defended the rights of the people which never means the party which made a $1 job look good to me and called out Coxey's army to keep the flies out of the Wilson and Gorman soup shops.

TIMOTHY PEPPER.

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

The Republican for Job Work.

GAS FROM TANK CAR EXPLODED WITH FORCE

Hurling Brakeman Knight Through the Air and Injuring Him.

NOISE AROUSED WHOLE TOWN

People Residing Near Scene of Explosion Badly Frightened by the Report—Injured Man Sent to Cumberland Hospital, Shortly After Accident.

Yesterday morning between the hours four and five o'clock the vapor escaping from an empty tank car which had contained gasoline, exploded at the water station at the foot of Fourth street in Oakland by coming in contact with the flame of a lantern on the arm of Brakeman William Knight, of Cumberland, who was very painfully burned about the face and arms by the flames and suffered a fracture of the skull by being struck with the screw cap of the tank, which was hurled with terrific force when the explosion came.

For several days past the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has been hauling water from Oakland in oil tank cars to supply the engines at Terra Alta and along the Cranberry grade, the water supply at these points having become exhausted owing to the dry weather. Tuesday an additional train of some eight or ten tank cars was put in service to supply water for the Rowlesburg water station, the stream at that point from which water was pumped having also failed. Among the cars on the Rowlesburg train was one which had contained gasoline and which was emptied but a few day previous and as a result a large quantity of gas had accumulated inside of it. When Brakeman Knight lifted the cap yesterday morning the vapor rushed forth and was exploded by coming in contact with the flame of his lantern. The cap was hurled into his face striking him above his eyes, fracturing his skull and throwing him some twenty feet from the car. His glove and coat were blown off and he was painfully burned about his neck and head and also his arm. The hair on his head was entirely burned off and he was otherwise hurt. Dr. Legge rendered aid to the injured man and sent him to the Cumberland hospital on train No. 8.

The explosion was terrific, people in the most remote sections of town being roused from their slumbers, while those in the immediate vicinity were badly frightened, being unable to locate the cause or the place where the explosion occurred.

Subscribe for The Republican.

WILL NOT TEACH

Prof. J. C. Beahm Has Resigned as An Instructor.

Last Saturday the Board of School Commissioners met for the purpose of giving Prof. J. C. Beahm, principal-elect of the Grantsville school, a hearing and to determine whether or not he is a fit person morally to instruct the young.

As will be remembered by the readers of this paper Mr. Beahm was recently arrested on a very serious charge preferred by a young girl of Accident, and was bonded for $700 for his appearance before the Circuit Court in December. Hearing of these charges the School Board instructed the trustees of the Grantsville school not to allow Mr. Beahm to open the school at that place but to select a substitute, and cited Mr. Beahm to appear before the Board for a hearing. Mr. Beahm, in response to the summons, appeared and tendered his resignation, preferring not to make his defense public. The resignation was accepted and Mr. C. E. Bender is now in charge, temporarily, of the school at Grantsville

Selecting Seed Corn.

To the Editor of The Republican:

One peculiarity of farmers is they select seed corn in the old way regardless of good advice. It is generally taken from the pile after husking. The proper place is in the field before cutting just about this time of the year. Go through the field and select the stalks you want and mark them with a red string. Mark twice as much as you really need so after you husk it you can take the best. But be careful what kind you select. Remember your next year will be just like the seed you select, so take it all from stalks having two large ears and your corn will all have two ears and you will get a double crop. Be sure it comes from a strong stalk not too high.

Ears must have large grains, full to the end and must be ripe or your corn will be late next year. You may not find all these qualities in every ear but get all you can.

Let it stand until good and ripe. Hang in a warm dry place. Do not put in airtight cans until dry and hard. The grain at both ends are apt to be stale, so do not plants any except the middle. You will be well repaid for you trouble.

A FARMER.

Congressman Sturgiss to Wed.

The engagement is announced of Representative George C. Sturgiss of the Second district of West Virginia, to Miss Charlotte Kent, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. L. A. Kent, of San Francisco. No date has been set for the wedding but it will take place before the opening of Congress, and Representative Sturgiss will take his bride to Washington for the season.

DIXON & KELSO

BARGAINS
IN Sweet Potatoes!

DIXON & KELSO will exchange 1 barrel of Fancy Sweet Potatoes for 3 bushels of Potatoes delivered any time during the next two weeks.

CROSS TIES!

Will pay 55c for No. 1, and 40c for No 2 Oak Ties. ½ cash.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL STOCK OF
Walk-Over Shoes

Now in. Several of the most desirable styles. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

ALTHOUGH ALL THE OFFICAILS ARE ELSEWHERE

"The Government at Washington Still Lives" in the Same Old Way.

GOSSIP OF NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Two "Heart Interest" Stories, a Disputation on Reform, the Rattle Snake Man, the Jealous Husband, and Other Incidents of an Interesting Nature.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Who said Washington was dull in midsummer. What if the White House is in Oyster Bay, the heads of departments scattered to the four winds and Congressmen everywhere but in Washington? The national capital has a life all its own, and it is an exciting one at times.

Talk about stories of heart interesting. We have just two of the most unusual interest. Take the case of the boy who was being operated upon and whose heart stopped beating and who showed every symptom in a few moments of having lost all interest in subsequent proceedings. The doctors tried the usual restoratives, but they were of no avail. The one of them cut open the lad's abdomen,inserted his hand and began to massage his heart. In a few moments the heart resumed its pulsations, the boy opened his eyes and was alive again. He remained alive for a day and a half. But when he died the second time no effort was made to revive him again. Probably the doctors thought him to unappreciative.

Another youth got into some dispute and his antagonist pricked him with a knife. The weapon penetrated the chest and made a little slit it the heart. He was hurried to the hospital and there the surgeons went right to work and sewed up the cut and now the youth is as good as ever.

Can you beat those two stories for heart interest?

A little different sort of heart interest story is that of the husband of 30 who became so jealous of the gentleman of 68, who was a boarder in the house, that he beat him up shamefully on the alleged ground that the old man was paying undue attention to the wife of 25. It appeared that the gentleman 68 had been accustomed to give candy and flowers to the young wife now and then, all of which goes to show that no matter how old you are it is well to be careful to whose wife you pay even the most innocent attention.

Another happening that has served to keep ennui in the background was the rattlesnake affair. You have probably heard of it. One of the attendants at the Zoo, which is one of the things that Washington takes a sort of religious pride in and which is a pet of President Roosevelt, undertook to push aside a man-size rattlesnake while cleaning its cage. His rattleship resented the familiarity and struck the attendant in the hand. Then there was great ado. Everybody got busy. Surgeons, physicians and all sorts of specialists, osteopaths, mind healers, psychopaths and what not were interested, but the man kept getting worse and it looked like sure death for him until some rattlesnake serum was received from New York and administered and then he began to mend and now he has trouble in remembering which hand it was the snake bit. During all this time bulletins were issued regularly, the Washington papers got out extra after extra and great crowds gathered around the house that sheltered the "rattlesnake man," as he is generally spoken of by the people.

Our police court also has a tendency to banish the soporificness that generally taints the atmosphere here at this time of the year. The other morning an all-night rounder was arraigned before Judge Mullowny on the charge of disorderly conduct. When the judge called upon him for an explanation he started off with: "Well, old pal." That was as far as he got. The judge is no great stickler for court etiquet on the part of the accused, particularly the sort of accused that is usually arraigned before him, but he draws the line at being called "old pal" and, therefore sent this more or less dazed gentleman to join some of his real old palls at the workhouse.

Politics cut some figure in another case before the judge. A negro had been arrested on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. The officer who made the arrest told the details. "He was running up and down the avenue," he said, referring, of course to Pennsylvania avenue, which is always "the avenue" here, "shouting for Bryan—"

"That will do," said the judge. "Ten days."

A young colored woman was arraigned on the charge of disorderly conduct, which is the ruling form of vice in the capital, and she was inclined to be right pert in her answers to the judge, who was trying to find out what all the trouble was about. He cautioned he to be a little more respectful in her replies, whereupon she retorted:

"I'se gwine answer yo' as I choose an' yo' kaint sen' me to no jail neber."

To her absolute "confustification," as she afterward told a friend, the judge did send her to jail and at once and for that very remark.

Washington is now undergoing several reforms, all more or less sweeping in character, and these also serve to keep the citizens from sleeping all the time. Owing to the peculiar organization of the District politically, the manage of the street railways, above and beyond the rights and powers of the officers of those railways, comes directly into the hands of Uncle Sam himself. In other words every citizen of the United States is more or less directly concerned in the questions of whether the Washington street railways give good service, provide sufficient and suitable cars and charge no more than a reasonable rate for the service rendered. In was recently held that the railways were directly under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the commission, in order to fulfill its whole duty by the street railways and the District and at the same time not allow the matter of attending to transcontinental lines to go by default for lack of time, appointed a subcommission who e business it is to look after the District roads and listen to complaints of the citizens. As no one outside of the officers and stockholders of these lines was ever known to be satisfied with the way they are known to run or with the service they afford, you can imagine that this subcommission is having no holiday.

Another reform is one in which Washington has set a most wholesome example to the whole country, and that is the way of making its hotels, restaurants, eating houses, etc., clean and sanitary in every way. The health Board started out a band of inspectors and began a thorough in-side-and-out inspection of every place in Washington where the public was invited to stave off starvation. Some remarkable discoveries were made: some people were fined, others warned, other reprimanded and other put out of business. Cooking utensils that never had been washed from the day they began their range career, toilet rooms in kitchens, foul refrigerators and ice boxes, broken and cracked cups and dishes were among the the things the inspectors brought to light and which are now barred within the confines of the District of Columbia. Nor is there to be any let-up in the good work. Inspection is to continue and woe betide him who is found to have fallen back into the evil ways from which he has been warned.

The United States jail, which serves as a state penitentiary for the Disirict of Columbia, has also fallen under the searching eye of reform and investigation has revealed a most lamentable condition of affairs, almost rivaling that exposed by the convict pen investigation in Georgia. Cells, originally intended for one prisoner, have been found cluttered up with two and some times three or four. The prisoners have no room for exercise, and there is no privacy for either the women or the men. The District authorities blame the Department of Justice and the Department of Justice passes it along to Congress, where the blame for everything usually lands sooner or late.

RADICAL CHANGE IN PRIMARY LAW

New Act For Whole State Except Baltimore, Returns Vest Pocket System.

Among the acts of the legislature of 1908 were three very important ones relating to elections and known as Chapter 737, "Primary Elections;" Sections 160a to 160w and Chapter 122, Sections 161 to 175, entitled "Corrupt Practices;" also Chapter 400, Sections 1 to 12, entitled "Senatorial Primary Election Law." The latter provides that whenever there shall be a geneaal election for members of the General Assembly charged with the duty of electing a senator for the state of Maryland in the Congress of the United States, a primary election must be held on the same day by the Democratic party and the Republican party also others parties which at the last general election cast 10 per cent of the votes cast. The primary elections must not be closer than 100 feet of each other and not less than 100 yards away from the place where the general election is being held.

Section 160a of the new primary election law provides that political parties which polled ten per cent of the votes cast at the election held Nov. 5, 1907, in any county, shall hereafter nominate their candidates for public office in said counties, and shall elect all delegates to conventions or managing bodies of political parties not appointed by a party convention, by means of primary election under the provisions of this act, the said primary election to be held not later than the second Monday in September and between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and six o'clock p. m., but not less than four hours of the day of the primary. The State Central Committee for the states fixes the date for primaries in the several counties for state-judicial and congressional primary elections and the State Central Committee for the county fixes the date for the county primary. The committee must give notice by advertisement once a week for three weeks before the primary, giving the date, the hours and places where said primaries will be held.

The primary election shall be conducted by three judges and two clerks to be appointed by the supervisor of elections of his party and in case of a primary election by any other political party the whole board of election supervisors shall appoint the judges and clerks. One of the judges must be the registration officer of the party holding the primary and after being sworn in as a registration officer he must then take the prescribed oath as the return judge for the primary to be held in the precinct for which he is the registrar. He is authorized and required to swear in the other two judges and two clerks. The return judge is supplied with a ballot box and a copy of the registered voters of his precinct by the supervisors of elections. These with the official returns sealed must be returned by him on Tuesday following the day of the primary. The convention will be in session at 11 o'clock a. m. at the court house on said Tuesday. The county commissioners must pay the return judge nine dollars for his services and three dollars each to the two judges and two clerks.

All candidates must file their application with the State Central Committee of the respective parties at least fifteen days before the primary and five days thereafter must pay the committe the sum estimated as his fair proportion of the expenses to be incurred, the sum to be fixed according to the number of candidates and salaries of the office they seek.

The ballots shall be prepared by the State Central Committee and be printed on white opaque paper twice the number of registered voters and delivered to the return judges not less than three days before the said primary, and the said committe shall print at the same time and distribute to any candidate, ordering and paying the cost of the same any number of official ballots such candidates may desire. The names of candidates shall be arranged alphabetically according to the surname for each office. The ballot must also contain the names of all the delegates to any convention. White opaque envelopes must be used to seal the ballots in. Not more than one watcher or chalenger for each candidate will be allowed in the polling place and not more than five of such for all the candidates. No one will be allowed to vote except he be registered and a member of the party holding the primary. The voter shall prepare his ballot by marking out with black pencil the names of all persons he does not want to vote for, leaving those he desires to vote for unmarked.

The committees supply and pay for all things necessary, such as rent, advertising, blanks, ballots, ink, indelible and black pencils, candles, mucilage, pens, tally sheets, poll books and the county pays for delivery of box, copy of voters and twenty-one dollars to judges and clerks at each polling place. There are no squares on the tickets and no booths to vote in.

Candidates for state offices must be named on the ballot for county offices and voted for at the same primary.

All saloons shall be closed on primary election days and heavy penalties are named for the sale of or giving away liquors, beers, etc. Fourteen sections with heavy penalties attached covering seventeen pages are devoted to the corrupt practice act.

All the News Everything that happens in the home town; the births, marriages, deaths, the social affairs, the comings and goings of the people—your neighbors; the notes of the schools and churches; all these and many other new and interesting things this paper will give you All the Time

The Republican for Job Work.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

PROTEST FROM LABOR

Kind of Letters Unions Are Sending Mr. Gompers.

DISTRUST PARTY OF BRYAN.

Camden Central Labor Union Holds the Democracy Responsible For Deplorable Condition of Workers in the Southern States.

At the regular semimonthly meeting of the Camden (N. J.) Central Labor union held Aug. 18, 1908, a communication from national headquarters was received in which the work of the national convention of the dominant parties was set forth and commented upon. The letter closed with an appeal to "stand faithfully by our friends; oppose and defeat our enemies." Accompanying this communication was a request for a contribution to help make it possible to wage a successful campaign for the establishing of labor's rights. The matter was disposed of by the secretary being instructed to forward to the national office the following letter:

Camden, N. J., Aug. 18, 1908.

Samuel Gompers, Esq., President of the American Federation of Labor:

Dear Sir and Brother—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of an address issued by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor under date of Aug. 1. Accompanying this is an appeal for funds to carry out the political programme set forth in the address, in which you call upon the workers of our common country to stand faithfully by our friends. We hereby return to you both documents, not that we do not think the wageworkers should stand by their friends and defeat their enemies, but for the reason that we fail to agree with you as to who are our friends and who are our enemies. You claim to believe the Democratic party to be friendly to labor because at its last national convention it promised to do certain things if elected. For this reason you ask the trades unionists of the country to do the utmost to elect its candidates and to furnish means for carrying on its campaign.

The Central Labor union of Camden believe they have sufficient intelligence to designate who are the friends of labor and who are its foes. We take no stock in any party's promises made just prior to election when we have the record of that party to guide and direct us. We refuse to believe that any political party that has a continuous record for permitting the most degrading forms of labor to exist in states where its jurisdiction is complete can or will reverse itself when it comes into possession of the national government. Labor has found the Democratic party faithless and tyrannical in state government. By what legerdemain are we to believe it will do better when it has still greater power to oppress? In the southern states, where Bryan Democracy has been in the saddle for years and where it dominates every office from the highest to the lowest, are the places to get the party's record in its relation to the working class. Let us judge it by what it has done and is now doing in places where it is in power, and not by any promises it may make to gain our votes. The rule of the Democratic party in the south has produced conditions that rival the worst in the world. In the factories over which they have legislative control we find wages the lowest, the hours the longest and child labor the severest. Only under Democratic rule do we find peonage and convict labor farmed out by the state, with thousands of men and boys working with ball and chain, sentenced there by a Democratic official upon a trumped up charge of vagrancy. Nowhere in this broad land do you find the misery of the worker so hopeless or his poverty so degrading as you do in states ruled by the Democratic party.

Mr. Gompers, how can you ask the working class to support any party with such a damnable record? Are you so piqued because the Republican national convention handed you a lemon that in order to defeat its candidates you would foist into power a political party that for the past fifty years has never had the manhood to raise its voice in protest against any injustice or indignity suffered by the working class? The rule of the Democratic party whenever in power has been most tyrannous and degrading to labor. Upon what line of reason should the working class help a party that has never missed an opportunity to oppress it?

William Jennings Bryan, as the standard bearer you ask us to support, has never done anything to merit our votes. There has never yet occurred a crime to labor of sufficient magnitude to induce him to protest.

Mr. Gompers, the working class cannot trust a man to be high in power who is not brave enough to assert his belief in the innocence of men persecuted by parties who furnish the sinews of war to carry on his campaign. At no time has Mr. Bryan squarely faced the enemy of the working class and denounced their crimes. He has beheld the tragedies that have befallen labor with stony eyes and a muzzled jaw.

When Packingtown struck against a reduction of wages to $6.40 from $7.20 per week no Democratic politician raised his voice in protest. What the working class has suffered in the last few years for the sake of principle would stir the heart of Washington monument, if it had one, yet throughout it all Bryan, who stands as the champion of labor because he needs our support, has been as silent as the tomb.

If labor's friends are to be found in the Democratic party, labor would have no problem to solve and nothing to complain of in states controlled by the Democratic party. The fact that the worst blows labor is today receiving come from Democratic Alabama and by persons high up in the national councils of the Democratic party is conclusive proof that the working class has nothing to gain by supporting the party or its candidates.

Free press and free speech, the bulwark of the workers' path to a better condition, have time and again been attacked, and never once has any prominent Democratic paper or party leader raised a voice to protest. Our friends are they who stand by us continuously and are ever willing to fight our battles. Whenever trades unionism is attacked it is not the Democratic party or press that comes to our assistance, but the party and press of our class. If labor owes any allegiance to a political party it is certainly to a party composed of and guided solely by our class and not to one in which labor exploiters congregate and labor's enemies control, however much they may promise in order to secure our support. It is time for labor to awaken to the necessity of political action, but in doing so let it take no backward step or make any false moves. Respectfully yours,

CAMDEN CENTRAL LABOR UNION,
R. M. Hartman, President.
W. T. LORING, Secretary.

The sending of this letter was authorized by an almost unanimous vote. There was one dissenting voice and two members not voting.—Camden Daily Courier, Aug. 19.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention:
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing
Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK: Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.32 a. m., *6.55 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m., closely, *5.35 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *10.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *5.55 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland.

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $75.00.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
, Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

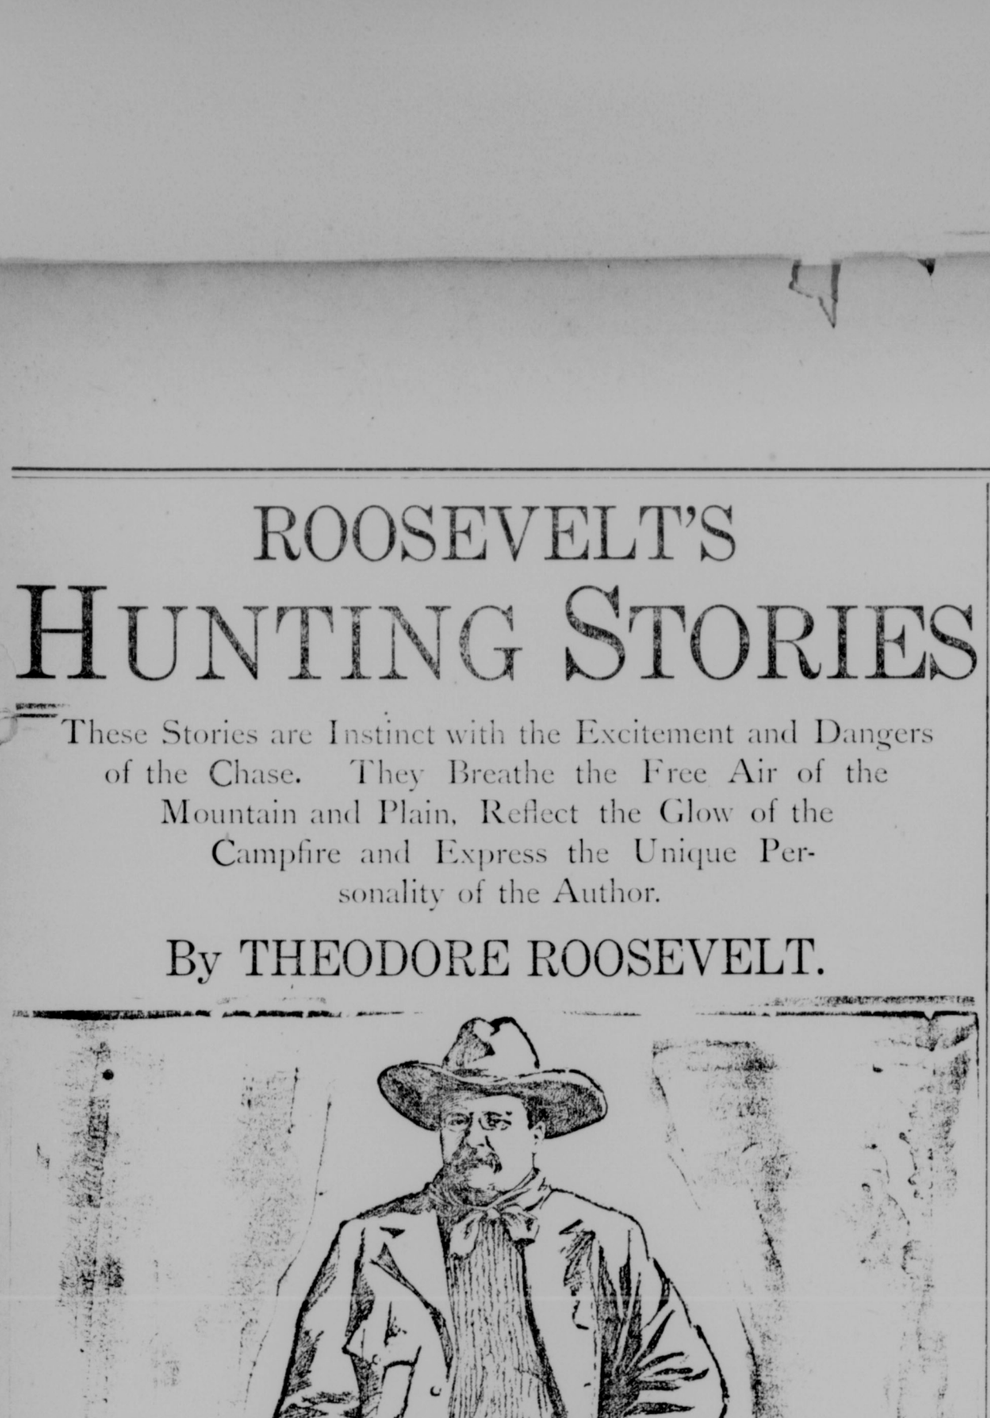
Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSER,
Administrators.

ROOSEVELT'S
HUNTING STORIES

These Stories are Instinct with the Excitement and Dangers of the Chase. They Breathe the Free Air of the Mountain and Plain, Reflect the Glow of the Campfire and Express the Unique Personality of the Author.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.



ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING STORIES

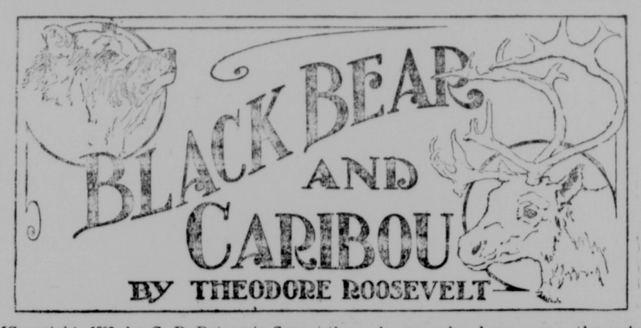
Written by Himself

Illustrated by Parker and Jones, with one page of double column cuts by Berger and Ryder

Most interesting stories of outdoor life ever written.
Each story will be published complete.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S deal with the Scribners for the publication of his jungle hunting stories puts him at the top notch as a popular writer. Not even Mark Twain has received the princely sum of $2.00 a word for his writings, the price it is figured Roosevelt will be paid.

Begins in These Columns This Week.



[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ONCE in September I was camped on the shores of Kootenai Lake, having with me as companions, John Willis and an impassive-looking Indian named Ammal. Coming across through the dense coniferous forests of northern Idaho we had struck the Kootenai River. Then we went down with the current as it wound in half circles through a long alluvial valley of mixed marsh and woodland, hemmed in by lofty mountains. The lake itself, when we reached it, stretched straight away like a great fiord, a hundred miles long and about three in breadth. The frowning and rugged Selkirks came down sheer to the water's edge. So straight were the rock walls that it was difficult for us to land with our batteau, save at the places where the rapid mountain torrents entered the lake.

We had come down from a week's fruitless hunting in the mountains; a week of excessive toil, in a country where we saw no game—for in our ignorance we had wasted time, not going straight back to the high ranges, from which the game had not yet descended. After three or four days of rest, and of feasting on trout—a welcome relief to the monotony of frying pan bread and coarsey salt pork—we were ready for another trial; and early one morning we made the start. Having to pack everything for a fortnight's use on our backs, through an excessively rough country we of course traveled as light as possible, leaving almost all we had with the tent and boat.

We walked in single file, as is necessary in thick woods. The white hunter led, and I followed, each with rifle on shoulder and pack on back. Ammal, the Indian, pigeon toed along behind, carrying his pack, not as we did ours, but by help of a forehead band, which he sometimes shifted across his breast. The traveling through the tangled, brush choked forest, and along the bowlder strewn and precipitous mountain sides, was inconceivably rough and difficult.

An hour or two before sunset we were traveling, as usual, in Indian file, beside the stream, through an open wood of great hemlock trees. There was no breeze, and we made no sound as we marched, for our feet sunk noiselessly into the deep moss.

Sudden, the hunter, who was leading, dropped down in his tracks, pointing upward; and some fifty feet beyond I saw the head and shoulders of a bear as he rose to make a sweep at some berries. He was in a hollow where a tall, rank, prickly plant, with broad leaves, grew luxuriantly; and he was gathering its red berries, rising on his hind legs and sweeping them down into his mouth with his paw, and was much too intent on his work to notice us, for his head was pointed the other way. The moment he rose again I fired, meaning to shoot through the shoulders, but instead, in the hurry, taking him in the neck. Down he went, but whether hurt or not we could not see, for the second he was on all fours he was no longer visible. Rather to my surprise he uttered no sound—for bear when hit or when charging often make a great noise—so I raced toward the edge of the hollow, the hunter close behind me, while Ammal danced about in the rear, very much excited, as Indians always are in the presence of big game. The instant we reached the hollow and looked down into it from the low bank on which we stood we saw by the swaying of the tall plants that the bear was coming our way. The hunter was standing some ten feet distant, a hemlock trunk being between us; and the next moment the bear sprang clean up the bank the other side of the hemlock, and almost within arm's length of my companion. I do not think he had intended to charge; he was probably confused by the bullet through his neck, and had by chance blundered out of the hollow in our direction; but when he saw the hunter so close he turned for him, his hair bristling and his teeth showing. The man had no cartridge in his weapon, and with his pack on could not have used it anyhow; and for a moment it looked as if he stood a fair chance of being hurt. As the beast sprang out of the hollow he poised for a second on the edge of the bank to recover his balance, giving me a beautiful shot, as he stood sideways to me; the bullet struck between the eye and ear, and he fell as if hit with a pole axe.

Our prize was a large black bear, with two curious brown streaks down his back, one on each side the spine. We skinned him and camped by the carcass, as it was growing late. To take the chill off the evening air we built a huge fire, the logs roaring and crackling. To one side of it we made our beds—of balsam and hemlock boughs; we did not build a brush lean-to, because the night seemed likely to be clear. Then we supped on sugarless tea, frying-pan bread, and quantities of bear meat, fried or roasted—and how very good it tasted only those know who have gone through much hardship and some little hunger, and have worked violently for several days without flesh food.

The morning after killing Bruin, we again took up our march, heading up stream, that we might go to its sources amidst the mountains, where the snow fields fed its springs. It was two full days' journey thither, but we took much longer to make it, as we kept halting to hunt the adjoining mountains. On such occasions Ammal was left as camp guard, while the white hunter and I would start by daybreak and return at dark utterly worn out by the excessive fatigue. We knew nothing of caribou, nor where to hunt for them; and we had been told that thus early in the season they were above tree limit on the mountain sides.

Until within a couple of days of turning our faces back towards the lake we did not come across any caribou, and saw but a few old signs; and we began to be fearful lest we should have to return without getting any, for our shoes had been cut to ribbons by the sharp rocks, we were almost out of flour, and therefore had but little to eat. However, our perseverance was destined to be rewarded.

The first day after reaching our final camp, we hunted across a set of spurs and hollows, but saw nothing living. The next day we started early, determined to take a long walk and follow the main stream up to its head, or at least above timber line. The hunter struck so brisk a pace, plunging through thickets and leaping from log to log in the slashes of fallen timber, and from boulder to boulder in crossing the rock-slides, that I could hardly keep up to him, struggle as I would, and we each of us got several ugly tumbles, saving our rifles at the expense of scraped hands and bruised bodies. We went up one side of the stream, intending to come down the other; for the forest belt was narrow enough to hunt thoroughly. For two or three hours we toiled through dense growth.

Then we came to a spur of open hemlock forest; and no sooner had we entered it than the hunter stopped and pointed exultingly to a well-marked game trail, in which it was easy at a glance to discern the great round footprints of our quarry. We hunted carefully over the spur and found several trails, generally leading down along the ridge; we also found a number of beds, some old and some recent, usually placed where the animal could keep a lookout for any foe coming up from the valley. They were merely slight hollows or identations in the pine-needles; and, like the game trails, were placed in localities similar to those that would be chosen by black-tail deer. The caribou droppings were also very plentiful; and there were signs of where they had browsed on the blueberry bushes, cropping off the berries, and also apparently of where they had here and there plucked a mouthful of a peculiar kind of moss or cropped off some little mushrooms. But the beasts themselves had evidently left the ridge, and we went on.

Giving me a beautiful shot, as he stood sideways to me.

After a little while the valley became so high that the large timber ceased, and there were only occasional groves of spindling evergreens. Beyond the edge of the big timber was a large boggy tract, studded with little pools; and here again we found plenty of caribou tracks. A caribou has an enormous foot, bigger than a cow's, and admirably adapted for traveling over snow or bogs; hence they can pass through places where the long slender hoofs of moose or deer, or the round hoofs of elk, would let their owners sink at once; and they are very difficult to kill by following on snow-shoes—a method much in vogue among the brutal game butchers for slaughtering the more helpless animals. Spreading out his great hoofs, and bending his legs till he walks almost on the joints, a caribou will travel swiftly over a crust through which a moose breaks at every stride, or through deep snow in which a deer cannot flounder fifty yards. Usually he trots; but when pressed he will spring awkwardly along, leaving tracks in the snow almost exactly like magnified imprints of those of a great rabbit, the long marks of the two hind legs forming an angle with each other, while the forefeet make a large point almost between.

The caribou had wandered all over the bogs and through the shallow pools, but evidently only at night or in the dusk, when feeding or in coming to drink; and we again went on. Soon the timber disappeared almost entirely, and thick brushwood took its place; we were in a high, bare alpine valley, the snow lying in drifts along the sides. In places there had been enormous rock-slides, entirely filling up the bottom, so that for a quarter of a mile at a stretch the stream ran underground. In the rock masses of this alpine valley we, as usual, saw many conies and hoary woodchucks.

The hunter crouched down, while I ran noiselessly forward.

The caribou trails had ceased, and it was evident that the beasts were not ahead of us in the barren, treeless recesses between the mountains of rock and snow; and we turned back down the valley, crossing over to the opposite or south side of the stream. We had already eaten our scanty lunch, for it was afternoon. For several miles of hard walking, through thicket, marsh, and rock-slide, we saw no traces of the game. Then we reached the forest, which soon widened out, and crept up the mountain sides; and we came to where another stream entered the one we were following. A high, steep shoulder between the two valleys was covered with an open growth of great hemlock timber, and in this we again found the trails and beds plentiful. There was no breeze, and after beating through the forest nearly to its upper edge, we began to go down the ridge, or point of the shoulder. The comparative freedom from brushwood made it easy to walk without noise, and we descended the steep incline with the utmost care, scanning every object, and using every caution not to slip on the hemlock needles, nor to strike a stone or break a stick with our feet. The sign was very fresh, and when still half a mile or so from the bottom we at last came on three bull caribou.

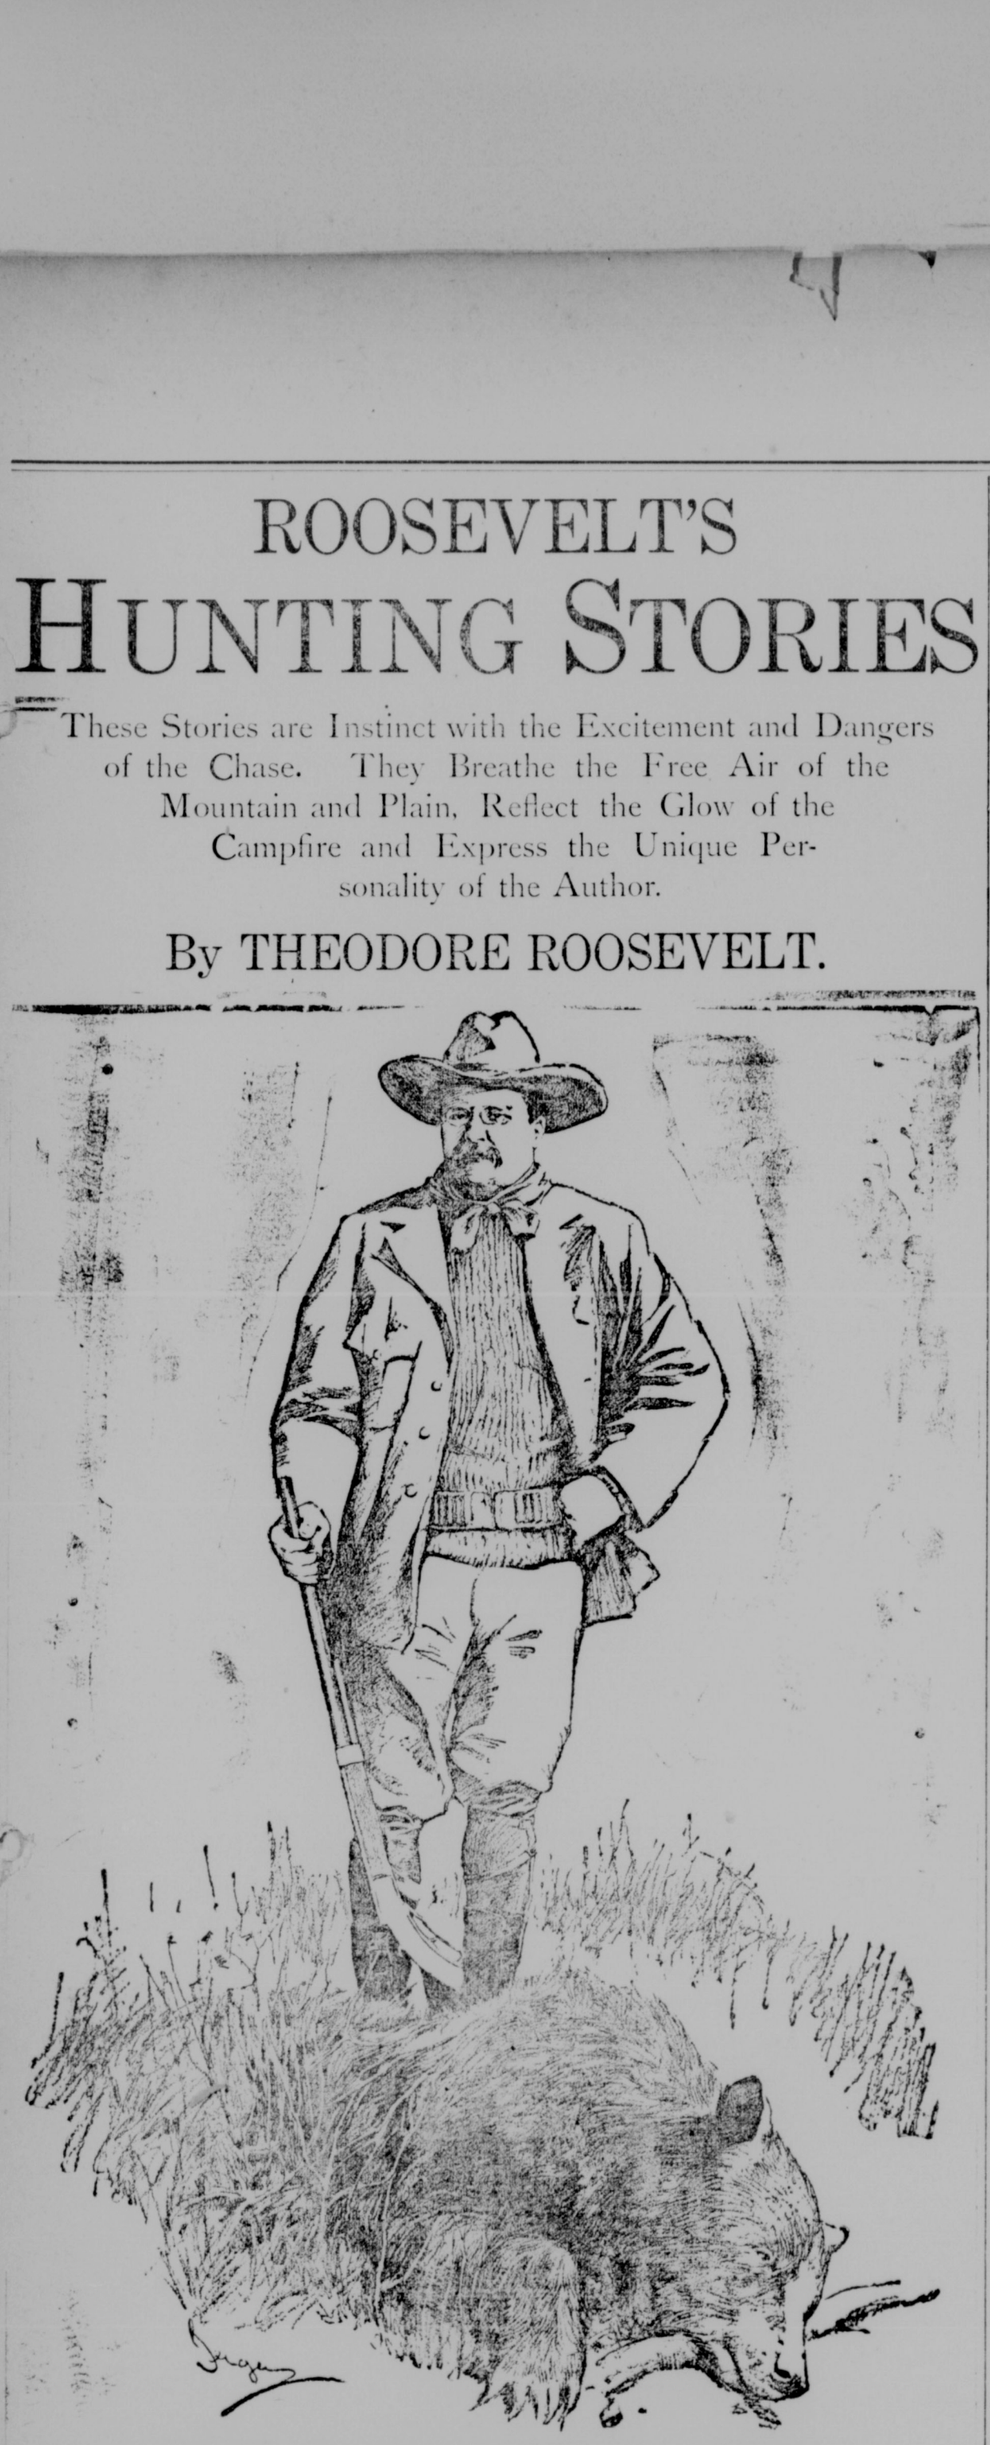
Instantly the hunter crouched down, while I ran noiselessly forward behind the shelter of a big hemlock trunk until within fifty yards of the grazing and unconscious quarry. They were feeding with their heads up-hill, but so greedily that they had not seen us; and they were rather difficult to see themselves, for their bodies harmonized well in color with the brown tree-trunks and lichen-covered boulders.

The largest, a big bull with a good but by no means extraordinary head, was nearest. As he stood fronting me with his head down I fired into his neck, breaking the bone, and he turned a tremendous back somersault. The other two halted a second in stunned terror; then one, a yearling, rushed past us up the valley down which we had come, while the other, a large bull with small antlers, crossed right in front of me, at a canter, his neck thrust out, and his head—so coarse-looking compared to the delicate outlines of an elk's—turned towards me. His movements seemed clumsy and awkward, utterly unlike those of a deer; but he handled his great hoofs cleverly enough, and broke into a headlong, rattling gallop as he went down the hillside, crashing through the saplings and leaping over the fallen logs. There was a spur a little beyond, and up this he went at a swinging trot, halting when he reached the top, and turning to look at me once more. He was only a hundred yards away; and though I had not intended to shoot him (for his head was not good), the temptation was sore; and I was glad when, in another second, the stupid beast turned again and went off up the valley at a slashing run.

ROOSEVELT'S
HUNTING STORIES

These Stories are Instinct with the Excitement and Dangers of the Chase. They Breathe the Free Air of the Mountain and Plain, Reflect the Glow of the Campfire and Express the Unique Personality of the Author.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.



ROOSEVELT'S HUNTING STORIES

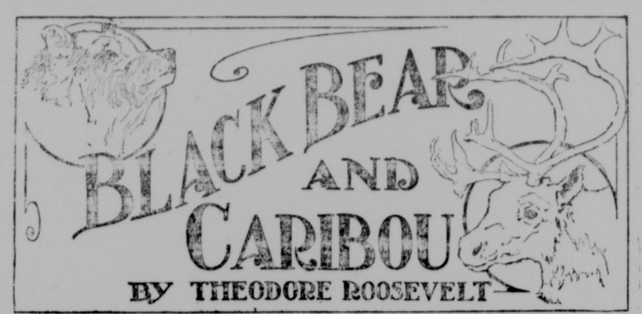
Written by Himself

Illustrated by Parker and Jones, with one page of double column cuts by Berger and Ryder

Most interesting stories of outdoor life ever written.
Each story will be published complete.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S deal with the Scribners for the publication of his jungle hunting stories puts him at the top notch as a popular writer. Not even Mark Twain has received the princely sum of $2.00 a word for his writings, the price it is figured Roosevelt will be paid.

Begins in These Columns This Week.



[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ONCE in September I was camped on the shores of Kootenai Lake, having with me as companions, John Willis and an impassive-looking Indian named Ammal. Coming across through the dense coniferous forests of northern Idaho we had struck the Kootenai River. Then we went down with the current as it wound in half circles through a long alluvial valley of mixed marsh and woodland, hemmed in by lofty mountains. The lake itself, when we reached it, stretched straight away like a great fiord, a hundred miles long and about three in breadth. The frowning and rugged Selkirks came down sheer to the water's edge. So straight were the rock walls that it was difficult for us to land with our batteau, save at the places where the rapid mountain torrents entered the lake.

We had come down from a week's fruitless hunting in the mountains; a week of excessive toil, in a country where we saw no game—for in our ignorance we had wasted time, not going straight back to the high ranges, from which the game had not yet descended. After three or four days of rest, and of feasting on trout—a welcome relief to the monotony of frying pan bread and coarsey salt pork—we were ready for another trial; and early one morning we made the start. Having to pack everything for a fortnight's use on our backs, through an excessively rough country we of course traveled as light as possible, leaving almost all we had with the tent and boat.

We walked in single file, as is necessary in thick woods. The white hunter led, and I followed, each with rifle on shoulder and pack on back. Ammal, the Indian, pigeon toed along behind, carrying his pack, not as we did ours, but by help of a forehead band, which he sometimes shifted across his breast. The traveling through the tangled, brush choked forest, and along the bowlder strewn and precipitous mountain sides, was inconceivably rough and difficult.

An hour or two before sunset we were traveling, as usual, in Indian file, beside the stream, through an open wood of great hemlock trees. There was no breeze, and we made no sound as we marched, for our feet sunk noiselessly into the deep moss.

Sudden, the hunter, who was leading, dropped down in his tracks, pointing upward; and some fifty feet beyond I saw the head and shoulders of a bear as he rose to make a sweep at some berries. He was in a hollow where a tall, rank, prickly plant, with broad leaves, grew luxuriantly; and he was gathering his red berries, rising on his hind legs and sweeping them down into his mouth with his paw, and was much too intent on his work to notice us, for his head was pointed the other way. The moment he rose again I fired, meaning to shoot through the shoulders, but instead, in the hurry, taking him in the neck. Down he went, but whether hurt or not we could not see, for the second he was on all fours he was no longer visible. Rather to my surprise he uttered no sound—for bear when hit or when charging often make a great noise—so I raced toward the edge of the hollow, the hunter close behind me, while Ammal danced about in the rear, very much excited, as Indians always are in the presence of big game. The instant we reached the hollow and looked down into it from the low bank on which we stood we saw by the swaying of the tall plants that the bear was coming our way. The hunter was standing some ten feet distant, a hemlock trunk being between us; and the next moment the bear sprang clean up the bank the other side of the hemlock, and almost within arm's length of my companion. I do not think he had intended to charge; he was probably confused by the bullet through his neck, and had by chance blundered out of the hollow in our direction; but when he saw the hunter so close he turned for him, his hair bristling and his teeth showing. The man had no cartridge in his weapon, and with his pack on could not have used it anyhow; and for a moment it looked as if he stood a fair chance of being hurt. As the beast sprang out of the hollow he poised for a second on the edge of the bank to recover his balance, giving me a beautiful shot, as he stood sideways to me; the bullet struck between the eye and ear, and he fell as if hit with a pole axe.

Our prize was a large black bear, with two curious brown streaks down his back, one on each side the spine. We skinned him and camped by the carcass, as it was growing late. To take the chill off the evening air we built a huge fire, the logs roaring and crackling. To one side of it we made our beds—of balsam and hemlock boughs; we did not build a brush lean-to, because the night seemed likely to be clear. Then we supped on sugarless tea, frying-pan bread, and quantities of bear meat, fried or roasted—and how very good it tasted only those know who have gone through much hardship and some little hunger, and have worked violently for several days without flesh food.

The morning after killing Bruin, we again took up our march, heading up stream, that we might go to its sources amidst the mountains, where the snow fields fed its springs. It was two full days' journey thither, but we took much longer to make it, as we kept halting to hunt the adjoining mountains. On such occasions Ammal was left as camp guard, while the white hunter and I would start by daybreak and return at dark utterly worn out by the excessive fatigue. We knew nothing of caribou, nor where to hunt for them; and we had been told that thus early in the season they were above tree limit on the mountain sides.

Until within a couple of days of turning our faces back towards the lake we did not come across any caribou, and saw but a few old signs; and we began to be fearful lest we should have to return without getting any, for our shoes had been cut to ribbons by the sharp rocks, we were almost out of flour, and therefore had but little to eat. However, our perseverance was destined to be rewarded.

The first day after reaching our final camp, we hunted across a set of spurs and hollows, but saw nothing living. The next day we started early, determined to take a long walk and follow the main stream up to its head, or at least above timber line. The hunter struck so brisk a pace, plunging through thickets and leaping from log to log in the slashes of fallen timber, and from boulder to boulder in crossing the rock-slides, that I could hardly keep up to him, struggle as I would, and we each of us got several ugly tumbles, saving our rifles at the expense of scraped hands and bruised bodies. We went up one side of the stream, intending to come down the other; for the forest belt was narrow enough to hunt thoroughly. For two or three hours we toiled through dense growth.

Then we came to a spur of open hemlock forest; and no sooner had we entered it than the hunter stopped and pointed exultingly to a well-marked game trail, in which it was easy at a glance to discern the great round footprints of our quarry. We hunted carefully over the spur and found several trails, generally leading down along the ridge; we also found a number of beds, some old and some recent, usually placed where the animal could keep a lookout for any foe coming up from the valley. They were merely slight hollows or identations in the pine-needles; and, like the game trails, were placed in localities similar to those that would be chosen by black-tail deer. The caribou droppings were also very plentiful; and there were signs of where they had browsed on the blueberry bushes, cropping off the berries, and also apparently of where they had here and there plucked a mouthful of a peculiar kind of moss or cropped off some little mushrooms But the beasts themselves had evidently left the ridge, and we went on.

Giving me a beautiful shot, as he stood sideways to me.

After a little while the valley became so high that the large timber ceased, and there were only occasional groves of spindling evergreens. Beyond the edge of the big timber was a large boggy tract, studded with little pools; and here again we found plenty of caribou tracks. A caribou has an enormous foot, bigger than a cow's, and admirably adapted for traveling over snow or bogs; hence they can pass through places where the long slender hoofs of moose or deer, or the round hoofs of elk, would let their owners sink at once; and they are very difficult to kill by following on snow-shoes—a method much in vogue among the brutal game butchers for slaughtering the more helpless animals. Spreading out his great hoofs, and bending his legs till he walks almost on the joints, a caribou will travel swiftly over a crust through which a moose breaks at every stride, or through deep snow in which a deer cannot flounder fifty yards. Usually he trots; but when pressed he will spring awkwardly along, leaving tracks in the snow almost exactly like magnified imprints of those of a great rabbit, the long marks of the two hind legs forming an angle with each other, while the forefeet make a large point almost between.

The caribou had wandered all over the bogs and through the shallow pools, but evidently only at night or in the dusk, when feeding or in coming to drink; and we again went on. Soon the timber disappeared almost entirely, and thick brushwood took its place; we were in a high, bare alpine valley, the snow lying in drifts along the sides. In places there had been enormous rock-slides, entirely filling up the bottom, so that for a quarter of a mile at a stretch the stream ran underground. In the rock masses of this alpine valley we, as usual, saw many conies and hoary woodchucks.

The hunter crouched down, while I ran noiselessly forward.

The caribou trails had ceased, and it was evident that the beasts were not ahead of us in the barren, treeless recesses between the mountains of rock and snow; and we turned back down the valley, crossing over to the opposite or south side of the stream. We had already eaten our scanty lunch, for it was afternoon. For several miles of hard walking, through thicket, marsh, and rock-slide, we saw no traces of the game. Then we reached the forest, which soon widened out, and crept up the mountain sides; and we came to where another stream entered the one we were following. A high, steep shoulder between the two valleys was covered with an open growth of great hemlock timber, and in this we again found the trails and beds plentiful. There was no breeze, and after beating through the forest nearly to its upper edge, we began to go down the ridge, or point of the shoulder. The comparative freedom from brushwood made it easy to walk without noise, and we descended the steep incline with the utmost care, scanning every object, and using every caution not to slip on the hemlock needles, nor to strike a stone or break a stick with our feet. The sign was very fresh, and when still half a mile or so from the bottom we at last came on three bull caribou.

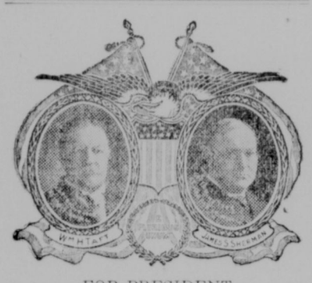
Instantly the hunter crouched down, while I ran noiselessly forward behind the shelter of a big hemlock trunk until within fifty yards of the grazing and unconscious quarry. They were feeding with their heads up-hill, but so greedily that they had not seen us; and they were rather difficult to see themselves, for their bodies harmonized well in color with the brown tree-trunks and lichen-covered boulders.

The largest, a big bull with a good but by no means extraordinary head, was nearest. As he stood fronting me with his head down I fired into his neck, breaking the bone, and he turned a tremendous back somersault. The other two halted a second in stunned terror; then one, a yearling, rushed past us up the valley down which we had come, while the other, a large bull with small antlers, crossed right in front of me, at a canter, his neck thrust out, and his head—so coarse-looking compared to the delicate outlines of an elk's—turned towards me. His movements seemed clumsy and awkward, utterly unlike those of a deer; but he handled his great hoofs cleverly enough, and broke into a headlong, rattling gallop as he went down the hillside, crashing through the saplings and leaping over the fallen logs. There was a spur a little beyond, and up this he went at a swinging trot, halting when he reached the top, and turning to look at me once more. He was only a hundred yards away; and though I had not intended to shoot him (for his head was not good), the temptation was sore; and I was glad when, in another second, the stupid beast turned again and went off up the valley at a slashing run.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1908.



FOR PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM H. TAFT,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

JAMES S. SHERMAN,

OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES!

The Republican voters of the various Election Districts of Garrett county, are hereby notified and urgently requested to meet in District Primaries at the usual places for holding primaries, on

Saturday, Oct. 3, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M.,

for the purpose of nominating by ballot two tax paying residents of each District for Road supervisor of their respective Districts, said two names to be submitted to the Board of County Commissioners one of such nominees to be appointed Road Supervisor as provided in Section 2 6-G, of the Acts of 1908, which reads as follows:

"At the respective District primaries of the two dominant political parties of the State, held in each Election District next preceding the annual November election, the qualified voters of each of said parties, attending such party primaries, shall nominate by ballot two tax payers of their party whom they consider qualified to act as Road Supervisors for their districts, and shall cause their names to be certified to by the Chairman and Secretary, or other officers of the primary in writing, and have the same forwarded to the Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett County, to be put upon file by him, for the use of the Board during the ensuing year."

By order of the Republican Central Committee for Garrett county.

A. G. STURGISS, Chairman.

THE NEW ROAD LAW.

At the head of this column today we publish an official call of the Republican State Central Committee for this county for primary meetings to be held in each of the election district in conformity with the new road law providing the manner for the selection of District Road Supervisors. This law went into effect on September 1st, 1908, hence the call for he primaries at this time is opportune. It is important that the people assemble and make their selection for supervisors, otherwise none can be appointed by the Commissioners as the old law was abrogated when the new law became effective.

MR. TAFT believes in revising the tariff with judgment. Bryan proposes to revise it with a bludgeon.

MR. BRYAN declares that President Roosevelt's letter indorsing Mr. Taft is "irrelevant and immaterial." That is what a troubled lawyer always says of hostile testimony which he cannot refute.

MR BRYAN dodged the cameras in Baltimore for fear that the photographer would catch him without his "victory expression." He clearly realizes that his "victory expression" won't pass at its face value in Maryland.

BEING scared to death and over-confident at the same time is the condition ascribed to Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock by Bryan organs. Those who have known Hitchcock any length of time have never known him to be either.

MR. TAFT has stirred up Mr. Bryan to a sharp retort, in the course of which he declares that the Republican candidate "knowns as little about my record as he does about public questions which he is attempting to discuss." Irrespective of Mr. Taft's knowledge of these questions, there is no reason why he should not know all about Mr. Bryan's record, for everybody else knows all about it. Mr. Bryan has not hidden his light under a bushel; he has proclaimed his theories at scores of Chautauquas, and from thousands of car platforms and innumerable platforms of other kinds. His record is an open book, and a remarkable record of impractical propositions advanced and abandoned it is. Evidently the Democratic nominee has heard of Mr. Nicholas Longworth's pat remark that Mr. Taft is running on his record, while Mr. Bryan is running away from his.

MR. TAFT is in some matters far less explicit, and in general far less prolific in promises than Mr. Bryan has been. Mr. Bryan has a personal plan for everything. Mr. Taft knows that some of the problems are so complex that no one man can furnish a complete solution for them. But, seemingly, nothing is too complex for Mr. Bryan to grasp. He reaches conclusions and he urges his conclusions as though he embodied all wisdom. But Mr. Bryan has discarded as many of his plans as he has adhered to. Mr. Taft has never declared for a policy or method that he has been obliged to abandon. He has never undertaken a task he has not completed. He is a practical man, having a just comprehension of the vastness and complexity of great practical problems. He does not profess to know it all. But he has demonstrated extraordinary wisdom in the public service, has an abounding faith in the right development of present national policies, and inspires confidence as to his judgment as well as his purpose. Mr. Taft may be counted upon to do something more than he promises to do; Mr. Bryan could not possibly accomplish all that he has pledged himself to do.

FORWARD OR BACKWARD.

The real question involved in the political campaign today is essentially whether the people desire a party in power which does things to enhance the credit of the nation and develop its economic resources, or whether it desires a party which only harps and cavils at things done. An opposition party has its uses, and in many cases it is fortunate that there should be a seesaw in the possession of power. The past twelve years, however, have been years of remarkable events in this country. They have opened the door to an expansion of influence and power abroad such as has not come to the United States for several generations. At home also they have witnessed the creation and carrying out of a great body of constructive policies by President Roosevelt, which Mr. Taft is pledged to continue.

To dismiss the Republican party at the present time from the seat of authority would be to turn the hand backward upon the clock of national progress. The election of Mr. Bryan, with the continuance of a great Republican majority in the senate, would mean a deadlock between the White House and Congress, a persistent playing of politics at Washington, and a complete arrest of all the bread reforms and progressive steps which have been accomplished or inaugurated during the past twelve years. Even President Cleveland, sturdy Democrat as he was, recognized the fact that the acquistion of the Philippines was a feat accomplished and that even in the Hawaiian Islands, which were abandoned by his authority, the duty was now imposed upon the United States of carrying out with a firm hand the task which they had undertaken. The resolute policies which Mr. Hay and Mr. Root inaugurated in the State Department—the maintenance of the open door in the Orient and the extension of our relations with Latin America—would be put in hazard by a change of administration. Only by a curious chance did the Democratic National Convention endorse a strong navy, which is an essential factor of Republican policy, but is not a natural part of the program of Mr. Bryan. Even in the regulation of the railways and the assurance of equal justice to all shippers and all citizens, the orderly and energetic policy adopted by the present administration and the Interstate Commerce Commission would be jarred and confused if put in new hands, more zealous perhaps than competent.

A change in the national administration might be a matter of indifference on some grouuds but for two important "ifs." The first of these is that the Republican party during the past twelve years had merely marked time without accomplishing or inaugurating any important reforms; but the work which President Roosevelt has done should be carried on by men who are now in the harness and who have been partners in framing his policies. The second IF is the important one. If Mr. Bryan were "safe and sane," but his efforts to establish such a reputation by promising to keep within the limits of his platform and to respect existing laws are hardly a sufficient guarantee against his kicking over the traces and doing something reckless and injurious to the country before its effect could be fully realized.

The trouble about Mr. Bryan's assurance that he will be bound by Republican legislation as he finds it is that much of the legislation is discretionary. No law can direct the President or Secretary of the Treasury at just what moment they should intervene to avoid a panic or to save the nation from some great financial disaster. No law can compel Mr. Bryan to issue circulation under the recent emergency currency law if he thinks it unwise. Indeed, in a thousand emergencies liable to confront the nation, not only financial but political and international, it is highly important that a man trained by public service and with a mind tempered by knowledge and respect for law should sit in the executiue chair of McKinley and Roosevelt.

Engraved cailing cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

THE NEW ROAD LAW.

Some Salient Features of the Garrett County Highway Act.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

The new road law for this county went into effect on September 1st, and I am sure its operation will be watched with interest.

I have read the law carefully and see that one of its marked features is that it provides for the systematic working of all our roads, instead of the hap-hazard method of the past, where each road supervisor followed his own ideas.

Now an engineer, appointed by the County Commissioners, is at the head and has the responsibility. Under him work the fourteen district supervisors, while under the supervisors may work the abutting property owners. The latter feature is worthy of note. It provides that any owner of land bordering upon a public road may work the road in front of his place by contract with the district supervisor (following the rules laid down by the engineer) at a price to be named by the supervisor, the work to be finished before June 1st.

This method would insure the early working of many miles of road, and should create a rivalry of neighbors to have and keep their road the best. The split log drag, which can be made by any farmer in an hour at a cost for irons and all of less than $1, should come into use here, as it has done in the west, and their work on a dirt road will nearly equal a road scraper if used early in the season while the road is soft.

With the property owners working the smoother parts of our roads, the district supervisors could then take their regular force of men and repair and work the rough and stony places.

Another feature is that the money for each district is at once available for the supervisor, and he can draw upon it at any time, but he must keep back 5 per cent. of the district levy for incidental repairs, such as drainage and opening of culverts and snow drifts. One great defect in the old method was that when the roads were once worked that was the end of all attention for the year, and no matter how badly the road might be washed by storms, there was no money and no interest to repair and turn the water off.

The engineer must prepare a booklet for free distribution, giving illustrations and rules to guide all road work in the county; he must give close attention to the work of all supervisors, and to him they report. He also has charge of all the road machinery and tools owned by the county.

The new law provides for the nomination of two candidates for district supervisor in each district, (who shall be taxpayers in that district), at a party primary, and from the names submitted the Commissioners select one to serve. Thus it is up to the voters to name good men, those who are capable, and who will give their time and interest to the work. If this is not done they have themselves only to blame, and their roads will suffer.

By reducing our road work to a system, much money, formerly wasted, will be saved, and at the same time that expended will accomplish more.

A TAX-PAYER.

Married.

MARONEY—ROWAN.—In St. Mary's church, Cumberland, yesterday morning, Miss Catharine Agnes Rowan became the bride of Mr. Patrick Robert Maroney, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Maroney, of Oakland. A large number of the groom's relatives went from Oakland to attend the wedding. After a brief honeymoon trip the couple will come to Oakland to reside.

GRANT—WATSON.—Cards announcing the marriage of one of Oakland's best known residents, in the person of Mr. John A. Grant, to Miss Lavinia Pearl Watson, of near Charlestown, W. Va., were received in Oakland last Friday by the friends of the groom, the ceremony having been performed on Thursday of last week at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. James E. Watson. The couple will be at home in Oakland after September 30th.

HUTTON.

Douglas and Harold Glover are attending the Keyser Preparatory School.

Earl Smith and Fred Bruner passed the examination at Grafton Monday and have begun working on the tracks.

M. A. Carney, of Carney, Pendergast and Hughes, is spending the week at their mill at Arden, W. Va

H. C. Grusendorf, of the Keyser Drug Co., is home sick, being threatened with typhoid-pneumonia.

L. A. Paulie is painting the new school house at Glendale.

There are fifty-seven pupils enrolled in the schools here at present.

Henry Stotz, who injured his ankles a month or two ago by falling in a vat at the tannery, is slowly recovering.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

THE DEATH RECORD.

JOHN WILLIAM BOWERS.

John William Bowers, aged 34 years, son of Mr. John T. Bowers, of near Oakland, died at Dodson, this county, Saturday, September 19th, after a four weeks' illness of typhoid fever, leaving to mourn his demise a wife, one son aged three years, father, a number of brothers and sisters and a host of friends. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Davis on Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. John T. Bowers, where the body was conveyed from Dodson, assisted by a committee of Piedmont Council No. 19, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which the deceased was a consistent member. The interment was made in the Lower burying ground near the home of the deceased's father. The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved relatives.

JAMES H. RUSH.

James H. Rush, aged nearly 93 years, died at his home in Markleysburg, Pa., last Saturday. Until a few years ago the deceased was a resident of Garrett county. He was the father of a number of children, among them being Mrs. John C. Dunham, of Oakland, who in company with Mr. Dunham attended the funeral, which occurred Monday.

Hutton Tannery Prosperous.

The Tioga Tanning Company, which recently purchased the interests of the Garrett Leather Company at Hutton, this county, is making some improvements to the plant and preparing to do a larger volume of business. At present a machine shop is under construction in which all repairs for the tannery can be made. Additional bark sheds are being built to accommodate the several thousand cords of bark on hand and that which is being received daily from the producers. The tannery is now running day and night and producing about 210 sides of finished leather daily.

SHORT RUN.

As we have not seen any items from our vicinity for some time I will pen a few.

The farmers are now busy getting in their fall crops. Buckwheat and corn are considered a good crop.

Mr. James H. Wilson, one of our hustling farmers, after a hard summer's work, has just returned from Paw Paw, West Va., where he has spent his vacation in fishing, hunting and trapping. He reports a flood time.

Miss Lois and Mr. Arthur Harvey attended the dedication at Dodge Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wilson are visiting relatives in West Virginia this week.

Mr. A. E. Harvey, who has just recovered from a spell of fever, is doing a hustling business in Blaine blacksmithing.

Mr. Wm. More is now digging the dusty diamond.

The school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Emma Harvey. She is liked very much by parents and children.

Mr. Harrison Hardesty is visiting Short Run.

Mr. Alex Wilson is still staying at Mr. Kelso.

Mr. Scott Harvey is still out with his threshing machine. He reports grain a poor crop.

A box supper will be held at Short Run for the benefit of the Grange. The Blaine band will be present—the best along the line. Girls don't forget to bring a box.

UNDERFOOT.

DEEP CREEK.

The farmers of this vicinity are all busy with their fall crops.

The frost has of late been a frequent visitor and did considerable damage.

Mr. John Smith made a business trip to Swanton on Saturday.

Miss Anna Smith was the guest of Miss Anna Fielding Saturday night.

Miss Florence Barnard was the guest of Anna Smith Sunday evening.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Alma Turney.

Quite a number of our people attended the speaking at Swanton on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Stephen Mattingly, of Piedmont, is the guest of her sister Mrs. Calvin Glotfelty this week.

Water is getting very low in this section and people are almost suffering from the continued drought.

BITTINGER.

Forest fires are raging near this place and the clouds of smoke that darken the air makes breathing very uncomfortable at times.

Oliver Beachy was marketing apples over at Blaine, W. Va., last week.

Farmers are employed this week in digging, and while the yield is not large the potatoes are of good size and quality.

Thomas H. Brenneman is preparing to build a new residence on his farm this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Oester spent last Sunday with relatives at McHenry.

Elias Orendorf and wife were visiting their son Lewis near McHenry last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sturgiss, of Oakland, took dinner in this village last Monday.

Cleaver Brenneman is attending the annual Fair at Meyersdale, Pa., this week.

Messrs. Lichliter & Son, of Salisbury, Pa., bought a car load of maple sugar in this section last week. The price paid was seven cents per pound.

Miss Lizzie Orendorf, teacher of the Duckworth school, spent last Saturday and Sunday at her home here.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

Bath-room comfort

Cleanliness is next to godliness, but requires a well-warmed bath-room to its full enjoyment, for only the hardiest men or women can bathe in a cold bath-room without endangering health.

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS

make the bath-room comfortable, healthful, and inviting. And the whole house may have a Florida-like climate—all at the least cost of fuel and labor. No repairs—outfit will outlast the building. Bathing in an AMERICAN Radiator and IDEAL Boiler heated bath-room is a pleasure—not a punishment. Ask for our book free.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,

OAKLAND, MD.

BIDS FOR WATER WORKS AND A SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, will be received until SEVEN O'CLOCK P. M., MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908, for the construction of a SYSTEM OF WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Plans and specifications and full information, for both water and sewerage, can be obtained upon application to the Clerk to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, or to Penniman and Fairley, engineers, Baltimore, Md.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17—5t

SEALED PROPOSALS FOR MUNICIPAL BONDS.

$60,000 TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, BONDS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, until

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908,

for the purchase of SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FIVE PER CENT. WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE BONDS.

These bonds will be in denominations of $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year, and dated on the first day of their issue. They shall be numbered serially, and Bond No. 1 shall be and payable two years from date of issue and thereafter each bond shall mature and be payable each consecutive year from maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland to have the right to redeem any or all outstanding bonds twenty-five years from date of issue.

All of said bonds to be exempt from municipal and county taxation.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Address, Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17—5t

See The Republican for Job Printing

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, July 15th, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$277,285 68
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		2 44
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		113,910 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		778 02
Due from State Banks and Bankers		2,150 80
Due from approved reserve agents		43,914 65
Checks and other cash items		564 55
Notes of other National Banks		475 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		230 10
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$20,591 70
Legal-tender notes	5,500 00	25,781 70
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation)		2,500 00
Total		$572,483 64

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	1,686 45
National bank notes outstanding	48,750 00
Due to other National Banks	3,182 92
Due to state Banks and Bankers	164 02
Dividends unpaid	10 00
Individual deposits subject to check	190,657 84
Time certificates of deposit	242,685 00
Certified checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	12 38
Total	$572,483 64

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of July, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, spent a few days this week in Oakland.

Mr. George D. Browning, of Swallow Falls, was in Oakland Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sincell, who spent a week in the east, returned to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Mr. Wm. T. White, of Terra Alta, spent yesterday in Oakland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Jones.

Miss Lottie Loar went to Grafton yesterday where she is the guest of relatives.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, of Meyersdale, spent a portion of Saturday in Oakland on business.

Mr. Leonard Lochner, of this office spent Sunday with his parents at Lonaconing.

Mrs. Elizabeth Matheny, of Lonaconing, arrived here Monday afternoon to visit her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Sliger.

At the Sunday morning services in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, seven new members were admitted to membership.

Mr and Mrs. W. A. Sturgiss left Oakland for Meyersdale, Pa., Monday morning, going overland via Grantsville.

Miss Kate Shirer went to Grafton, W. Va., last Friday where she will visit her aunt, Mrs. G. A. Bolden, for several weeks.

Mr. Henry Speicher drove up to Oakland from Accident Monday and took the train from here for points along the M. & K. Railroad.

Col. N. U. Bond, of Bond, who spent a week with friends and relatives at Du Bois, Pa., returned to Garrett county Saturday night.

Mr. E. H. Wolfe and son Jesse, of near Cranesville, were in Oakland on last Saturday when they made this office a brief business visit.

Sheriff Austin Brown, who spent a day or two this week at Friendsville, where he visited his mother, returned to Oakland Tuesday night.

Miss Marion Selby, of Howard county, this state, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Selby at their home on Alder street.

Mr. Chas. Sweeney, of St. Louis, Mo., arrived in Oakland Sunday night to visit his parents and other relatives, being accompanied by his little son.

Mrs. Margaret Selby, of Howard county, who was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Selby in Oakland last week, has returned to her home.

Mrs. D. I. Totten left Oakland Tuesday morning for Elkins, West Va., where she is visiting her niece, Miss Catherine Brown.

FOR RENT.—The Rectory on Alder street; house contains 14 rooms; stable and other outbuildings on the property. Apply to BOWIE JOHNSON, Oakland. 3t

Mr. J. N. Robinson and family, who occupied the Rectory on Alder street for several months past, have moved into Mr. H. R. DeWitt's residence on Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Shank and two daughters, who spent a month visiting Atlantic City and friends and relatives at various points in Pennsylvania, have returned to their home in Oakland.

Mrs. Emma Martin, of Cumberland, and Mrs. Mamie Deakins, of Rowlesburg, were guests for a few days recently of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Deffinbaugh at their home on Third street.

Mrs. J. C. Doughty and Mr. J. S. Downing, of Gordon avenue, Baltimore, accompanied by Miss Agnes B. Miller, of State Line, Pa., left yesterday on a visit to Deer Park.—Cumb. News.

Some excellent tomatoes, grown by Mr. H. D. Strawser, of near Deer Park, have been received by the editor, for which we return thanks. The tomatoes are much larger and better shaped than many we have seen this year.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was played to a large audience Tuesday night under a tent on the Oakland Hotel grounds. The play was presented by a company traveling in its own car and carrying its own tent and paraphernalia.

Mr. Jonas C. Beachy, of near Bittinger, accompanied his niece, Miss Vernie Schrock, from her school at Bittinger to Mountain Lake Park on Saturday where they remained until Sunday afternoon when the return to Bittinger was made.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnished or unfurnished.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

OAKLAND AS A DRUG CENTRE

Distributing House for Large Manufacturing Company Established.

The Upjohn Company, of Kalamazoo, Mich., one of the largest concerns in the country manufacturing drugs and chemicals, has established a distributing depot in Oakland, with Mr. Thomas A. Gonder, a practical and experienced drug man, in charge.

The Upjohn Company is conceded by many druggists and physicians to be a leading factor in the preparation and manufacture of drugs and chemicals, the output being sold and distributed in all parts of the country.

The Oakland depot will at all times be kept with quantities of all the products of the company, so that those engaged in the drug business in any section of Maryland or adjoining states can be supplied without delay.

As soon as possible Mr. Gonder will go over the territory adjacent to Garrett county and introduce the preparations of the company which he represents.

We trust that he may make a success of the undertaking. The rooms of the company are located in the McComas building on Second street.

Messrs. Bernard Gonder and R. K. Maroney left in company Sunday midnight for their long journey to the nothwest, Mr. Gonder's destination being Butte, Mont., while Mr. Maroney will go on to Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Two horses for sale. Apply to Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md.

Mr. Henry Leuchty, who went to Buckhannon to take a course in telegraphy and short hand, returned to his home in Oakland recently, the instructor at the school in these branches having resigned and created a vacancy which has not yet been filled.

FOR SALE.—Serviceable and trusty horse; also buggy and harness. Price and terms reasonable, REV. W. M. LISTER, Aurora, W. Va. 29-1t

Mr. William Crim, of Cincinnati, came to Oakland Monday morning in response to a telegram apprising him of the very serious illness of his father, Joseph M. Crim, Esq., who was taken suddenly ill Friday night with hemorrhages of the stomach. Mr. Crim's condition this morning remains unchanged.

Col. and Mrs. George A. Pearre and State Senator W. McCulloh Brown returned to Oakland last Thursday afternoon from points in the northern end of the county, going from here to Swanton the same evening where Col. Pearre and Senator Brown made addresses to a large meeting of the people.

One of Thomas Harne's horses died Tuesday morning of a peculiar illness and the life of another animal belonging to him was saved by hard work. The cause has not been ascertained, but Mr. Harne is of the opinion that the horses were made sick by the water they drank from the river in Oakland the night before.

LOST—Ladies brooch. Pink enameled flower and small barouque pearl. Reward if returned to First National Bank.

Mr. A. J. Alexander of near McHenry, has the belt for large potatoes, so far as we are able to judge. Monday he brought a load of the tubers to town town and shipped them. Several specimens are on exhibition at this office, one of which weighs 28 ounces, is 8 inches long, 4 inches wide and about 1½ inches thick.

Mr. Jacob S. Miller, of near Grantsville, arrived in Oakland Tuesday morning from his home, having come here via the National Road to Frostbug, thence over the electric line from that point to Piedmont and from there to Oakland by the B. & O. Mr. Miller left Grantsville at 1.3 in the morning and got here at 9.30, making close connections at all points along the way.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Smouse, of Fairmont, W. Va., who spent the summer at Mountain Lake Park, returned to their home recently. Until a few weeks ago Mr. Smouse was engaged in the mercantile business at Fairmont, when he disposed of his store, with the intention of leaving Fairmont on October 1st for Los Angeles, Cal., where he expects to reside in the future with his family.

Ex-County Treasurer Horace R. DeWitt, of Hoyes, was in the city a day or two last week on business connected with the office he recently vacated. In another column of this paper today Mr. DeWitt gives a final notice to delinquents to pay up. He has been extremely lenient with those who are in arrears with their taxes. The law is such as to give the Treasurer no option in the matter, hence if he advertises the properties of delinquents it will be because he is compelled to do so and not of his own volition.

Mr. Fred. Stroble, of Angus, Minn., who spent a day or two in Oakland with his nephews, Messrs. A. D. and E. G. Naylor, left for his home Monday night. Mr. Stroble had been east attending a reunion of his old regiment held at Carlisle, Pa., and stopped off in Oakland on his way west. He is one of the progressive farmers of the great wheat belt of Minnesota, the yield in grain on his farm this year being 2000 bushels of wheat, 3100 bushels of oats, 1900 bushels of barley, and 3900 bushels of flax, besides sufficent hay to winter 75 head of cattle and 25 head of farm horses.

Subscribe for The Republican.

A Commercial Course.

We take pleasure in announcing that the faculty of the Oakland High School is arranging for a first-class commercial course. It is intended to make this course equal to that of the best business colleges and commercial high schools in the country.

Prof. C. M. Miller, the instructor in charge, is highly recommended as an expert teacher of such branches. As a practical business writing teacher and also as on ornamental penman he has a national recognition and reputation. He has taken full charge of and instructs the classes and grades in all the rooms.

Parents are urged to give this matter careful attention and consideration. Why send your sons and daughters to outside educational institutions at great expense when with small outlay you can give them excellent instruction and training at home?

There is some inquiry and demand for commercial instruction in the evening. If a sufficient number signify their intention to enroll, such a class will probably be formed and organized as part of the high school. Tuition to be paid into the school treasury by students.

Anyone wishing further information may see or write to Principal Palmer, or the instructor in charge.

Let there be a large enrollment at an early day

A Band Organized.

Lovers of music to the number of about thirty of Oakland young men have organized a band for Oakland by electing Mr. Henry Lauer president, Charles Liller vice-president, and Andrew Gonder secretary and treasurer. The organization was affected Monday night and as soon as possible the members will meet to practice. The need of a band in Oakland has been sorely felt on more than one occasion and since such an organization has been made possible we hope that the proper encouragement may be extended the members.

Shooting at Game in Town

Tuesday morning four or five woodcock were seen flying to and fro over the narrow strip of land between the tracks of the B. & O. and the Little Yough froting the station platform and instantly the "call to the wild" was tingling through the veins of several sportsmen, two of whom armed themselves with their guns and went a-hunting. Half a dozen shots were fired by the hunters but not a feather of the game was turned.

Homing Pigeons Released.

Ten large crates, containing a total of two hundred and forty homing pigeons, were received at the express office in Oakland last Sunday morning from the Americus Club of Baltimore, with instructions to the agent to release the birds at nine o'clock the same day, with the expectation of that they would reach their lofts in Baltimore at one o'clock Sunday afternoon, covering the distance of a little over two hundred miles, air line, in four hours. When the crates were opened the birds rose in a compact mass and after circling over the town two or three times took a south east course, which if followed would place them at their destination.

Struck by a Train.

Dr. John Emerson, a dentist, who claims Blaine as his place of residence, was struck by the engine of train No. 71, east of the Frankville station Tuesday morning of this week and was brought to Oakland on the same train to receive medical attention. Arriving here Emerson got off the train, eluding the railway officials and within a very short time was loaded with booze. Later he declared he was not hurt and did not need the attention of a physician or anyone else. How or when he got out of town is not known.

Call for Your Letters.

Dudly Coddington. Mrs. M. Devenpeck, Mrs. R. S. Doffort, Miss Agnes Fariday, E. L. Harnit, T. L. Kelly, Miss Laura Lee, Thomas McKinzie, F. T. Pierce. F. D. Pierce (3), Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Marchel Wilson.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

A meeting of the Oakland District M. E. Conference was held at the residence of Dr. R. B. Ward in Oakland Monday, attended by nearly all the ministers of the District, when business pertaining to the welfare of the church was transacted. About twenty ministers were present, including Dr. J. H. Hess, of Kingwood; J. B. Workman, of Oakland; E. J. Westfall, of Mountain Lake Park; J. H. Strohmeyer, of Cranesville, and A. F. George, of Swanton.

Messrs. Semmes and Stewart Hamill, who went to Baltimore on last Friday evening, returned to Oakland Monday afternoon with their new automobile, a 40 h. p. Pullman, accompanied by Messrs. Richard and Lloyd Shaffer, state agents for the manufacturers. The start from Baltimore was made Sunday morning, arriving in Cumberland the same evening, and from the latter point the run to Oakland was made in about five hours Monday.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

FALL and WINTER OPENING of TRIMMED and UNTRIMMED HATS and MILLINERY NOVELTIES

THURSDAY and FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 24th and 25th

MRS. M. L. SCOTT,
THE BALTIMORE STORE.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS

APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

STOVES FOR SALE CHEAP—1 Southern Queen cook stove; 1 double heater hard coal; 2 open grate, either hard or soft coal. J. L. POLLOCK

WHY TAFT SHOULD WIN

Prosperity Depends on Republican Success.

A RECORD OF ACHIEVEMENT.

Nation Has Grown Rich and Great Under Sound Principles and Wise Policies of Grand Old Party—Democracy's Record Is One of Failure.

Because the principles and policies, the men and measures of the Republican party are essential to the prosperity of all our people and to the welfare of our beloved land the president of the United States and all associated with him in authority, the congress which formulates the laws for our protection and the courts which construe the laws in accordance with the letter and spirit of our constitution should be in sympathy with the purposes of the Republican party, whose administrations have made this mighty nation respected and admired wherever governments are known among men.

The principles of the Republican party are the same as were employed by Washington, Hamilton and their compatriots in the early days of the republic. They were the guides of Marshall and Webster in expounding the nation's organic law. They lighted the pathway of Lincoln and Grant, of McKinley and Dewey and were the beacons of progress for Roosevelt, Taft and their associates in the administrative affairs of the nation.

The strongest argument in favor of continuing the Republican party in power is the record of its achievements contrasted with that of the Democratic party and applying reasonable deductions therefrom to the chief issues before the people at this time.

First.—A revision of the customs tariff to meet changed conditions in trade and industry.

In 1883, 1890 and 1897 the Republican party revised the tariff. In each instance success crowned its labors. In 1897 it gave us the present tariff, and ten years of the most marvelous and universal prosperity the world has ever witnessed was the result. The Democratic party revised the tariff in 1894, and the country suffered industrial and financial disaster, which ended only with the return of the Republican party to power and the re-establishment of the tariff upon adequately protective lines.

Nothing in the language of human experience so eloquently appeals to the confidence of men as the magic word success. The policies of the Republican party have been successful. The wonderful record of American achievement under Republican administrations is a comfort to the hearts and inspiration to the hopes of American freemen.

The Republican party came into power in 1861. It has maintained the policy of protection to home industries, which has been and is now opposed by the Democratic party. The value of our farms in 1860 was less than $8,000,000,000; of our manufacturing plants less than $2,000,000,000. In 1900 our farms were valued at $20,000,000,000; our manufacturing plants in 1905 at $12,000,000,000. The annual value of our farm products increased $3,000,000,000. The addition of 3,000,000 salary and wage earners (in manufacturing plants established under protection) with individual yearly incomes increased from $290 in 1860 to $500 in 1905 contributed to make our home market the best in the world.

Grateful should a people be upon whom despite their opposition blessings unnumbered are bestowed. Eleven southern states of the American Union rejected the policies of the Republican party in 1861 and attempted to set up a government based upon free trade. The plan failed. In 1860 those states had capital invested in manufacturing to the amount of $108,000,000. In 1905 they had invested in manufacturing $1,151,000,000. The increase of investments in manufacturing in those states during five years only ending with 1905 was $475,000,000, or four times the value of all manufacturing plants within their borders when the Republican party arose to power and usefulness in the republic.

Second.—A reorganization of the banking and currency laws to furnish a safe currency for the convenience of our people in their daily exchanges.

The Republican party established the gold standard. Instead of "ruin," predicted by the Democratic party, wages and prices have risen, the former in so much greater ratio that at no time anywhere would a day's labor buy so much of the necessaries and luxuries of life as in the United States today. More than $1,000,000,000 in gold in our treasury is the greatest amount held by any nation. The Republican party gave us safe bank notes and provision for additional currency in emergencies, all "as good as gold." The Democratic party offered free silver coinage as a solution of the money question. Now it advocates United States notes, which it opposed when the Republican party issued such notes as a means of saving the Union.

Third.—The making of laws to insure that rich and powerful corporations shall not take tribute from smaller producers and consumers; that accompanying our increasing wealth production there shall be a check upon waste of our natural resources; that the courts shall be perfect safeguards of our people in the true spirit of liberty restrained by law, which is the cornerstone of our republican institutions.

The Republican party gave to the nation the anti-trust laws for the protection of the people against control of the market places by combinations of capital. It perfected the railway rate law, provided punishment for secret rebating to favored corporations and secured to all shippers equality in rates of transportation. Having given us industries which utilize natural resources in adding to the comforts of life, the Republican party will enact wise laws to prevent waste of those resources. With fidelity to the basic principles of the nation, unmoved by appeals of demagogues or clamor for class legislation, the Republican party will safeguard private rights through the processes of the courts to the end that justice shall remain a shield and protector to every citizen.

The Democratic party opposed the principles and policies of Washington and Hamilton until the decisions of Marshall fixed them securely in the laws and in the hearts and minds of the American people. It opposed the principles of union, for which Lincoln gave his great and gracious soul. It opposed the policies of the Republican party in meeting the issues which grew out of the civil and Spanish-American wars. In the decisions of the courts and in the approval of the people the Republican party has found complete justification.

The policies of the Republican party for dealing with the issues of the present are opposed by the Democratic party, but the plaudits of the people will again testify to the wisdom and patriotism of the Republican party when it shall have solved these problems in government, as surely it will if intrusted with that duty.

Devoted to principles which make for the betterment of our people in their domestic and foreign relations steadfast in support of policies which have brought prosperity, honor and glory to our country, the Republican party exhibits in its record conclusive proof of ability to administer government in keeping with the best traditions of the republic. For that reason it should be successful in November.

ARTHUR J. DODGE.

Washington, D. C.

Government ownership? Never.
Government regulation? Yes, with every person and every interest treated alike.

A Bryan Shout.

"Protection is robbery!" shouted the Democratic party. "Cut out all the protection to American workingmen!" shouts Mr. Bryan and enact "a tariff for revenue only." And then he has the monumental gall to turn around and ask the workingmen to contribute to "the cause."—Rochester Post-Express.

TAFT AND CONSTRUCTION or
BRYAN AND DESTRUCTION?

Concerning the question of publicity of campaign funds, Mr. Bryan's contention that it is better to make the contributions public before the election seems a sound one. We are not sufficiently convinced, however, that the vote of the mass of Americans are on the auction block to consider this question of great importance.—Philadelphia North American.

There is no American institution that Bryan at some time has not desired to destroy.

Comprehensive Reply to Bryan.

The people shall, have, does, had was and will ruleth.—Boston Transcript.

"Mr. Taft is an old line Republican," says Colonel Watterson, head of the Bryan publicity bureau. The colonel is doing good work for the other side.

-:- THE BIVOUAC OF THE DEAD -:-

TIMES-STAR CIN. O.

On shame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread
And Bryan guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead—

DISTRUSTS MR. BRYAN

Letter of an Old Time Democrat to His Son.

COMPARES TWO CANDIDATES.

Demonstrated Ability of Mr. Taft Contrasted With the Vacillation of the Democratic Leader — Progressive Conservatism Versus Radicalism.

My Dear Son—You are now of age and about to exercise the right of an American citizen for the first time. Since you appear undecided as to which party to ally yourself with and have asked my advice upon this point, I will impart to you my own feelings in the matter.

I have regarded with increasing alarm the growing radicalism of the Democratic party and have long questioned the wisdom of many of its measures and both the sincerity and ability of certain of its leaders. I have, however, never hesitated until the present election to give it my unqualified support, for, while disliking Mr. Bryan and heartily disapproving a platform devoted to the free and unlimited coinage of silver as opposed to sound money and a gold standard, I nevertheless remembered my party loyalty and voted the Democratic ticket. For the same reason I voted as I had always done in the election of 1900, though less in sympathy with the Democratic platform than ever before and thoroughly convinced that the humanity of the American people would in the long run entirely approve the action of a Republican administration in liberating Cuba and the Philippines from the shackles of Spain, in developing their resources and in governing them wisely and firmly until such a time as they should be enabled to stand upon their own feet.

When in 1904 Mr. Parker received the nomination of my party I entertained lively hopes that we had at last hit upon a man who would unite the conservatism of the old with the progressiveness of a new Democracy. You will perhaps recall how bitterly I was to be disappointed, both in the makeshift policy of the party and in the bloodless character of the man.

After the overwhelming defeat of 1904 I gradually awoke to the fact that I was almost totally out of sympathy with the controlling forces in my party and began to feel something of disgust for the advocates of Populism, bimetallism, imperialism and radicalism. I am now of the opinion that the Democratic party cannot hold its conservatives and its Socialists at the same time. The bonds were bound to break and have done. Feeling the lack of a leader, thousands of the moderate wing of the Democratic party have flocked to the Republican standard. I have watched whole states become Republican which had always been staunchly Democratic. This will undoubtedly be true of Kentucky and Tennessee, and I should not be surprised to see Georgia and Florida following in their lead.

In looking over the platforms of the two principal parties I have been able to discover so little dissimilarity and hostility in all of the more vital measures that I begin to feel strongly that the ensuing elections will be a question of men rather than of issues and for this reason advise you to scrutinize the characters and careers of the respective candidates with the greatest care.

Both are men of the highest personal character and irreproachable in private and personal qualities. The crucial test is in the showing of their qualifications for public administration of large affairs and in their perception of the true public interest in the issues of the day. Such a test and such a comparison, it seems to me, are greatly in favor of Mr. Taft. He has had large experience in a variety of offices of trust and authority, exhibiting administrative ability of a very high order in every position to which he has been called. His rule in the Philippines and Cuba excited most favorable comment throughout the country. His superb equipment for the presidential office must appeal to the judgment of a large class of more or less independent voters when compared with Mr. Bryan's entire lack of experience as an administrator and his superabundant endowments as a theorist and a manufacturer of phrases. I can never forget that he has been defeated in almost every contest, whether national or local, into which he has ever entered, while the only two issues, the distinct product of his own brain, "sixteen to one silver" and "government ownership of railways," have been forcibly repudiated, the former by the American people in the elections of 1896 and 1900 and the latter by the Democratic party itself. Of the two men I am inclined to regard Mr. Taft as the broader and less sectional and the less inclined to arouse class hostility.

Two years ago I could not have voted the Republican ticket, but should have stayed away from the polls altogether. Recently, however, I have come to consider my duty as an American citizen as paramount to any obligations that I may owe to my party. Though admiring him personally, I really fear Mr. Bryan politically and believe it my duty and for the good of the country to vote for his opponent.

You will ask if I am not afraid to let the Republicans stay longer in power. A decade ago I should have answered "Yes," but when I reflect upon the patriotic administration of Mr. Roosevelt, who has ruled as one of the best and wisest presidents of our entire history, and when I further reflect upon the great strides which we have made in the production of wealth and general prosperity and that under the guidance of the Republican principles the American people have become the richest nation in the world, with wealth today exceeding that of England and all her colonies and that of France and Germany combined, why, then I am forced to say "No." If this great prosperity has come to us under Republican rule we can, I think, then safely trust it in office for four years more.

In consideration of the somewhat questionable filibustering of the Democratic minority in the house of representatives during the past session there were nevertheless many wholesome and progressive laws enacted which will prove of great benefit to the country. A congress has little need to apologize for lack of work accomplished which has passed an emergency currency bill, appointed a national monetary commission, an employers' government liability bill, a widows' pension bill, a child labor law for the District of Columbia, a new statute for the safety of railway engineers and firemen and repealed the unfair statute applying the American coastwise laws to the Philippines.

In a word, my dear boy, much as I regret the necessity, I nevertheless feel it my duty to vote the Republican ticket and sincerely trust that you will upon the outset of your career ally yourself with that party which has done so much for the laboring and agricultural classes in particular and the entire people in general. Affectionately,

YOUR FATHER.

Shall the people rule—or Bryan?

They Can't Lose Him.

When this campaign is over
And Sherman gets his wind,
When Taft gets back in clover
And Kern gets back to Ind.,
Then William Jennings Bryan,
With confidence sublime,
Will say, of course, "I'll try an-
Other time."

Women Themselves Defeating Suffrage Movement.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, English Author and Suffragette.

IT is now often said even by many of those in England who have no real sympathy with the suffrage movement, who believe, indeed, that its results if successful would be disastrous, that its success is none the less "inevitable." People are apt to think that when in a democratic country a claim of this kind has been asserted sufficiently long and with sufficient vehemence mere clamor and insistence wear down opposition and the claim must ultimately be granted.

THE SUCCESS OF THE MOVEMENT, HOWEVER, IS NOT "INEVITABLE" AT ALL, in spite of the increased parliamentary vote or the skillful organization of a Hyde park meeting. Let me quote the example of America. After sixty years' agitation—for the movement generally is dated in America from the meeting held in New York in July, 1848—THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE DEMAND IS NOW IN PROCESS OF DEFEAT AND EXTINCTION, AND THAT NOT AT THE HANDS OF MEN, BUT AT THE HANDS OF WOMEN THEMSELVES.

SINCE 1896, INDEED, IN FIVE STATES THE SUFFRAGE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS HAVE BEEN DEFEATED AT THE POLLS, AND IN 1903 THE LEGISLATURES OF THIRTEEN STATES REJECTED WOMAN SUFFRAGE BILLS OF ONE TYPE OR ANOTHER. SCHOOL SUFFRAGE HAS BEEN SECURED FOR WOMEN IN TWENTY-FIVE STATES, BUT THE STRIKING THING IS THAT THE SUFFRAGE AGITATION AND THE "UNWISE PRESSURE BROUGHT TO BEAR ON LEGISLATURES AND PUBLIC OFFICIALS" HAVE HINDERED THE NATURAL PROGRESS OF WOMEN IN THIS FIELD OF WORK SO WELL SUITED TO THEM.

We in England, however, are safe, thanks to the concession of the local government vote to women and to the act of last year enabling them to sit on local government bodies, from any similar reaction, AND THERE CAN BE LITTLE DOUBT THAT AMERICAN WOMEN, NOW THAT THE ANTISUFFRAGE MOVEMENT HAS PRACTICALLY ATTAINED ITS END, WILL SOON FIND MEANS AND CHANNELS BY WHICH THEIR LEGITIMATE PUBLIC INFLUENCE IN MATTERS OF EDUCATIONAL AND SOCIAL REFORM SHALL BE MORE FULLY BROUGHT TO BEAR.

THE IMPORTANT THING FOR US TO NOTICE IS THAT THE SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT HAS BEEN CHECKED AND WILL BE ULTIMATELY DEFEATED BY WOMEN THEMSELVES.

Home Rule Is Fundamental.

By HORACE E. DEMING Before National Municipal League.

HONEST, PROGRESSIVE AND EFFICIENT MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT IN THIS COUNTRY RESTS UPON THE FUNDAMENTAL DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLE OF LOCAL SELF GOVERNMENT.

Clothe the municipality with all necessary power to determine and enforce its local public policy, give it adequate machinery for that purpose, THEN LEAVE IT UNTRAMMELED BY OUTSIDE INTERFERENCE AND UNAIDED BY OUTSIDE ASSISTANCE. LEAVE IT ALONE. LET IT WORK OUT ITS OWN PROBLEM. THIS IS TRUE DEMOCRACY.

A superimposed government is not a democratic government. The struggle of the people of the town toward democracy, to control the local affairs of their own town, is the mainspring of the campaign for municipal betterment in this country.

America Deprives Foreigners of Much of Their Happiness.

By IDA M. TARBELL, Celebrated Author.

ONE of the first disappointing realizations of the immigrant to the United States must be that he has come to a country practically without fete days. Accustomed to a succession of religious and national holidays, all lively in color and movement; to local fairs running over days, even weeks sometimes; to street shows and games and merrymaking—a land where not more than six or eight legal holidays are known and where the church is contented with an annual Sunday school picnic for the children, must seem poverty stricken indeed in gayety, whatever its opportunity for money making.

THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT THAT THE VARIETY AND NUMBER OF FETE DAYS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES GO A GREAT WAY TO MAKING UP TO THE LABORING CLASS FOR MATERIAL HARDSHIPS. HERE THERE IS NO SUCH COMPENSATION FOR NEW AND OFTEN VASTLY MORE PERPLEXING HARDSHIPS.

Even those among us who have appreciated the difficulties of the immigrant's transplanting and have tried to smooth them away have given little thought to this side of the matter. The tendency, indeed, has been to frown on the newcomer's efforts to introduce his own frolics and festivals as un-American and to impress upon him that it is work and not play which counts in the new land.

WE HAVE BEEN WILLING TO IMPROVE HIM, BUT UNWILLING TO AMUSE HIM, EVEN TO LET HIM AMUSE HIMSELF. THE RESULT HAS BEEN THAT HE HAS DROPPED HIS MERRYMAKINGS AND EVEN COME TO DESPISE THEM AND HAS SUBSTITUTED FAR LESS ATTRACTIVE AND TOO OFTEN FAR LESS INNOCENT AMUSEMENTS. THE BARROOM AND THE DANCE HALL ARE POOR SUBSTITUTES, INDEED, FOR THE OPEN AIR CAFE AND THE VILLAGE FAIR.

We Americans lose no less than the foreigner loses by this. One of the most precious things he brings us, indeed, is his capacity for gayety, expressed in picturesque dances and customs. We are always willing enough to travel far in Europe to study these expressions. Indeed, the popular fete is one of the things the tourist remembers longest, yet we have done almost nothing to encourage the preservation here of any of its features.

Locating Mrs. Porter.

.....By CARL WILLIAMS.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Jessie Morgan.

"Do you know," said Porter, with the air of a person who makes a great discovery, "I think I ought to get married."

For a moment Eda Kirby's heart stopped beating, but Porter continued in his easy, placid tones:

"You see, I am pretty comfortably fixed now, and it is high time I looked about me. I think I shall take a vacation and go to the mountains. I ought to find some one up there who should suit me well enough to be Mrs. Porter. And so I won't be around again. I leave tomorrow night."

He rose heavily to his feet, and Eda sprang to get his hat, forcing to her lips the smile that masked but poorly the quivering of her mouth. For three years she had loved John Porter. For nearly that length of time she had thought also that he loved her.

"Goodby and good luck," she said as he passed through the door. "You will let me know when your quest has succeeded, won't you?"

"To be sure," he agreed. "Take care of yourself and don't get sick."

He patted the slender hand that still lay within his own and turned to the stairs. Eda watched him past the next landing and then stepped into the apartment that had been her home ever since she had been forced to become a wage earner.

It was a tiny enough place, four small rooms opening off a hall the size of a soap box, but it was neat and homelike, and Porter loved to spend his evenings there when other distractions did not offer. He was always certain of finding Eda home and as regularly in good humor. He could not know at what cost she recruited at times her flagging energy that he might not see how hard the struggle was for her.

THEN CAME THE TELEGRAM.

Now the cheery place seemed dark and lonesome, and, with a sobbing cry, she threw herself upon the sofa and gave vent to the grief within her soul. John Porter had never been a demonstrative man, but she had not dreamed that his calls were merely because he liked to spend a restful evening in her homelike apartment.

Now he had gone in search of a wife, and she should lead her life alone. Long ago the time for making new friends had passed.

Somehow during the next two weeks she managed to keep up her work while always the dull ache was in her heart and the soft color faded from her cheeks and the slender hands became more slender. Porter had not written. He never was much of a hand at letter writing, and she did not even know where he had gone. Then came the telegram that seemed to wring her heart afresh.

"Have discovered her," it ran. "Will be home this evening and will call to tell you about it."

So his quest had been successful. Eda signed the book and stood staring after the departing messenger, wondering what impulse had led her to tip the lad a quarter for bringing her bad news. Womanlike, she seldom tipped, but some impulse had led her to give the boy the money, and even in the first new access of her grief she had wondered at her liberality.

Late in the afternoon Eda roused herself to make the little flat presentable. It would probably be the last time that Porter would ever come. She could not receive calls from an engaged man. She wanted him to remember the place at its best.

It was a very inviting room that Porter entered that evening. The Morris chair was drawn close to the window, and his ash tray was beside it on a taboret. The shaded lamp sent a soft glow that did not suggest as did the gas, and Eda in her prettiest gown sat by the other window. Porter looked about him with pleasure.

"This seems like home," he sighed, "only I want a bigger place, this is so tiny. It's different from a hotel room even at a hotel where you are supposed to get the best. They can't make the rooms seem homelike."

"Where did you go?" she asked.

"All over," he replied, with a laugh.

"Surely you did not expect to find your ideal on the porch of the first place you registered," she suggested. "What is worth having is worth looking for."

"Don't I know?" he admitted. "The trouble is that you don't have to look hard enough sometimes. Then you are apt not to see it. I went to Glenville first. They have the athletic girl there. There was a golf tournament on, and every girl was walking about with a lot of sticks. Some of them were for hitting the ball, and the rest they called men, though they were mostly pretty poor apologies."

"The better chance for you," he reminded. Porter shook his head.

"I think," he said slowly, "that I could catalogue every variety of summer girl there is, and there are lots of them—about as many sorts of summer girls as there are girls."

"And which kind did you select?" she asked quietly.

"I went from there to Ridge Park," he went on, ignoring her question. "There was no golf there. It was mostly horseback riding. The women were rather more attractive, but I didn't like them, and I hit out for the seashore."

"And there you found a mermaid?" Her voice was light, but she gripped the arms of her chair nervously. She wanted to hear the worst at once. She wanted to get it over with. Then she could congratulate him, and he would go away and leave her alone.

"She's not a mermaid," he answered. "Somehow I never did fancy mermaids. They are rather moist companions, and, being part fish, they are apt to be cold blooded creatures. I did not find her on the shore. I found her up in my own room one night."

"In your room? Not a chambermaid?" cried Eda in horror.

Porter laughed. There was a boyish ring to the laugh that she had never heard before.

"She is not a chambermaid," he assured gravely. "I was all alone. It was one of those hot nights that come late in the season. I could not sleep, so I lighted a cigar and sat by the window watching the sea."

"Moonlight and solitude are dangerous," she reminded.

"Not always," he demurred. "I got to thinking over all the girls I had seen. There were girls all the way from sixteen to sixty—girls to suit every taste but mine. Then I got to thinking of how cool and pleasant it must be in these rooms of yours. Somehow you always manage to keep them cool and shady. Then I looked about the room I was sitting in and I got homesick for this."

"Or a home of your own like it," she corrected.

"That's it," he explained. "A home of my own like it instead of my bachelor apartments. Then all of a sudden I realized a great truth, and I found out what I wanted."

He waited for her query, but Eda was looking out across the green of the back yards, gleaming with a touch of silver in the moonlight. She did not turn her head as he rose and came toward her chair.

"I realized that it was you I had wanted all along," he said. "None of them was like you, and so none suited. We had been friends for so long that I did not realize how I loved you until I got away from you and missed you.

"I'm only a stupid, blundering man, Eda. I am more stupid even than most men. I have no right to expect that after all these years you will forgive my denseness, but don't you think that you can learn to love me, dear?"

"I knew that it was right to give that boy the money," she murmured. Porter puzzled at the words, but she drew his head down against her cheek, and he did not care. He had found Mrs. Porter, and that was all sufficient.

Handshakes.

Says Sydney Smith: On meeting a young lady who had just entered the garden and shaking hands with her, "I must," I said, "give you a lesson in shaking hands, I see. There is nothing more characteristic than shakes of the hand. I have classified them. Lister, when he was here, illustrated some of them. Ask Mrs. Sydney to show you his sketches of them when you go in.

"There is the high official—the body erect and a rapid, short shake near the chin. There is the mortmain—the flat hand introduced into your palm and hardly conscious of its contiguity; the digital—one finger held out, much used by the high clergy. There is the shaken rusticus, where your hand is seized in an iron grasp, betokening rude health, warm heart and distance from the metropolis, but producing a strong sense of relief on your part when you find your hand released and your fingers unbroken.

"The next to this is the retentive shake—one which, beginning with vigor, pauses, as it were, to take breath, but without relinquishing its prey, and before you are aware begins again, till you feel anxious as to the result and have no shake left in you. There are other varieties, but this is enough for one lesson."

Holding His Own.

Scattered through the pine clad mountains of California live some grizzly old miners whose dry wit is often amusing. After many years' absence a certain gentleman returned to the little mountain town that had been his birthplace. The first person he met was an old miner who had known him as a boy.

"Howdy, Tom?" he said as he shook hands. "How've you been getting along all these years?"

The old fellow shifted his quid of tobacco, spat into the dust, then said in the habitual drawl, "Waal, I didn't have a darn cent when I come here forty year ago, an' I'm holdin' my own."—Judge Library.

YARNS ABOUT TRAMPS

The Dilapidated Gentleman Relates Some Incidents.

THE FARMERS AND HOBOES.

Present Ill Feeling For Them Blamed on Press of Country—Cash on Delivery Only Way to Do Business, Says the C. O. D. Man.

[Copyright, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.]

"Thanks for ——coln," said the C. O. D. man as he pocketed the quarter and made ready to talk. "There is only one way for a dilapidated gentleman to do business, and that is to insist on cash on delivery. This saves the hire of a bookkeeper and cashier, and when night comes he knows exactly what he has got without consulting a cash register. Any other plan is bound to bring him to grief. I deliver my yarn—you pay the cash. That ends the transaction.

"WHEN DID YOU GET OUT OF JAIL?" HE SAYS

"You want to know about country folks. You say you were born in the country, and you remember the green meadows, babbling brooks and frisking lambs. You also remember Uncle Josh and Aunt Mary and how they used to put a light in the window of a dark night to guide the tired wayfarer. You can remember of seeing a tramp or two when you was a little shaver. You can remember that he was invited in to dinner, that he was given old clothes and cash, that your mother had fears in her eyes and your father said it was a shame that the world drove a man from pillar to post in that way.

"Oh, yes! Oh, yes! I see the picture just as you do, and you will excuse me if I grin a grin or two. The world hasn't stood still while you have gone on. It's gone right along with you, and there have been a few changes in the country.

Why Tramps Go to Cities.

"Take a walk and you will find those same green meadows, those same brooks, those same lambs, but you won't find Uncle Josh and Aunt Mary no more. They have been dead for years. A city like this seems a hard hearted and cruel place, and you shiver at the idea of being dead broke. Let me tell you that tramps are driven into the cities to recuperate. All the clothing I have had for the last five years has been begged in the city. All the money I have had has come from the dwellers therein. The only kind words I have heard have come from the burly bugly. Makes you open your eyes, doesn't it? You are still clinging to the old fashioned ideas of the country.

"My friend, let me tell you something. There isn't today a harder man to deal with than the average farmer. There isn't a woman with less sentiment than his wife. There's been a mighty change in the last twenty years. Indeed, it is a change that was forced on the farmer to protect himself. In years agone, in tramping over the highway, I have met lightning rod men, windmill men, piano men, hayfork men, commission men, peddlers, chicken buyers and horse traders. All were after the farmer. Each and every one intended to beat him and did beat him. He was beaten when he sold his produce, and he was beaten when he bought his goods. He was considered fair game all around. It was argued that his peaceful surroundings made him gullible, and I guess they did.

"Well, Uncle Josh and Aunt Mary died twenty years ago, and their children took hold. That babbling brook babbles for cash now. The green meadow means greenbacks. The lambkins frisk, but they frisk for the dough. The watchdog at the gate can size up a swindler as well as a man. The farmer holds on until he gets the highest price, and the merchant who sells him shoddy has got to get up early in the morning. Say, now, but I'd rather start out to beat ten men in a city than one farmer. I'd rather be dead broke here than to have a dollar in my pocket out in the country. If taken ill here I'm sent to a free hospital; if taken sick in the country the Lord helps me.

Farmer Not to Blame.

"I'm not blaming the farmer in the least. For a hundred years he was the prey of swindlers and was taken for a fool. If he's got his eyes opened at last and is taking care of himself, and I assure you that such is the case, then so much the better for him. It is the dilapidated gentleman who suffers most from this change.

"Why is a sailor a sailor? Nineteen times out of twenty it is because he wants to rove the seas. Why is a tramp a tramp? Nineteen times out of twenty it is because he wants to rove the land. It is a nervous, restless feeling that he cannot withstand. He wants to get somewhere, and he is no sooner there than he wants to get somewhere else. The majority of them are sober men. They are as honest as the average. Not one in twenty will refuse to work for a meal or for pay. Not one in twenty commits a crime for which he should be jailed. You can't make statistics talk any other way. The whining, lying, vicious tramp has his home in the city and stays there.

"It is the press of the country that has got the farmer down on the tramp. You may drive for fifty miles and interview each farmer as you come to him and you won't find five to say that a tramp ever caused them any trouble. In summer the tramp may steal a few apples or turnips. Any one driving along the highway is free to do that. Should he steal an ax, shovel, plow, sheep, calf or break into the house and steal a watch or clothes, what is he going to do with his plunder? The instant he tries to realize on it he is nabbed. The tramp who entered a house and stole $50 in cash would be worse off than if he hadn't a cent.

"I can walk into that bakery over there and say that I am hungry and the woman will give me a stale loaf. I can tackle most any man passing here for a dime for lodgings money and get it. I can wander down most any residence street and raise a hat, a coat or a pair of shoes. How is it out in the country? We'll say I've hoofed it all day, making about fifteen miles. I've stopped to rest now and then and view the scenery. Don't you make no mistake about that scenery feature. If any art company wanted to publish a thousand views it couldn't do better than to ask the tramps where to find the best ones. For lunch I pulled two turnips from a field. My drink was from a brook. Along about 6 o'clock I hanger for cooked victuals, and, as it looks like rain, I would like to get lodgings in a barn. I turn aside to a farmhouse. The farmer is washing his hands at the well to go in to supper. Out of the tail of his eye he sees me approaching, but he pays no heed until I stand before him and say:

Accused of Being a Jailbird.

"'Mister, I can milk a cow, chop wood, mow weeds or hoe in the garden. If you will give me supper and lodging on the haymow, I will work an hour at anything you wish.'

"'When did you get out of jail?' he asks.

"'I have never been in jail.'

"'But you look like the durned skunk who stole a pitchfork from me last year.'

"'Last year I was in California.'

"'Want to set my barn afire with your old pipe, do you?'

"'I don't smoke.'

"He stands and thinks for a moment and then grudgingly tells me to take a seat on the kitchen doorsteps. The wife brings me out a stingy supper. There's an abundance on the table, and part of it will go to the hogs, but she cuts me short, thinking to get ahead of me. I have cleared my plate in ten minutes, and then I am set to work and buckle in until too dark to see longer. My bed is on the hay, and twice during the night the farmer comes out to see if I haven't stolen the shingles off the roof. In the morning if I want a meager breakfast I must put in a good hour's work for it. That means an hour and a half, and when I thank the farmer for his generosity and get ready to go on he says:

"'Goin', eh? Well, that's the way with you durned critters. I've filled you up and lodged you, and now you want to play the sneak on me.'

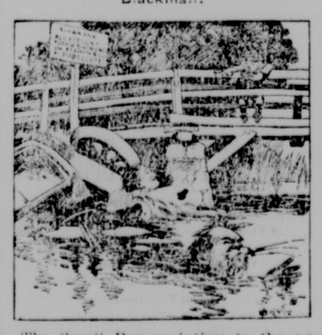
"My friend, don't look for much sentiment in humanity these days and don't look for a bit of it out in the country. You won't find it. The farmer can't afford it. He has been beaten by sharpers, squeezed by trusts until he has cash in every one. He has butternuts, but it's for sale, and before selling it to you he wants a certificate that you have never stolen a haystack or run away with a field of buckwheat. M. QUAD.

Ma's Objection.

"Mamma, have you any objection to my going to the woman's club?"

"But, my dear, you don't need it yet. Wait until you are married."—New York Life.

Blackmail!



The Small Boy (pointing to the notice board)—Give us a 'apenny, guv'ner, an' I won't tell on yer.—Sketch.

Hash.

The turkey now we finish
In manner to abash;
With philosophic musing
We meditate on hash.

It is the final windup
Of dynasties that crash.
Of Caesar's mighty eagles
What now remains but hash?

When great opposing nations
In mortal combat clash
The sated world discovers
The dove of peace is hash.

—McLandburgh Wilson in Woman's Home Companion.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money which waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest. Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, President
T. M. STANTON, Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, T. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent

is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

☞ For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agent and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m, and 7.30 p. m

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9.15 a. m.
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.
Preaching at Crellin next Sunday at 3 p. m.
Hutton—Preaching at 8 p. m. October 1st.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Ferndale—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Mt. Lake Park—Class meeting at 1 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m., Sunday school at 2.30 p. m., Epworth League 7 p. m.
Deer Park—Sunday school 10 a m., Epworth League at 6.30 p. m.; preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Wesley Chapel—Sunday school at 10 a. m., and preaching at 3 p. m.
All are cordially invited to attend.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Mrs. Harter and daughter are spending a week with Mr. Harter at the Crawford hotel.

Grandma Mitchell returned home last Thursday after a month's visit with friends at Uniontown, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, of Connellsville, Pa., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Frazee.

Misses Katheryn, Evelyn and Mary Putnam McCandlish returned to their home in Piedmont, W. Va., after a two weeks' visit to Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McCandlish.

Mrs. Jaynes, of Fairmont, W. Va., has been visiting at the home of Mr. W. W. Savage.

Mr. Harry Wolf, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever, is on the streets again.

Mr. John W. McCullough has returned to his home after quite an extended business trip to his various interests.

Mrs. James Giffin and family left out town to spend the winter with Mr. Giffin, at Beamus, W. Va.

FIKE.

The dry weather still continues in this section.

The public school started at this place with an enrollment of eighteen pupils.

The second frost this season in this vicinity was seen on last Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Wm. R. Barnthouse made a trip to Tissue, Pa., to visit her daughter at that place.

Mr. Geo. W. Fike took a couple loads of apples to the cider mill one day last week.

Elder Jasper Barnthouse, of Uniontown, was in this section a few days last week.

On last Saturday evening at 7 p. m., a very quiet and pretty wedding took place in this section. The contracting parties were Mr. Ezra Fike and Miss Mary Lowery. Rev. Geo. W. Vansickle performed the ceremony, after which the guests partook of supper, which was most excellent.

Wm. H. Thomas made a trip to Markleysburg, Pa., on last Thursday.

Elder Jasper Barnthouse preached at this place on last Wednesday evening. The sermon was an excellent one, his text being St. John, 1:11-12, "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on His name." He confined his sermon especially to the last clause of the text.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85.000.000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

"BRYAN CAN DO NO HARM."

A Frequent Statement That Will Not Bear Analysis.

The apologetic Democrat who wants to remain regular and who has swallowed Bryanism takes care to repeat as often as he is accused of inconsistency that Mr. Bryan can do no harm even if he is elected. It is time that this statement was met and smashed. Mr. Bryan if elected could and would do a great deal of harm in so many ways that it is almost impossible to enumerate them. In the first place, he would have an opportunity during his term to pack the supreme court, and no one doubts that he would so pack it that the confidence of the American people in its greatest institution would be lost or severely shattered.

Mr. Bryan would appoint a cabinet from his friends and not from his enemies, and it must be admitted that the best men in the Democratic party are not close friends of Mr. Bryan. He would appoint judges and district attorneys throughout the country who would carry out his designs as far as possible, but the greatest harm of all that could come upon the people through the election of Mr. Bryan would be the loss of confidence in business circles and the probable stagnation that would come over the country and remain for four years at least.

There is no measuring this blight that would come to our nation through the election of William J. Bryan. We endured it from 1893 to 1896 under a Democratic president of far sounder views and much more stable character than the present Democratic candidate for president. Mr. Bryan as a weather vane would be a great success, but as a president he would not only be a failure, but failures would come to every American institution and every American industrial center.

A "tariff for revenue only" means a general reduction of wages. There is no possible alternative.

REASON FOR CONVERSION.

Why the Baltimore Sun Decided to Support Taft.

[From the Baltimore Sun, Dem.]

It is our deliberate judgment that for the next four years the material interests of the people of this country would be safer with Mr. Taft at the head of the national government than with Mr. Bryan. We further believe that, while lawbreakers would be brought to account by Mr. Taft with as little fear or favor as Mr. Bryan could display, the methods employed by Mr. Taft would not curtail the workingman's opportunities for employment by disturbing the business of law abiding men and corporations as has been witnessed in the last few years.

Mr. Taft's experience in important administrative posts, his judicial temperament, his patience and thoroughness in investigation, justify the belief that as president he would execute the law faithfully and well, but not spectacularly. And, while this type of man ought to be in the White House all the time, he seems to be especially needed now, when the country is emerging from an industrial and financial depression which brought distress and suffering into many homes.

No weather vane for president. Our chief magistrate should have settled views, sound principles and honest methods.

Imagine It!

In commenting on the appeal made by Mr. Bryan to the farmers asking them to contribute to his campaign fund and to send their contributions to his personal newspaper office the New York Sun caustically asks its readers to imagine if they can "James Buchanan or Stephen A. Douglas or John C. Breckinridge or General McClellan or Horatio Seymour or General Hancock or any other Democratic candidate for the presidency save and except William Jennings Bryan demanding money from the farmers of the United States in order to put him in the White House?"

Mr. Bryan is reported as already planning what he will do when he is elected president. Mr. Bryan's ability to dream without the aid of narcotics is one of his most enviable characteristics.

Measures Up to Requirements.

Mr. Sherman says much in little space in his speech formally accepting the Republican nomination for vice president and says it admirably. The New Yorker on the Republican national ticket measures up to the requirements of his post and shows the qualities of an experienced and responsible public man in his acceptance address. —New York Mail.

Does any one doubt that Lincoln would support Taft in preference to Bryan?

The Democratic convention made a collective fool of itself by pledging the passage of a law forbidding contributions by corporations, a law which the last Republican congress passed.—Philadelphia North American.

Mr. Kern's record far outshines that of Mr. Bryan, since the latter was once elected to an office to which he was nominated—representative in congress—while the former's proud catalogue of repeated defeats is dimmed by no stain or blemish.

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

FACTS

¶ The news items of the home community.
¶ The things in which you are most interested.
¶ The births, weddings, deaths of the people you know.
¶ The social affairs of our own and surrounding towns.

These are the kind of facts this paper gives you in every issue. They are certainly worth the subscription price.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C. & P. Telephone Comp'y

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO., OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 21, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Oct. 13th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals will be received by W. McCulloh Brown, Secretary of the Court House Commission of Garrett county, Maryland, until noon of

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1908,

FOR THE FURNISHING OF SAID COURT HOUSE.

The Bench, Tables and Chairs for the Court Room, Orphans' Court and County Commissioners Office and such Metal Cases as may be required.

A copy of the specifications may be seen at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland or a list of articles may be obtained by applying to the Secretary.

At the same time and place the Commission will receive PROPOSALS FOR GAS AND ELECTRICAL FITTINGS.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to accept part and reject the remainder.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Chairman.
W. McCULLOH BROWN, Secretary.
Sep 24-3

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

THOMAS DAVIS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1908.

BRADLEY T. DAVIS,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."
Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.
Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.
THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $60 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for parculars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21st day of September, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by Land Title and Trust Company, of Philadelphia, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 23d day of October, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $21,000.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

NOTICE OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS, FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 8, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election District of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, September 29,
Tuesday, October 6,
and on Tuesday, October 13,
for revision only

(No one can Register after Tuesday, October 6.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all others duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration of the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election Distiet Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Martin Storeroom corner Third and Oak Streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration of the Ninth Electi n District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Charles R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of G. W. Engle in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the West building, Alder street in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM TURNER,
JOHN A. WRIGHT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

JASPER GUARD,
WALTER G. MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

DANIEL W. DORSEY,
ELISHA B. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

STEPHEN F. BROADWATER,
HENRY BARNARD,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

ADAM J. EICHTER,
CONRAD SPIKER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

W. H. BAPTLETT,
GEORGE D. WHITE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
RICHARD McKENZIE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

SEBASTIAN HINEBAUGH,
BENJAMIN F. THRASHER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH BROADWATER,
HUGH McMILLAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

O. C. BUCKLE,
URNER BEACHY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

LEWIS C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

JOHN O. THAYER,
BERT C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

D. M. MASON,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisiors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Coal Property
AND
Mining Rights

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph W. Thompson and wife to the undersigned, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1908, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 55, folio 418, &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due, the undersigned, in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage mentioned, will on

THURSDAY,
the 1st Day of October, 1908

at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, at 11 o'clock a. m., sell at public auction all of the coal mining all that tract of land known as the Thompson and Hilleary farm, situate, lying and being in Ryans Glade, Garrett County, Maryland, the same being a part of the tract of land called

FERTILE MEADS,

and also including certain other lands which have been claimed, occupied and held in peaceable possession for more than twenty years; the whole

Containing About 931 Acres,

and is fully described in a deed executed by Sophronia E. Hilleary and others to the said Joseph W. Thompson, bearing date the 14th day of March, 1908, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. 50, folio 415, one of the Land Records of said Garrett County, to which deed reference is hereby made for a description of the land under which the coal hereby to be sold lies.

Said property is supposed to consist of

Three Veins of Coal,

ranging from four to six feet in thickness, and adjoins the coal property of the Stoyer Run Coal Company, and is in easy access to the Western Maryland Railroad, and the same offers a rare opportunity to any one desiring to invest in coal property. The property can be inspected by persons contemplating bidding on same and a map of the premises can be seen by calling on the undersigned. The property is undeveloped and will therefore be sold without warranty as to contents or quality.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

CHARLES E. HILLEARY,
Mortgagee.

SHERIFF'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md., the same being No. 16 Judicials to September Term, 1908, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of John Feity against Elizabeth Smith, I did sieze and take in execution all that lot or parcel of ground known as

Military Lot No. 1065,

being the same lot described in a deed for the same from John A. Williams and wife to the said Elizabeth Smith dated the 20th day of April, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 46, folio 588, one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, and I hereby give notice that I will on

SATURDAY,
the 26th Day of September,

1908, at the hour of two o'clock p. m., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Md., offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder all the real estate described in said deed above referred to. Said land lies in District No. 10.

Said land will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
In Mountain Lake Park,
Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in two mortgages from Annie L. Felty and Henry E. Felty to George W. Clauson, one dated March 14th, 1903, and one dated August 2nd, 1905, the first of which is recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, in Liber No. 46, folio 382, and the other is recorded among said Mortgage Records in Liber Number 51, folio 134, default having been made in both of said mortgages the undersigned as attorney named in said mortgages, in execution of the power of sale in said mortgages mentioned, will on Saturday, October 10th,

1908, at 10 o'clock a. m., offer at public sale at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following property to wit:

FIRST—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, in Garrett County aforesaid, known as

LOT NO. 909,

on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, and fronting on H street, and more particularly described in the deed for the same from John Felty, Jr., and wife to Annie E. Felty dated March 4th, 1903, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid.

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building, with Storeroom and Warerooms on the First Floor and Dwelling above, and is near the Auditorium at the Park.

SECOND—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, Garrett County, Maryland, known and described as

LOT NUMBER 911,

on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, which said plat is recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, said property being known by the general name of

"HIGHLAND HALL,"

and being the same property which was conveyed to Annie L. Felty by Robert R. Henderson and A. J. Willison by deed dated August 8th, 1902, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid, in Liber Number 42, folio 585.

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building called the 'Queenwood Hotel' and is now occupied and run as a hotel and has been for several years. It is a large commodious building.

Both of these properties are comparatively new and are in the most desirable and thickly populated part of Mountain Lake Park, and are in good repair.

TERMS—Cash on day of sale.

D. J. BLACKISTON,
Attorney named in Mortgage.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Christian J. Yoder and Amanda Yoder, his wife, to the undersigned bearing date the 29th day of December, 1894, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folio 81, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, default having been made under the same by said mortgagors by failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due and the interest thereon, the undersigned hereby gives notice that on

THURSDAY,
the 15th Day of October, 1908

at 2 o'clock p. m., on the premises, he will sell at public auction the following described real estate and improvements:

All that piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, beginning for the same at a stone standing on the west side of the County Road leading from Grantsville to the Pennsylvania Line, and running thence N. 15 degrees E. 51 rods, N. 85 degrees W. 126 rods and 11 links, S. 9 degrees W. 41½ rods, S. 81 degrees E. 121 rods and 9 links to the beginning, containing thirty-six acres and seventy-one perches, and being the same property that was conveyed to the said Christian J. Yoder and wife by the said Jacob S. Miller on the 30th day of June, 1894, and to secure the purchase money therefor the above mortgage was given.

Said property is improved by a Good Dwelling House and Barn and other Out-Buildings; also by an Orchard of good fruit; about all of it is under cultivation and would make a desirable home to anyone needing a small farm.

The same is situated about three-fourths of a mile North of Grantsville on what is known as the lower Salisbury road.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof.

Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser.

JACOB S. MILLER,
Mortgagee.

Fine Toilet Articles!

Soaps, Sponges, Bath Brushes, Tooth and Hair Brushes, Toilet Water and Powder, Shaving Goods and Sundries generally, you will find here, with the qualities high and the prices low at all times.

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1908. NUMBER 31

WARNICKS ARE HELD ON CHARGE OF MURDER

In Connection With the Death of Ashford T. Broadwater.

CORONER'S JURY GAVE VERDICT

Last Thursday In Which They Determined That George Warnick and His Son Lester Were Responsible For the Death of Their Relative.

As stated in THE REPUBLICAN last Thursday Coroner Andrew B. Gonder, accompanied by Sheriff Brown and State's Attorney Julius C. Renninger went to Bond that morning, where they conducted an inquest on the body of Ashford T. Broadwater, whose death resulted on Wednesday from an assault made upon him by George Warnick, on the Monday previous at Bond Junction on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

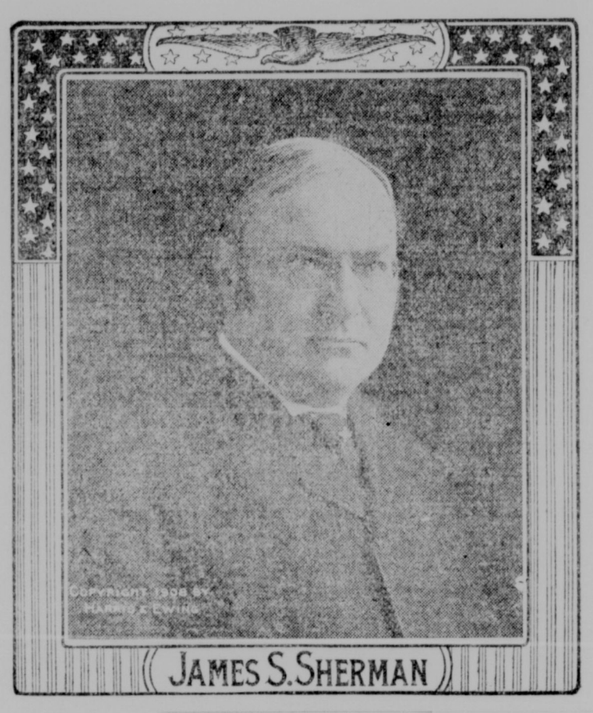
The coroner's jury was summoned by Sheriff Brown with Mr. N. U. Bond as foreman. A large number of witnesses were examined and the jury rendered its verdict in accord with the evidence that Broadwater came to his death by being feloniously assaulted by George and Lester Warnick on September 21st.

The two men implicated in the affair, whose arrest followed the day afterward, have been in jail ever since and are being held there without bond for their appearance at the December term of the Circuit Court.

In the melee which resulted in the death of Broadwater, Donald Simpson, of near Bond, and William Warnick, another son of George Warnick, also became engaged in a fight in which Simpson was pretty badly used up. Simpson, it is alleged by those claiming to be acquainted with the facts, is more or less responsible for the trouble between the dead man and the Warnicks. William Warnick was arrested on Wednesday last and brought to Oakland where he was placed in jail on warrant connecting him with the death of Broadwater but as no evidence was produced against him before the coroner's jury he was released on the charge but again arrested charged with assaulting Simpson. On this charge Warnick was given a hearing before Justice Gonder Friday and released on bond in the sum of $300 for his appearance at the Circuit Court in December.

Broadwater and George Warnick were brothers-in-law. Since the death of the former and incarceration of the latter the cause of the trouble between the two men has been a matter of speculation in the minds of many, the probable cause, however, being a dispute which arose between the two men over some land matters.

Wm H. TAFT



JAMES S. SHERMAN

KNOCK FROM BRIDGE FATAL

George C. Pierce, Young B & O. Brakeman Succumbs to Injury.

George C. Pierce, twenty-three years old, Baltimore and Ohio brakeman, who was knocked from his train by striking a girder of the overhead bridge, Washington street, Cumberland, Saturday night, died at the Allegany Hospital in Cumberland Monday afternoon. He sustained a scalp wound ten inches long, but the injury which caused death was to the brain. Two operations were performed. His mother and his half-brother, Mr. Philip Gough, of Mt. Lake Park, were with him when he did. The body was taken in charge by G. S. Butler, undertaker, and was sent to Rowlesburg, W. Va., the dead man's home, on B. & O. train No. 3, Tuesday morning.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

PROHIBITIONISTS NAME A GARRETT COUNTIAN

As Their Candidate For Congress From The Sixth District.

HARVEY N. CUPPETT, MERCHANT.

Of Mountain Lake Park, the Nominee —Was Selected At the Convention Held in Frostburg Tuesday Afternoon.

At the Prohibition Congressional convention held at Frostburg on Tuesday of this week Mr. Harvey N. Cuppett, of Mountain Lake Park, was nominated as the standard bearer of the party for Congress from this Congressional District.

Last fall Mr. Cuppett was one of the candidates for House of Delegates on the Prohibition ticket in this county and polled a larger vote than any of his colleagues.

He is a prominent merchant at Mountain Lake Park and it is understood he will make an active canvass throughout the district.

BITTINGER.

The long continued drought was broken last Monday when rain fell in this section during the greater part of the day.

Senator Lewis, of Allegany county, Democratic candidate for Congress, and Attorney G. Semmes Hamill, of Oakland, passed through this village last Monday enroute to Grantsville where they were to address a Democratic mass-meeting.

Noah Stark is driving about in his handsome new buggy and he smiles at the young ladies with a smile that seems to say, "this buggy was built for two."

Mrs. Sallie Ralston sold her real estate to George Yommer last week and after disposing of her personal property will remove with her family to Keyser, W. Va.

Messrs. DeWitt and Mattingly were here last week buying lambs and took out a considerable number at $4.50 per cwt.

Dr. H. R. Boyer, of Accident, was making business calls in this section last Saturday.

A quantity of dynamite which was stored in Dennis Detrick's hen-house was mysteriously exploded on last Friday morning, totally demolishing the building and badly frightening the family who were near by at the time, but all of whom escaped uninjured.

T. H. Bittinger, of Grantsville, was calling here last Sunday.

Purchased Restaurant.

Mr. W. V. Fairall, who for a year or more has been in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway in various capacities, his last being assistant agent in Oakland, purchased the Morrison Restaurant located on Railroad street last Friday and will in a few days take personal charge of the business.

FOR RENT.—The Rectory on Alder street; house contains 14 rooms; stable and other outbuildings on the property. Apply to BOWIE JOHNSON, Oakland. 3t

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

TO MEET AGAIN AT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Central Conference of the Y. W. C. A. To Assemble There

FOR A SESSION OF TWO WEEKS

Beginning June 25th and Closing On July 4th—About Four Hundred Delegates Will Be Present From Different States.

Dr. W. W. Davis, Superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association, was in receipt of a letter yesterday stating that at a meeting of the advisory committee of the Young Woman's Christian Association it was decided to hold the East Central Conference for 1909 at Mountain Lake Park, beginning on June 25th and closing July 4th.

This conference will bring to the Park about four hundred delegates from different east central states and will be similar to the conference conducted at the Park the closing week of August and the first week in September of this year.

To the Fruit Growers of Garrett Co.

Through the kindness of the editor, I am allowed once more to call your attention to the State Horticultural Exhibit, which will be held in Baltimore December 1st, 1908, and to ask that you will aid in making the coming exhibit as successful for our county as that of 1906.

In Oakland on October 13th and 14th, the competition for county prizes, which I have offered, will be held in the old Townshend Store Building on Alder street, and any and all fruit sent for exhibit to me can be left with Mr. Arthur Townshend, (between October 10th to 13th) who has kindly offered to care for it.

The object of this competition is to learn as far as possible what variety of apples are most profitable for our county, and to encourage the raising of perfect fruit.

While picking apples lay aside your best, and compete for the prize.

The County Prizes are: For the best general collection of apples, consisting of not less than seven apples of one kind, and to include as many different kinds as possible—1st prize, $5; 2nd prize, $3.

For the best single plate of apples, consisting of not less than seven apples of one kind, fifteen prizes of $1 each are offered.

Pick and handle with great care, wrap each apple in paper and pack tightly in a box. Mark the name of the apple, and the grower's name upon each package. Perfection of fruit counts more than size.

W. MCCULLOH BROWN.
Vice-Pres. State Horticultural Society.
Oakland, Md., September 28.

Annual Conference of M. E. Church.

On Monday Dr. R. B. Ward, and Rev. J. B. Workman will leave Oakland on train No. 55 for Moundsville, West Va., where they go to attend the Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, convening there on Wednesday of next week. Rev. Workman is a candidate for secretary of the Conference and has hopes of being elected.

The Republican for Job Work.

GOV. HUGHES PASSED THROUGH

Oakland But Failed to Appear, Hence Crowd Was Disappointed.

Yesterday morning on the strength of a rumor that Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York, who was returning home from a speaking tour in the West, would pass through Oakland on a special train and would probably speak for a few minutes at the station, a large crowd of people assembled, including the scholars in the advanced grades of the public schools.

The train bearing Governor Hughes and his party was scheduled to arrive here at 11:15, but it was delayed west and did not get in until 11:40. Meanwhile the assembled crowd was in an expectant mood and when the train slowed down at the station the people were much disappointed when the signal was given to the engineer to go ahead, the train pulling out immediately and without Mr. Hughes making his appearance.

Ladies' Exchange.

Beginning on Saturday afternoon next at 2 o'clock and continuing each Saturday afternoon thereafter during the present month, the ladies of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will conduct an exchange at the furniture store of Mr. D. E. Bolden on Second street. Home-made bread, pies, cakes, confections and other articles will be on sale. The proceeds will be used for church and charitable purposes. A liberal patronage is solicited.

A MILLION FEET OF LUMBER BURNED

Messrs. Bond Bros. Yard Near Thomas Destroyed Sunday.

W RK REQUIRED TO SAVE MILL

Which Belongs to Messrs Albert Frazee and Austin Brown, of Garrett County—Operations Had Ceased With Advent of Dry Weather.

Fire on Sunday originating in the woods surrounding the saw mill belonging to Messrs. Albert Frazee, of Friendsville, and Sheriff Austin Brown of Oakland, and located on the timber tract of Messrs. N. U. and W. C. Bond, of Garrett county, destroyed a million feet of sawed lumber, the property of Messrs. Bond Bros., entailing a loss which was covered by insurance amounting to $20,000.

As above stated the fire started in the woods near the lumber plant, and owing to the extreme dryness of everything on account of the lack of rain, the flames steadily gained on the small army of men sent into the woods to fight it and arrest its progress. Sunday morning the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to stay it and very soon it had gotten into the immense piles of lumber stacked near the mill.

Mr. Brown was apprised of the danger by telephone and he at once went to the mill from Oakland and with the aid of the men who had been engaged in the fight against the progress of the fire it was kept out of the mill, although at times it was thought all would be burned.

On the lumber Messrs. Bond Bros. carried an insurance of $20,000, placed by the agency of Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, of Oakland.

Resolutions of Condolence.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to again enter the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School at Friendsville and take from our midst one of the lambs of the flock, in the person of the little son of Dr. and Mrs. Greenwood; therefore be it

Resolved, That we as a School extend to the bereaved parents our most tender sympathies. Though their hearts are bruised and broken, on account of the loss of their little Willie, yet we believe that heaven will be more dear to them as they remember that their little one is safe within the "Gates of Pearl."

Signed, MRS. J. C. BLACK,
MRS. ANNA ROSS,
MRS. D. A. FRIEND,
Committee.

Subscribe for The Republican.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO OFFER
FOR THE Next 10 Days

75c a bushel for Potatoes and Onions; $1.00 per hundred for Cabbage; 40c per bushel for large picked Apples, free from bruises; $2.50 bushel for Beans if nice and clean.

FLOUR We are now unloading two cars of Best grade of Spring Wheat Flour, (White Satin), which we offer to exchange for Buckwheat Flour.

Also one car White Middlings at $1.65 per hundred.

P. S.---Offer Sweet Potatoes at $1.80 per barrel.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

NEW FALL STOCK OF
WALK-OVER SHOES

Now in. Several of the most desirable styles. Come and see

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

FIGHTING FOREST FIRES

State Forester Beasley Warns His Men To Be On Alert.

Because of the drouth State Forester F. W. Beasley has sent notices to the various fire wardens of the State to be on the alert for forest fires. Notices and warnings to be posted on forest tree have also been furnished the wardens.

There have been only two forest fires in the State in September, and both were checked by the quick work of the forests wardens. Both occurred on September 18. At Gilpin, Allegany county, Warden H. S. Crumbine checked a fire that threatened a schoolhouse and a large wooded tract. The other fire was at Swallow Falls, Garrett county, and was extinguished by Forest Warden M. C. Browning. This fire threatened the State forest reserve.

While there are no exact rule for fighting forest fires, because each fire must be fought with methods best suited to the occasion, according to Mr. Beasley, yet he has formulated a set of general rules which are sent to wardens and owners of forests. They are as follows:

The best tools with which to fight a fire are the rake, hoe, shovel and ax.

A fire that could be put out by one man in 10 minutes, if left to spread, and under a high wind, may baffle the combined efforts of 100 men a few hours later. Therefore, get to the fire as soon as possible.

When a fire gets under headway in a dry, open woods it is best to go some little distance ahead to a road or stream and start a back fire. In backfiring, however, useless destruction should be avoided.

With all fires the night or early morning hours are the best time to work whenever any choice exists for nearly every forest fire dies down more or less during the cool of the night and then flare up again during the heat of the day.

A fire goes up a slope rapidly, pause at the crest of the hill, and is somewhat retarded in going down. Therefore, if possible, use the crest of the ridge and bottom as lines of attack.

Protect the valuable timber rather than the brush or waste.

Never leave a fire until it is out.

Young timber suffers more from a fire than old, mature timber.

A surface fire in open woods, though not dangerous, greatly damage young seedling trees.

Spring fires are damaging to the trees, for they are full of sap and can endure little heat.

Fall fire, owing to the ground being dry, usually runs deep, burning off the roots of trees and consuming all the vegetable material so valuable to the trees as a mulch or a fertilizer.

Of greater value than rules is the experience, activity and resourcefulness of the Forest Warden in whom great reliance is placed.

These rules, Mr. Beasley said, are the result of experience. While hoes and rakes are good things, a forked stick is sometimes better if the fire is so unaccommodating as to occur where there are no hoes and rakes. Also, he pointed out, where there are no roads or streams from which backfiring may be started, it is easy with a pronged stick to rake a wide path in the leaves and start the backfiring from the side of the path nearest the fire. It is necessary to have the path in the leaves wide enough to prevent the fire jumping across.

The money loss due to the destruction of timber and retarding the growth of future timber by fires is not the only consideration to occupy the study of foresters. While the money damage of the August fires in British Columbia, which cost many lives and swept out villages, was estimated at $5,000,000, the loss in other ways is incalculable. The New York Commissioner of Forests, Fish and Game, in a statement before the New York Legislature last winter, said that if the forests of the State of New York should be swept from the face of the State property would decrease in value 50 per cent. The total amount of milk, cream and butter produced in the State would shrink 50 per cent. He pointed out that the homes and breeding places of nearly every kind of bird would be destroyed and every obstruction to the rapid flow of water as it falls from the clouds would be swept away. In flood time the streams would be raging torrents, destroying property, bridges and buildings, and in torrid weather the creeks and rivers would soon run dry.

At present there are no indications of immediate relief from the drouth that spreads over almost the entire area of the nation. The Weather Bureau has predicted an area of low barometric pressure which will move across the country from west to from September 24 to the 28th.

As a rain usually accompanies "lows," it is hoped that the present one may not be a disappointment. Mr. Beasley, who has returned from a trip through the western part of the State, says the streams are so low that the railroads are hauling water in oil tanks for their engines.

Prof. Oliver C. Fassig, director of the local Weather Bureau, said yesterday that the drouth extends through practically all of the agricultural section of the country. The temperature has been far above normal in the Central States and the precipitation very small. The seasonal rainfall has been considerably below normal in New England, which has been visited by severe forest fires.

Professor Fassig said that conditions are favorable for forest fires in almost any section of the country. In some parts of Pennsylvania no rain has fallen in 10 weeks and rivers and canals are so low that much traffic has been stopped. Farmers are said to be experiencing inconvenience in watering their stock.

Modern Business.

If the business of the United States were limited to the buying and selling daily of what is needed for actual consumption, and if in each transaction the actual purchase money were paid down on the counter, our vast business would be astonishingly dwarfed, and commercially we would be transported back to the dark ages. But, fortunately, we have reached a time when, through an intelligent foresight into the course of business, we may buy up merchandise at low prices in anticipation of rises in the market, or we may take advantage of good prices today and escape the looses that would result from an expected decline in prices.

But this is called speculation, and although it is only putting in practice the wise maxim to provide in the present the possibilities of the future, it is denounced by those good people who are opposed to anybody but themselves making a profit in business. Of course, there are speculators who make mistakes of judgment and lose their money in transactions in futures. They should stick to the old plan of buying from hand to mouth, and of buying only when they have money for the purpose. Possibly they would make a living, but they would lose all the advantages of modern methods in business.

All the News Everything that happens in the home town; the births, marriages, deaths, the social affairs, the comings and goings of the people—your neighbors; the notes of the schools and churches; all these and many other new and interesting things this paper will give you All the Time

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

It is expected that the President will be at the White House by the time this letter is printed. The majority of the summer absentees have already returned. Postmaster General George Von L. Meyer returned to his home in Washington yesterday. He has spent part of the summer outing, hunting and fishing in the north, at the family's summer home in Hamilton, Mass. It was there Mrs. Meyer lost by burglary fifteen thousand dollars worth of jewelry. Mrs. Meyer and her daughter, who spent the early summer abroad, are not expected home until next month. The secretary of the treasury and Mrs. Cortelvou who have been spending the summer at Huntingdon, Long Island, are expected home next week. They have been living on a farm with all modern improvements, it is said, and their young family, of whom there are four, have had a very enjoyable time. Mrs. Robert McKee, the daughter of former President Benj. Harrison, and the mother of the once famous baby McKee, is expected to spend a portion of the coming season in Washington. She is now with old friends, the family of Senator Elkins, at Elkins, West Virginia.

All the arrangements for the opening of the Tuberculosis Congress on Monday the 21st, are well under way. The new National Museum will be the stage for the exhibition of the most up-to-date appliances for the prevention of the spread of consumption. When the hundreds of delegates from all parts of the world arrive, they will find the exhibits in a complete state of preparation. Every arrangement has been made for taking care of the delegates and for making the gathering as perfect as possible in the way of accommodations. A large dining room is being fitted up on the first floor of the Museum and it is planned to supply more than two thousand delegates daily with food. Washington has had a wide experienced with conventions. In many cases delegates and visitors have had difficulty in finding places to eat at a reasonable price. The restaurant accommodation of the city are not the best and when the city is overrun with visitors, many places put their prices up and try to rob the guests. Under the direction of Dr. Hickling a bureau of information has been established at the Union station and every delegate will receive instructions concerning car lines, hotels, and boarding houses. Interpreters speaking German, French, Italian and Spanish will be provided so that the foreign delegates will have little trouble in securing information.

There is universal sympathy in the city for the sad accident which befell Orville Wright and Lieutenant Selfridge, when they fell from the 75 foot elevation in Wright's aeroplane. During the past week thousands of people from the city and from other parts of the country have flocked in automobiles and in carriages to Fort Myer where the wonderful experiments that have filled the world with expectation have been made. Great as has been the advance in recent months, resulting in flying feats at which the world wondered, it is now clear that the experimental stage has not yet been passed. A test at the hands of so competent a flyer as Orville Wright who has broken all records, was no doubt as promising as human ingenuity could make it, but human ingenuity cannot prevent accident with wagon, automobile, or any machine and when that accidents happens in midair, it is necessarily more tragic and disastrous than on terra firma. Skeptics with reference to the success of flying machines are strengthened—and with reason—in their disbelief and the accident at Fort Myer has proven almost conclusively that it will never be possible to use airships for long voyages or for the transportation of passengers. The slightest accident will force the machine to the ground and even if the passengers escape accident, the machins may be miles from a point where it can be repaired. Mr. Thomas A. Edison in a recent interview given in Salt Lake City predicted that in five years or less airships will be carrying passengers across the ocean making the trip in a day at the rate of two hundred miles an hour. He also predicts that the North Pole can and will be reached in a forty hour trip by an airship. But imagine an airship or an aeroplane crossing the ocean when some mishap occurs such as is daily occuring with motor cars for example. Either it would be thrown in the deep, or, if it were able to maintain itself in the air, it would not be possible to move or to repair same. The experiments will go on. They have received too great an impetus to be arrested, but it is probable that the youngest child today will not live to see the airship, whether aeroplane or balloon, commercially successful.

Pumpkin Pie.

In the psychology of pie the pumpkin variety stands for old-fashioned common sense. In poetry it makes for rhyme, reason and verse that does not go lame in the feet. In memory it recalls the things that mother made. Apple may be the king of pies, as Nathaniel Hawthorne and some others have thought, but pumpkin is surely fit for the head of the cabinet.

"The pumpkin is very ancient," says one writer, thinking to be humorous, "for it dates back to Cinderella." This wise wit has another guess. There are the best reasons for believing that the American Indian cultivated our golded fruit of the trailing vine before the white man came over the sea. That the Indian did not know how to make the pumpkin into pie may account for many things unfortunate in his primeval state, and even for the decay of a noble race.

Pumpkin pie originated in New England. It was a youngter when New York first tasted and liked it. There is a whimsical slander abroad that Philadelphia did not get it till the centennial year. "A funny thing about it," says a Manhattan baker, "the Germans can't make 'em."

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

MR. TAFT DOES THINGS.

One Incident That Shows the Quality of the Man.

This incident affords perhaps as good an insight into the psychology of Mr. Taft as any that could be cited. It illustrates the way Mr. Taft does things, the way he works and the way he plays, for when he plays he plays as hard and zestfully as he works. With him the thing is to do it. Accomplishment is ever his aim. It happened while Mr. Taft was on the sea, bound for Manila to open the Philippine assembly. The narrator watched the proceedings at close range. Three men stood between decks on the steamship, away up in the eyes of the ship, and contemplated a hole ten feet above their heads. A narrow iron ladder led perpendicularly to the deck. The circumference of the hole seemed to approximate that of a sugar barrel. One of the men, Ambassador O'Brien, bound for Tokyo, was tall and spare, lean and sinewy. The second, Judge Thomas Burke of Seattle, was short and rotund. The third, Mr. Taft, was larger and heavier than the other two put together.

"It would be easier for the camel to go through the needle's eye, Mr. Secretary, than for you to get through that hole," bantered Judge Burke.

"I wouldn't like to try that climb, I'll confess," said the ambassador.

"Well, I don't know," rejoined the 285 pound secretary of war. "It looks like a tough proposition."

For a moment the three turned aside to examine something to which their attention was directed. Unregarded, Mr. Taft stepped to the foot of the ladder and observed it contemplatively. One might have deduced from his manner that his thoughts ran something like this: "That's a hard climb, and that hole looks smaller than my body, but those fellows don't believe that I can climb up that ladder and get through the hole. I believe I can. I'm going to try it."

Before he was spied Mr. Taft had half scaled the ladder. Ambassador O'Brien and Judge Burke, despite their lesser weight, expressed in their faces an approximation of dismay when they saw what the secretary was about. "You'll never make it; better come back," advised the ambassador. "Look out the ladder doesn't break," cautioned Judge Burke. Round after round the secretary progressed until his body was halfway out of the hole. When the circumference of his girth came into conjunction with the circumference of the hole it was a toss-up for a minute which would win. But Mr. Taft proved that he had an elastic waist line, which won over the unyielding limits of the hole. But it was a struggle. He stuck to it grimly and doggedly. The lifting of 285 pounds of dead weight by the muscles of the arms is a task that would tax the strength of a far lighter man. A final heave and Mr. Taft hopped upon the deck as lightly as a boy. He was smiling all over. He had won. The passengers who had watched gave him a cheer. He would have stayed in the hole and fought it out for an hour rather than retreat. That is Taft.

NEGRO AND DEMOCRACY.

Would Be Suicidal For Colored Men to Vote For Bryan.

One of the greatest negroes this country has known, a leader of his race and the honored confidant of President Grant and Secretary Fish, recently said: "It would be suicidal for colored men to vote for Bryan. They have nothing to hope for from the Democratic party, which has disfranchised them in the south and which professes to regard them as unfit for the ballot anywhere. The only chance for the negro is with the Republican party, and it will be a sad day for the negro when a Republican president will be elected without the votes of negroes having helped to place him in power."

In view of the fact that Bryan himself has approved negro disfranchisement in the south there can be no doubt of his attitude should he be elected to the presidency, while the southern Democrats would regard northern negro votes for their candidates as an indorsement by the negro race of southern treatment of the negro.

It is impossible to believe that any negro who has studied intelligently the history of his race will go into the voting booth and cast a ballot in favor of Bryan and against Taft and Sherman, the Republican candidates—the candidates of the party which opened the door of hope to the colored man, which gave him the ballot and safeguards him in its use in every state in which Republicans rule.

Democracy Divided.

Thomas L. Hisgen, Hearst candidate for the presidency, looks for the election of Taft and then a new alignment of political parties. Mr. Hisgen says:

"The Democratic party is dividing. The radical and the more conservative elements can pull together only a little while longer. After Bryan is defeated for a third time there is bound to be a new alignment of the people, and the Democratic party will disintegrate. The Republicans will get some of those former Democrats, and the Independence league will get more of them. The campaign of 1912 will be fought out by a different set of political parties from those now in the field."

Bryan's great handicap in running for the presidency is that he cannot run away from his record.

The wind bloweth where it listeth. So does William Jennings Bryan. It is a way they both have.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.57 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *1.17 p. m. *8.20 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *2.33 p. m., *10.20 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *5.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *2.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.25 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *8.20 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Real Estate Bought and Sold.

Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 40 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

Executrix's Notice.

This is to give notice that the subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas J. Lowdermilk, late of Garrett County, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof duly authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 20th day of Aug., 1908. They may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 20th day of February, 1908.

LOUISA A. LOWDERMILK,
Executrix.
McHenry, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM HACHMAN,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 26th day of May, 1908.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
SAMUEL MOSER,
Administrators.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and wnen ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

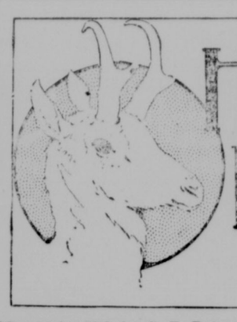
They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber AND Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Departm't
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.



HUNTING THE PRONG BUCK

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ON the wide plains where the prong-buck dwells the hunter must sometimes face thirst, as well as fire and frost. The only time I ever really suffered from thirst was while hunting prong-buck.

It was late in the summer. I was with the ranch wagon on the way to join a round-up, and as we were out of meat I started for a day's hunt.

After two or three hours' ride, up winding coulies, and through the scorched desolation of patches of Bad Lands, I reached the rolling prairie. The heat and drought had long burned the short grass dull brown; the bottoms of what had been pools were covered with hard, dry, cracked earth. The day was cloudless, and the heat oppressive. There were many antelope, but I got only one shot, breaking a buck's leg; and though I followed it for a couple of hours I could not overtake it. By this time it was late in the afternoon, and I was far away from the river; so I pushed for a creek, in the bed of which I had always found pools of water, especially towards the head, as is usual with plains watercourses. To my chagrin, however, they all proved to be dry; and though I rode up the creek bed toward the head, carefully searching for any sign of water, night closed on me before I found any. For two or three hours I stumbled on, leading my horse, in my fruitless search; then a tumble over a cut bank in the dark warned me that I might as well stay where I was for the rest of the warm night. Accordingly I unsaddled the horse, and tied him to a sage brush; after awhile he began to feed on the dewy grass. At first I was too thirsty to sleep. Finally I fell into a sumber, and when I awoke at dawn I felt no thirst. For an hour or two more I continued my search for water in the creek bed; then abandoned it and rode straight for the river. By the time we reached it my thirst had come back with redoubled force, my mouth was parched, and the horse was in quite as bad a plight; we rushed down to the brink, and it seemed as if we could neither of us ever drink our fill of the tepid, rather muddy water. Of course this experience was merely unpleasant; thirst is not a source of real danger in the plains country proper, whereas in the hideous deserts that extend from southern Idaho through Utah and Nevada to Arizona, it ever menaces with death the hunter and explorer.

In the plains the weather is apt to be in extremes; the heat is tropical, the cold arctic, and the droughts are relieved by furious floods. These are generally more severe and lasting in the spring, after the melting of the snow; and fierce local freshets follow the occasional cloudbursts. The large rivers then become wholly impassable, and even the smaller are formidable obstacles. It is not easy to get cattle across a swollen stream, where the current runs like a turbid mill-race over the bed of shifting quicksand. Once five of us took a thousand head of trail steers across the Little Missouri when the river was up, and it was no light task. The muddy current was boiling past the banks covered with driftwood and foul yellow froth, and the frightened cattle shrank from entering it. At last, by hard riding, with much loud shouting and swinging of ropes, we got the leaders in, and the whole herd followed. After them we went in our turn, the horses swimming at one moment, and the next staggering and floundering through the quicksand. I was riding my pet cutting horse, Muley, which has the provoking habit of making great bounds where the water is just not deep enough for swimming; once he almost unseated me. Some of the cattle were caught by the currents and rolled over and over; most of these we were able, with the help of our ropes, to put on their feet again; only one was drowned, or rather choked in a quicksand. Many swam down stream, and in consequence struck a difficult landing, where the river ran under a cut bank; these we had to haul out with our ropes.

Although I have often had a horse down in quicksand or in crossing a swollen river, and have had to work hard to save him, I have never myself lost one under such circumstances. Yet once I saw the horse of one of my men drown under him directly in front of the ranch house, while he was trying to cross the river. This was in early spring, soon after the ice had broken.

When making long wagon trips over the great plains, antelope often offer the only source of meat supply, save for occasional water fowl, sage fowl, and prairie fowl—the sharp-tailed prairie fowl, be it understood. This is the characteristic grouse of the cattle country; the true prairie fowl is a bird of the farming land farther east.

Towards the end of the summer of '92 I found it necessary to travel from my ranch to the Black Hills, some two hundred miles south. The ranch wagon went with me, driven by an all-round plainsman, a man of iron nerves and varied past, the sheriff of our county. He was an old friend of mine; at one time I had served as deputy-sheriff for the northern end of the county. In the wagon we carried our food and camp kit, and our three rolls of bedding, each wrapped in a thick, nearly waterproof canvas sheet; we had a tent, but we never needed it. The load being light, the wagon was drawn by but a span of horses, a pair of wild runaways, tough, and good travellers. My foreman and I rode beside the wagon on our wiry, unkempt, unshod cattle-ponies. They carried us all day at a rack, pace, single-foot or slow lope, varied by rapid galloping when we made long circles after game; the trot, the favorite gait with eastern park-riders, is disliked by all peoples who have to do much of their life-work in the saddle.

The first day's ride was not attractive. The heat was intense and the dust stifling, as we had to drive some loose horses for the first few miles, and afterwards to ride up and down the sandy river bed, where the cattle had gathered, to look over some young steers we had put on the range the preceding spring. When we did camp it was by a pool of stagnant water, in a creek bottom, and the mosquitoes were a torment. Nevertheless, as evening fell, it was pleasant to climb a little knoll nearby and gaze at the rows of strangely colored buttes, grass-clad, or of bare earth and scoria, their soft reds and purples showing as through a haze, and their irregular outlines gradually losing their sharpness in the fading twilight.

My foreman and I usually rode far off to one side of the wagon, looking out for antelope. Of these we at first saw few, but they grew more plentiful as we journeyed onward, approaching a big, scantily wooded creek, where I had found the prong-horn abundant in previous seasons. They were very wary and watchful whether going singly or in small parties, and the lay of the land made it exceedingly difficult to get within range. The last time I had hunted in this neighborhood was in the fall, at the height of the rutting season. Prong-bucks, even more than other game, seem fairly maddened by erotic excitement. At the time of my former hunt they were in ceaseless motion; each master buck being incessantly occupied in herding his harem, and fighting would-be rivals, while single bucks chased single does as gray-hounds chase hares, or else, if no does were in sight, from sheer excitement ran to and fro as if crazy, racing at full speed in one direction, then halting, wheeling, and tearing back again just as hard as they could go.

At this time, however, the rut was still some weeks off, and all the bucks had to do was to feed and keep a look-out for enemies. Try my best, I could not get within less than four or five hundred yards, and though I took a number of shots at these, or even longer distances, I missed. If a man is out merely for a day's hunt, and has all the time he wishes, he will not scare the game and waste cartridges by shooting at such long ranges, preferring to spend half a day or more in patient waiting and careful stalking; but if he is traveling, and is therefore cramped for time, he must take his chances, even at the cost of burning a good deal of powder.

We got the leaders in and the whole herd followed.

I was finally helped to success by a characteristic freak of the game I was following. No other animals are as keen-sighted, or are normally as wary as prong-horns; but no others are so whimsical and odd in their behavior at times, or so subject to fits of the most stupid curiosity and panic. Late in the afternoon, on topping a rise I saw two good bucks racing off about three hundred yards to one side; I sprang to the ground, and fired three shots at them in vain, as they ran like quarter-horses until they disappeared over a slight swell. In a minute, however, back they came, suddenly appearing over the crest of the same swell, immediately in front of me, and, as I afterwards found by pacing, some three hundred and thirty yards away. They stood side by side facing me, and remained motionless, unheeding the crack of the Winchester; I aimed at the right-hand one, but a front shot of the kind, at such a distance, is rather difficult, and it was not until I fired for the fourth time that he sank back out of sight. I could not tell whether I had killed him, and took two shots at his mate, as the latter went off, but without effect. Running forward, I found the first one dead, the bullet having gone through him lengthwise; the other did not seem satisfied even yet, and kept hanging round in the distance for some minutes, looking at us.

I had thus bagged one prong-buck, as the net outcome of the expenditure of fourteen cartridges. This was certainly not good shooting; but neither was it as bad as it would seem to the man inexperienced in antelope hunting.

They stood side by side facing me, and remained motionless.

When fresh meat is urgently needed, and when time is too short, the hunter who is after antelope in an open flattish country must risk many long shots. In no other kind of hunting is there so much long-distance shooting.

Throwing the buck into the wagon we continued our journey across the prairie, no longer following any road, and before sunset jolted down towards the big creek for which we had been heading. There were many water-holes therein, and timber of considerable size; box alder and ash grew here and there in clumps and fringes, beside the serpentine curves of the nearly dry torrent bed, the growth being thickest under the shelter of the occasional low bluffs. We drove down to a heavily grassed bottom, near a deep, narrow pool, with, at one end, that rarest of luxuries in the plains country, a bubbling spring of pure, cold water. With plantiy of wood, delicious water, ample feed for the horses, and fresh meat we had every comfort and luxury incident to camp life in good weather. The bedding was tossed out on a smooth spot beside the wagon; the horses were watered and tethered to picket pins where the feed was best; water was fetched from the spring; a deep hole was dug for the fire, and the grass roundabout carefully burned off; and in a few moments the bread was baking in the Dutch oven, the potatoes were boiling, antelope steaks were sizzling in the frying-pan, and the kettle was ready for the tea. After supper, eaten with the relish known well to every hard-working and successful hunter, we sat for half an hour or so round the fire, and then turned in under the blankets and listened to the wailing of the coyotes until we fell sound asleep.

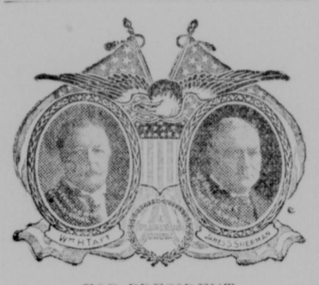
We determined to stay in this camp all day, so as to try and kill another prong-buck, as we would soon be past the good hunting grounds. I did not have to go far for my game next morning, for soon after breakfast, while sitting on my canvas bag cleaning my rifle, the sheriff suddenly called to me that a bunch of antelope were coming towards us. Sure enough there they were, four in number, rather over half a mile off, on the first bench of the prairie, two or three hundred yards back of the creek, leisurely feeding in our direction. In a minute or two they were out of sight, and I instantly ran along the creek towards them for a quarter of a mile, and then crawled up a short shallow coulie, close to the head of which they seemed likely to pass. When nearly at the end I cautiously raised my hatless head, peered through some straggling weeds, and at once saw the horns of the buck. He was a big fellow, about a hundred and twenty yards off; the others, a doe and two kids, were in front. As I lifted myself on my elbows he halted and turned his raised head towards me; the sunlight shone bright on his supple, vigorous body with its markings of sharply contrasted brown and white. I pulled trigger, and away he went; but I could see that his race was nearly run, and he fell after going a few hundred yards.

KODAK ◆◎ SAFETY ▲ FILM

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1908.



FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES!

The Republican voters of the various Election Districts of Garrett county, are hereby notified and urgently requested to meet in District Primaries at the usual places for holding primaries, on

Saturday, Oct. 3, 1908,

AT THE HOUR OF 2 O'CLOCK P. M.,

for the purpose of nominating by ballot two tax paying residents of each District for Road Supervisor of their respective Districts, said two names to be submitted to the Board of County Commissioners one of such nominees to be appointed Road Supervisor as provided in Section 246—G, of the Acts of 1908, which reads as follows:

"At the respective District primaries of the two dominant political parties of the State, held in each Election District next preceding the annual November election, the qualified voters of each of said parties, attending such party primaries, shall nominate by ballot two tax payers of their party whom they consider qualified to act as Road Supervisors for their district; and shall cause their names to be certified to by the Chairman and Secretary, or other officers of the primary in writing, and have the same forwarded to the Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett County, to be put upon file by him, for the use of the Board during the ensuing year."

By order of the Republican Central Committee for Garrett county.

A. G. STURGISS, Chairman.

"SHALL the people rule?" See the official records of the votes cast in 1896 and 1900.

IN REPLY to the Roosevelt letter, Bryan attacks the Roosevelt policies. And yet he claims to have originated most of them.

BRYAN has settled the bank deposit question in his own mind, but the question of the deposit of ballots in November still worries him.

AND this man Hearst, who is saying such mean things about Bryan, is the one whom the Nebraskan recently mentioned in a list of Democrats "fit to be President."

MR. BRYAN shows what an unconscious humorist he is when he tells Judge Taft, after the latter has been so long in the public service, to go and make a record for himself.

WHEN John B. Gough, the famous temperance lecturer, fell expiring on a platform 20 years ago, his last words were: "Young man, keep your record clean!" The utterance is recalled by the past week's political developments. The disastrous disclosures which have set the country in a ferment are altogether due to the fact that some men have not kept their records clean. And now their past has found them out.

BANKERS CONDEMN GUARANTY.

No more serious warning against the adoption the favorite Bryan proposal could be made than that resolution, that has been indorsed by the savings bank section of the American Bankers' Association. It registers "solemn protest against enaction into law by states or the nation of any principle so subversive of sound economics and so revolutionary in character." But such a declaration from the best qualified source has not a feather's weight with Bryan He looks upon bankers as loons and regards economics as the science of obscuration instead of illuminatlon of business procedure.

But while the Democratic nominee will be unneedful of the condemnation pronounced by the Bankers' Association, not so the American people. They fully realize the fact that the nonpartisan expert views of the financiers of the country, the men who know the business of banking from end to end, is of too serious moment to be set aside for the arguments of the aspiring politician. Nor does the fact that, while condemnthe bank guaranty, the bankers register their disapproval of the postal savings bank plan after the force of the expression against Bryan. The dissent from the postal savings bank proposition is upon the ground of lack of nectssity for its creation and not because of inherent defect. The postal sayings bank is sound to the core; it is a proposition that is businesslike from every angle of views. It does not incorporate a single element of vagary or experiment. The bankers naturally want to do all the banking of the country and are, therefore, slow to approve the government setting up postal banks. Their dissent, therefore, is not a serious factor in the situation. Their tacit approval of the soundness of such banks it all that the public can ask from them. If there were financial heresies in the postal savings bank, the bankers would denounce it as vigorously as they condemn bank guaranty.

Even Bryan has the postal savings banks, as he says, "in reserve"—an anchor to the windward that the financial institutions of the country may not get wholly adrift in case his experiments with the guarantee of bank deposits should prove a failure. No better tribute could be paid the proposition of the Republichn party for encouraging and safeguarding the deposits of the people who do not have ready access to savings banks.

BRYAN'S BILLS.

In his several speeches in Maryland, here, in Annapolis and Baltimore, Mr. Bryan gave special emphasis to the following striking passage:

"Now, about fourteen years ago, I introduced a bill into Congress providing for a guarantee fund to protect the depositors in failed banks. We had a bad bank failure in our town, and a number of poor people suffered very severe losses. Some one called my attention to the insecurity, and I introduced a bill in Congress, but I could not get the people to consider it then."

Right here lies the keynote of Mr. Bryan's character. There is nothing according to his way of thinking, that cannot be cured by a "bill." He has them on tap for any and every emergency. When a bank fails, while a hundred other men as wise as Mr. Bryan devote their thought to some plan of making bankers more honest and banks more secure without throwing their control and management upon the Government, Mr. Bryan solves the problem offhand by "introducing a bill."

If we could get good government either by bills or by declamation, Mr. Bryan would be the greatest statesman this country ever produced. He is prolific in both. Glance for a moment at the reforms in government for which Mr. Bryan—who is still a comparatively young man—has stood:

Free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

Government and State ownership of railroads.

Municipal ownership of public utilities.

To prevent the dupilication of directors among competing corporations.

Prohibition of any corporation controlling more than 50 per cent. of any product.

To require a corporation controlling 25 per cent. of the product in which it deals to take out a Federal license.

The initiative and referendum.

Compulsory arbitration of labor disputes.

Popular election of Federal judges.

Federal guarantee of bank deposits.

Self-government for the Philippines.

WILL THEY RETURN?

If William Jennings Bryan, still holding fast to the ruinous dogma of free silver, imagines that the patriotic sound money Democrats who opposed his candidacy in 1896 and 1900 will stultify themselves by supporting him this year, he is doomed to an overwhelming disappointment. His studied silence on the financial question will not deceive the independent members of his party who revolted against the Bryan menace of repudiation and dishonor twelve years ago. His policy is quite as hateful to them now as it was then. They remember that in nearly every one of his speeches in 1896 he insulted and sneered at them. As an example, take the following from his speech in Memphis, Tenn., on October 5 of that year:

"I want to tell you what I told others: That if you think the gold standard is absolutely necessary to the welfare of this country, you make a great mistake if you vote for me, because, if I can help it, the gold standard won't stay in this country for one moment."

Mr. Bryan has always insisted that there should not and could not be any compromise between those who opposed the gold standard and those who supported it. He is on record in scores of instances as denouncing its Democratic supporters as men "who want to use the party organization for private gain and their country for public plunder." He has notified the Democrats leaving their party because of his advocacy of free silver to "take their baggage with them and not expect to come back," and he has boasted that he does not know of a set of men he would rather lose than the gold Democrats.

Yet Mr. Bryan, in spite of his intolerant treatment of the sound money Democrats, appears to cherish the hope that they will compromise with conscience and vote for him this year. He forgets that their revolt in 1896 was inspired by devotion to a moral rather than a political principle. They took the position that questions affecting the national honor and the national credit were not legitimate subjects for partisan controversy, that no party can bind its members to support a policy which runs counter to their conscience, and that the integrity of party government implies the right of the individual to rebel against a party mandate when his own sense of duty requires him to do so.

There isn't a shred of evidence to show that Mr. Bryan's position on the coinage question has changed. There is every reason to believe that the attitude of the sound money Democrats remain absolutely unchanged. That the twice-defeated advocate of free silver, repudiation and dishonor should expect the support this year of the self-respecting Democrats who voted for his overthrow in 1896 and 1900, is simply another manifestation of his ridiculous notion that they are either cowards or fools.

SILAS McBEE FOR TAFT.

Regardless of past affiliations, students of affairs, delvers and thinkers, are fast lining up for Judge Taft. A recent example is that of Silas McBee, editor of the Churchman, of New York. In an interview he says:

"I am a North Carolinan by birth and a lifelong Democrat. I shall vote for Mr. Taft because he has it in his heart to bring my people of the South back into absolute union with the national life and to their historic place as a controlling force in the nation, and to do which would immortalize him as a statesman.

"I shall vote for him because he more nearly represents my ideals of government, of social order and economic policy that any living Democrat, or any man before the people today, save alone Theodore Roosevelt, who is the only Republican President I have ever voted for. Mr. Taft has administered every trust committed to him by the nation with an eye single to the nation's good and for the highest interests of the people that compose the nation."

MR. TAFT AS A COLONIAL ADMINISTRATOR.

During his last visit to Manila, Mr. Taft one day stood in his temporary office in Malacanan—the residence of the old Spanish governors to which the title "palace" in true Castilian grandiloquence used inappropriately to be applied—at the end of a long conversation with a caller. They had been discussing conditions in the Philippines. Gradually the talk, led by the visitor, merged into more personal matters. But the enthusiasm of the impersonal subject, of the earnest fires which the more than casual reference to the islands and their people invariably aroused in Mr. Taft, was still stirring his blood. He met a reference to his prospective candidacy for the presidency with a characteristic up-fling of the head, indicative of impatience:

"It isn't a question of what it means to me," said he; "think what it will mean to the Philippines, for I believe that it will be one of the best strokes of fortune that could befall the islands, if the people should see fit to make me President. How much more I could do for the islands if I were President! How much stronger and potent my efforts and influence in their behalf would be!"

To the listener it was an enlightening and impressive demonstration of how near to his heart Mr. Taft holds the welfare and the future of the 8,000,00 people whom we godfathered when Dewey forced the Dons to strike their castled banner over Manila in 1898, and the despotic hand which Spain had rested upon the Philippines for three centuries was thrust away. "I believe I have the missionary spirit," Mr. Taft told some of his friends before he sailed from the United States in 1900 to head the Philippine Commission. So he had. And as militantly, confidently and determinedly as had Philip II when he said, in reply to those who besought him to withdraw from the Philippines because of the cost of conquest: "For the conversion of only a single soul in the islands I would give up all the treasures of the Indies!"

But the spirit which animated Mr. Taft was not that of conquest, of profit, of seeking aggrandizement, either for himself or his country. He is a builder, a creator and uplifter of a down-trodden, illy-used people. On the question of relinquishing control of the islands he has pronounced no less certainty, but from motives vastly more altruistic, than did Philip III, when the proposal of non-retention of the islands was being debated in his court: "It shall not be said of me that I abandoned what my father conquered and left me!"

Compare this with Mr. Taft's ringing notice to the world at large, at a period when irresponsibles were agitating the anomalous proposition of "selling" the Philippines (to whom and by what license, one wonders?) that we would not either abandon the islands, or shuffle out of the obligation there which the fortunes of war brought to us unsought:

"The United States could not sell the islands to another power without the grossest violation of its obligation to the Philippine people. It must maintain a government of law and order and the protection of life, liberty and property itself, or fit the islands to do so and turn the government over to them. No other course is open to it."

In considering the gradual and continuous evolution of Mr. Taft's work in the Philippines into a whole that will ever stand for him as a surpassing monument of accomplishment one is struck by a contrast. Mr. Taft was in the beginning opposed to the taking of the Philippines and to their retention, both on grounds of conscience and political expediency. He did not believe in expansion in theory for the United States and especially that description of expansion comprehended in the retention and the shaping of the future of the islands. Our form of government and our political mutations, he believed, precluded our entering upon experiments in colonial government with any but the most remote chances of an emergency creditable to ourselves or profitable to any peoples who might become the objects of our fostering. But having been convinced that we must, as much in justice to the Filipinos as to our national credit, refrain from scuttling and educate, encourage and direct the people by instruction and example to a point where they should become fitted for self-government and independence for which they so ardently wished, he thrust his prejudices, theories and fears behind him. He became, as much as any single man may hold the relation to a nation, the savior of the Philippines and their inhabitants.

Prone as they were until recently to belittle our work in the islands and prophecy disastrous failures for the altruistic policy pursued by Mr. Taft, English colonial experts have been brought to grant the success and apparent permanency of his constructive work there since 1,00. Mr. Taft gave the Filipinos their popular Assembly. He did it against the advice of some of his associates who did not believe that the people were ready for even this limited extension of autonomous rights. But Mr. Taft knew. It mattered nothing to him that in less than a decade after we took the islands we were granting the Filipinos what the English were afraid to allow after more than a hundred years of suzerainty in England and thirty years control in Egypt. His study of the conditions in the Philippines and his exact knowledge of the people satisfied him that the Filipinos could be trusted. He had brought them to this pass by extending to the utmost that confidence, by providing them with those educational facilities, which the British studiously withheld from the natives in India and Egypt. He held that the practice of self-government, to quote one of his critics, is in itself a training in character and morals and that all peoples, after proper preparation, may reasonably be expected to profit by it.

The propriety with which the Philippine Assembly has conducted itself, the wisdom and temperateness of its official acts and the absence of extreme radicalism to which some feared it would lend itself, has amply vindicated Mr. Taft's judgment. His "policy of attraction" has puzzled and dismayed the English colonial authorities and bred in them doubts as to the wisdom and infallability of their own hitherto highly vaunted systems of colonial government.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m, and 7.3 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Sunday school at 2.15 p. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Deep Creek—Preaching at 7 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE AND DEER PARK M. E. CHARGE.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Mt. Lake Park—Class meeting at 10 a. m.; Sunday school at 2.30 p. m., Epworth League 6.30 p. m., preaching 7.30 p. m.
Deer Park—Sunday school 10 a. m., preachingat 3 p. m., Epworth League at 7 p. m.
Wesley Chapel—Sunday school at 9.30 a. m., and preaching at 10.30 a. m.
All are cordially invited to attend.

E. J. WESTFALL, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.
Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sunday at 7.30 p. m.
Hutton—Preaching at 8 p. m. October 8th.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

STOVES FOR SALE CHEAP—1 Southern Queen cook stove; 1 double heater hard coal; 2 open grate, either hard or soft coal. J. L. POLLOCK.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank
FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

Stop the coal-hod slavery!

Many a couple have had their home happiness wrecked by being yoked in slavery to a coal bucket—she in slavery to the uncleanliness and care of old-fashioned heating methods, and he in slavery to its ever-increasing bills. Often it is just this extra, needless expense and work that keeps them from getting on—getting a right start in domestic life.

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS for Hot Water or Low-Pressure Steam free you of this slavery. The outfit saves so much in coal and cleaning, in time and temper, that it soon pays for itself. The house is changed into a home, the family health is protected; and as the outfit will not rust out or wear out, you get your money back if you sell the property, or get 10% to 15% more rental. Don't put it off! Write or ask today for free book, "Heating Investments Successful."

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
OAKLAND, MD.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. V. JOLLIFFE.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnisdhe or unfurnished.

BIDS FOR WATER WORKS AND A SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, will be received until SEVEN O'CLOCK P. M., MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908, for the construction of a SYSTEM OF WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Plans and specifications and full information, for both water and sewerage, can be obtained upon application to the Clerk to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, or to Pennuman and Fairley, engineers, Baltimore, Md.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17—5t

SEALED PROPOSALS FOR MUNICIPAL BONDS.

$60,000 TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, BONDS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, until

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908,

for the purchase of SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FIVE PER CENT. WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE BONDS.

These bonds will be in denominations of $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year, and dated on the first day of their issue. They shall be numbered serially, and Bond No. 1 shall be due and payable two years from date of i , and thereafter each bond shall mature be payable each consecutive year from ate maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland to have the right to redeem any or all outstanding bonds twenty-five years from date of issue.

All of said bonus to be exempt from municipal and county taxation.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Address, Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17—5t

See The Republican for Job Printing

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$297,356 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured.		NONE
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers		3 2 66
Due from approved reserve agents.		48,061 10
Checks and other cash items		478 26
Notes of other National Banks		545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$19,881 95
Legal-tender notes	6,465 00	26,346 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$561,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid-in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	25,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,061 72
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,350 04
Due to State Banks and Bankers	80 54
Individual deposits subject to check	213,020 78
Time certificates of deposit	201,828 94
Cashier's checks outstanding	359 46
Total	$561,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.
HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
J. M. DAVIS,
Directors.

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Miss Cleo Krantz spent last Sunday with relatives in Cumberland.

Mrs. J. W. Laughlin and Mrs. Sallie Laughlin, of Deer Park, were Oakland visitors Tuesday.

Mr. C. McC. Lemley, of Morgantown, was in Oakland and vicinity a day or two this week on business.

Mr. John Felty of the Felty & West Lumber Company, went to Rowlesburg Tuesday morning on business.

Mrs. Harland L. Jones and little daughter spent Tuesday in Terra Alta where they were guests of relatives.

Mr. John H. Rafter, of Kitzmiller, was in Oakland this morning enroute to Clarksburg where he goes on business.

Mr. Harvey L. Speicher, of Accident spent a day or two last week in Baltimore where he disposed of several car loads of sheep and lambs.

Miss Anna Manges left Oakland Monday morning for York, Pa., where she expects to spend the winter instructing a class in elocution and oratory.

Mr. Charles Sweeney and son, of St. Louis, who spent a week in Oakland visiting relatives, returned home Monday morning.

Mrs. John Somerville, Sr., and Miss Alice Maillieu, of Lonaconing, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Creutzburg a few days recently.

Mr. John M. Crane, of Kingwood, spent Friday night in Oakland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Hyde at their home on Alder street.

Clerk to the County Commissoners A. G. Ross, who was kept at his home for upwards of two weeks suffering with an injury to his foot, is again at his office.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Humbird, of Cumberland, who spent the summer in Oakland as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Offutt, have returned to their home.

A very handsome clock has been placed in the Oakland school building, the time piece having been purchased by a few individuals and donated to the school.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Grant, whose marriage was noted in these columns last week, arrived in Oakland last Sunday evening and are at home to their friends at their residence on Liberty street.

At the Oakland public school a cadet corps has been organized and a requisition made upon the National Government for a sufficient number of rifles to equip the young soldiers.

Mr. R. A. Smith, of Blaine, one of the most successful coal operators along the line of the Western Maryland Railroad, spent a day or two in Oakland this week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harned have removed to Oakland from their farm near Hutton and are occupying rooms at the residence of Mrs. Wolfe on Third street.

A pheasant which was evidently bewildered, flew into the court room of the new court house in Oakland Monday morning and striking against the wall broke its neck.

Dr. W. W. Davis, of the Park, who returned from a few days' visit east, was in Oakland yesterday and will go from here next week to attend the West Virginian Conference at Moundsville.

All stockholders of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, who have not already done so, are requested to send their proxies, properly signed, to Mr. E. J. Fringer, secretary, at once.

Mr. A. W. Duty and daughter, who resided here for the past year, left this morning for Enterprise, W. Va., where they will spend the winter, expecting to return to Oakland April 1st of next year.

Messrs. Cal and William Crim, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and George Crim, of Pittsburgh, who came to Oakland to attend the funeral of their father, Mr. Joseph M. Crim, returned to their respective homes Tuesday.

Mr. W. O. Davis, who has been B. & O. station agent at Deer Park for the past several months, is on a few days' vacation at present, and will shortly return to Oakland where he will resume his position as assistant agent here.

At the American Bankers' Convention now in session at Denver, Col., Mr. W. T. Ravenscraft, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft, of Oakland, delivered the address of welcome to the visiting bankers on last Monday. Mr. Ravenscraft is one among the youngest bankers of the country and has been successfully conducting a large business in Denver for several years.

CAPITAL 50,0 0,00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

THE DEATH RECORD.

JOSEPH MARION CRIM.

The death of Mr. Joseph Marion Crim, which occurred at his home on Oak street in Oakland last Thursday afternoon, after an illness of less than a week, removed one of the oldest and best known residents of the community. On Friday, the 18th inst., the deceased was taken ill while on his way home from work on the Dodge church, north of Oakland, and was compelled to take his bed, Mr. Crim's ailment being hemorrhages. The attacks made such inroads on his vitality that no hopes were held out for his recovery, although everything was done for him. He was born in Frederick county, Va., February 24, 1824; removed from the place of his birth to Allegany county, Md., about the year 1857 or '58, and from thence came to Oakland in 1867. He married Miss Waltz while yet a resident of Allegany county and from this union eight children—four sons and four daughters—all yet living—were born. His wife died on July 2, 1896. Mr. Crim was a member of Shaeltiel Lodge No. 122, I. O. O. F., and of Oakland Lodge No. 85, Knights of Pythias, both organizations having disbanded many years ago. Mr. Crim's funeral was conducted on Saturday by Rev. J. B. Workman of St. Paul's M. E. church. A large number of the members of the present Knights of Pythias lodge were in attendanbe. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

WILLIAM FRUSH.

Mr. William Frush, for several years a resident of Garrett county, his home being the property on the Oakland-Mt. Lake Park road, formerly owned by J. A. Delawder, from whom Mr. Frush purchased it, died there last Sunday morning after a brief illness of heart disease, the deceased being upward of 75 years of age. Mr. Frush came to Garrett county from his former home at Brookside, W. Va., and was a model citizen. He leaves besides his wife, several children, all of whom are grown and residing in different sections of the country. His funeral took place on Tuesday, the interment being made at Aurora, W. Va.

JERRY SAVAGE.

Jerry Savage, a most highly respected citizen of this county, died at his home at Friendsville on Sunday morning, Aug. 2, at the age of 69 years, 6 months and 16 days. He is survived by his wife and the following children: Wesley, of Sand Spring; Thomas, of Gans, Pa.; David, and Katie, of White Rock; Phoebe Collins, of Crellin; Silas, of Somerfield, Pa.; May Keefer, of Sand Patch, Pa., and Frank, at home. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Wolfe of the M. E. church of Friendsville. The remains were laid to rest in the Blooming Rose cemetery where a large number of friends and relatives attended. A FRIEND.

Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder, of Oakland, who accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hilleary, of near Gorman, on a driving tour over the old Northwestern Turnpike through Greenland Gap to Petersburg, Va., returned to their home in Oakland yesterday afternoon

Messrs. Harry L. McComas and Will W. Grant left Oakland yesterday morning for Baltimore, where the former will enter Maryland University to prepare himself for the medical profession, while the latter will re-enter Maryland University to complete a course in dentistry.

Mrs. Swann, of Denver, Col., who spent several weeks in Oakland visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Furbee at their residence on Liberty street, left on train No. 3 Tuesday morning for her home, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Fred Furbee, who expects to remain in Denver until early in the spring.

Mr. C. W. Beamer and family who for the past year or two have been residents of Oakland, occupying the Leathers property opposite the school building, removed to Cumberland, their former home, yesterday. While residing in Oakland Mr. and Mrs. Beamer made many warm friends who will be sorry to learn of their departure.

Deputy Game Warden Charles Janoski, of District No. 8, was in Oakland yesterday in company with some witnesses to an alleged pollution of the Potomac river near Gorman, whereby a large number of fish were killed. Whether or not a warrant was issued for the arrest of the suspected parties we are not informed

Dr. W. W. Davis, of the Park, has been tendered and will probably accept the position of superintendent of the Gainesville (Fla.) Chautauqua which meets in February of next year for a session of two weeks. Mrs. Davis will accompany Dr. Davis to Florida and while in the south they will visit the St. Petersburg and Orlando Chautauquas, both of which will be under the superintendency of Dr. W. L. Davidson.

One of Mr. B. C. Feather's sorrel driving horses sustained such injuries by falling into an old walled spring near his residence a mile west of Oakland Sunday morning that it died shortly after being taken out. The combined efforts of a number of men and a block and rope were required to release the animal from its position. Mr. Feather had sold the pair of horses a few days prior for $400, hence his loss is considerable.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT OAKLAND,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$159,312 21
Overdrafts		13 38
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		5,540 00
Bonds, securities, etc		24,134 57
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		42,997 19
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		610 55
Due from State Banks and Bankers		68 37
Due from approved reserve agents		19,900 20
Checks and other cash items		1,730 35
Notes of other National Banks		375 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		131 22
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$18,006 95	18,006 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund		500 00
Total		$375,819 99

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	25,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	878 27
National Bank notes out standing	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	3,691 18
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	30 15
Dividends unpaid,	66 00
Individual deposits subject to check	71,306 00
Savings Department	122,845 77
Time certificates of deposit	1,274 95
Cashier's checks outstanding	727 67
United States deposits	50,000 00
Total	$375,819 99

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.
R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of September, 1908.
JAMES P. TREACY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: A. G. STURGISS,
F. A. THAYER,
E. H. SINCELL,
Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT FRIENDSVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$119,538 90
Overdrafts		332 78
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, securities, etc		66,018 54
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		6,098 51
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		7,060 83
Due from State Banks and Bankers		2,347 49
Due from approved reserve agents		11,163 49
Checks and other cash items		10
Notes of other National Banks		625 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		164 66
Lawful money reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$ 404 25
Legal-tender notes	7,199 00	7,603 25
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		1,250 00
Total		$248,937 92

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	25,851 87
Undivided profits	1,678 94
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to other National Banks	224 61
Individual deposits subject to check	72,835 64
Time certificates of deposit.	98,346 86
Total	$248,937 92

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.
R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.
ORVAL A. WELCH, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: L. E. FRIEND,
W. W. SAVAGE,
D. S. CUSTER,
Directors.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

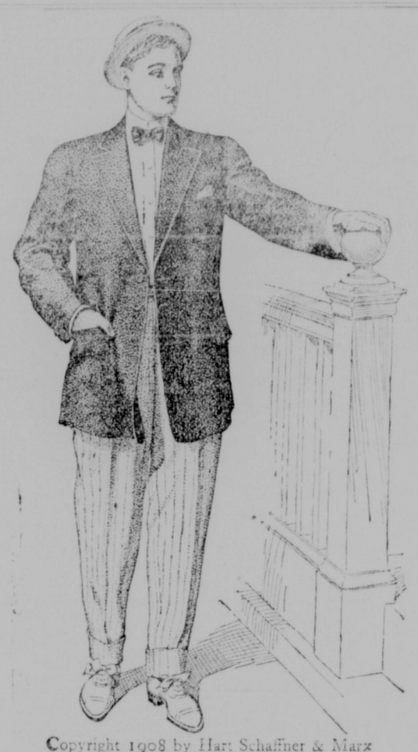
Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

H. C. Sincell & Co.



Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

THE Clothing we are handling this Season is that distinguished kind which you see so many well dressed gentlemen wearing, and gives them that appearance of refinement that no other line of Clothing imparts. It is the Hart Schaffner & Marx kind. Come to our store and we will be pleased to exhibit the full line of this incomparable Clothing built scentifically for wear and appearance.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT KITZMILLERVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$53,851 45
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		6,250 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		218 75
Bonds, securities, etc		7,375 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		5,347 95
Other real estate owned		400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		965 86
Due from State Banks and Bankers		67 80
Due from approved reserve agents		7,654 76
Checks and other cash itemr		221 00
Notes of other National Banks		495 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		34 89
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$3,820 15
Legal-tender notes	30 00	3,850 15
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		312 50
Total		$ 87,045 11

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	3,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	926 98
National Bank notes outstanding	6,250 00
Due to other National Banks	1,916 58
Individual deposits subject to check	24,314 14
Demand certificates of deposit	25,538 26
Certified Checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	74 15
Total	$ 87,045 11

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.
E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of September, 1908.
GEO. J. POOL, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH,
WADE SAPP,
A. C. SMITH,
Directors.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle one question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Subscribe for the Republican.

Call for Your Letters.

Miss Lizzie Coyle, Mr. W. W. Davison (2), J. M. Feather, Miss Canie Fuces, Miss Louise Haglu, R. P. Hildreth, Miss Maude Hutchinson (3), Mrs. J. M. Kesner, Mrs. Claude Nickles, Mrs. P. J. Mugler, Miss Grace Nail, Mrs. L. H. Simmons, Mrs. Nannie K. Wilson, Miss Cleo Woods.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

TAFT AS A SPEAKER.

His Talks to the People Winning Many Votes.

DOESN'T POSE AS AN ORATOR.

Word Pictures Not Needed to State Facts Plainly—Republican Candidate's Clearness and Sincerity Carry Conviction.

From being decidedly apprehensive as to the outcome of Judge Taft's speaking tours Republican leaders are now convinced that one of the wisest moves of the campaign was the decision to let the Republican candidate visit as many sections of the country as possible between now and election day and talk to as many voters as the time will permit. When speaking tours for Taft were first discussed the opponents of the plan based their opposition on the fact that as an orator Taft cannot be compared to Bryan. They argued that Taft, who makes no pretense to oratory, would be placed at a disadvantage appearing on the stump against the gifted Nebraskan. But Judge Taft himself solved the problem and cleared the whole situation with one sentence in his recent speech at Sandusky, O.

"I cannot dwell in the cerulean blue but have to deal with facts," he declared. It is this dealing with facts in a clear, dispassionate manner that has made William Howard Taft what he is, that will cause him to gain strength every time he appears in public. Taft's best friends cannot claim for him that he is an orator. But he can tell the truth and does tell it. He will not have to paint beautiful word pictures of what should be done. He will not have to plead with silvery eloquence for the alleged downtrodden nor call on "the masses" to rise up and save the country from the ruin which Bryan has been predicting and finding various panaceas for during the past twelve years.

What Taft has to do is to state cold, clear cut facts, to tell the truth about himself, to give to his auditors a clear and unmistakable idea of what Taft the man is and what he stands for. And this he can do, and do well. By nature he is frank and open. It would be difficult for him to dissemble if he wished to do so.

Already Taft has begun making serious impressions on his audiences. Bryan never fails to tickle his audiences. In most instances he arouses enthusiasm, but it is an enthusiasm which rarely lasts. Those who listen and applaud go away and forget. With the Taft audiences it is different. By the clearness of his exposition and the absolute sincerity of his manner he carries conviction. His auditors are soon impressed by two things—Taft's ability and Taft's sincerity.

"That man means what he says," is a comment frequently heard after Taft has spoken. Another Taft characteristic that is winning many friends for the Republican candidate among those who knew nothing of him before they saw and heard him is his great courage. He says what he thinks, and says it in such a way that it remains fixed in the minds of those who hear him. At Athens, O., he was addressing 400 union coal miners. He told them about having issued injunctions.

"I issued them," he said, "because the rights of the plaintiffs demanded it. When I am on the bench I enforce the law. And I have no apology to make."

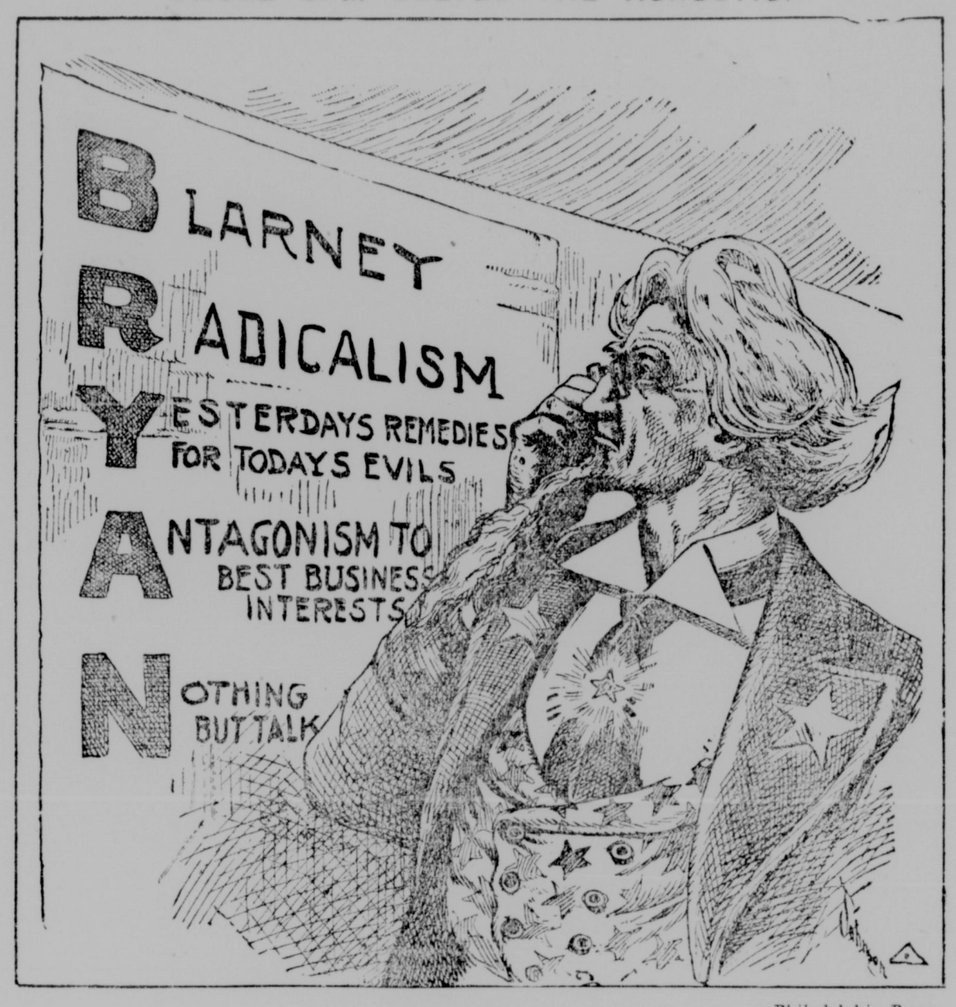
For a minute there was absolute silence, dramatic in its intensity. Then the 400 miners broke not merely into applause, but into enthusiastic cheers. After the meeting they were heard expressing their views.

"That man is on the level," said one. "He doesn't hand out any 'con' talk. He knows where he stands and is not afraid to come straight out with a thing. He ain't the orator Bryan is, but he says things that Bryan wouldn't dare say."

Unlike many of Bryan's utterances Taft's utterances will bear inspection. He will make no declration that is open to doubt. "I have to deal with facts," he said. In some of his speeches Bryan, intoxicated with the sound of his own words, frequently makes statements not entirely trustworthy. Taft has been too long on the bench, too long in high government positions, where his utterances carried weight, to permit of his making careless statements. Furthermore, Taft possesses to a marked degree the ability to discuss the most intricate subjects in the simplest language. He proved this most conclusively at Sandusky when he made perfectly plain to his audience the development of anti-trust legislation and the powers and limitations of the federal government. Everybody knew exactly what he was talking about and understood it clearly, yet there were few in the audience who realized that he was discussing abstruse legal problems without resorting to bewildering legal phraseology.

As far as personal magnetism goes, Taft and Bryan are nearly equal. But where Bryan's personality is one that creates interest and enthusiasm Taft's is one that inspires affection and trustfulness. "That man has a fine face; I would trust him anywhere," said a West Virginia woman who with a large party came over the mountains to hear Taft speak at Hot Springs. Those who meet him feel that he is not only sincere, but that he possesses the ability and courage to handle safely the many problems that confront a president. It is the knowledge of all this that makes the Taft managers glad that he is to go out and meet the people.

UNCLE SAM SOLVES THE ACROSTIC.



—Philadelphia Press.

THE BRYAN PARROT.

The Same Feathered Nuisance That Screeched in 1896.

In 1908, as in 1900 and 1896, the dominant voice in the Bryan campaign is the voice of the parrot. It is just as shrill, just as insistent and just as meaningless as it was twelve years ago and is bound to become quite as wearisome to the public.

In 1896 the sleek, green parrot of Bryanism teetered to and fro upon his comfortable swing and screeched "Free silver! Free silver!" That was the only phrase the bird could utter, and its dismal iteration so exasperated the people that they grabbed the noisy parrot from his perch and cast him into the garbage heap.

But the plumed nuisance survived and appeared in the campaign of 1900 with a brand new scream. This time it was "Imperialism! Imperialism!" To the unthinking that alarmist outcry was momentarily terrifying, suggesting thrones and tyrants bent on oppressing the people. But it never scared the sane people themselves even for a moment. They knew it was the same old parrot singing the same old tune with merely a change of words. To every challenge to a discussion of real political issues the parrot made but one reply—"Imperialism!"—and again the feathered pest was torn from his perch and tossed into the junk pile by the public whose patience he had exhausted.

With his inability either to charm or frighten, so rudely demonstrated in two successive trials, an ordinary parrot would have dedicated himself to a future of silent meditation on the follies of talking too much. But the Bryan parrot is an extraordinary parrot, not an ordinary one, and the campaign of 1908 finds him perched aloft again with another screech wherewith to affright the timid and amuse the thoughtful. His cry this year—and its accents show that it has been rehearsed with rare patience—is, "Shall the people rule?" It fits the parrot's voice to perfection, and, though it is as empty as his own head, he accompanies it with an uprolling of his eyes that might scare people if they could forget for a moment that it is only a parrot screech, after all.

The voice of the Bryan parrot is unchanged. It is as rasping, monotonous and as lacking in the note of sincerity as it was twelve years ago. The senseless shriek of "Free silver!" could not mislead the people in 1896. The alarmist scream of "Imperialism!" never disturbed their composure for a single moment in 1900. And the shrill, insulting screech, "Shall the people rule?" can have no other result than to provoke their angry contempt in 1908.

Parrot politics will not do this year. Serious questions are before the people for discussion and settlement. Public attention cannot be drawn away from them either by the witless chatter of parrots or the theatrical tricks of demagogues. This is no more a parrot year than was 1900 or 1896.

Mr. Conners brings distinct signs of irritation because nobody thinks it worth while to get out an injunction against his speaking his mind to the fullest extent. He will awaken in November to the fact that there is a great gulf between his political rights and the strictly economic purposes of labor unions.

The Bryan proposition that conservative banks should pay for the failures of speculative banks will not appeal to the thrifty depositor.

BRYAN COULD HARM.

Danger of Placing Nebraskan In White House.

EVEN WITH SENATE OPPOSED.

Administration and Enforcement of Laws Would Be In His Hands—The Treasury Would Be Under His Thumb—National Banks Would Be at His Mercy.

Nobody with brains enough to get in out of a blizzard can have patience with the argument so complacently put forth by some of the Bryanites who want to humbug others into believing what they don't believe themselves—that Bryan can do no harm should he be elected. The usual way of putting it is that there will be a Republican senate and probably a Republican house and that Bryan's hands will be tied even if his tongue continues to wag—certainly a poor reason for electing a president even were it true.

But it is not true. A grammar school boy who has studied the constitution of the United States knows that. Of course Bryan as president in face of a sane congress could not pass laws. But the whole administration of national laws, including their enforcement, which is at least as important as passing them, would be in his hands. He would have the treasury under his thumb; the national banks would be at the mercy of a comptroller of the currency appointed by him; the foreign policy of the government would be directed by him, and ambassadors, ministers and consuls would be named by him. The army and navy would be under his command. Collectors, postmasters and other officials of the civil service would be nominated by him. While he could not establish "a tariff for revenue only," he could make things much smoother and easier for the class that come back from European trips loaded with all sorts of luxuries purchased abroad to the detriment of American labor.

Then he could smash any bank that might offend him by not going into his compulsory guarantee scheme, just as his campaign treasurer, Governor Haskell, smashed the International Bank of Coalgate, Okla., to make a demonstration of the guarantee law for the Democratic Denver convention.

Oh, yes, Bryan could do harm—so much harm that it might take the country many long years to recover from the damage done by four years of Bryan in the White House.

But Bryan will do no harm because he will not have the opportunity, because the American people are going to elect as their president William H. Taft, the candidate of the Republican party, the impartial judge, the constructive statesman, the man of whom McKinley said, "He is the broadest and most unselfishly brave man I know and will carry the constitution of the United States in his very blood." Taft's election will be an assurance that the voters of the United States are determined to have in the White House one whose presence there will be in itself a pledge of good government, of efficient and equitable administration of the laws, of intellectual and educational advancement and of progress and prosperity in the material affairs of the republic.

PROPHETIC WORDS.

Statement of Lawton Like an Accusation From the Grave.

Among the many gallant American soldiers whose lives were sacrificed in the difficult task of suppressing the Filipino insurrection none was more beloved either by his brother officers or the men in the ranks than General Henry W. Lawton. He realized the ideal American soldier as completely as any of his contemporaries, and his record in the war for the Union, in various Indian campaigns, in Cuba during the Spanish war and in trying work which called him to the Philippines constitutes a lustrous chapter in the annals of American valor. No braver officer ever wore his country's uniform. No gentler, more considerate commander ever led his troops into battle. No more chivalric leader ever gave up his life in defense of his country's flag.

General Lawton was killed in battle with insurrectos in the island of Luzon in 1900 while fighting at the head of his troops. A short time before the tragic close of his career he had written to a friend in the United States a letter, in which he said:

"If I am shot by a Filipino bullet it might as well come from one of my own men, because I know from observation, confirmed by captured prisoners, that the continuance of fighting is chiefly due to reports that are sent out from America."

The words of Lawton, fighting a treacherous foe in a tropical country, were meant as a protest against the unpatriotic "anti-imperialist" agitators here in the United States, where expressions of sympathy for the insurrection gave constant aid and comfort to the enemy. Army officers of high character and rugged experience in the Philippines have frequently expressed the opinion that the insurrection would not have lasted ninety days had it not been for the support, moral and otherwise, which its leaders received from their sympathizers in America.

Chief among those sympathizers, the insistent and most reckless of all, was William Jennings Bryan, and against him the prophetic words of the lamented Lawton stand like an accusation from the grave. For his unpatriotic course during the Filipino insurrection Mr. Bryan lacked even the shadow of an excuse. He had entered the military service during the Spanish war as a volunteer officer, and he knew that the war and the insurrection in the islands could be concluded only with the unqualified recognition of American authority wherever it was asserted. But in spite of that he encouraged the Filipino to continue in armed resistance, and his reckless expressions undoubtedly helped to prolong a desperate and costly struggle which he knew in his heart could never end except in the way it was ended. Mr. Bryan's conduct throughout that conflict, which cost so much alike to the United States and to the deluded Filipinos themselves, amounted to moral treason, and it will never be forgiven by the survivors of those gallant men from whom it exacted the last full measure of sacrifice in devotion to duty.

The words of Lawton will confound Mr. Bryan every time he opens his mouth to speak on the Philippines in the present campaign. He cannot escape them. They indict him for giving aid and comfort to the Armed enemies of American authority and they brand him as a man who openly encouraged a desperate uprising against the flag in defense of which Lawton died.

DEMOCRAT ADVOCATES NEGRO DISFRANCHISEMENT.

National Committeeman Atwood, Bryan's Close Friend, Openly Favors Taking Vote From Colored Men of Kansas.

Disfranchisement of as many colored voters as possible is advocated by John H. Atwood, Democratic national committeeman from Kansas, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Democratic national committee, one of Bryan's closest friends and a man who, it is said, Mr Bryan intends to make attorney general if he should be elected president.

Disfranchisement of the colored men of Kansas was advocated by Mr Atwood in the following letter published in the Kansas City Post of Kansas City, Kan., May 7, 1908:

Letter Urging Disfranchisement.

"By one of those strange ironies of fate which sometimes overtake the benefactors of individuals, peoples or races the state of Kansas, which has done more perhaps for the negro than any other state in the Union, is now suffering a grievous political wrong from the hands of the freedman and his descendants.

"William A. Harris would now be governor of Kansas had it not been for the ignorant negro vote, and there have been times in the past when the Democratic party could have elected its state ticket had it not been for the ignorant black vote of Kansas City, Kan., Leavenworth, Atchison, Lawrence and Topeka.

"There was a time when the negro vote was not a considerable factor in Kansas politics, but that time has passed. The influx of negroes from the south, the rapid multiplication of those native to Kansas soil and the increasing insistence of the negro upon social equality make the Kansas negro not only a political factor, but a social and political menace.

Atwood Favors "Jim Crow" Schools.

"If the last election be a criterion, the negro now holds the balance of political power in Kansas, as he does in Missouri. This in itself is bad enough, but in Kansas we have suffered for long years the outrage of mixed schools, fastened upon us by the Republican politician.

"Mixed schools lead the negroes to aspire to a mixed society, and this close contact of the races is productive of troubles from which Kansas would be free if the negro had less political power and were not admitted to the same schools with the whites.

"Kansas has long been weary of the negro politician, and it is more than weary of the mixed school. Patience has its limits, and I believe that the time has come when the people of Kansas will join with the people of Missouri in restricting negro suffrage.

"I do not advocate the disfranchisement of the negro on the ground of his color. That idea is abhorrent to the principles of our free government, and its execution would be in conflict with the constitution.

"But our constitution will permit the disfranchisement of the ignorant, depraved, lazy, vicious and debauched negro, and this disfranchisement should be accomplished to the end that our free institutions may not suffer."

AMERICAN GOODS ABROAD.

Policy of Cheaper Sales Has Consent of Both Parties.

Secretary Shaw estimates that out of every $1,000 worth of manufactures exported from this country 30 cents' worth are sold abroad cheaper than at home. So far the complaint of the Democrats that our manufactures sell abroad cheaper than at home seems to be true. But this is not as great a discount in the export trade as the advantage given to manufactures in the importation of raw materials, that they may employ American labor at American wages in the manufacture of goods that are to be sold abroad in competition.

It has been the policy of the Republican party for a number of years to encourage such competition in foreign markets. The drawback on materials imported for manufactures that are to be exported is not peculiar to the Dingley law. The same provision was in the McKinley law, and it was incorporated in the Wilson-Gorman law by the Democrats. It was kept in the law when the Dingley act was passed because it became the policy of the government by common consent of both parties.

Last year we imported $10,000,000 worth of materials which went into manufactures for export, and the drawback was paid on about 5 per cent of our imports. This would make it possible for the American manufacturers to sell about 5 per cent of their exports, or $120,000,000 worth, cheaper abroad than at home. The advantage given by the drawback was given for the purpose of enabling them to go into foreign markets and compete, even if they had to sell cheaper than at home. And this advantage was given in the Democratic tariff act of 1894, just as it had been in the McKinley act of 1890 and as it is now given by the Dingley act of 1897.

It is therefore not a partisan question, because it has had recognition from both political parties. It is a part of the policy to meet competition in foreign markets rather than protection for the home market. Its definite purpose is to enable manufacturers in this country to give employment to American labor for the production of goods for consumption in Europe instead of letting that manufacture to European producers employing European labor.

TAFT'S WORK IN CHINA

He Rehabilitated Our National Reputation.

CHECKED COURT ABUSES.

Cleared the United States Banner From the Dishonor That American Criminals Had Brought Upon It Readjusted Consular Service.

It was chiefly through the influence and at the instigation of Mr. Taft that the recent rehabilitation of our national reputation in China was accomplished by the establishment of the United States court in China. Until Mr. Taft became a paramount figure in the far east scandalous conditions had prevailed in Shanghai and other cities of China where the United States exercised extra territorial rights. Undesirable subjects of the United States, men and women, had degraded the American flag by using it as a cloak under which to conduct numerous nefarious enterprises. American sharpers, gamblers and promoters of questionable schemes had long worked in conjunction with discredited lawyers to their mutual and illegal gain. In various instances these criminal endeavors were aided and abetted by American consular officers, who were dismissed from the service. The former practice of adjudicating all causes in which Americans were parties in consular courts gave rise to abuses. The American flag, in Shanghai particularly, stood for national dishonor in the eyes of other nations who by legislation and the creating of proper courts had spared their flags the disgrace that descended upon the United States banner.

When he was at the head of the Philippine government in Manila Mr. Taft by his proximity to China soon appreciated the seriousness of the conditions there and foresaw the loss of standing in the eyes of the Chinese to which we were indifferently exposing ourselves by our failure to keep in check American criminals. He brought the matter to the attention of the state department and joined with Secretary Root, Representative Edwin Denby of Michigan, a son of the former United States minister to China; Charles Denby, another son, who is now consul general at Shanghai; Senator Spooner and some others in an endeavor to remedy conditions. He exerted his influence to obtain the passage by congress of a bill creating the United States court for China. Lebbeus Redmond Willfley of Missouri, who had been Mr. Taft's attorney general in the Philippines, was named as judge.

Mr. Taft from the first took a deep personal interest in the work of Judge Willfley and his court. In a way he supervised its work and was frequently appealed to by Judge Willfley for advice as to procedure and other details. The lack of adequate laws hampered Judge Willfley, but by proceeding in accordance with the common law he quickly made the court effective. Within a few months after the court was organized Shanghai and other cities in China where conditions were such as to require it were thoroughly and drastically cleaned up. Shyster American lawyers were disbarred, so that the gamblers, disreputable women and other offenders against the law were deprived of legal support. The reputable American lawyers in good standing aided Judge Willfley. Heavy fines and terms of imprisonment exercised a deterrent effect upon the lawbreakers, many of whom summarily fled from China before the court could bring them to account for their misdeeds.

When Mr. Taft was in Shanghai last fall he was heartily thanked and congratulated by the law abiding Americans there for the part he had taken in removing the stigma from the American flag and restoring the good fame of the national name in the orient. In his speech before the American association in China he paid a high tribute to Judge Willfley, saying in part:

"Our government was fortunate in the selection as the first judge of the court of a gentleman who had had four years' experience in the orient as attorney general of the Philippines and who went to Shanghai with an intimate knowledge of the method of uniting in one administration the principles of the common law of the United States with the traditions and conditions of a foreign country. His policy in raising high the standard of admission to the bar and in promoting the vigorous prosecution of American violators of law, which eliminated from that community many undesirable characters who had brought disgrace upon the name of Americans in the cities of China, cannot but commend itself to every one interested in the good name of the United States among the Chinese people and with our brethren of other countries who live in China."

England is alarmed against the physical deterioration of the "submerged classes." In this land protection the rule of social progress is that of emergence and physical, mental and moral development.

Public ownership of the railroads would add $1,000,000,000 to the public debt, but William Jennings Bryan doesn't worry about a little thing like that.

Republican voters will make the "peerless one" without a peer in the number of his defeats.

Bryan has discovered the proper ratio between paralysis and prosperity. It is himself.

Obliging D. D. D.

By M. M. CUNNINGHAM.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Carman scowled as a tiny figure in brown linen scuttled across the lawn.

"Up to more mischief," he growled. "Just had one spanking and getting ready for another. I hope he gets it. It's a pity I can't give it to him. He'd remember it better than the hairbrush lessons he usually has."

Daniel Davenport Dudley slipped round a corner of the carriage house, and Will Carman resumed his book. The day was far too fine for reading, but his clothes were downstairs drying out, and one of Bob Dudley's dressing gowns was scarcely an appropriate costume for outdoor exercise.

He had run down to his partner's bungalow for the day only. He had wanted to make a base of operations against Ruth Emory, who was staying across the river at the Blessington's country place. Ruth was to leave tomorrow for Bar Harbor, and unless he spoke today there was small chance of winning her hand for another six months. Carman was no letter writer, and he could not hope to conduct an epistolary courtship.

"WON'T YOU PLEASE MARRY HIM SO I WON'T BE SPANKED?"

Helen Dudley, his partner's wife, had suggested the scheme of his running down ostensibly upon business just at the time that Dudley was going away. He might go over to Blessington's for want of better occupation, and the battle would be won.

But they had not counted upon D. D. D. That ingenuous six-year-old had spent the early morning in bridging a ditch with branches and sod the tiny stream that cut through the Dudley lawn. Carman had broken through the shaky bridge and had soaked himself to the knees. Mrs. Dudley had spanked D. D. D., but that did not dry damp trousers nor muddy boots, and now Carman was sitting in the guest room smoking Bob Dudley's cigars and softly cursing small boys and other fates that kept him from Miss Emory's side.

Presently he laid down the book as D. D. D. came around the corner of the carriage house again. The roof repairers had left some tar on the dirt heap, and in making up a ball of the sticky compound D. D. D. had smeared his clothes with the mess.

"Good!" commented Carman. "Now he will get spanking No. 2. Just wait till your mother sees you."

There was not long to wait. D. D. D. ran to the rear of the house, and presently a succession of wails announced that the youngster's condition had been discovered by his long suffering mother. Carman chuckled.

"Vengeance was swift, my boy, and you'll wind up on the gallows yet."

Carman was not ordinarily heartless, and, as a rule, he was fond of children, but the provocation had been great.

Mrs. Dudley tapped on his door, and Carman answered.

"Do you think," she asked, "it would hurt your boots to put them in the oven to dry? We had them in the sun, but they are drying very slowly. Here are your other clothes."

Carman decided in favor of the oven; anything to hurry the process. Perhaps, after all, he might be in time. He assumed his restored clothing and shuffled down to the porch in Bob Dudley's bath slippers. Carman was a six foot giant, while Dudley was small and dapper. There was nothing in the house that would fit Carman.

On the porch he chatted with his hostess and found it more pleasant to talk of Ruth than to sit in a room by himself and brood over his lost opportunity.

D. D. D. was playing at the other end of the piazza under the maternal eye. With the prospect of a speedy return of his footwear Carman even found it possible to smile upon the youngster mildly.

Then the servant came out bearing the boots, and as she neared Carman D. D. D. made a dive for the footwear.

"I want my tar," he exclaimed. "I hid it there when Norah ran after me."

Norah dropped the boots on Carman's stockinged feet, and, with a howl of dismay and pain, the latter picked them up. It was all too true. In the right boot were the dark stains that told how well the heat of the oven had spread the pitch. The shoes were ruined.

Mrs. Dudley was all concern, but it began to look as though all the fates were against Carman. There was not another pair of shoes about the place that approached his size. It was out of the question to send the girl to town. The chauffeur had driven the head of the house to the city and had not yet returned.

"It's all over," said Carman grimly. "I'll go to town in the morning in the auto. Until then it will have to be bath slippers for me, and I cannot very well propose in bath slippers.

"It is scarcely the costume of romance," said Mrs. Dudley.

"It is fate," he said resignedly. "Ruth Emory will never be mine."

"Perhaps it is not as bad as that. You might write, you know," comforted Mrs. Dudley, but Carman refused to be comforted. He knew how vainly he had tried to frame a letter that would sound unlike a business communication. It was only the prospect of her leaving that had moved him to speaking. Now the chance was lost, thanks to D. D. D.

That evening Carman sat on the porch looking across the water to where the lights betrayed the Blessington's place. Mrs. Dudley had promised to call on a sick friend, and Carman would not hear of her remaining at home. It was nearly 10 when a figure stole across the grass, and Carman rose from his chair.

"Look out for the pitfall," he warned. "Don't get in the brook."

"I won't," came the cheery reply, and Carman started. It was not Mrs. Dudley, but Ruth Emory who presently emerged from the gloom of the trees to offer her slim, cool hand.

"I thought that Helen was here," she said. "I paddled over to say goodby to her."

"She will be home presently," he said eagerly. "Won't you wait?"

Somehow, now that she was here, he had lost his courage again.

Ruth sat down and demanded an explanation of his warning, and he explained the device of D. D. D.

"And you have been cooped up here all day," she cried. "What a shame! It was a perfect day."

"Not for me," he said mournfully. "That little limb of Satan spoiled it for me."

"I ain't a limb of Satan," denied a sleepy voice from the low French window. "I am a good boy, only I am bad sometimes," he explained as he puttered out upon the piazza and climbed upon Ruth's lap. "I was bad today," he added. "I got tar in Mr. Carman's boots, and I got spanked because he couldn't come over and ask you to marry him. Won't you please marry him, so I won't be spanked?" he added. "I was spanked three times today."

"Won't you?" asked Carman softly. "I want you so, dear! When it seemed that I had lost my opportunity I was nearly crazy. It was fate that brought you over. I am not a good pleader. Won't you let D. D. D. plead for me?"

Miss Emory's eyes grew softly bright. She, too, had been afraid that perhaps the word that would mean so much to them both would never be spoken.

"I am a member of the Children's Aid society," she said, with a low laugh. "Perhaps for the sake of D. D. D. I had better say yes."

In a moment Carman's arms were about her, and he knelt beside her chair. Mrs. Dudley's first hint that all was well was gained as she rounded the porch from D. D. D.'s sleepy voice.

"Kiss me, too," he pleaded. And Mrs. Dudley smiled and went softly to the back door lest she disturb them.

Early Refrigeration.

The most ancient method of making ice is practiced in parts of India. Holes are made in the ground, dry straw is put at the bottom of these, and on it at the close of the day are placed pans of water which are left until the next morning, when the ice that is found within the pans is collected. This industry is carried on only in districts where the ground is dry and will readily absorb the vapor given off from the water in the pans. The freezing, of course, is due to the great amount of heat absorbed by the vapor in passing from its liquid to its gaseous form.

Another process was practiced in the day of ancient Rome, when the wealthy are said to have had their wines cooled by having the bottles placed in water into which saltpeter was thrown, the bottles being the while rotated.

Dr. Cullen in 1755 discovered that the evaporation of water could be facilitated by the removal of the pressure of the atmosphere and that by doing this water could be frozen. Nairn in 1777 discovered that sulphuric acid would absorb the vapor of water if placed in a second vessel separate from that containing the water, but connected with it. This discovery he put to use in 1810 by constructing an apparatus for absorbing the vapor of the water that it was desired to cool or freeze. This apparatus greatly facilitated the freezing operations of a vacuum freezing machine.

The Black Sea.

The Black sea differs in a most remarkable manner from other lakes and seas. A surface current flows continually from it into the Mediterranean and an undercurrent from the Mediterranean into the Black sea. The latter current is salt and, being heavier than the fresh water above it, becomes stagnant at the bottom. Being saturated with sulphureted hydrogen, this water will not maintain life, and so the Black sea contains no living thing below the depth of about a hundred fathoms. Its area is 168,500 square miles. It is 730 miles long, and its greatest width is 390 miles.

BOWSER IS MALIGNED

Wife's Headache Causes Him to Become Solicitous For Welfare.

MOTHER-IN-LAW SUSPICIOUS.

Thinks His Apparent Goodness Covers Up Some Dark Scheme—Tells Her Daughter to Be on the Lookout. Philosopher Falls Asleep.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.]

Soon after Mr Bowser left the house the other morning Mrs. Bowser was taken with sick headache, and after battling against it for two or three hours she had to take to her bed. She knew that she would be feeling better next day, but she almost dreaded Mr. Bowser's home coming that evening. He had said on leaving the house that they would take a trolley ride that evening. The dinner would be left to the cook to get, and she would be sure to burn the steak and leave lumps in the mashed potatoes. Mr. Bowser would come tramping upstairs when he found that she was ill and, standing by her bedside, would indulge in the following remarks:

"Sick again, eh? I thought it was about time you made another fifty dollar doctor's bill.

"That's always the way when we plan to go anywhere.

"You have probably devoured a raw cocoanut and been around barefoot.

"No use to call a doctor. You are struck with death already.

"By John, but not one woman in a thousand knows the first thing about taking care of her health!

"I suppose I must eat dinner with the cook.

"I'll be going out this evening and may not be back until after midnight.

HE TOOK THE CAT BY THE BACK OF THE NECK.

If you should want anything, you can ask the cook."

"If I ever marry again, I'll wed a Dutch girl who has worked in the fields every day of her life. I was figuring up the other day, and I find that your doctor bills have averaged about a thousand dollars a year since we got married. That's what a man gets for marrying a string."

Mrs. Bowser groaned and moaned when she thought of it, but as 6 o'clock came she braced up to meet the inevitable. She heard Mr. Bowser in the hall downstairs, she heard the cook explaining to him, she heard him on the stairs, and then he was in the room and saying:

"You poor, dear child, you! But why didn't you telephone me to come home and take care of you? I could have come as well as not."

"I've got—got one of my old headaches," she explained.

"Too bad. I know how you always suffer with them."

"But I thought—thought you'd be mad."

"What a silly woman! Why should I be mad because you are temporarily ill? You are not ill because you want to be. Any one is liable to a headache any day. Did you send for the doctor?"

"I didn't dare to. I thought you'd complain about the bill."

"More nonsense. Your doctor's bill wouldn't buy seed for a canary. Shall I make up a cup of tea and some toast with my own hands?"

"Y-yes."

Had a Crying Spell.

And when he had departed downstairs Mrs. Bowser had a crying spell and said to herself that he was the best husband that ever lived. She was a bit scared too. He had come home to act so totally different that she could not make it out. She had prepared herself for a bit of bulldozing, but he had used only the kindest words. She didn't feel that she could eat or drink a thing, but to reward him she made a heroic pretense and even made the statement that she felt better. Then Mr. Bowser continued his strange antics.

He got a wet cloth for her head.

He shook up her pillow.

He sat and fanned her.

He removed his shoes so as not to make a noise.

He took the cat by the back of the neck and dropped her on the stairs, and in soft whispers he warned her that if there was any miauling around the house that night it would mean a sudden and terrible death to at least one feline he knew of.

He sneaked down and saw the cook and warned her against bangs and slams and jars. He said that if she felt she must break plates and platters to do it gently.

Then he sneaked back upstairs and resumed the fanning, and when Mrs. Bowser said that she was sorry to make him so much trouble he replied:

"It's no trouble at all. It's a privilege to wait on you. See if you can't go to sleep while I sit and fan you."

Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Bowser was asleep. Then the cook came to the head of the stairs and indulged in strange motions, and when he slipped out to see what was wanted she whispered:

"There's an old woman down in the hall who wants to see you, and I don't think it will be healthy for you to keep her waiting."

Mr. Bowser went down, and there sat his mother-in-law. At sight of him she rose up and said:

"Look here, Samuel, what's going on in this house? Where's my daughter? Have you finally poisoned her off?"

Welcomes Mother-in-law.

"I'm glad to see you, mother," he answered as he held out his hand. "If you'd told me you were coming I'd have been at the depot to meet you. The poor wife is upstairs with one of her headaches."

"And I suppose you have been jawling around because it happens to be so?"

"I made her some tea and toast, and she is now asleep."

"You haven't banged around with hammer or saw?"

"No, mother."

"Nor run the lawn mower or whistled a dancing tune?"

"No. Come down and have something to eat before you go up. I haven't had my dinner yet."

The mother-in-law went down with him, but she looked at him with doubt and distrust and finally asked:

"What did you do when you came home and found Sarah in bed?"

"I tried to make her comfortable, of course."

"You didn't ask her if she thought this was a public hospital?"

"No."

"You didn't say she must have slept with her feet out of the window?"

"No."

"You didn't lay it to cheese or raw turnip or chipped up cabbage and ask where her senses had gone to?"

"No, mother—nothing of the kind."

"Didn't say that but for her doctor bills you'd have been a millionaire by this time?"

"No."

Would Find Out the Truth.

That was all, but the old lady set her jaw and said to herself that she'd find out the truth of things within a few minutes. When she rose from the table she said to Mr. Bowser:

"I want you right here the whole evening. No sneaking out to any of your clubs."

"I wasn't going to."

"And you don't want to get no flying machines out in the back yard and no roller skating in the attic."

"No, mother; I shall take a book and sit down and read until you call me."

The mother-in-law gave him a strange look and then went upstairs to find the invalid awake and feeling considerably better. When she was told of the kind words and attitude of Mr. Bowser she thought for a moment and then said:

"Sarah, you look out. It isn't natural. It isn't the way husbands do. There's something behind all this."

"Why, mother, how should he act?"

"Natural. The natural way for a husband to act when he comes home and finds his wife with a headache is to blow around and make things worse. On a dozen different occasions I've had your father call me a doll and a string and threaten to get a divorce. It's a good thing I arrived here when I did. If Samuel Bowser has got any little game of putting arsenic in your tea or spreading paris green on your toast, he'll have me to deal with."

It was fully three hours before she descended to the sitting room to see what Mr. Bowser was about and to give him certain instructions to be followed on the morrow, and then she found him curled up on the lounge and fast asleep and the cat watching him from a distance.

"Looks like innocence," she murmured as she bent over him, "but you never can tell about these husbands—you never can tell." M. QUAD.

A Sense of Fitness.

"Sooner or later," said the earnest citizen, "we will send to jail every man who has made a crooked dollar on Wall street."

"I hope not," answered the cynical person. "Bad as it may be, I'd rather go to Wall street to transact my financial business than to a jail."—Washington Star.

He Must Have Had a Rough Time.

Jones (to himself)—That's victory, is it? Then I'd like to see the other fellow, by Jove!—Sloper's Half Holiday.

Mean of Him.

Prodigal—Father, I have come home to die.

"Confound you, haven't you cost me enough already without adding the expense of a funeral?"—New York Life.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest. Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
T. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, T. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows & Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agent and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

AN HONEST MAN.

Says He'll Pay That Ten Dollar Bill When He Comes Across It.

"Now, look here, Thompson," remarked Bloom, "it is six months since you borrowed that ten dollar bill from me."

"Seven," corrected Thompson gravely.

"Well, then, seven months," snorted Bloom. "And you promised to give it back to me in a week—promised faithfully to return it me in seven days instead of months."

"I know it," answered Thompson sadly, drawing a memorandum book from his pocket. "That bill was marked No. 672,929. I made this memo, and then I spent the money. Since then I've been trying to recover it."

"But," shouted Bloom, "any other would do as well."

"No," responded Thompson, shaking his head. "I'm a man of my word. When you gave me the bill I said, 'I will return this to you,' and I meant it. Bloom, old man, just as soon as I come across No. 672,929 I'll see that you get it, for I am not the one to go back on my promise."—Harper's Weekly.

Very Confidential.

Village Postmistress—And what are those dashes?

Hodge—Oh, he'll understand them right enough.

Postmistress—Yes, but we can't send them by telegraph.

Hodge—Well, they're the price o' the pigs. He'll understand.

Postmistress—Yes, but you must put it in words or figures, else we can't send it.

Hodge—Must I? Well, I'll whisper it to 'ee then!—Punch.

Poor Taste.

"Is your dog blind?"

"Good gracious—our Rover! I should say not! What ever led you to ask such a question?"

"Why, I knew he was either blind or else had very poor taste."

"Explain yourself."

"There's not much to explain. Last night Rover tried to bite that awfully thin Miss Blinker."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Another Objection.

"There's one great objection to the flying machine," said Mr. Sirius Barker, "and that's the question of safety appliances."

"It can carry a parachute."

"Yes, but a parachute looks so much like an umbrella that every time you want to use it you're sure to find it has been borrowed."—Washington Star.

Enough For All.

"You have deceived me."

"How?"

"You said you could die for me, and I learn you have told eight other cats the same thing. Boo-hoo!"

"Cheer up! I've got nine lives, haven't I?"—Kansas City Times.

The Simple Truth.

The Powder Manufacturer—Fancy old Bill of all people going into the gunpowder shed with a lighted candle! I should have thought that that would be the last thing he'd do.

The Workman—Which, properly speakin', it were, sir.—Sketch.

A Sense of Security.

"Weren't you worried about the members of your family during their long absence from home?"

"Not at all. I don't own an automobile, and none of them think they can swim or sail a boat."—Minneapolis Journal.

Recognizing His Limitations.

Cholly—Let me see—what's that quotation about a nod being as good as a wink, and so forth?

Fweddy—Why—er—I can't think—

Cholly—Oh, I know that. I'm asking you to try to remember.—Chicago Tribune.

Giac Finelli.

W'en Giac Finelli maka joke
I laugha teell my sides ees broke.
I weesh som'time dat you could be
Jus' near enough to heem to see.
You don'ta gotta be so near
For dat you musta seet an' hear.
Eet ees not dat you gotta pay
Mooch notice to da words he say,
Baycause een sooch artista way
He tweest hees face an' move da han'
All theengs ees plain to ondrastan',
He ees so smarta Dagoman.
Oh, my, your sides dey would be broke
W'en Giac Finelli maka joke!

Two men dat play at cards wan night
Ees gat so mad an' so excite'
Dey pull deir knives an' gona fight.
Up jompa Giac Finelli den
An' eemitate dose fightin' men.
He growl an' stampa roun' da place
An' mak' sooch tweestin' of da face,
Now justa like deesa man
An' now so like da othra wan,
He mak' dem look sooch foolish sight
Dey laugh an' jus' forgat to fight.
Oh, my, eef dat time you could be
Jus' near enough to heem to see
You laugha teell your sides ees broke
W'en Giac Finelli maka joke!

—T. A. Daly in Catholic Standard and Times.

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

Your Stationery

is your silent representative. If you sell fine goods that are up-to-date in style and of superior quality it ought to be reflected in your printing. We produce the kind that you need and will not feel ashamed to have represent you. That is the only kind it pays to send out. Send your orders to this office.

SHERIFF'S SALE
OF Valuable Coal
SURFACE AND
Mining Rights
In Garrett County, Maryland, Near Henry, West Va.

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December Term, 1908, of said Court, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of Charles D. Gillaspie against Edward R. Pence, I did sieze and take into execution, on the 26th day of September, 1908, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, the following property, situate, lying and being in Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, West Virginia.

1. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of the tract of land called "Elk Garden," situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," South 73 degrees West, 315 perches; North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone; North 53 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone-pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 315 acres.

2. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all that part of the surface of the said tract of land called "Elk Garden" contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with part of the 12th line of said whole tract, South 73 degrees West, 65½ perches to a stone; thence North 37½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 11th line of said whole tract, thence with part of said 14th line, North 53 degrees East 48 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of "Elk Garden," thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone-pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 80 acres.

3. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to the right to use, in connection with a like use by a certain Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, of the water from a spring upon the land of the said Ada A. V. Halterman, adjoining the above described part of "Elk Garden," and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ the said water in business, the property, rights, &c., siezed, taken into execution and above described being the same undivided one-third interest in and to the same which were conveyed to the said Edward R. Pence by A. A. V. Halterman and husband, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 142 &c., one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland, and I hereby give notice that I will on

FRIDAY,
the 23d Day of October, 1908

at the hour of 11 o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder, all of the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence in and to the property above described and conveyed by the aforesaid deed.

Said property lies in District No. 8, of Garrett County, Maryland, and will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.
AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County, Maryland.

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

FACTS

¶ The news items of the home community.

¶ The things in which you are most interested.

¶ The births, weddings, deaths of the people you know.

¶ The social affairs of our own and surrounding towns.

These are the kind of facts this paper gives you in every issue. They are certainly worth the subscription price.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C. &P. Telephone Comp'y

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 24, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Oct. 13th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals will be received by W. McCulloh Brown, Secretary of the Court House Commission of Garrett county, Maryland, until noon of

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1908,

FOR THE FURNISHING OF SAID COURT HOUSE.

The Bench, Tables and Chairs for the Court Room, Orphans' Court and County Commissioners Office and such Metal Cases as may be required.

A copy of the specifications may be seen at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland or a list of articles may be obtained by applying to the Secretary.

At the same time and place the Commission will receive PROPOSALS FOR GAS AND ELECTRICAL FITTINGS.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to accept part and reject the remainder.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON, Chairman.
W. McCULLOH BROWN,
Sep 24-3 Secretary.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

JOHN W. BOYCE,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of September, 1908.

JOHN T. BOYCE,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $80 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21st day of September, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by Land Title and Trust Company, of Philadelphia, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 23d day of October, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $21,000.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

NOTICE OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS,
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 8, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, September 29,
Tuesday, October 6,
and on Tuesday, October 13,
for revision only

(No one can Register after Tuesday, October 6.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all others duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration of the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election Distict Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Martin Storeroom corner Third and Oak Streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration of the Ninth Electi n District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Charles R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of G. W. Engle in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the West building, Alder street in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM TURNER,
JOHN A. WRIGHT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

JASPER GUARD,
WALTER G. MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

DANIEL V. DORSEY,
ELISHA B. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

STEPHEN F. BROADWATER,
HENRY BARNARD,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

ADAM J. RICHTER,
CONRAD SPIKER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

W. H. BARTLETT,
GEORGE D. WHITE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
RICHARD McKENZIE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

SEBASTIAN HINERAUGH,
BENJAMIN F. THRASHER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH BROADWATER,
HUGH McMILLAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

O. C. BUCKLE,
ERNER BEACHY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

LEWIS C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

JOHN O. THAYER,
BERT C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

D. M. MASON,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Coal Property
AND
Mining Rights

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph W. Thompson and wife to the undersigned, bearing date the 10th day of March, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 35, folio 348, &c., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having been made under the same by said mortgagor, in failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due, the undersigned, in execution of said power of sale in said mortgage mentioned, will on

THURSDAY,
the 1st Day of October, 1908

at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, at 11 o'clock a. m., sell at public auction all of the coal underlying all that tract of land known as the Thompson and Hilleary farm, situate, lying and being in Bvans Glade, Garrett County, Maryland, the same being a part of the tract of land called

FERTILE MEADS,

and also including certain other lands which have been claimed, occupied and held in peaceable possession for more than twenty years; the whole

Containing About 931 Acres,

and is fully described in a deed executed by Sophronia E. Hilleary and others to the said Joseph W. Thompson, bearing date the 14th day of March, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. 56, folio 415, one of the Land Records of said Garrett County, to which deed reference is hereby made for a description of the land under which the coal hereby to be sold lies.

Said property is supposed to consist of

Three Veins of Coal,

ranging from four to six feet in thickness, and adjoins the coal property of the Stoyer Run Coal Company, and is in easy access to the Western Maryland Railroad, and the same offers a rare opportunity to any one desiring to invest in coal property. The property can be inspected by persons contemplating bidding on same and a map of the premises can be seen by calling on the undersigned. The property is undeveloped and will therefore be sold without warranty as to contents or quality.

TERMS OF SALE.—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

CHARLES E. HILLEARY,
Mortgagee.

WOOD'S SEEDS.
Best qualities obtainable.

Winter or Hairy Vetch

make not only one of the largest-yielding and best winter feed and forage crops you can grow, but is also one of the best of soil-improvers, adding more nitrogen to the soil than any other winter crop.

Wood's Descriptive Fall Catalogue gives full information about this valuable crop; also about all other

Farm & Garden Seeds

for Fall planting. Catalogue mailed free on request. Write for it.

T. W. WOOD & SONS,
Seedsmen, - Richmond, Va.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
In Mountain Lake Park, Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in two mortgages from Annie L. Felty and Henry E. Felty to George W. Clauson, one dated March 14th, 1905, and one dated August 2nd, 1905, the first of which is recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, in Liber No. 45, folio 382, and the other is recorded among said Mortgage Records in Liber Number 51, folio 24, default having been made in both of said mortgages the undersigned as attorney named in said mortgages, in execution of the power of sale in said mortgages mentioned, will on Saturday, October 10th,

1908, at 10 o'clock a. m., offer at public sale at the First National Bank corner in Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, all the following property to wit:

First—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, in Garrett County aforesaid, known as on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, and fronting on B street and more particularly described in the deed for the same from John Felty, Jr., and wife to Annie B. Felty dated March 4th, 1903 and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid.

LOT NO. 909,

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building, with Storeroom and Warerooms on the First Floor and Dwelling above, and is near the Auditorium at the Park.

SECOND—All that lot or parcel of ground situate and lying in Mountain Lake Park, Garrett County, Maryland, known and described as

LOT NUMBER 911,

on the plat of Mountain Lake Park, which said plat is recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, said property being known by the general name of

"HIGHLAND HALL,"

and being the same property which was conveyed to Annie L. Felty by Robert R. Henderson and A. J. Willison by deed dated August 5th, 1902, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County aforesaid, in Liber Number 42, folio 583.

This Lot is Improved by a Large Frame Building called the 'Queenwood Hotel' and is now occupied and run as a hotel and has been for several years. It is a large commodious building.

Both of these properties are comparatively new and are in the most desirable and thickly populated part of Mountain Lake Park, and are in good repair.

TERMS—Cash on day of sale.
D. J. BLACKISTON,
Attorney named in Mortgage.

Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Christian Yoder and Amanda Yoder, his wife, to the undersigned bearing date the 29th day of December, 1906 and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folio 231, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, default having been made under the same by said mortgagors by failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due and the interest thereon, the undersigned hereby gives notice that on

THURSDAY,
the 15th Day of October, 1908

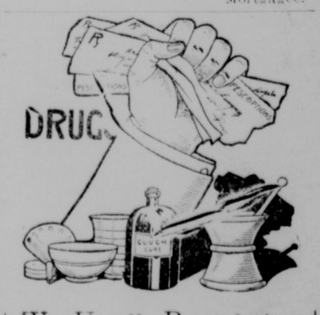
at 2 o'clock p. m., on the premises, he will sell at public auction the following described real estate and improvements.

All that piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, beginning for the same at a stone standing on the west side of the County road leading from Grantsville to the Pennsylvania Line, and running thence N. 1 degrees E. 51 rods, N. 87 degrees W. 126 rods and 11 links, S. 9 degrees W. 41½ rods, S. 81 degrees E. 121 rods and 9 links to the beginning, containing thirty-six acres and seventy-one perches, and being the same property that was conveyed to the said Christian J. Yoder and wife by the said Jacob S. Miller on the 30th day of June, 1904, and to secure the purchase money therefor the above mortgage was given.

Said Property is improved by a Good Dwelling House and Barn and other Out-Buildings; also by an Orchard of good fruit; about all of it is under cultivation and would make a desirable home to anyone needing a small farm.

The same is situated about three-fourths of a mile North of Grantsville on what is known as the lower Salisbury road.

TERMS OF SALE.—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof.
Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser.
JACOB S. MILLER,
Mortgagee.



We Handle Prescriptions

As if each were for members of our own family. We employ none but the very purest drugs. We use every precaution to insure accuracy and faithfulness. Have your prescriptions filled here and you can have perfect confidence in the medicine. And confidence you know is a great help in effecting a cure.

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1908. NUMBER 32

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT WARD'S REPORT

ade to the Annual Conference of the M. E. Church at Moundsville.

At the annual session of the West Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Moundsville yesterday Rev. Dr. R. B. Ward, superintendent of the Oakland District submitted his report for the year as follows:

To Bishop David H. Moore, President, and the Members of the West Virginia Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In making this my fifth annual report, I wish to recognize the goodness of God, and the graciousness of his providence in the preservation of the lives of the Superintendent, his family, and the preachers and their households, and our people in general, have much for which to be thankful.

I am glad to report that in the main the work has gone smoothly and steadily forward. The preachers have wrought with their usual energy and fidelity for the upbuilding of the Master's Kingdom, and not without results. Our laymen, generally, love the church and are fairly loyal to the general interests and our church institutions, yet in this we have not reached a relative perfection. Once in a while we hear some one say that the preachers get too much for preaching, and that it costs too much to carry on the work of the church, and that we expect too much in the missionary collection, all of which only calls for a halt, in the business in the Quarterly Conference, and a brief explanation upon the part of the Superintendent, as to the purpose and plans of the missionary enterprises, and an earnest exhortation for a larger liberality in supporting these great interests of our church.

There has been more or less of the revival spirit throughout the district during the year. The preachers are all of the evangelic type, preaching the fundamental doctrines of the Gospel, emphasing the fact of sin in the world, the necessity of repentance, regeneration, and the witness of the Spirit with a fidelity characteristic of the Father. There have been during the year about 1000 souls professed conversion, many of whom have united with the church. Some of these converts, however, were already members of the church. More and more are we convinced that we should emphasize the doctrine of Christian assurance as the high privilege of all Christians.

The preachers of the Oakland District, in the main, are good pastors, going from house to house visiting the people, learning their lives, coming in close personal touch with them. The people like to have their ministers visit with them. But few complaints reach me on this line, and the pastors who visit succeed.

Sunday schools are organized in all our charges, most of which are in a flourishing condition. Many of our Sunday school scholars have already been converted and are members of the church.

In the district, there are 490 officers and teachers and 6600 scholars, and in answer to the question, "Have the rules respecting the instruction of children been observed?" most of the pastors answer, "They have."

The Epworth League is in a fairly prosperous condition. In all our important stations and towns Leagues are organized and doing good work. In a number of country places it seems a little difficult to maintain a continued interest, I think mostly because of the difficulty in securing suitable leadership. In many places, however, our Leagues are prosperous and form quite an auxiliary to our church work.

In reference to the benevolence of the church, I have urged with diligence, patience and persistence, the importance of larger liberality upon the part of all our people in reference to the benevolent work of the church. Many of our peoples appreciate the importance of this work and are fairly liberal in its support, yet great improvements can be made.

The pastors have been faithful in cooperating with me in pushing the missionary interest throughout the district, yet I fear there will be a decline in the in the missionary collection this year. The depressed financial conditions in some of our communities have embarrassed the preachers and people alike, making it difficult to raise money for church purposes. This is especially true in coal mining and coke producing localities, a number of which are in the district. I do not give this as a cry of alarm, but simply state it as a condition effecting us now which doubtless will pass away in the near future.

With consistency, have I urged our people to a more liberal support of our preachers, and am glad to say there has been some improvement, but in many places the salary is entirely too meager. The preachers do not complain but they are cramped and embarrassed, many of them in proviging for the education of their children, and the comforts of the home. Surely this ought not be deprived of our ministers. I continually say to our official members, Brethern, let us advance in these matters!

We have built three churches during the year. One at Dodge on the Swanton charge costing $1000, all of which is provided for except a little less than $20. The Brethren prefer not to dedicate until the debt is paid.

One at number 7 on the Howesville work, costing $1000, which is about ready for dedication. This church has been a great necessity for many years.

At Newburg a splendid brick church, costing $7200, was dedicated by Bishop D. H. Moore, Oct. 4th, debt provided for. This is a splendid achievement and reflects great credit on all concerned.

At Albright improvements have been made to the parsonage and lot to the amount of $200, adding much to the comfort and utility of the property.

Aurora has improved the parsonage to the amount of $50.

Blaine has paid a debt on the parsonage of about $300.

Brandonville has improved, and is in the process of improving the parsonage property at the cost of $200.

Davis has made extensive improvement on the parsonage and church property of about $600.

Friendsville charge repaired the church at Johnstown at a cost of $700, making the church as good as new, all of which was provided for by the congregation.

On the Newburg charge besides building the new church, the church at Independence was improved at a cost of $125.

At Swanton the debt of $500 has been provided for. This is a great victory for this charge.

Terra Alta has improved the church and parsonage property at a cost of $600. This church it in a splendid condition, as well as the property.

There are probably 4000 or 5000 Italian laborers within the bounds of the Oakland district. Some of them have heir wives and children with then, others are arranging to bring them to this country. Early in June it was my good fortune to become acquainted with and to employ Mr. Nicholas Di Stefano, as an evanglist to go among these people and see what could be done. He was received with open arms and marked enthusiasm. Quite a number of the Italians were induced to attend our churches, some joining on probation and some attending our Sunday schools. In some of these services voluntary prayer was called for, and a number responded in Methodistic style. We hope to continue the young man at this work and expect good results.

The preachers have been faithful and loyal putting the interest of the church in preference to their own ease and comfort. I have trust in them. They have not betrayed that trust.

This has been a strenuous year. More than once I have gone to the limit of physical endurance, but my trust is in God, and His providence has been sufficient.

With this report we close the work of this Conference year, and turn our eyes to the future, which is as bright as the unfailing promise of God, when He said, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

Thus we await orders.

R. B. WARD.

BITTINGER.

At the primary held here last Saturday afternoon Jacob Brenneman and Ex-Sheriff A. J. Oester were elected by the Republicans of the district, as candidates for appointment as road supervisor under the provisions of the new road law.

G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, was in this village last Tuesday to attend to some matters before the district board of registrars at their sitting on that day.

Farmers are busy this week picking apples and report a fair crop and fruit of good quality.

Mrs. Hester Fazenbaker is erecting a new stable on her farm near here.

Martin Rush, of Accident, bought a nice drove of lambs in this neighborhood this week at $4.25 per hundred weight.

Luther and Charles Ralston are spending this week with their mother at this place.

Amos H. Reckner drove up to Oakland last Friday and purchased a fine kitchen range for the Lutheran parsonsonage.

Clarence Brenneman, who has been employed in Pennsylvania for a year past, has returned to this place for the winter.

Christian Shrock and family were visiting in this village last Sunday.

HUTTON.

Rev. E. Manges will preach in the school house this (Thursday) evening.

Hon. David J. Lewis and G. Semmes Hamill addressed a gathering of the "unterrified" here last Thursday night.

J. L. Snyder, of Wellsboro, Pa., is spending the week at the tannery.

John A. Connell is now Sunday school superintendent, having succeeded U. G Palmer.

B. & O. Conductor Dennis Glover has taken a house at Keyser, West Va., for the winter, and his daughter, Mrs. Beulah Christian, will have charge.

The Kendall Lumber Company has just received a fine new locomotive built by the Lima Iron Works, Lima, O. This is No. 8.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

TUBERCULOSIS EXHIBIT.

Cause of the Disease, Its Treatment and Eradication in Time.

The traveling exhibit of the Maryland Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, which is being displayed in Townshend's Hall on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, has given quite an impetus to the interest already manifested in this disease. There is no denying the fact that people are waking up to the possibilities of an organized campaign against tuberculosis. The Tuberculosis Congress just closing in Washington has had a vast influence in bringing this about, and these traveling exhibits can only serve to bring it nearer home. It would seem, indeed, as tho many of us now living will live to see the time when the "great white plague" will be no more of a scourge than small pox it at present. Thanks to the achievements of modern medical and social science, many of these dreaded diseases have already practically disappeared, and though tuberculosis has held the title of "the Captain of the Men of Death" for thousands of years, its fearful inroads have, in some places, been greatly lessened and the outlook is bright for the future.

The following are some of the things emphasized in this exhibit:

Tuberculosis is a germ disease and is communicated from one person to another. It is spread most easily in dark, damp, ill-ventilated places and places where people come in close contact with each other.

The germ is also carried with food which has been exposed to dust particles or otherwise contaminated.

Promiscuous spitting is a most common source of infection.

"Don't stir up dust in sweeping. Sprinkle carpet and floors with dampened paper torn into bits or sawdust or tea leaves. When you sweep this out, you remove the dust."

"Don't use a feather duster. That only stirs up the dust. Use a soft cloth dampened to get the dust out of the house."

"Consumption is primarily a house disease. Remove danger by keeping your house clean."

"Consumption is a filth disease. Hence be clean."

"Consumption is catching; the poison is most often carried in the spit. Never spit on the sidewalks, floors or walls. Spit in the gutter, in a cuspador, or a spit cup."

Consumption can be prevented, first, by carefully looking after the patient so that the infection will not spread to those about him; and second, by keeping one's general health up to such a standard that the body will be able to resist attacks of the tuberculosis germ.

"Do you have lots of fresh air in your sleeping room? Costs nothing, means health."

"The careful consumptive is not dangerous to those with whom he lives and works."

"If you have consumption or think you have it, go to a doctor or dispensary at once; don't try to doctor yourself."

"Don't spend your money for advertised consumption cures. Rest, food and fresh air are the best medicines known for consumption."

If a patient is in a position to go to a sanitorium, it is well to do so, but much progress can be made, even tho the patient is compelled to remain at home. Simple and inexpensive out-door sleeping arrangements can usually be made which, with competent medical attendance, will bring good results.

The exhibit has been in charge of Mr. Roy Stockwell, the assistant secretary of the Association, who explains it to visitors. The audiences, which have alway been gratifying, have listened to several talks on various phases of the subject by our local physicians who have cooperated heartily, as well as remarks from other leading citizens. Speaking of his work throughout the state, Mr. Stockwell said yesterday:

"The work of our Association is largely educational. By means of this exhibit, lectures, etc., held in all parts of Maryland, we are calling attention to the disease and the possibilities of combating it, and when this is done we feel that we are in a position to look for more substantial results. For instance, this educational work has already had much to do with the crystalizing of sentiment which has brought the legislation that we already have. The law provides for the registration, with the State Board of Health, of every case of tuberculosis and the disinfection of the premises after death or removal of a consumptive—a most important provision. These two features of the law are well enforced in some sections and in others, not at all. The state has made some provision for the care of consumptives who are unable properly to care for themselves, but this provision so far is very inadequate. We have the new sanitorium at Sabillasville, which is entirely a state institution, and the Eudowood Sanitorium near Towson, a private institution with a state subsidy. Both of these places have many times as many applications as they can take care of. When we remember that the great number of consumptives are among the poor and that they are much more liable to infect those about them on account of their poverty, it is evident that the task of the State's properly caring for them is a most important one."

The showing Maryland has made at the International Congress at Washington, in competition with states like New York and Pennsylvania which are much larger and wealthier, speaks well for the work already accomplished here.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. ELIZABETH REBECCA TOWNSHEND.

In the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Rebecca Townshend, widow of the late Singleton L. Townshend, who died at her residence on Water street on last Saturday, October 3, after a short illness of heart disease, Oakland generally experienced the loss of one of its best known, highest respected and a lovable Christian woman, the church a devout member and her family a devoted and exemplary mother. Mrs. Townshend was born at or near Aurora, Preston county, West Va., Nov. 8, 1831, and had reached the ripe age of 76 years, 10 months and 25 days when the summons came calling her from her labors on earth to eternal rest in heaven, there to join her husband and six children who had preceded her. The deceased lady was joined in wedlock to Singleton L. Townshend in the year 1854, and as a result of this union eleven children were born, five of whom—Messrs. Arthur, Robert and Ernest, and Mrs. A. D. Naylor, of Oakland, and Mrs. Charles D. Smith, of Parsons, West Va.,—survive. Her husband died on June 25th, 1898. Of the children dead Messrs. Playford and Ellsworth and Mrs. Kate T. Crane, the latter dyirg on February 13th, 1907, are well remembered by many. For more than half a century Mrs. Townshend was a resident of Oakland, and a consciencious, consistent member of the M. E. church, a liberal contributor toward its support and a regular attendant at all its services. As a mother and neighbor her death creates an achirg void, as a friend her counsels will no longer be heard, but as a Christian, imbued with the spirit of love and abiding faith in the great unknown, she has received her eternal reward. Her life is worthy of emulation by all. Her funeral was conducted Monday afternoon, October 5th, at 2.30 o'clock in St. Paul's M. E. church, by Rev. J. B. Workman, assisted by Dr. R. B. Ward and Rev. J. M. Davis. The latter, being intimately associated with the Townshend family for fifty years or more, spoke with much feeling of the past and paid a tribute to the memory of the deceased. The floral tributes were most profuse, among the number being one from each of the Masonic and Knights of Pythias lodges, both organizations attending the funeral in a body. The pall bearers were Messrs. D. E. Offutt, S. T. Jones, F. A. Thayer, A. G. Sturgiss, J. M. Jarboe and John T. Mitchell. The interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

THOMAS A. MAULSBY.

After long weeks, in fact, years of suffering, Capt. Thomas A. Maulsby, of Fairmont, West Va., died at his summer home, Mountain Lake Park, on Tuesday morning, aged 77 years. His body was forwarded to Fairmont the same afternoon and was buried there this morning. During the War of the Rebellion Captain Maulsby commanded Battery F, First West Virginia Light Artillery, and at Martinsburg, W. Va., on June 14, 1863, while in an encounter with Rhodes Division, Ewell's Corps, he received a wound to his leg, from the effects of which he never recovered.

PETER WILT.

Peter Wilt, of Garrett county, who died at his home about eight miles from Barton, was buried in the Broadwater cemetery on Road Hill last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Wilt was about 55 years of age, a farmer by occupation, and is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Delia Warnick, of Bond, and four sons, Benjamin, John, Howard and Thomas.

Married.

MORRISON—JOHNSON.—Mr. Taylor Morrison, now of Keyser, but recently of Piedmont, W. Va., and Miss Georgiana Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Knox Polk Johnson, of Piedmont, were married Tuesday morn at the residence of the bride's parents, East Hampshire street, in Piedmont, W. Va., by Rev. Thos. E. Gallagher. Only the immediate families were present. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison left on train No. 2 for New York, where they will spend about two weeks, returning to Keyser, their future home, on October 20.

GORTNER.

Husking corn is the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Serock left on Tuesday for Springs, Pa., where they will visit relatives for a few days.

Elias Yoder, of Norfolk, Va., who was visiting relatives here for the past week, left for Pennsylvania Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Kilius, who have been residing on the Smithman farm, near Oakland, moved their household effects to Breedlove, W. Va., on last Monday, where they have located for the winter.

Ben Yoder is visiting his old home near Lancaster, this week.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO OFFER FOR THE

Next 10 Days

75c a bushel for Potatoes and Onions; $1.00 per hundred for Cabbage; 50c per bushel for large picked Apples, free from bruises; $2.50 bushel for Beans if nice and clean.

FLOUR We are now unloading two cars of Best grade of Spring Wheat Flour, (White Satin), which we offer to exchange for Buckwheat Flour.

Also one car White Middlings at $1.65 per hundred.

P. S.---Offer Sweet Potatoes at $1.80 per barrel.

Will pay 3c lb for Buckwheat Flour

50c bushel for Fancy large Picked Apples.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

Now is the time to buy your

FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING

while stocks are complete. I have hundreds of Suits of new Fall Goods and can please almost anvone in both Quality and Price.

A lot of Men's Suits to close out

At $3.75

were $6.00

Plenty of Good, Warm UNDERWEAR.

And the most complete line of SHOES in town, from the cheapest that is good, to the best that is made. COME AND SEE!

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

Christian Missions and Civilization

An Address by the HON. WM. H. TAFT,
Sec'y of War.

Delivered at the Mass-Meeting of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, Carnegie Hall, New York City, April 20, 1908

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I have known a good many people that were opposed to foreign missions. I have known a good many regular attendants at church, consistent members, perhaps like our friend Governor Smith, of Georgia, that religiously, if you choose to use that term, refused to contribute to foreign missions.

It has been the custom in literature sometimes to make fun of them. You remember in Dickens, when Sam Weller came home to see his father, Tony, and the widow whom Tony had married, the widow and the Rev. Stiggins framed an indictment against Tony on the ground that he would not contribute any money to pay for flannel waistcoats and colored pocket handkerchiefs for little infants in the West Indies. He said they were little humbugs, and he said, moreover, in an undertone to Sam, that he would come down pretty handsome for some straight veskits for some people at home.

Now, I confess that there was a time when I was enjoying a smug provincialism that I hope has left me now, when I rather sympathized with that view. Until I went to the Orient, until there were thrown on me the responsibilities with reference to the extension of civilization in those far distant lands, I did not realize the immense importance of foreign missions. The truth is we got to wake up in this country. We are not all there are in the world. There are lots besides us, and there are lots of people besides us that are entitled to our efforts and our money and our sacrifice to to help them on in the world. Now no man can study the movement of modern civilization from an utterly impartial standpoint and not realize that Christianity and the spirit of Christianity is the only basis for the hope of modern civilization and the growth of popular self-government. The spirit of Christianity is pure democracy. It is the equality of man before God, the equality of man before the law, which is, as I understand it, the most God-like manifestation that man has been able to make. Now I am not here tonight to speak of foreign missions from a purely religious standpoint. That has been done and will be done. I am here to speak of it from the standpoint of political, governmental advancement, the advancement of modern civilization. And I think I have had some opportunity to know how dependent we are on the spread of Christianity in any hope that we may have of uplifting the peoples whom Providence has thrust upon us for our guidance.

FOREIGN MISSIONS AND THE PHILIPPINES.

Foreign missions began a long time ago. In the Philippines from 1565 to 1571 there were five Augustinian friars that came out by direction of Philip II, charged with the duty under Legaste of Christianizing those islands. By the greatest good luck, they reached there just at the time when the Mohammedans were thinking of coming into the same place, and they spread Christianity through those islands with no violence, but in the true spirit of Christian missionaries. They taught the natives of those islands agriculture, they taught them peace and the arts of peace. And so it came about the only people as a body that are Christians in the whole Orient are the Filipino people of the Christian provinces of the Philippines, 7,000,000 souls. Now I dwell upon this because it is the basis of the whole hope of sucess that we have in our problem in those islands. It is true that these people were not developed beyond the point of Christian tutelage. Those old missionaries felt that it was not wise to expose these people to the temptations of the knowledge which European Christians had, and so they were kept in a state of ignorance, but, nevertheless, they were Christians, and for 300 years have been under that influence, and now in this condition of Christian tutelage, their ideals are western, their ideals are European, their ideals are Christian, and they understand us when we attempt to unfold to them the theories and doctrines of self-government, of democracy; because they are Christians, they are fit material to make in two or three generations a self-governing people. Now we have the opportunity to know, because we have got 1,000,000 non-Christians there; we have 400,000 or 500,000 Mohammedans, and they don't understand republican government; they don't understand popular government. They welcome a despotism. And they never will understand that kind of a government until they have been converted to Christianity.

OUR BUSINESS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Now I suppose I ought not to get into a discussion here of our business in the Philippines, but I never can take up that subject without pointing a moral. It is my conviction that our nation is just as much charged with the obligation to help the unfortunate people of other countries that are thrust upon us by fate until they are fit to become self-governing people, as it is the business of the wealthy and fortunate in the community to help the infirm and the unfortunate of that community. I know that it is said that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that authorizes national altruism of that sort. Well, of course there is not. But there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that forbids it. What there is in the Constitution of the United States, is a breathing spirit that we as a nation with all the responsibilities and power that any nation ever had, and, therefore, when it becomes the Christian duty of a nation to assist another nation, the Constitution authorizes it because it is part of its being. We went into the Cuban war, and we didn't go there for conquest. We went there because we thought there was an international scandal there that ought to be ended, and that we had some responsibility with respect to that scandal, if we could end it and did not do it—and with the best and most self-denying purpose with respect to Cuba—and then we find these countries on our hands.

ROMAN CATHOLICS AND PROTESTANTS.

Now then, in the islands: I have been at the head of the Philippines, and I know what I am talking about when I say that the hope of these islands depends upon the development of the power of the churches that are in those islands. One of the most discouraging things today is not the helpless, but the poverty-stricken condition of the Roman Catholic Church, which has the largest congregation in those islands; and every man, be he Protestant or Catholic, must in his soul hope for the prosperity of the Roman Catholic Church in those islands in order that it may do the work that it ought in uplifting those people.

So too with reference to the Protestant missions in those islands. They are doing a grand and noble work. It may be that their congregations will not be so large as those of the Roman Catholic Church—it is not to be so expected—but the spirit of Christian emalation, if I may use it, of competition, between the representatives of the churches, has the grandest effect upon the agents of all the churches, and so indirectly upon the people. And it is the influence of the churches upon a people as ignorant as they are that holds up the hands of the civil governor, charged as he is with the responsibility of maintaining peace and order, of inducing them to educate their children, and to go on upward toward the plane of self-government.

I am talking practical facts about the effect of religion on the political government, and I know what I am talking about. Now foreign missions accomplish—I did not realize it until I went into the Orient the variety of things that they accomplish. They have reached the conclusion that in order to make a man a good Christian, you have got to make him useful in a community and teach him something to do and give him some sense and intelligence.

So, connected with every successful foreign mission is a school, ordinarily an industrial school. Also you have to teach him cleanliness is next to Godliness, and that one business of his is to keep himself healthy, and so in connection with every good foreign mission they have hospitals and doctors. And, therefore, the mission makes a nucleus of modern civilization, with schools, teachers, and physicians, and the church. In that way, having educated the native, having taught him how to live, then they are able to be sure that they have made him a consistent Christian.

CHINA HEADED RIGHT.

Of course they say there are a great many rich Christians in China. Doubtless there are. Chinese do not differ from other people, and they are quite willing to admit a conversion they do not have in order that they may fill their stomachs; but that does not affect the real fact, which is that every foreign mission in China is a great state of transition. China is looking forward to progress. China is to be guided by whom? It is to be guided by the young Christian students and scholars that either learn English or some foreign language at home or are sent abroad to be instructed, and who come back and whose words are listened to by those who exercise influence at the head of the government. Therefore it is that these frontier posts of civilization are so much more important than the mere numerical count of converts seem to make them.

I speak from the standpoint of, as I say, political civilization in such a country as China. They have, I think, 3,000 missionaries in China. The number of students was 35,000 last year. They go out into the neighborhood, and they cannot but have a good effect throughout that great empire, large as it is, to promote Christianity and the ideas of civilization. Now two or three things make one impatient when he understands the facts. One is this criticism of the missionaries as constantly involving the governments in trouble, as constantly bringing about war. The truth is that western civilization in trade is pressing into the Orient and the agents that are sent forward, I am sorry to say, are not the best representatives of Western civilization. The American and Englishman and others who live in the Orient are, many of them, excellent, honest, God-fearing men; but there are in that set of advance agents of Western civilization gentlemen who left the West for the good of the West, and because their history in the West might prove embarrassing at home. More than that, even where they are honest, hard-working tradesmen and merchants attempting to push business into the Orient, their minds are constantly on business. It is not human nature that they should resist the temptations that not infrequently present themselves to get ahead of the Oriental brother in business transactions. They are generally quite out of sympathy with a spirit of brotherhood toward the Oriental natives. Even in the Philippines that spirit is shown, for while I was there I can remember hearing on the streets, sung by a gentleman that did not agree with my views of our duty towards the Filipinos:

He may be a brother of William H. Taft
But he ain't no brother of mine.

Now that is the spirit that we are too likely to find among the gentlemen who go into the East for the mere purpose of extending trade. Then I am bound to say that the restraint of public opinion, of a fear of criticism of one's neighbors that one finds at home, to keep men in the straight and narrow path are loosened in the Orient, and we do not find that they are the models, many of them, that they ought to be, in probity and morality. They look upon the native as inferior, and they are too likely to treat him with insult.

Hence it is that in the progress of civilization we must move along as trade moves, and as foreign missions moves on it is through the foreign missions that we must expect to have the true picture of Christian brotherhood presented to those natives, the true spirit of Christian sympathy. That is what makes, in the progress of civilization, the immense importance of Christian missions. You go into China today and try to find out what the conditions are in the interior—consult in Peking the gentlemen who are supposed to know and where do they go? They go at once to the missionaries, to the men who have spent their lives far advanced into the nation, far beyond the point of safety if any uprisng takes place, and who have learned by association with the natives, by living with them, by bringing them into their houses, by helping them on to their feet, who have learned the secret of what Chinese life is. And therefore it is that the only reliable books that you can read, telling you the exact condition of Chinese civilization, are written by these same foreign missionaries who have been so much blamed for involving us in foreign war.

It is said that the Boxer War was due to the interference of missionaries, and the feeling of the Chinese against the Christian religion as manifested and exemplified by the missionaries. That is not true. It is true that the first outbreak was against the missionaries—because the outbreak was against foreign interference, and it was easiest to attack those men who were fartherest in the Chinese nation, and there they made expression of that feeling by their attack against the whole foreign interference. But that which really roused the opposition of the Chinese was the feeling that all we Christian nations were sitting around waiting to divide up the Middle Kingdom, and waiting to get our piece of the pork. Now that is the feeling that the Chinese have; and I am not prepared to say that there was not some ground for the suspicion.

I think when a men has done his duty, and when he has made an issue, that he is entitled to have it stated in the face of accusations that are unjust. I have described to you some of the conditions that prevail with respect to the Americans in the cities of the Orient—in Shanghai and in other of those cities; and I am sorry to say that there was nothing there that ought to fill the mind of an American with pride. Our consular system has been greatly improved; and then we established a court, a consular of China, the Circuit Court of the United States; and a man was put in there who had been attorney general of the Philipine Islands, who had had some experience in dealing with the waifs that come around up the coast and through one town and then go on up to another town. They left Manila, and then after they had left Manila they spent their time in damning the government of Manila. We call them in Manila Shanghai roosters.

Wilfley went up there as judge of that court and he found a condition of an Augean stable that needed cleaning out, so far as the Americans were concerned; and I think perhaps in this audience I would be able to call on witnesses who could testify to the condition of morality that was carried on there under the protection of the American flag; because we have extra-territorial jurisdiction, under concession made by the Chinese Government to us. Wilfley went to work, and before he got through the American flag floated over a moral community; and in so doing he had the sympathy of the foreign missionaries that were in that neighborhood. But he has come home—and when you are a good many miles away facts are difficult to prove—pictures are easy to paint in lurid colors, of the tyranny of a judge away off there—and he has been subjected to a good deal of criticism of that kind. I want to give my personal testimony on the subject in favor of the defendant.

With this change in our diplomatic relations to China, and by doing what was a clean honest thing to do, but which as between nations seems to be a little more exceptional, perhaps, than between individuals—by agreeing to return the money that we really ought not to have taken as the Boxer indemnity, by the influence of our own foreign missions there and by the belief in China that we are not there for our own exploitation, or to appropriate jurisdiction, territorial or otherwise, I think we stand well in China today.

I think we stand in such a position that such a movement as this, in order to raise money to increase the number of missionaries and the number of nuclei of Christianity and civilization in that teeming population of 450,000,000, has a better prospect today than it ever had before. Therefore such a movement as this must enlist the sympathy and the aid of all who understand the great good that self-denying men who go so far to accomplish their good are doing.

MISSIONARIES: THEIR LIFE AND DWELLINGS.

Now you can read books—I have read them—in which the missions are described as most comfortable buildings; and it is said that missionaries are living more luxuriously than they would at home, and therefore do not call for our help or sympathy. It is true that there are a good many mission buildings that are handsome buildings; I have seen them. It is true that they are comfortable; but they ought to be comfortable. One of the things that you got to do with the Oriental is to fill his eyes with something he can see, and if you erect a great missionary building, he deems your coming into that community of some importance; and the missionary societies that are doing that and are building their own buildings for the missionaries, are following a very much more sensible course than is the United States in denying to its representatives anything but mere hovels. But it is not a life of ease; it is not a life of comfort and luxury. I do not know how many of you have felt that thing I think the physicians call nostalgia. I do not know whether you have experienced that sense of distance from home, that being surrounded by an alien people, that impression that if you could only have two hours of association with your old friends of home, if you could only get into the street car and sit down, or hang to a strap, in order to be with them. I tell you, when you come back after an absence of five or ten years, even the strap seems a dear old memory. These men are doing grand, good work. I do not mean to say that there are not exceptions among them; that sometimes they do not make mistakes, and sometimes to not meddle in something which it would be better for them from a politic motive to keep out of; but I mean as a whole, these missionaries in China and in other countries worthily represent the best Christian spirit of this country, and worthily are doing the work that you have sent them to do.

I thank you for the opportunity of speaking on behalf of this body of Christian men and women who are doing a work which is indispensable to the spirit of Christian civilization.

The Republican for Job Work.

Stockholders' Meeting.

All stockholders' of the Yough River Oil and Gas Company, of Garrett County, are hereby notified, that a meeting of the said stockholders will be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, the 3rd day of October, next, at 2 o'clock p. m., to consider and ratify the extension of leases and to transact all such business that may lawfully brought before them.

D. M. MASON, Vice-Pres't.
E. J. FRINGER, Sec'y.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, MD.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.54 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.55 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *9.55 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points. Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m. *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO. Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.37 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.). Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING. Depart *9.26 a. m., local, 7.35 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.37 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 midnight.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.). Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS. Depart *7.12 a. m., *6.55 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.51 a. m., *8.29 a. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land :

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contain some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

The REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and wnen ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber AND Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Departm't
OAKI AND, MARYLAND.

HUNTING THE GRIZZLY
BY
THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1885, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

FOR some days after our arrival on the Bighorn range we did not come across any grizzly.

Although it was still early in September, the weather was cool and pleasant, the nights being frost; and every two or three days there was a flurry of light snow, which rendered the labor of tracking much more easy. Indeed, throughout our stay on the mountains, the peaks were snow-capped almost all the time. Our fare was excellent, consisting of elk venison, mountain grouse, and small trout; the last caught in one of the beautiful little lakes that lay almost up by timber line. There were plenty of black-tail deer in the woods, and we came across a number of bands of cow and calf elk, or of young bulls; but after several days' hunting, we were still without any head worth taking home, and had seen no signs of grizzly, which was the game we were especially anxious to kill. One day I reached camp early in the afternoon, and waited a couple of hours before Merrifield put in an appearance. At last I heard a shout—the familiar long-drawn Eikoh-h-h of the cattle-men—and he came in sight galloping at speed down an open glade, and waving his hat, evidently having had good luck; and when he reined in his small, wiry, cow-pony, we saw that he had packed behind his saddle the fine, glossy pelt of a black bear. Better still, he announced that he had been off about ten miles to a perfect tangle of ravines and valleys where bear sign was very thick; and not of black bear either, but grizzly.

We sat still to wait for his approach.

Merrifield's tale made me decide to shift camp at once, and go over to the spot where the bear-tracks were so plenty. Next morning we were off, and by noon pitched camp by a clear brook, in a valley with steep, wooded sides, but with good feed for the horses in the open bottom. We rigged the canvas wagon sheet into a small tent, sheltered by the trees from the wind, and piled great pine logs near by where we wished to place the fire; for a night camp in the sharp fall weather is cold and dreary unless there is a roaring blaze of flame in front of the tent.

That afternoon we again went out, and I shot a fine bull elk. I came home alone toward nightfall, walking through a reach of burnt forest, where there was nothing but charred tree-trunks and black mould. When nearly through it I came across the huge, half-human footprints of a great grizzly, which must have passed by within a few minutes. It gave me rather an eerie feeling in the silent, lonely woods, to see the unmistakable proofs that I was in the home of the mighty lord of the wilderness. I followed the tracks in the fading twilight until it became too dark to see them any longer, and then shouldered my rifle and walked back to camp.

That evening we almost had a visit from one of the animals we were after. Several times we had heard at night the musical calling of the bull elk. This particular night, when we were in bed and the fire was smouldering, we were roused by a ruder noise—a kind of grunting or roaring whine, answered by the frightened snorts of the ponies. It was a bear which had evidently not seen the fire, as it came from behind the bank, and had probably been attracted by the smell of the horses. After it made out what we were it stayed round a short while, again uttered its peculiar roaring grunt, and went off; we had seized our rifles and had run out into the woods, but in the darkness could see nothing; indeed it was rather lucky we did not stumble across the bear, as he could have made short work of us when we were at such a disadvantage.

Next day we went off on a long tramp through the woods and along the sides of the canyons. There were plenty of berry bushes growing in clusters; and all around these there were fresh tracks of bear. But the grizzly is also a flesh-eater, and has a great liking for carrion. On visiting the place where Merrifield had killed the black bear, we found that the grizzlies had been there before us, and had utterly devoured the carcass, with cannibal relish. Hardly a scrap was left, and we turned our steps toward where lay the bull elk I had killed. It was quite late in the afternoon when we reached the place. A grizzly had evidently been at the carcass during the preceding night, for his great footprints were in the ground all around it, and the carcass itself was gnawed and torn, and partially covered with earth and leaves—for the grizzly has a curious habit of burying all of his prey that he does not at the moment need. A great many ravens had been feeding on the body, and they wheeled about over the tree tops above us, uttering their barking croaks.

The forest was composed mainly of what are called ridge-pole pines, which grow close together, and do not branch out until the stems are thirty or forty feet from the ground. Beneath these trees we walked over a carpet of pine needles, upon which our moccasined feet made no sound. The woods seemed vast and lonely, and their silence was broken now and then by the strange noises always to be heard in the great forests, and which seem to mark the sad and everlasting unrest of the wilderness. We climbed up along the trunk of a dead tree which had toppled over until its upper branches struck in the limb crotch of another, that thus supported it at an angle half-way in its fall. When above the ground far enough to prevent the bear's smelling us, we sat still to wait for his approach; until, in the gathering gloom, we could no longer see the sights of our rifles, and could but dimly make out the carcass of the great elk.

It was useless to wait longer; and we clambered down and stole out to the edge of the woods. The forest here covered one side of a steep, almost canyon-like ravine, whose other side was bare except of rock and sage-brush. Once out from under the trees there was still plenty of light, although the sun had set, and we crossed over some fifty yards to the opposite hill-side, and crouched down under a bush to see if perchance some animal might not also leave the cover. To our right the ravine sloped downward toward the valley of the Bighorn River, and far on its other side we could catch a glimpse of the great main chain of the Rockies, their snow peaks glinting crimson in the light of the set sun. Again we waited quietly in the growing dusk until the pine trees in our front blended into one dark, frowning mass. We saw nothing; but the wild creatures of the forest had begun to stir abroad. The owls hooted dismally from the tops of the tall trees, and two or three times a harsh wailing cry, probably the voice of some lynx or wolverine, arose from the depths of the woods. At last, as we were rising to leave, we heard the sound of the breaking of a dead stick, from the spot where we knew the carcass lay. It was a sharp, sudden noise, perfectly distinct from the natural creaking and snapping of the branches; just such a sound as would be made by the tread of some heavy creature. "Old Ephraim" had come back to the carcass. A minute afterward, listening with strained ears, we heard him brush by some dry twigs. It was entirely too dark to go in after him; but we made up our minds that on the morrow he should be ours.

Early next morning we were over at the elk carcass, and, as we expected, found that the bear had eaten his fill at it during the night. His tracks showed him to be an immense fellow, and were so fresh that we doubted if he had left long before we arrived; and we made up our minds to follow him up and try to find his lair. The bears that lived on these mountains had evidently been little disturbed; indeed, the Indians and most of the white hunters are rather chary of meddling with "Old Ephraim," as the mountain men style the grizzly, unless they get him at a disadvantage; for the sport is fraught with some danger and but small profit. The bears thus seemed to have very little fear of harm, and we thought it likely that the bed of the one who had fed on the elk would not be far away.

My companion was a skilful tracker, and we took up the trail at once. For some distance it led over the soft, yielding carpet of moss and pine needles, and the footprints were quite easily made out, although we could follow them but slowly; for we had, of course, to keep a sharp look-out ahead and around us as we walked noiselessly on in the sombre half-light always prevailing under the great pine trees, through whose thickly interlacing branches stray but few beams of light, no matter how bright the sun may be outside. We made no sound ourselves, and every little sudden noise sent a thrill through me as I peered about with each sense on the alert.

After going a few hundred yards the tracks turned off on a well-beaten path made by the elk; the woods were in many places cut up by these game trails, which had often become as distinct as ordinary foot-paths. The beast's footprints were perfectly plain in the dust, and he had lumbered along up the path until near the middle of the hillside, where the ground broke away and there were hollows and boulders. Here there had been a windfall, and the dead trees lay among the living, piled across one another in all directions; while between and around them sprouted up a thick growth of young spruces and other evergreens. The trail turned off into the tangled thicket, within which it was almost certain we would find our quarry. We could still follow the tracks, by the slight scrapes of the claws on the bark, or by the bent and broken twigs; and we advanced with noiseless caution, slowly climbing over the dead tree trunks and upturned stumps, and not letting a branch rustle or catch on our clothes. When in the middle of the thicket we crossed what was almost a breastwork of fallen logs, and Merrifield, who was leading, passed by the upright stem of a great pine. As soon as he was by it he sank suddenly on one knee, turning half round, his face fairly aflame with excitement; and as I strode past him, with my rifle at the ready, there, not ten steps off, was the great bear, slowly rising from his bed among the young spruces. He had heard us, but apparently hardly knew exactly where or what we were, for he reared up on his haunches sideways to us. Then he saw us and dropped down again on all fours, the shaggy hair on his neck and shoulders seeming to bristle as he turned towards us. As he sank down on his forefeet I had raised the rifle; his head was bent slightly down, and when I saw the top of the white bead fairly between his small, glittering evil eyes, I pulled trigger. Half-rising up, the huge beast fell over on his side in the death throes, the ball having gone into his brain, striking as fairly between the eyes as if the distance had been measured by a carpenter's rule.

The whole thing was over in twenty seconds from the time I caught sight of the game; indeed, it was over so quickly that the grizzly did not have time to show fight at all or come a step toward us. He was a monstrous fellow, much larger than any I have seen since, whether alive or brought in dead by the hunters. As near as we could estimate (for of course we had nothing with which to weigh more than very small portions) he must have weighed about twelve hundred pounds, and though this is not as large as some of his kind are said to grow in California, it is yet a very unusual size for a bear. He was a good deal heavier than any of our horses; and it was with the greatest difficulty that we were able to skin him. He must have been very old, his teeth and claws being all worn down and blunted; but nevertheless he had been living in plenty, for he was as fat as a prize hog, the layers on his back being a finger's length in thickness. He was still in the summer coat, his hair being short, and in color a curious brindled brown, somewhat like that of certain bulldogs; while all the bears we shot afterward had the long thick winter fur, cinnamon or yellowish brown. By the way, the name of this bear has reference to its character and not to its color, and should, I suppose, be properly spelt grisly—in the sense of horrible, exactly as we speak of a "grisly spectre"—and not grizzly; but perhaps the latter way of spelling it is too well established to be now changed.

There, not ten steps off, was the great bear.

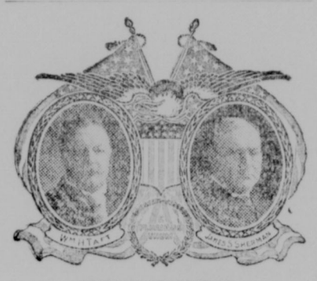
"I see," said Mrs. Starvem, "that a certain scientist claims we'll soon get a palatable food from wood"—

"Well," growled the cranky boarder, "it seems impossible to get it out of 'board.'"

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1908.



FOR PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM H. TAFT,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

JAMES S. SHERMAN,

OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

COL. PEARRE RIDICULES LEWIS.

Col. George A. Pearre, Republican condidate for Congress, opened his Montgomery county campaign Monday evening, when he addressed a mass meeting at Tacoma Park. The crowd was not large, but it made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. A brass band was on hand to help whoop things up. George R. Davis of Linden presided and spoke briefly in introducing the speakers. Former Senator Marion Butler of North Carolina also addressed the meeting.

Col. Pearre's speech consumed about an hour. He touched on the tariff, contrasting the present prices of farm products with those under the Democratic administration, and paid attention to the guaranty of bank deposits, severely criticising that plank in the Democratic platform.

Col. Pearre devoted a considerable portion of his speech to his Democratic opponent, David J. Lewis, whom he declared to be without fixed political principles, charging that he has belonged to three parties in his brief career. He ridiculed the claims of his opponent that Allegany county would give a Democratic majority and predicted that not only would that county register its usual big Republican majority, but that there would be no falling off of the Republican vote in any of the counties, and that the district would go Republican by 5,000 majority.

TAFT AND LABOR.

At Leavenworth, Kan., Monday, there was an incident which goes to show that the labor vote is not to be misled by all the schemes that Gompers and Bryan can hatch between them. All the workshops in the town were closed while the men flocked to see and greet Judge Taft, and they stood in a drenching rain to hear what he had to say. For two weeks past Mr. Taft has been touring the northwest and west and it is of record that his audiences have been large and everywhere workingmen have welcomed him and listened to his speeches with unmistakable evidence of attention and interest. Such of them as may have heard Mr. Bryan also during this campaign must have been impressed in the attitudes of the two men. Mr. Bryan harangues his audiences, attacks the Republican party viciously and assails the record of Judge Taft as that of an enemy of labor. He makes the appeal of the agitator, the soothsayer and the patent medicine man.

Judge Taft, on the other hand, analyzes the record of the Republican party, financially, economically and as to labor legislation and shows by what has been done that his party is pre-eminently the friend of the wage-earner, in that it has accomplished definite results, while the Democracy has promised, denounced and condemned. Nor does he stoop to apologetic defense of his own accord on labor issues, but tells the plain facts and demands that they be their own justification. He does not accuse Mr. Bryan recklessly of being the enemy of labor, but he throws the spotlight on the Democratic nominee's career in congress, where the latter might have been of some service to workingmen, and lets them see that the one piece of legislation with which Mr. Bryan's name is linked brought on a period of widespread depression, an era of soup houses, during which, according to Mr. Gompers himself, the army of the unemployed numbered 3,000,000.

Instead of the labor vote being bound hand and foot for delivery by Mr. Gompers it will be found that it still thinks for itself and acts as it thinks. When it does that there need be no apprehension as to the fate of Taft and Sherman.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

SCARED!

If Mr. Rooseveit's activity is making votes for Bryan then one would suppose that supporters of the Denver nominee would welcome anything the President might do, whether it were by written or spoken words. As to the effect of his entry upon the field we should say that it might not be safe to trust to the judgment of Mr. Bryan and Mr. Kern. They are vitally interested. They are in position to determine just how much or how little an influence upon the tide of the campaign Mr. Roosevelt's personal and persistent advocacy of Judge Taft is having. And both of them are protesting vehemently and bitterly. Would they do so if their cause were being benefited? Not by a long shot. Moreover they fully understand, if Democratic newspapers and some squeamish Republicans do not, that the battle of 1908, for reasons well known, centers about Roocsevelt and the Roosevelt adminisnistration. It cannot well be otherwise. For seven years the President has pursued such a course and followed such policies as inevitably make his actions and record the subject of deep public concern. Mr. Bryan attacks these, and promises something better. Judge Taft defends them.

Unless the Republican party, therefore, can demonstrate that Mr. Roosevelt's administration and policies are superior to Mr. Bryan's platform and prospectus, unless Republicans stand by Roosevelt and the man they have nominated to succeed him, with all that that implies, there can be no hope for Judge Taft. It is the realization of this that prompts Democratic papers and orators to the frenzy of the present. They know Mr. Roosevelt's force, they appreciate his skill as a political leader, they do not underestimate his strength with the people. They fear nothing quite as much as his almost daily participation in the campaign. If he goes on the stump they are done for.

SECRETARY TAFT'S GOOD WORD FOR MISSIONS.

Under the above caption the New York Christian Advocate April 30 last, said editorially of an address delivered by Secretary Taft at Carnegie Hall, New York City on the Monday night preceeding the publication in the Advocate, the following:

Secretary Taft was the principal speaker at the men's meeting of the Laymen's Missionary Movement on Monday night of last week. John R. Mott in his opening remarks paid a glowing tribute to the Secretary for the part he had taken in advancing Christianity throughout the uncivilized world.

Many of the papers quoted only what Secretary Taft said in favor of the Catholic Church, and the impression was made upon those who read only the papers that he was endeavoring to gain favor with the Roman Catholic Church; whereas he spoke just as he should speak on the whole subject. When a man is mentioned for the Presidency of the United States every one thinks that he is speaking for votes, but there is no reason to believe that this address was aimed at any such result. We present the entire speech to our readers without the correction of the speaker. It reads well and is a valuable testimony to the influence of Christian missions, and an antidote to the incorrect or magnified statements which are set afloat by haters of Christianity, in some cases, and by careless observers, by sectarians, by mere politicians, or by travelers who stay in a country from twenty-four hours to a week.

Dr. James M. Buckley, who is editor of the Advocate, is one of the best known churchmen of the country and as editor of the leading publication of the Methodist Episcopal church, his endorsement of Secretary Taft's work in the cause of Christianity carries with it influence which will be hard to overcome.

The address as pubilshed in the Advocate will be found in full on another page of THE REPUBLICAN today.

WHICH OF THE TWO?

The great and practical issue, says the Baltimore Sun, which of the two men presented, respectively, by the two principal parties will it be best for the country to elect as President. Which will the people have—a theorist, a dreamer, an agitator who has been agitating and proposing remedies for 12 years, but whose theories and remedies have never been tested?

Or will the people prefer the calm and honest man of affairs who is experienced in government and has made good in each one of the high and important places in which he has been tested? Do the people want talk and threats of annihalation or do they want action that will restore confidence? If they want talk, Mr. Bryan is the man for the place. If they want action and achievement, Mr. Taft is to be preferred.

The country wants a rest from agitation; there is need of business peace. Mr. Taft promises this, and he will keep his promise. His whole record is surety for him. He will enforce the law and punish violators of the law, high or low, rich or poor. But he will not undertake to establish an autocracy at Washington and prescribe how much a manufacturer shall be permitted to sell. He will not undertake to say what prices shall be charged; he will not undertake to wipe out the states and establish a new form of government. He will not take away the money of depositors in honest banks to pay the debts of dishonest banks. Mr. Bryan promises to keep the country stirred up by ringing messages to congress and by all kinds of political nostrums which will make the patient worse instead of better. We want no quack political doctors or quack prescriptions, and consequently we do not want Mr. Bryan.

HOW WILL HE VOTE?

The Workingman's Interest in the Coming Election.

That the railroad employe is more concerned in the prosperity of the railroad for which he works than the people who own the stock and bonds was a proposition which Mr. B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the executive committee of the Rock Island and San Francisco lines, explained to the Convention of Locomotive Engineers at Columbus, Ohio, on Monday. Of each dollar earned by the railroads of the country 42 cents goes to the employes and 21 cents to the investors; that is to say the owners of the road.

Any danger which threatens the railroad investor threatens the payroll. The investor hesitates to risk his money in a business which is being constantly attacked by the lawmakers and threatened and denounced by the politicians. Therefore, war against capital means war against labor, for if capital gets scared and goes into hiding labor will go hunnry. "Any political party or any candidate, either for national or State office," Mr. Yoakum impressively declared, "who stands for a policy that means the retarding of the growth of this country and the building of new railroads and the improvement of the old ones, stands for a policy that takes the throttle from the locomotive engineer, the shovel from the locomotive fireman, the bell cord from the conductor, the lantern from the brakeman and the flagman, the hammer and the chisel from the shopman and the track tools from the trackman."

And this is going only part of the way. The same conditions which would deprive these railroad men of their employment would deprive also a multitude of others of the means of earning their daily bread. It became popular and the fashion some time ago to denounce the railroads. High officials indulged in fulminations; Congress got to work on them; the Legislatures in 20 States began enacting laws for the reduction of rates; county commissioners, city and State officials began marking up taxes; the courts got busy and the various attorney-generals here and there began prosecutions, and the management of railroads was denounced. There was prosecutions of railroads because shippers could not get all the cars they needed. The effect followed as the thunder follows the lightning flash. In a short time business had so decreased that instead of not having enough cars to go around, there were about half a million idle on the sidetracks and a good many thousands of locomotives in the roundhouse, and the men who had run them were furloughed. Capital took alarm and would not lend their money to the railroad companies. Improvements and new construction had to be discontinued, and thousands of laborers started the rounds to look for work. Then the orders for cars and locomotives were countermanded, and such concerns as the South Baltimore Car Works and various locomotive works suffered, and men were thrown out of employment. The usual amount of steel rails was not ordered. This caused the reduction of forces at the rail mills, such as Sparrows Point, and the army of the unemployed was augmented. It takes two tons of iron ore, one ton of coke and a half ton of limestone to make a ton of rails. When the rails were not ordered the men who mined the coal, made the coke, quarried the limestone and transported all of them to the rail mill were out of their jobs. The Burlington road, Mr. Yoakum said, had been in the habit of buying each year 80,000 tons of rails. Last year it bought none, and that meant a loss to railroad employes of the transportation of 12,000 carloads of freight for this one road.

This was but the beginning of troubles. When the railroad men, the iron workers and miners lost their jobs or went on short hours they were unable to buy the manufactured articles which they always buy when they are receiving full wages. That meant that many factories had to reduce force or close for a time.

All this trouble came from excessive agitation and extreme legislation hostile to the railroads. The people of Georgia discovered the trouble, and when a State primary was held some time ago the people repudiated the agitators and selected a man for Governor who pledged himself to do his best to attract capital to the South, instead of driving it out.

Has there not been enough reckless agitation? Is it not time for the land to have a rest? It is for the people to answer this question at the polls in November. One candidate is a perpetual agitator, who has spent the last 12 years in agitating—in appeal to class feeling, in denouncing capital and urging strife; in the work of pulling down. The other candidate has spent those 12 years in constructive work, in building up. By nature and temperament he is averse to extremes. He is calm and has the judicial habit of examining problems carefully, looking on both sides and speaking cautiously. Which will the workingman choose—the man who represents the restoration of stability and prosperity, or the man whose methods and theories threaten the continuation of business depression?—Baltimore Sun.

EV. LUTHERAN CONFERENCE

To Be Held at Red House Church Next Week.

The Allegany Conference of the Ev. Lutheran church will meet on next Monday in St. John's church, Red House, Garrett county.

The announcement for the Conference says, "for several reasons this should be a profitable meeting and largely attended." The following is the program:

Monday, 7 30 p. m.—Conference sermon, Rev. J. Wm. McCauley; Conference offering; announcements; benediction

Tuesday morning, 10—Devotional half hour, Rev. W. C. Ney; 10.30, business; appointment of committees, arrangements and announcements. 2 o'clock—Reports: Missionary committee; Mt. Lake Reunion; Young Lutheran; 2.30—Addresses, "The Divinity of Christ," Rev. Samuel Stouffer, Rev. Alvin Yugel; "The Mid-Week Prayer Service—Its Importance and How Sustain It?" Rev. C. P. Bastian; 7.30—Installation of Rev. P. J. Wade; charge to the pastor, Rev. Edmund Manges; charge to the people, Rev. John S. Braren; conference offering.

Wednesday, 10 a. m.—Devotions, G. Trostle; discussion, "The Proposed Enlargement of the Allegany Conference" opened by Rev. A. F. Richardson; 1.30 p. m.—Reports from missions and vacant churches; addresses, "How Save the Country Church," Rev. F. R. Wagner and Rev. W. H. Berry; closing business session; 7.30 p. m.—Addresses, "The Church, Her Strength and Her Weakness," opened by Rev. W. Edgar Pierce; presentation of resolutions and adjournment.

A Grange Fair at Swanton.

On October 24th, 1908, the farmers of Swanton and vicinity under the auspices of Swanton Grange will hold the first fair of Garrett county. Every member of any Grange in the county will be expected to exhibit some farm or household product and an invitation is hereby extended to our brother and sister farmers in Garrett county not belonging to our organization to likewise exhibit with us at the trifling expense of 25 cents entrance fee for each exhibiter not belonging to the order. Admission to the fair is free to everybody. All exhibits should be in the hands of the committee by 9 a. m. of said day so as to be properly placed on the tables that the public may know the winners of the prizes.

This first fair will cover the following departments: 1st, General farm products, including dairy and apiary; 2nd, horticultural, including products of the garden, fruit and flowers; 3rd, thoroughbred poultry; 4th, household products. Of grain four quarts should be shown; corn on the ear at least six ears; potatoes one peck; other products a reasonable amount; in horticulture five apples constitute a plate and they should have their stems and be named.

As the object of this fair is to develop greater interest in agriculture in Garrett county, first and second prizes will be awarded wherever warranted by the exhibits in each class of the several departments, also a sweepstakes prize for the largest and best exhibit in each department.

Nothing is being left undone by the committee to make this farmers' rally a memorable and enjoyable day to all. To this end Prof. T. C. Atkeson, the talented and eloquent overseer of the National Grange and Master of West Virginia State Grange has been secured to address the public at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. While the Swanton Grange has arranged an elaborate program of talks, music, recitations, etc., for 7.30 p. m.

Remember that this entire literary program is free to everybody, including the editors. All are invited to come. Bring your baskets and help to make this fair, picnic and literary treat a grand success.

C. T. SWEET,
J. G. FRIEND,
HENRY JOHNSON,
FRANK BROBST,
MOLLY FRIEND,
FLORENCE BERNARD,
ANNIE STEIDING,
Committe of arrangements.

IT IS because of his loyalty to high ideals, because of his broad sympathies and his rare equipment in character, ability and experience, because tested in the difficult field of judicial and administrative work he has proved his quality by eminent service, because of his varied learning, his acquaintance with affairs, respect for constitutional government, and his capacity intelligently and justly to plan and direct necessary reforms that I most earnestly support the candidacy of William Howard Taft.—Gov. Hughes.

Lost $25,000 Worth of Bark.

The Babcock Lumber Company lost over $25,000 worth of bark at Douglass, W. Va., by the recent forest fires in that vicinity, and three trestles and a camp were destroyed in the Blackwater woods, tieing up the logging trains until yesterday. A large force of men has been busy all week rebuilding the trestles. Only by the mill closing down and the men working all day and a night as a bucket brigade was a large lumber mill saved in that vicinity.

Subscribe for The Republican.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany Couuty. 22222

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entities the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

Stop the coal-hod slavery!

Many a couple have had their home happiness wrecked by being yoked in slavery to a coal bucket—she in slavery to the uncleanliness and care of old-fashioned heating methods, and he in slavery to its ever-increasing bills. Often it is just this extra, needless expense and work that keeps them from getting on—getting a right start in domestic life.

AMERICAN & IDEAL RADIATORS & BOILERS for Hot Water or Low-Pressure Steam free you of this slavery. The outfit saves so much in coal and cleaning, in time and temper, that it soon pays for itself. The house is changed into a home, the family health is protected; and as the outfit will not rust out or wear out, you get your money back if you sell the property, or get 10% to 15% more rental. Don't put it off! Write or ask today for free book, "Heating Investments Successful."

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,

OAKLAND, MD.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. V. JOLLIFFE.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnisdhe or unfurnished.

BIDS FOR WATER WORKS AND A SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, will be received until SEVEN O'CLOCK P. M., MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908, for the construction of a SYSTEM OF WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Plans and specifications and full information, for both water and sewerage, can be obtained upon application to the Clerk to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, or to Pennington and Fairley, engineers, Baltimore, Md.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.
Sept. 17–5t

SEALED PROPOSALS FOR MUNICIPAL BONDS.

$60,000 TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, BONDS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, until

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908,

for the purchase of SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FIVE PER CENT. WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE BONDS.

These bonds will be in denominations of $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year, and dated on the first day of their issue. They shall be numbered serially, and Bond No. 1 shall be due and payable two years from date of issue and thereafter each bond shall mature and be payable each consecutive year from the maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland to have the right to redeem any or all outstanding bonds twenty five years from date of issue.

All of said bonds to be exempt from municipal and county taxation.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Address, Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.
Sept. 17–5t

See The Republican for Job Printing

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$297,350 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured.	None
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers	53 06
Due from approved reserve agents.	48,461 40
Checks and other cash items	478 26
Notes of other National Banks	545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$10,881 65
Legal-tender notes	6,265 00 — 26,146 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation	2,500 00
Total	$561,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,061 72
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,969 04
Due to State Banks and Bankers	89 74
Individual deposits subject to check	213,621 28
Time certificates of deposit	201,828 94
Cashie 's checks outstanding	753 46
Total	$561,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.
HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank
OF
Oakland, Maryland.

See Sincell & Co. before buying cloaks and suits.

Mr. H. P. Tasker of the Democrat, spent Tuesday in Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. James McGettigan, of near Accident, were in town Monday.

Mr. Robt. Jackson, of Lonaconing, spent Sunday with relatives at Weber.

Mr. U. M. Stanton, of Grantsville, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Bowie Johnson spent Monday in Cumberland as the guest of Mrs. H. W. Matheny.

FOR SALE.—At half price, one new first-class repeating shot gun. Apply at HOTEL BOSLEY. 2t

Mrs. F. C. Schroeder went to Lonaconing Tuesday morning to visit her parents for a week.

Mr. Lloyd Shaffer, of Aurora, accompanied by his two daughters, spent Tuesday in Oakland.

A full silk lined Broadcloth Cloak, any color, for $12 at Sincell & Co.'s.

Mr. J. E. Fleming, of Bloomsburg, Ill., arrived in Oakland last Saturday night to visit his family.

Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill was in Baltimore Monday on business, returning to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Mrs. John W. Davis and two children went to Terra Alta yesterday afternoon to visit relatives a few days.

Miss Sue Shirer went to Grafton yesterday afternoon to remain for a few days as the guest of relatives.

Mrs. Delia I. Totten has returned to her home in Oakland from a brief visit to relatives in Elkins, W. Va.

Sincell & Co.'s cloak and suit stock is greater than ever.

Mrs. J. O. Thomas, of Hutton, who spent several weeks in Canada, returned to her home yesterday afternoon.

Miss Martha Townshend, of Morgantown, is here on a visit to the family of Mr. E. D. Kepner, and other relatives.

STOVES FOR SALE CHEAP—1 Southern Queen cook stove; 1 double heater hard coal; 2 open grate, either hard or soft coal. J. L. POLLOCK.

Mr. Thomas A. Gonder, manager of the Mountain Pharmaceutical Company, went to Thomas, West Va., Monday on business.

Mr. J. O. Thomas, vice president of the Tioga Tanning Company at Hutton, spent Tuesday morning in Oakland on business.

Mr. John B. Fay, Jr., formerly of Oakland, now a coal operator of Clearfield county, Pa., is in Oakland on a visit to friends.

Sheriff Austin Brown went to Friendsville Tuesday morning on business and also to visit his mother, who has been quite ill for some weeks.

Capt. James A. Hayden left Mountain Lake Park yesterday morning for a two weeks' inspection trip through the lower counties of the State.

Mrs J. B. Workman leaves Oakland this afternoon for Moundsville, West Va., where she joins Rev. Workman, who is at Conference in that city this week.

Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, of Baltimore, president of the Mountain Lake Park Association, was in Oakland yesterday on business connected with the management of the Park.

Helbig & West, of the Oakland Roller Mills, have the best grades of spring and winter wheat flour in town, which they will trade for buckwheat flour and also pay cash for buckwheat grain. 2t

Mr. W. O. Davis, after a visit of a week to Baltimore and other points east, returned to Oakland Monday night and on Tuesday resumed his position as assistant agent at the B. & O. station here.

Mrs. John Alexander, of Morgantown, and her son Mr. Earle Townshend, of Huntington, W. Va., who were here attending the funeral of Mrs. E. R. Townshend, returned to their respective homes yesterday.

In this paper today Messrs. Renninger & Offutt advertise the sale of bar fixtures, liquors, etc., now in the building formerly occupied by C. A. Hesen, under a mortgage executed by Hesen to the Misses Shaffer.

Rev. Dr. R. B. Ward and Rev. J. B. Workman, of Oakland, accompanied by Rev. H. E. Friend, of Hoyes, and Rev. E. J. Westfall, of Mountain Lake Park, left here on train No. 7 for Moundsville, West Va., Monday night where they are attending the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

THE First National Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

REV. WORKMAN ELECTED SEC'Y

Of the West Virginia Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church.

Yesterday at the morning session of the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. church now being held at Moundsville, W. Va., Rev. J. B. Workman, pastor of the Oakland congregation, was elected secretary of the Conference by a vote of 81 to 66, his opponent being Rev. Sterling J. Miller, of Wheeling, who has been secretary for the past four years.

The election of Mr. Workman to the position is a source of gratificatian to his many friends throughout the Conference District.

Mr. Andy Schlossnagle, formerly of this county, but for a number of years residing in Pennsylvania, was in the city yesterday on business connected with the Rockwood Brewing Company, which he represents in this territory.

The first of a series of local teachers' institutes to be held under the auspices of the Garrett County Teachers' Association will be conducted at Grantsville on October 17th. All teachers within a reasonable distance are requested and urged to attend.

Messrs. Lee Hoffman and Adam Hirsh, of Meyersdale, accompanied by Ernest Livengood of Elk Lick, Pa., and W. A. Sturgiss, of Oakland, who was on a visit to Meyersdale, came over to Oakland Monday afternoon in Mr. Hoffman's automobile, returning to Meyersdale yesterday morning.

Mr. Ferris Bosley, who is connected with the customs service at Sault Ste Marie, Michigan, arrived in Oakland last Friday to visit relatives and friends. Mrs. Bosley, who preceded him to Oakland by several weeks, will accompany her husband home when he returns, which will be in about three weeks.

Miss Marion Selby, of Howard county, who has been on a visit to her brother, Dr. B. F. Selby in Oakland for several weeks, left here Tuesday morning in company with Mrs. M. E. McQuay for Philadelphia, where the latter will spend the winter in company with Mr. McQuay, who is located in that city.

Mr. G. A. Shirer, who was so badly burned at the fire two months ago which destroyed his stable and burned up his horses, was down town Tuesday for the first time since the calamity befel him. While not yet entirely recovered from his horrible injuries Mr. Shirer is able to give some attention to business matters.

Dr. H. R. Boyer, of Accident, who is now in Baltimore, leaves that city on Tuesday for a tour of the Western states and will spend some time in California. After his return from the west he expects to take a post graduate course either in Chicago or New York and resume the practice of his profession at Accident in the early part of next year.

C. A. Hesen, who conducted a wholesale and retail liquor store in Oakland for a number of years, has gone to Allegany City, Pa., where, it is stated, he has engaged in other business. An attempt on his part to remove his furniture from Oakland on last Saturday resulted in attachment proceedings being instituted against the property, which was taken in possession by Sheriff Brown to satisfy a judgment rendered against Hesen.

G. W. Eckles, who formerly conducted the commissary department of B. & O. camp trains and also the Oakland Hotel, and who is well known all over the Cumberland division, has leased the Frederick City Hotel, Frederick, Md., for a number of years. The City Hotel is the biggest and best, and, in many respects, the only hotel in that well known Maryland city. The hotel secured by Mr. Eckles is now undergoing repairs, twenty-three private baths are being added and a new lobby, office, dining rooms and parlor are also being added. The hotel is one of about seventy-five bedrooms and ample parlors, sample rooms, &c., and is considered a very fine property.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m, and 7.30 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m. and 7.30 p.m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.
Gortner—Preaching in Union church next Sunday at 3 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E. CHURCH.

Wednesday 7.30 p. m., evening prayer and study class.
Thursday 9.30 a. m., baptism; 10 a. m., Holy Communion.

HORACE WARD STOWELL, Rector.

Subscribe for The Republican.

"Sis Perkins" at the Opera House.

Fashions change in the theatre just as they do in the dry goods store and millinery shop. One form of entertainment is the fad for a few weeks and then another springs up to take its place. Foolish farce, inane musical comedy and sensational plays of the slums are each popular in their turn for a time and then cease to attract the public. But there is a style of entertainment of which the patrons of the theatre never seems to tire—the drama which tells a story of life as it is, not all tears, but a happy blending of the two. It makes little difference where the scene of the play is laid, whether in quiet country lanes or on the busy city pavements, if it possesses true human interest, if the characters represent real men and women, with their joys and sorrows, their struggles and triumphs, it will live long after the shows which offer only gaudy scenery, flashy dresses and dismal jokes are forgotten. Plays like "Way Down East," "In Old Kentucky" and "Shore Acres" will never wear out, and the management of "Sis Perkins," which will be seen at Oakland Opera House on Monday, next, claim that its merits place it in this class. The central character is true to the soil and may be found in every village in the land. Uncouth, careless in dress and manner, yet inherently good and noble and true, she shows the qualities of mind and heart that are lacking in many of her fashionable sisters.

Road Improvement by the D. P. V. I. Society.

The Deer Park Village Improvement Society has widened its sphere of usefulness this year by undertaking the care of twenty-five miles of road in the vicinity of the village. This was accomplished by the County Commissioners appointing a member of the society, Dr. Mitchell, as supervisor. Mr. H. C. Hersman was engaged as foreman and has been at work with other men and teams continuously since May 15th. In addition to the usual levy for road repairs received from the Commissioners, the Improvement Society has spent about $350 on the roads. The road to Eagle Rock has been used by automobiles this summer as one result of this work. A year ago it was hardly practicable for anything less sturdy than a lumber wagon to get to the Rock. There is universal agreement among the hotel and cottage guests as well as in the village that the roads have never been in such good order.

Some Large Potatoes.

Yesterday Mr. B. C. Feather, who resides on the Charles Shaffer farm, a mile west of Oakland, brought to this office twelve potatoes, six each of two varieties, which weighed just fourteen pounds. On half an acre of ground Mr. Feather raised 160 bushels of the tubers, which is quite a record. Who can beat it?

District Meeting.

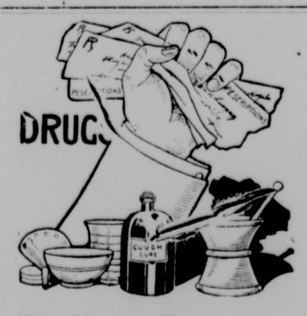
As District Representative of Oakland Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, Mr. William Newman has received a notice that a meeting of the District Committee will be held in Oakland on Friday night of this week, at which time representatives of all the Garrett and Allegany county Lodges are expected to d present. Members of the local lodge are requested to meet on Friday evening with the representatives.

Barn Burned.

The barn on the farm of Peter F. Michaels, in Garrett County, three miles west of Barton was destroyed by a fire caused by lightning. Nearly all the contents of the barn were destroyed. There was no insurance.

Ladies' Exchange.

Beginning on Saturday afternoon next at 2 oclock and continuing each Saturday afternoon thereafter during the present month, the ladies of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will conduct an exchange at the furniture store of Mr. D. E. Bolden on Second street. Homemade bread, pies, cakes, confections and other articles will be on sale. The proceeds will be used for church and charitable purposes. A liberal patronage is solicited



We Handle Prescriptions

As if each were for members of our own family. We employ none but the very purest drugs. We use every precaution to insure accuracy and faithfulness. Have your prescriptions filled here and you can have perfect confidence in the medicine. And confidence you know is a great help in effecting a cure.

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

The CLOAKS and SUITS we are showing this season at

$5.50 TO $30.00

are far superior to any previous effort.

See this line before you buy and be convinced that the

Fit and Style

you get here is what you desire.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank
AT KITZMILLERVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$53,851 45
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	6,250 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	218 75
Bonds, securities, etc	7,375 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	5,347 95
Other real estate owned	400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	965 86
Due from State Banks and Bankers	67 80
Due from approved reserve agents	7,654 76
Checks and other cash itemr	221 00
Notes of other National Banks	495 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	34 89
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $3,820 15
Legal-tender notes 30 00	3,850 15
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)	312 50
Total	$ 87,045 11

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	3,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	926 98
National Bank notes outstanding	6,250 00
Due to other National Banks	1,916 58
Individual deposits subject to check	24,314 14
Demand certificates of deposit	25,538 26
Certified Checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	74 15
Total	$ 87,045 11

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of September, 1908.
GEO. J. POOL, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH, WADE SAPP, A. C. SMITH, Directors.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

FOR RENT.—The Rectory on Alder street; house contains 14 rooms; stable and other outbuildings on the property. Apply to BOWIE JOHNSON, Oakland. 3t

Call for Your Letters.

Lt. S. H. Bryant, James B. Canby, Thomas C. F. Crim, Miss Mary A. Gantt (2), Miss Rose Johnson, Mr. Ernest Lee, Mrs. Harriet McCloskey, Mrs. Jennie Stultz.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

MR. ROOSEVELT LAUDS TAFT.

True Friend of Reform and Foe of Abuses.

NAMES HIM POLITICAL HEIR

Republican Candidate Stands For Same Policies as Present Administration—Can Be Trusted to Do Justice to Both Capital and Labor—A Champion of the Right and True Representative of All the People.

In the following letter of President Roosevelt to Mr. Conrad Kohrs of Montana he tells why voters should support William H. Taft at the polls.

Mr. Conrad Kohrs of Helena, Mont., is an old time Montana cattleman and one of the most prominent citizens of Montana. He and the president came into close relationship more than twenty years ago, when they were both members of the Montana Stock Growers' association, the president being at that time the representative of the Little Missouri stock growers in the association. The intimacy has been kept up ever since. Mr. Kohrs is one of the pioneer citizens of the northern Rocky mountain region and one of the men who has taken a leading part in its great development.

Mr. Kohrs' letter was called forth by Mr. Bryan's statement that he (Mr. Bryan) was the president's heir and natural successor:

Sagamore Hill,
Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 9, 1908.

My Dear Mr. Kohrs—I have received your letter about the candidacy of Mr. Taft, the man who I feel is in an especial sense the representative of all that in which I most believe in political life.

Every good citizen should desire to see both prosperity and justice, prosperity and fair and righteous dealing as between man and man, obtain permanently in this great republic. As a people we are justly proud of our business industry, of our energy and intelligence in such work, and it is entirely right that we should ask ourselves as to any given course of conduct, "Will it be profitable?" But it is also no less emphatically true that the bulk of our people, the plain people who found in Abraham Lincoln their especial champion and spokesman, regard the question, "Is this morally right?" as even more important than the question, "Is this profitable?" which applied to any given course of conduct. Indeed, in the long run our people are sure to find that in all dealings, alike in the business and political world, what is really profitable is that which is morally right. The last few years have seen a great awakening of the public conscience and the growth of a stern determination to do away with corruption and unfair dealing, political, economic, social. It is urgently necessary that this great reform movement should go on. But no reform movement is healthy if it goes on by spasms, if it is marked by periods of frenzied advance, followed, as such periods of frenzied advance must always be followed, by equally violent periods of reaction. The revolutionary and the reactionary really play into one another's hands to the extent that each by his excesses necessarily tends to arouse such disgust, such a feeling of revolt, in the minds of quiet people as temporarily to restore the other to power.

To permit the direction of our public affairs to fall alternately into the hands of revolutionaries and of reactionaries, of the extreme radicals of unrest and of the short-sighted conservatives who recognize no wrongs to redress, would merely mean that the nation had embarked on a feverish course of violent agitation which would be fraught with great temporary trouble and would produce no adequate good in the end. The true friend of reform, the true foe of abuses, is the man who steadily perseveres in righting wrongs, in warring against abuses, but whose character and training are such that he never promises what he cannot perform, that he always a little more than makes good what he does promise and that, while steadily advancing, he never permits himself to be led into foolish excesses which would damage the very cause he champions. In Mr. Taft we have a man who combines all of these qualities to a degree which no other man in our public life since the civil war has surpassed. To a flaming hatred of injustice, to a scorn of all that is base and mean, to a hearty sympathy with the oppressed, he unites entire disinterestedness, courage, both moral and physical of the very highest type and a kindly generosity of nature which makes him feel that all of his fellow countrymen are in very truth his friends and brothers, that their interests are his and that all his great qualities are to be spent with lavish freedom in their service. The honest man of means, the honest and law abiding business man, can feel safe in his hands because of the very fact that the dishonest man of great wealth, the man who swindles or robs his fellows, would not so much as dare to defend his evil doing in Mr. Taft's presence. The honest wage-worker, the honest laboring man, the honest farmer, the honest mechanic or small trader or man of small means can feel that in a peculiar sense Mr. Taft will be his representative because of the very fact that he has the same scorn for the demagogue that he has for the corruptionist and that he would front threats of personal violence from a mob with the unqualified and lofty indifference with which he would front the bitter anger of the wealthiest and most powerful corporations. Broad though his sympathies are, there is in him not the slightest tinge of weakness. No consideration of personal interest, any more than of fear for his personal safety, could make him swerve a hair's breadth from the course which he regards as right and in the interest of the whole people.

I have naturally a peculiar interest in the success of Mr. Taft and in seeing him backed by a majority in both houses of congress which will heartily support his policies. For the last ten years, while I have been governor of New York and president, I have been thrown into the closest intimacy with him, and he and I have on every essential point stood in heartiest agreement, shoulder to shoulder. We have the same views as to what is demanded by the national interest and honor, both within our own borders and as regards the relations of this nation with other nations. There is no fight for decency and fair dealing which I have waged in which I have not had his heartiest and most effective sympathy and support, and the policies for which I stand are his policies as much as mine.

It is not possible in the space of this letter to discuss all the many and infinitely varied questions of moment with which Mr. Taft as president would have to deal. Let him be judged by what he has himself done and by what the administration in which he has played so conspicuous a part has done. But to illustrate just what his attitude is let me touch on two matters now prominent in the public mind.

Mr. Taft can be trusted to exact justice from the railroads for the very reason that he can be trusted to do justice to the railroads. The railroads are the chief instruments of interstate commerce in the country, and they can neither be held to a proper accountability on the one hand nor given proper protection on the other save by the affirmative action of the federal government. The law as laid down by the federal courts clearly shows that the states have not and cannot devise laws adequate to meet the problems caused by the great growth of the railroads doing an interstate commerce business, for more than four-fifths of the business of the railroads is interstate, and under the constitution of the United States only the federal government can exercise control thereover. It is absolutely necessary that this control should be affirmative and thoroughgoing.

All interstate business carried on by the great corporations should in the interest of the whole people be far more closely supervised than at present by the national government, but this is especially true of the railroads, which cannot exist at all save by the exercise of powers granted them on behalf of the people and which, therefore, should be held to a peculiar accountability to the people. It is in the interest of the people that they should not be permitted to do injustice, and it is no less to the interest of the people that they should not suffer injustice. Their prime purpose is to carry the commodities of the farmers and the business men. They could not be built save for the money contributed to them by their shareholders. They could not be run at all save for the money paid out in wages to the railroad employees, and, finally, they could not be run judiciously or profitably to any one were it not for the employment by them of some masterful guiding intelligence, whether of one man or of a group of men. There are therefore several sets of interests to be considered. Each must receive proper consideration, and when any one of them selfishly demands exclusive consideration the demand must be refused. Along certain lines all of these groups have the same interests. It is to the interest of shipper, farmer, wageworker, business man, honest shareholder and honest manager alike that there should be economy, honesty, intelligence and fair treatment of all. To put an effective stop to stock watering would be a benefit to everybody except the swindlers who profit by stock watering. It would benefit the honest shareholder because honest investments would not be brought into competition with mere paper. It would benefit the wageworker because when the money earned does not have to go to paying interest on watered capital more of it is left out of which to pay wages. It would benefit the shipper because, when only honest stockholders have to be paid interest, rates need not be improperly raised. It would benefit the public because there would be ample money with which to give efficient service. Similarly the prevention of favoritism as among shippers does no damage to any one who is honest and confers great good upon the smaller business man and the farmer, whom it relieves of oppression.

Again, such supervision of accounts and management as will prevent crookedness and oppression works good, directly or indirectly, to all honest people. Therefore everything that can be done along all these lines should be done, and no man's legitimate interest would thereby be hurt. But after this point has been reached great care must be exercised not to work injustice to one class in the effort to show favor to another class, and each class naturally tends to remember only its own needs. The stockholders must receive an ample return on their investments or the railroads cannot be built and successfully maintained, and the rates to shippers and the wages to employees, from the highest to the lowest, must all be conditioned upon this fact. On the other hand, in a public service corporation we have no right to allow such excessive profits as will necessitate rates being unduly high and wages unduly low. Again, while in all proper ways rates must be kept low, we must always remember that we have no right and no justification to reduce them when the result is the reduction of the wages of the great army of railroad men. A fair working arrangement must be devised according to the needs of the several cases, so that profits, wages and rates shall each be reasonable with reference to the other two, and in wages I include the properly large amounts which should always be paid to those whose masterful ability is required for the successful direction of great enterprises. Combinations which favor such an equitable arrangement should themselves be favored and not forbidden by law, although they should be strictly supervised by the government through the interstate commerce commission, which should have the power of passing summarily upon not only the question of the reduction, but the raising of rates.

This railroad problem is itself one of the phases of one of the greatest and most intricate problems of our civilization. For its proper solution we need not merely honesty and courage, but judgment, good sense and entire fair mindedness. Demagogy in such a matter is as certain to work evil as corruption itself. The man who promises to raise the wages of railroad employees to the highest point and at the same time to reduce rates to the lowest point is promising what neither he nor any one else can perform, and if the effort to perform it were attempted disaster would result to both shipper and wageworker and ruin to the business interests of the country. The man to trust in such a matter as this is the man who, like Judge Taft, does not promise too much, but who could not be swayed from the path of duty by any argument, by any consideration, who will wage relentless war on the successful wrongdoer among railroad men as among all other men, who will do all that can be done to secure legitimately low rates to shippers and absolute evenness among the rates thus secured, but who will neither promise nor attempt to secure rates so low that the wage earner would lose his earnings and the shareholder, whose money built the road, his profits. He will not favor a ruinous experiment like government ownership of railways. He will stand against any kind of confiscation of honestly acquired property, but he will work effectively for the most efficient type of government supervision and control of railways, so as to secure just and fair treatment of the people as a whole.

What is here said as to his attitude on the railway question applies to the whole question of the trusts. He will promise nothing on this subject unless he firmly believes he can make his promise good. He will go into no chimerical movement to destroy all great business combinations, for this can only be done by destroying all modern business, but he will in practical fashion do everything possible to secure such efficient control on behalf of the people as a whole over these great combinations as will deprive them of the power to work evil. Mr. Taft's decision in the Addyston pipe line case while on the bench is proof in deeds, not by words, of the far-sighted wisdom with which he serves the interests of the whole people even when those of the most powerful corporations are hostile thereto.

If there is one body of men more than another whose support I feel I have a right to challenge on behalf of Secretary Taft it is the body of wageworkers of the country. A stancher friend, a fairer and truer representative they cannot find within the borders of the United States. He will do everything in his power for them except to do that which is wrong. He will do wrong for no man and therefore can be trusted by all men. During the ten years of my intimate acquaintance with him, since I have myself as governor and president been obliged to deal practically with labor problems, he has been one of the men upon whose judgment and aid I could always rely in doing everything possible for the cause of the wageworker, of the man who works with his hands or with both hands and head.

Mr. Taft has been attacked because of the injunctions he delivered while on the bench. I am content to rest his case on these very injunctions. I maintain that they show why all our people should be grateful to him and should feel it safe to entrust their dearest interests to him. Most assuredly he never has yielded and never will yield to threat or to pressure of any sort, as little as if it comes from labor as if it comes from capital. He will no more tolerate the violence of a mob than the corruption and oppression and arrogance of a corporation or of a wealthy man. He will not consent to limit the power of the courts to put a stop to wrongdoing wherever found. This very fact should make the labor people feel a peculiar confidence in him. He has incurred the bitter hostility of foolish and bigoted reactionaries by his frank criticism of the abuse of the power of injunction in labor disputes, and he is pledged to do all he can to put a stop to the abuses in the exercise of the power of injunction. He will never promise anything that he will not do all in his power to perform. He can always be trusted to do a little better than his word, and the fact that before election he will not promise the impossible is in itself a guaranty that after election all that is possible will be done.

His record as a judge makes the whole country his debtor. His actions and decisions are part of the great traditions of the bench. They guaranteed and set forth in striking fashion the rights of the general public as against the selfish interests of any class, whether of capitalists or of laborers. They set forth and stand by the rights of the wageworkers to organize and to strike as unequivocally as they set forth and stand by the doctrine that no conduct will be tolerated that would spell destruction to the nation as a whole. As for the attack upon his injunctions in labor disputes made while he was on the bench, I ask that the injunctions be carefully examined. I ask that every responsible and fair minded labor leader, every responsible and fair minded member of a labor organization, read these injunctions for himself. If he will do so, instead of condemning them he will heartily approve of them and will recognize this further astonishing fact that the principles laid down by Judge Taft in these very injunctions, which laboring people are asked to condemn, are themselves the very principles which are now embodied in the laws or practices of every responsible labor organization. No responsible organization would now hesitate to condemn the abuses against which Judge Taft's injunctions were aimed. The principles which he therein so wisely and fearlessly laid down serve as a charter of liberty for all of us, for wageworkers, for employers, for the general public, for they rest on the principles of fair dealing for all, of even handed justice for all. They mark the judge who rendered them as standing for the rights of the whole people. As far as daylight is from darkness so far is such a judge from the time server, the truckler to the mob or the cringing tool of great, corrupt and corrupting corporations. Judge Taft on the bench—as since, in the Philippines, in Panama, in Cuba, in the war department—showed himself to be a wise, a fearless and an upright servant of the whole people, whose services to the whole people were beyond all price. Moreover, let all good citizens remember that he rendered these services not when it was easy to do so, but when lawless violence was threatened, when malice, domestic and civic disturbance threatened the whole fabric of our government and of civilization. His actions showed not only the highest kind of moral courage, but of physical courage as well, for his life was freely and violently threatened.

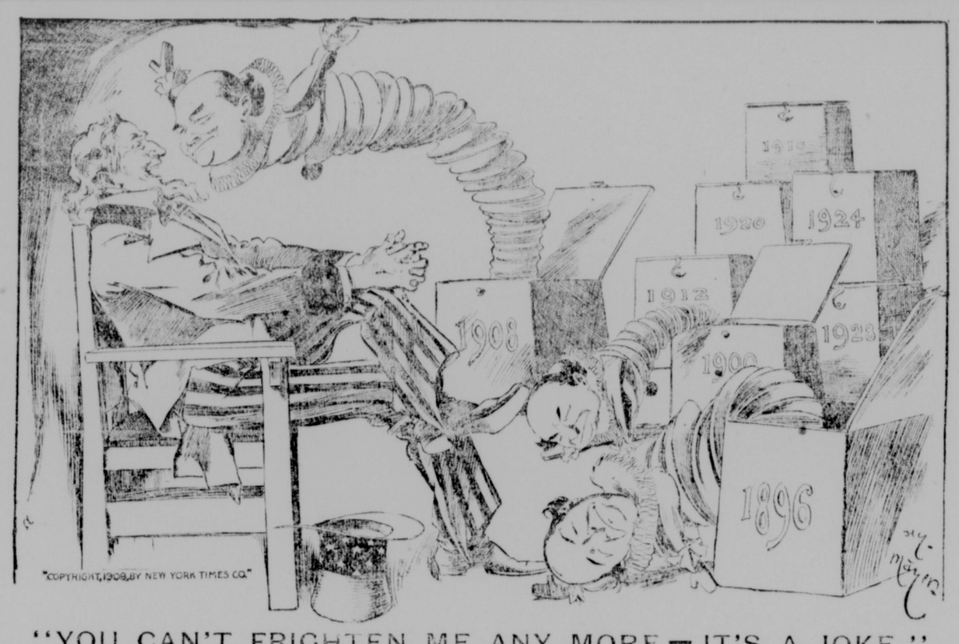
Let all fair minded men, wageworkers and capitalists alike, consider yet another fact. In one of his decisions upon the bench Judge Taft upheld in the strongest fashion and for the first time gave full vitality to the principle of the employers' liability for injuries done workmen. This was before any national law on the subject was enacted. Judge Taft's sense of right, his indignation against oppression in any form, against any attitude that is not fair and just, drove him to take a position which was violently condemned by shortsighted capitalists and enemyers of labor, which was so far in advance of the time that it was not generally upheld by the state courts, but which we are now embodying in the law of the land. Judge Taft was a leader, a pioneer, while on the bench in the effort to get justice for the wageworker in jealous championship of his rights, and all upright and farsighted laboring men should hold it to his credit that at the same time he fearlessly stood against the abuses of labor, just as he fearlessly stood against the abuses of capital. If elected, he has shown by his deeds that he will be president of no class, but of the people as a whole. He can be trusted to stand stoutly against the two real enemies of our democracy—against the man who to please one class would undermine the whole foundation of orderly liberty and against the man who in the interest of another class would secure class privilege, prosperity, by sacrificing every right of the working people.

I have striven as president to champion in every proper way the interests of the wageworker, for I regard the wageworker, excepting only the farmer, the tiller of the soil, as the man whose well being is most essential to the healthy growth of this great nation. I would for no consideration advise the wageworker to do what I thought was against his interest. I ask his support for Mr. Taft exactly as I ask such support from every farsighted and right thinking American citizen, because I believe with all my heart that nowhere within the borders of our great country can there be found another man who will as vigilantly and efficiently as Mr. Taft support the rights of the workingman as he will the rights of every man who in good faith strives to do his duty as an American citizen. He will protect the just rights of both rich and poor, and he will war relentlessly against lawlessness and injustice whether exercised on behalf of property or of labor.

On the bench Judge Taft showed the two qualities which make a great judge—wisdom and moral courage. They are also the two qualities which make a great president. Sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Conrad Kohrs, Helena, Mont.



"YOU CAN'T FRIGHTEN ME ANY MORE—IT'S A JOKE."

WHY TAFT WILL WIN.

Business Interests Working For Republican Success.

The president of the Claflin company in an annual statement of that company to stockholders sums up the business situation with much accuracy and fairness. He said that after six months of severe depression in the dry goods industry a recovery occurred in June and since then has been well maintained, but no great improvement can be expected until the presidential election is over.

Expressed or implied, a marked revival within the next few weeks is predicted by the most cautious business men in the country because of the influential belief that Judge Taft will be elected on Nov. 3. Recent accounts of the iron trade show that the gain of the early summer is being held; bank clearings and railway gross earnings tell a similar story. To every one the evidence is unmistakable that if the election of Judge Taft was now placed beyond peradventure business would take on an immediate boom. For this reason masterful minds everywhere in industrial and commercial activities are bending every energy for the election of Taft.

Depositors Safe.

Congressmen and others will be interested to note that, although thirteen banks and trust companies closed their doors in consequence of the October panic, not one of the 51,000 depositors will lose a dollar. Some of these institutions had been wickedly mismanaged, but in every case the men responsible have been expelled, some indicted, and some have committed suicide. It hardly looks in these circumstances as if we needed federal guarantee of national bank deposits. If that were provided, as the Democrats propose, one great agency for holding bank officers up to a proper sense of individual responsibility for the safe and proper conduct of their institutions would be removed.—Boston Transcript.

So far as honorary degrees are concerned, Mr. Bryan is a doctor of laws. Measured by his profession and practice, he is simply a would be tinker of statutes.

THE PARTY OF YOUTH

Why Young Men Vote the Republican Ticket.

IT STANDS FOR PROGRESS.

New Voters Proud to Ally Themselves With the Party of Lincoln—Its Past Performances Presage a Still More Glorious Future.

It is not without significance that young men who have just attained their majority are found, as a rule, voting the Republican ticket. The reason is plain. Those young men look on the Republican party as the party of hope, the party of promise and of performance, the party for whose candidates they will be proud to say in later years that they cast their first ballot, the party whose past needs no apology, no balm of oblivion for blunders and for crimes, no record of slavery, rebellion and attempted repudiation, each stamped out in its turn by American freemen under Republican leadership.

The Republican party is eminently the party of youth. With Republicans the memory of the glorious past is but an incentive to make the future still more glorious. To the Democracy is left the congenial occupation of floundering in the marsh of bygone Democratic vagaries, lured on by some new and delusive will-o'-the-wisp to the quagmire of quadrennial failure.

The youthful voter finds no attraction in such company. He prefers to march forward on firm ground, with the party of Lincoln, of Grant, McKinley and Roosevelt, of Taft and Sherman and Hughes—of nearly every great American, living and dead, whose career has added luster to the closing half of the old century and the beginning of the new. The young man prefers the Republican party because it holds out a prospect for his own advancement, because in building up the nation as a whole it offers fresh opportunities to the individual, because under Republican administration there is a fair field for every one, and every citizen is protected in the enjoyment of that which he has rightfully acquired.

The new voter who takes his place in the Republican ranks and casts his ballot for Taft and Sherman will have the satisfaction not only of sharing in the Republican victory, but also of knowing that he has helped to assure prosperity for the country at large and an immeasurably better chance in life for himself and those in whom he is interested than if the harpies of Bryanism had been permitted to befoul the feast.

LABOR TURNS TO TAFT.

Toilers Scent Danger In the Fallacies of Mr. Bryan.

Convincing evidence was furnished by the conference at Cincinnati last week by Judge Taft with Oscar Straus, secretary of commerce and labor, and T. V. Powderly, formerly general master workman of the Knights of Labor, that the attitude of labor is growing each day more friendly to Taft. The campaign of education which the Republicans have been carrying on has been effective, and the laboring man, so Mr. Powderly told the candidate, is beginning to appreciate the fact that a restoration of business confidence through the election of Mr. Taft means more work and prosperous times for him.

Secretary Straus announces his intention to go out on the stump for the specific purpose of exposing some of the Bryan fallacies in regard to labor. Said Mr. Straus: "The most dangerous of these fallacies is presented in Bryan's slogan, 'Shall the people rule?' and well may he ask it, for every one of his leading doctrines is a denial of that rule."

Mr. Straus classes Mr. Bryan's government guarantee of bank deposits as next in point of danger to his plan for the government ownership of railroads. Mr. Straus believes this guarantee proposition is as great menace as the old 16 to 1 hobby. "To guarantee deposits," said Secretary Straus, "is to guarantee the loans of the banks, for, as a matter of fact, a large part of the bank's deposits is made up of credits extended by the bank to borrowers and by them deposited or placed on the books of the banks as deposits."

Mr. Powderly said among other things after his talk with Taft: "Labor never was better organized, better paid, more independent or more respected than it is today. Never was it more secure in its share of the outcome of the commodity or the good will and confidence of employers. All this is due to the effort of nonpartisan, well officered unions. What labor organizations now enjoy, and they enjoy more than they ever enjoyed in the civilized world before, came as the result of intelligent, co-operative effort exerted in a nonpartisan way through their unions.

"Of course there are many men out of employment as the result of the recent depression, but I am knowledge men are returning to their occupations all over the country, and at their old rates of pay. I recall the awful panic of 1873 and that of 1893, and in neither case did men go back to work at their old wages. The case is different now, and in my mind it would be suicidal for labor to vote in such a way as to imperil the return of full prosperity, so rapidly manifesting itself."

The issue is just this: Taft and prosperity or Bryan and paralysis.

A MORNING AUTO RIDE.

When the clouds are white and fleecy
And the fields with daisies pied
Then I start the motor humming
For a morning auto ride.
Gliding through the sunny landscape,
Where the balmy zephyrs play,
Care and toil are left behind us,
Pain and grief are far away.

Dipping down in misty hollows,
Skimming merrily along,
Climbing up to breezy hilltops
To the motor's pleasant song,
Don't you catch the fragrance blowing
From the clover and the corn
And a thousand wild sweet blossoms
Offering incense to the morn?

Let her out upon the level
Till the road beneath us reels
And the miles are left behind us
In a rush of roaring wheels.
There are signs to stop the speeder—
In a second they are past—
But we do not read the warnings;
We are going much too fast.

Oh, the joy of rapid motion
When the nerves are tense and true!
Oh, the pleasure to the vision
Of the fast unfolding view!
Oh, the keen delight that thrills me
Just to feel I am alive
And to know I am the master
Of the thunderbolt I drive!

Now we turn for home and breakfast.
What an appetite I've got!
Hope we'll find the eggs and bacon
And the coffee steaming hot,
For I tell you all the doctors
That upon the earth abide
Would be beggars if each patient
Took a morning auto ride.
—Minna Irving in New York Press.

A High Handed Action.

The Bible class teacher in a certain Sunday school was extremely annoyed at the noise made by pupils in the next room. At last, unable to stand it any longer, he looked over the partition, and, seeing one boy talking louder than the others, he leaned over and hoisted him over the partition and, banging him into a chair, said, "Now be quiet."

Some minutes later a small head appeared over the partition and a meek voice said:

"Please, sir, you've got our teacher."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Unfitting the Drivers.

Panama Commissioner of Labor—I really must object to your methods, chaplain. Your work is good, but you are getting all my men converted.

Chaplain—But is not that a good work, my dear brother commissioner?

Commissioner—Well, yes, but if they all turn religious who in blazes is going to drive the work mules?—Brooklyn Life.

At the Ball Game.

The Captain—See here, you've give seventeen men bases on balls! Dis here's a ball game, not no six day walkin' match!—New York World.

Hymen at the Wheel.

"Yes," said the young artist proudly, "this is my latest picture. It represents the old ferryman waiting for the runaway couple to leave the parsonage."

"Fine picture," complimented the friend. "What is it entitled?"

"Why, 'Waiting For the Tied.'"—Chicago News.

Auto Veils and Sailor Hats.

"You know the woman on our street who always wears the automobile veil."

"Yes."

"Thompson, who lives next door, coaxed her to take a seat in his auto yesterday, and she was so frightened that he had to let her out at the first corner."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It All Went In the Bill.

Attorney—Would the court mind making my client's sentence about six months longer?

The Court—That is an extraordinary request. Why?

Attorney—As it stands, your honor, it will hardly give me time to get him pardoned.—Puck.

Also a Tearful One.

"Maud, you remember the time we were summering in the country and you played summer girl and Al caught you peeling onions in the kitchen?"

"Can I ever forget it, Julia? That onion peeling is one of my strongest recollections."—Baltimore American.

A Life Preserver.

"Do you ever use that extra tire you carry fastened to the top of the tonneau?" the motor car enthusiast was asked.

"Dearest thing you know," was the reply. "The other night I ran off a bridge into the river."—Puck.

A Thought Modernly Applied.

"All the world's a stage," said the man who quotes.

"Yes," answered the cynical citizen, "and some of the worst actors in the outfit are doing the most talking about elevating it."—Washington Star.

Last Resort.

"I should think he'd be tired of making love to you."

"I guess he is."

"What—has he quarreled with you?"

"No—asked me to marry him."—Cleveland Leader.

A Lucky Hit.

By Martha Cobb Sanford.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

A man sat on the brow of a hill and kicked himself. Incidentally he was smoking a cigarette and watching the sunset.

Why, oh, why, had he ever thought that he needed absolute rest and quiet—that he didn't want ever to hear applause again or to look into people's faces? A solid week of this coveted solitude had made him "a sadder and a wiser man." What wouldn't he give this very moment for something to happen?

He jumped up suddenly. Something had happened, something very aggravating. As he stooped down to pick up the little green apple that had hit him square on the shoulder a boyish laugh rang out on the other side of a nearby fence.

He threw the apple back over the fence again and reversed his opinion on the value of absolute quiet.

The next night the same thing happened, only this time when the apple roused him from his reverie the sun had been some time set and darkness and silence were stealing over the hill.

"I'll catch that kid this time," he said, jumping up.

With a run and a bound he made the fence and landed lightly on the other side face to face with a young fellow almost as tall as himself.

"Well, bless my soul!" he exclaimed. "I expected to find a kid. I was coming over to lick you."

"Forget it," returned the youth, leading the way to a seat under a luxuri-

"MY BROTHER WAS DETAINED IN TOWN."

ous grape arbor. "I've been watching you every night; thought perhaps you'd like company, so threw you an invitation."

"You struck it, or rather me, just right, young man. I do like company. What's your name?"

"Nix."

"That's easy to remember."

"Short for Nixon. What's yours?"

"Vin."

"What?"

"Vin—short for Vincent."

"Oh, I see." And the boy laughed merrily and slapped his knee.

"Boarding down at the farm?"

"Yes, and beastly tired of it. You live here all the year around?"

"Good gracious, no! Just staying a few weeks with my grandparents. Dead slow! You're the only civilized man I've seen since I got here."

A brief silence followed, in which Vincent struck a match and lighted a cigarette.

"Have one, Nix?"

"No, thanks."

"Too young, I s'pose. I contracted the habit long before I was your age, though."

"Oh, 'tisn't that," answered Nix carelessly, crossing one well shaped leg over the other. "But the grandparents, you know—they think it's a crime."

"They won't be out here, will they?"

"Oh, no. But I have to kiss 'em good night. I'm their son's only son, you see—the baby of the family."

Vincent laughed heartily at the boy's tone of disgust.

"Any pretty girls in the neighborhood?" he asked after a puff or two.

"You seen any?" returned Nix.

"Not one—more's the pity."

"You like 'em, then?"

"Bet your life! Don't you?"

"Oh, so-so. I get on better with fellows, though."

"You'll get over that," laughed Vincent. "But I must be going. It's nearly pitch dark, and I'll lose my way down to the farm."

"Coming up tomorrow night?"

"Sure thing! You won't have to waste any more green apples on me good night!"

One night a week or so later, in which time Vincent and his young friend had become great chums, the former proposed a fishing trip over the mountains, but Nixon shook his head listlessly.

"No bit, Vin," he replied. "Never could stand fishing. Gets your hands so messed up taking the flapping things off the hook."

Vincent looked at the boy's fastidious white hands and could hardly blame him.

"I'll take 'em off for you," urged Vincent. "Come on."

"No, thanks. Besides, I've got to go up to town tomorrow afternoon with grandmother."

"I've a good mind to go myself," said Vincent. "This country life's getting on my nerves. What train are you going on?"

"Give it up," answered the boy resignedly. "Grandmother changes her mind every five minutes. But you'll find country life all right after to night, old man. I'm going to bring my sister back with me."

"Didn't know you had one, Nix. That's jolly. What's she like?"

"The freshest ever."

"Good! Is she pretty?"

"People tell her so. She pretends not to like it, but I bet she does."

"Introduce me the very first thing?"

"As soon as you like."

Then the boy sighed.

"What's the matter with you, Nix?"

"Oh, just thinking how it will be all over with me after she comes. I can see you falling in love with her now. What does it feel like, Vin, to be in love?"

"Tell you, my child, when I've been there."

"Oh, fudge! You've been there a dozen times."

"Honor, I haven't; thought I was sometimes, of course, just as you will, Nix, when all the girls begin to run after you."

"They never will," sighed Nix.

"Don't you believe it. Girls adore eyes like yours. Are your sister's eyes that same wonderful blue, and has she curly brown hair like yours?"

"Oh, quit it!" Nix replied petulantly and walked off toward the house in the darkness.

The next night, in order not to seem too eager, Vincent let the sun disappear and waited for the young moon to hang up her crescent before he took his usual way up the hill. He discarded the short cut over the fence and made a very proper entrance through the garden gate.

As he neared the grape arbor he could see the white folds of a woman's skirt, and his heart fluttered with anticipation.

"Mr. Vincent?" asked the young girl standing hesitatingly at the other end of the arbor. "My brother was detained in town. He asked me to"—

"Nix, you witch, come here!" laughed Vincent, crushing the girl to him in all her freshness and kissing away her little gasps of expostulation.

"When did you find it out?" she managed to get breath enough to say at last.

"I knew it all the time," answered Vincent softly.

"Oh, oh!" exclaimed the girl and hid her hot cheeks in her hands. "How did you know it?"

"I had seen you in those charming boy's togs before, little actress, and recognized you the moment I jumped over the fence, though I could scarcely believe my eyes."

"You were at those theatricals?" gasped the girl. "Goodness gracious! You aren't John Vinton, the actor, are you, the one we girls rave over?"

"The very sa—I mean I'm John Vincent, the actor. But, honor bright, I didn't expect to find my own particular star"—

The girl gave him a reproachful look.

"I wonder why I didn't recognize you?" she asked.

"Probably," he answered laughingly, "because I'm not a lady on the stage. But tell me, dear, what made you play such a prank?"

"Well, you see, grandma" there they both had to laugh "wouldn't let me go out in the evening. So I used to pretend to go to bed early, and then I put on those clothes and climbed down over the shed and—oh, you know the rest!"

"But what made you throw the apples at me?" persisted Vincent, holding her little hands captive.

"Boys always throw apples at people," was her unexpected reply, "and you were the only man—I mean person—in sight."

"It was a lucky hit for me, dearest," commented her lover, drawing her close and kissing her boyish mouth again and again.

Curious Westmorland Custom.

A strange custom is observed yearly in the small hamlet of Week, in Westmorland, in commemoration of an incident that happened in the year 1811. That year there was a plague of wasps and many persons throughout the country succumbed to the poisonous sting. The little hamlet holds the record for its number of victims, and in memory of the occurrence a memorial tablet was erected on the moor there. Now each year there is a procession. Most of the inhabitants turn out, carrying insect powder and other devices for killing wasps, and march to the memorial stone, where a short service is held by the minister of the parish. When the service is over a general crusade is made in search of wasps' nests, which are immediately destroyed. Some carry guns, some rags saturated in turpentine, while others carry paraffin, which is poured into the nest and a match applied. The anniversary is considered the most important event of the year.—English Country Gentleman.

Well Qualified.

"So you want the position of advance agent for our circus?" interrogated the manager. "Well, we need a man who can stir up some life every where he goes."

"That's me, boss," hastened the applicant.

"Had any experience in stirring up life?"

"You bet. I used to drive a street sweeper and stirred up millions of germs every day."—Chicago News.

BOWSER GETS GIFT.

Butcher Sends Old Philosopher a Jug of C. M. W.

IT HELPS TO REVIVE FOLKS.

Mr. B. Feels Happy After Drinking Stuff and Says He'll Order It by the Barrel—Too Much of It Knocks Him Out, However.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

About midafternoon the other sultry day a boy appeared at the residence of Mr. Bowser with a gallon jug and said to Mrs. Bowser:

"This is a present from the butcher to Mr. Bowser, and he says you must put it in the icebox."

"What is it?" was asked.

"It's spring water to revive folks up in hot weather."

When the boy had departed Mrs. Bowser drew the cork and took a long sniff, and a look of doubt and suspicion spread over her face as she poured a little of the water out in a glass and tasted it. There was a taste that seemed familiar, but she put the jug on ice without meddling further. At 6 o'clock Mr. Bowser came home dragged out.

MR. BOWSER DRANK TWO LARGE GLASSES.

His collar was only a damp rag around his neck, and his shirt bosom had gone limp. He had missed the car and been obliged to walk eight blocks, and as he could not overhaul and murder the conductor and as no tramp had accosted him between his house and the corner he had come home to take it out of Mrs. Bowser. He had thrown down his hat and jerked off his coat and was preparing for words when she said:

"A boy left a jug of what he called C. M. W. here this afternoon, and I put it in the icebox. He said the butcher sent it."

"Then hurrah! He told me three or four days ago that he would send it, but I didn't depend upon him. By George, but I'm glad it's here!"

"Why, the butcher's got a farm with a mountain on it called Chickadee mountain. On top of the mountain is a spring of ice cold water. It has strange medicinal qualities. A pint of it will revive a man on a hot day more than two gallons of wine. I've been almost played out with the heat today, and now is the time to take it."

The jug was hauled out of the ice box, and Mr. Bowser drank two large glasses without stopping to breathe but once. His face was a picture of good nature as he sat down to the dinner table and said:

"I can feel that clear down to my toes already. Wonderful thing—very wonderful! The butcher has got millions in that spring if he only knew it. Why, I wouldn't know that the thermometer had been above 70 today. I think I'll try another glass. Yum yum!"

Mrs. Bowser looked dubious and thoughtful, and as Mr. Bowser turned to his plate again he continued:

"Tomorrow I shall order that spring water by the barrel, and as soon as it comes I shall insist on your drinking it with me. It is the purest that nature can yield. How many germs do you think we have been drinking with every glass of city water?"

"Five or six, perhaps."

"Five or six! The number is 1,875,453, and each and every germ is capable of starting a case of rheumatism or typhoid fever. The wonder is that we are alive. I calculate that I have taken into my system during the past year over 600,000,000 germs. Isn't it a miracle that I am still on earth?"

"And haven't the medical profession discovered the curative properties of this water and made use of them?" she asked.

"They have made the discovery—ha, ha, ha! But the butcher won't let them use the water. He keeps it to present to his customers. No meat, no Chickadee water—ha, ha, ha!"

In a Happy Mood.

Mrs. Bowser glanced up to find his face flushed and smiling, and as he looked he winked at her and said:

"Now, hain't this perfectly lovely to be home eating dinner with my little wifey, with a gallon of Chickadee mountain water at my elbow! Guess I'll try a little more. Ah, but that would knock the hottest day in the year into a cocked hat!"

Mrs. Bowser reached over and took the empty glass and smelled of it.

"Whaz—whaz matter, lovey?" he asked.

"Mr. Bowser, there's a curious smell about this Chickadee water."

"That's 'cause it comes from the top of a mountain, you know."

"Is it? I didn't know but it was because brandy had been mixed with it. You are sure it's nothing but water?"

"Jess water, Mrs. Bowser—jess Chickadee mountain water. Chickadee sits in a tree above the spring and sings while the water runs downhill. Chick-a-chick, you know, and—ha, ha, ha!"

The cook came in with a dish and looked at Mr. Bowser in a puzzled way, and Mrs. Bowser hurried him through the rest of the meal and got him upstairs. He didn't go, however, until he had taken another glass of nature's purest and best and carefully returned the jug to the icebox. He wanted to go out and sit on the front steps, but in reply Mrs. Bowser said:

"I think it's cooler right here, and, besides, I want to talk with you. Do you think of trading the house and lot for a farm?"

"Do I? Do I think? Do I think of trading for a farm?" he repeated in a high pitched voice, and then after a hearty laugh he continued:

"No, lovey dovey, I don't think. Your hubby is no farmer. He don't know a burdock from a pumpkin. Shay, let's go to the theater tonight. Take my arm and let's go to the theater."

"Not this evening. I think the C. M. W. has gone to your head a little."

"Gone to my head! Why, Misshus Bowsher, who ever heard of such a thing! No, zir; no, zir. Head's all right. Chickadee is all right. Mountain is all right. Shay, that's wonderful water. I'm going down and have anozzer glass of it. I feel as if it was last winter. I don't feel over thirty years old."

Greatest Water on Earth.

Mrs. Bowser filed various objections, but they were set aside, and Mr. Bowser went down and helped himself. The cook saw him pouring from the jug, and he smiled and winked at her and said her wages should be raised $4 a month. When he returned to the sitting room his gait was uncertain and he was reaching out for things to hang on to as he walked. When he had finally got seated in a rocking chair he said:

"Greatest water on the face of the earth. Never heard of anything like it. Shay, Misshus Bowsher, let's have a game of cards tonight. I can beat you five out of six."

"Not tonight, Mr. Bowser. It has been a very hot day, and you have suffered from the heat. If you will lie down I will put ice to your head."

"I suffer from heat! Not much! Your husband is no sufferer. Shay, I'm going over and shee zhat butcher and order fifty barrels of Chickadee. How nice it is to be sitting here wiz your tootsy wootsy of a wife! Where's zhe cat?"

"In the back yard."

"C-call zhe c-cat in. I owe her a 'pology, and I want to make friends wiz her. I feel good, and I want you and zhe c-cat to feel good too. Shay, while we are waitin' to 'pologize to zhe c-cat I'll shing you a shong."

"Don't talk so loud, Mr. Bowser, and do please lie down and let me cool your head. Can't you understand that you are not exactly right in your head?"

"Whazzer mazzer my head?"

"You are dizzy."

"Nonshense! Never dizzy in my life. It's zhe room zhat's dizzy. Now, you listen and I'll shing 'Zhe Old Oaken Bucket' to you. Old oaken bucket hain't in wiz zhe jug, but I'll shing it. Don't cry when I shing. I'll stand up and I'll shing—shing"—

But he didn't sing. He stood up to fall down and a minute later was fast asleep. When Mrs. Bowser awoke him next morning he was still lying there. He followed her down to breakfast without a word. He had nothing to say when he found the jug of Chickadee water empty. It was only when he was ready to go to the office that he turned to remark:

"I'll see about the divorce and alimony this afternoon, and you can be packing your trunks. You have finally succeeded in driving me to the dead line."

M. QUAD.

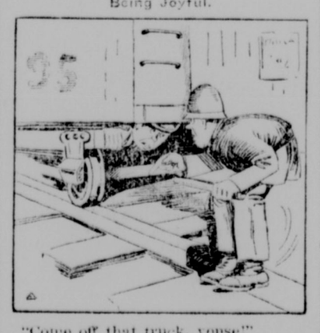
Enthusiasm.

The Barnstormer—Great reception we had in Podunk! Great audience! I got a curtain call!

The Other Fellow—Fine! Did the audience ask you to come out?

The Barnstormer—Ask me? Why, man, they dared me!—New York Press.

Being Joyful.



"Come off that truck, youse!"

"This is an outrage! Can't a gentle man have a joy ride?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

All the Same.

First Grafter—That last fellow who bucked my game thought he was some pumpkins.

Second Grafter—Well, that was about right. He was pie for you, wasn't he?—Kansas City Times.

A Very Short Time.

Mrs. McCall—They haven't been keeping house very long, have they?

Mrs. Hiram Offen—Gracious, no. Why, she can recall the names of all the servant girls they have had.—Philadelphia Press.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
E. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, E. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

AN HONEST MAN.

Says He'll Pay That Ten Dollar Bill When He Comes Across It.

"Now, look here, Thompson," remarked Bloom, "it is six months since you borrowed that ten dollar bill from me."

"Seven," corrected Thompson gravely.

"Well, then, seven months," snorted Bloom. "And you promised to give it back to me in a week—promised faithfully to return it me in seven days instead of months."

"I know it," answered Thompson sadly, drawing a memorandum book from his pocket. "That bill was marked No. 672,929. I made this memo. and then I spent the money. Since then I've been trying to recover it."

"But," shouted Bloom, "any other would do as well."

"No," responded Thompson, shaking his head. "I'm a man of my word. When you gave me the bill I said, 'I will return this to you,' and I meant it. Bloom, old man, just as soon as I come across No. 672,929 I'll see that you get it, for I am not the one to go back on my promise."—Harper's Weekly.

Very Confidential.

Village Postmistress—And what are those dashes?

Hodge—Oh, he'll understand them right enough.

Postmistress—Yes, but we can't send them by telegraph.

Hodge—Well, they're the price o' the pigs. He'll understand.

Postmistress—Yes, but you must put it in words or figures, else we can't send it.

Hodge—Must I? Well, I'll whisper it to 'ee then!—Punch.

Poor Taste.

"Is your dog blind?"

"Good gracious—our Rover! I should say not! What ever led you to ask such a question?"

"Why, I knew he was either blind or else had very poor taste."

"Explain yourself."

"There's not much to explain. Last night Rover tried to bite that awfully thin Miss Blinker."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Another Objection.

"There's one great objection to the flying machine," said Mr. Sirius Barker, "and that's the question of safety appliances."

"It can carry a parachute."

"Yes, but a parachute looks so much like an umbrella that every time you want to use it you're sure to find it has been borrowed."—Washington Star.

Enough For All.

"You have deceived me."

"How?"

"You said you could die for me, and I learn you have told eight other cats the same thing. Boo-hoo!"

"Cheer up! I've got nine lives, haven't I?"—Kansas City Times.

The Simple Truth.

The Powder Manufacturer—Fancy old Bill of all people going into the gunpowder shed with a lighted candle! I should have thought that that would be the last thing he'd do.

The Workman—Which, properly speakin', it were, sir.—Sketch.

A Sense of Security.

"Weren't you worried about the members of your family during their long absence from home?"

"Not at all. I don't own an automobile, and none of them think they can swim or sail a boat."—Minneapolis Journal.

Recognizing His Limitations.

Cholly—Let me see—what's that quotation about a nod being as good as a wink, and so forth?

Fwedly—Why—er—I can't think—

Cholly—Oh, I know that. I'm asking you to try to remember.—Chicago Tribune.

Giac Finelli.

W'en Giac Finelli maka joke
I laugha teell my sides ees broke.
I weesh som'time dat you could be
Jus' near enough to heem to see.
You don'ta gotta be so near
For dat you musta see an' hear.
Eet ees not dat you gotta pay
Mooch notice to da words he say,
Baycause een sooch artista way
He tweest hees face an' move da han'
All theengs ees plain to ondrastan',
He ees so smarta Dagoman.
Oh, my, your sides dey would be broke
W'en Giac Finelli maka joke!

Two men dat play at cards wan night
Ees gat so mad an' so excite'
Dey pull deir knives an' gona fight.
Up jompa Giac Finell den
An' eemitate dose fightin' men.
He growl an' stampa roun' da place
An' mak' sooch tweestin' of da face.
Now justa like deesa man
An' now so like da othra wan.
He mak' dem look sooch foolish sight
Dey laugh an' jus' forgat to fight.
Oh, my, eef dat time you could be
Jus' near enough to heem to see
You laugha teell your sides ees broke
W'en Giac Finelli maka joke!

T. A. Daly in Catholic Standard and Times.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT OAKLAND,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$159,312 21
Overdrafts		13 38
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		5,540 00
Bonds, securities, etc.		24,134 57
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		42,997 19
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		610 55
Due from State Banks and Bankers		68 37
Due from approved reserve agents		19,900 20
Checks and other cash items		1,730 35
Notes of other National Banks		375 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		131 22
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$18,006 95	18,006 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund		500 00
Total		$375,819 99

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	25,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	878 27
National Bank notes out standing	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	3,691 18
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	30 15
Dividends unpaid	66 00
Individual deposits subject to check	71,306 00
Savings Department	122,845 77
Time certificates of deposit	1,274 95
Cashier's checks outstanding	727 67
United States deposits	50,000 00
Total	$375,819 99

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of September, 1908.

JAMES P. TREACY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: A. G. STURGISS,
F. A. THAYER,
E. H. SINCELL,
Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT FRIENDSVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$119,538 90
Overdrafts		332 78
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, securities, etc.		66,018 54
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		6,098 51
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		7,060 83
Due from State Banks and Bankers		2,347 49
Due from approved reserve agents		11,163 49
Checks and other cash items		10
Notes of other National Banks		625 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		164 66
Lawful money reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$ 404 25
Legal-tender notes	7,199 00	7,603 25
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		1,250 00
Total		$248,937 92

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	25,851 87
Undivided profits	1,678 94
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to other National Banks	224 61
Individual deposits subject to check	72,835 64
Time certificates of deposit	98,346 86
Total	$248,937 92

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.

ORVAL A. WELCH, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: L. E. FRIEND,
W. W. SAVAGE,
D. S. CUSTER,
Directors.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

Your Stationery

is your silent representative. If you sell fine goods that are up-to-date in style and of superior quality it ought to be reflected in your printing. We produce the kind that you need and will not feel ashamed to have represent you. That is the only kind it pays to send out. Send your orders to this office.

SHERIFF'S SALE

OF

Valuable Coal SURFACE AND Mining Rights

In Garrett County, Maryland, Near Henry, West Va.

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December Term, 1908, of said Court, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of Charles D. Gillaspie against Edward R. Pence, I did sieze and take into execution, on the 26th day of September, 1908, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, the following property, situate, lying and being in Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, West Virginia.

1. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of the tract of land called "Elk Garden," situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two Birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," South 75 degrees West, 315 perches; North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone; North 55 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 315 acres.

2. All the undivided one third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all that part of the surface of the said tract of land called "Elk Garden" contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with part of the 12th line of said whole tract, South 75 degrees West, 65½ perches to a stone; thence North 37½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of said whole tract, thence with part of said 14th line, North 55 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of "Elk Garden," thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 150 acres.

3. All the undivided one third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to the right to use, in connection with a like use by a certain Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, of the water from a spring upon the land of the said Ada A. V. Halterman, adjoining the above described part of "Elk Garden," and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ the said water in business, the property, rights, &c., siezed, taken into execution and above described being the same undivided one third interest in and to the same which were conveyed to the said Edward R. Pence by A. A. V. Halterman and husband, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 142 &c., one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland, and I hereby give notice that I will on

FRIDAY,

the 23d Day of October, 1908

at the hour of 11 o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder, all of the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence in and to the property above described and conveyed by the aforesaid deed.

Said property lies in District No. 8, of Garrett County, Maryland, and will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County, Maryland.

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

FACTS

¶ The news items of the home community.

¶ The things in which you are most interested.

¶ The births, weddings, deaths of the people you know.

¶ The social affairs of our own and surrounding towns.

These are the kind of facts this paper gives you in every issue. They are certainly worth the subscription price.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C. & P. Telephone Comp'y

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 25, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Oct. 13th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals will be received by W. McCulloh Brown, Secretary of the Court House Commission of Garrett county, Maryland, until noon of

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1908,

FOR THE FURNISHING OF SAID COURT HOUSE.

The Bench, Tables and Chairs for the Court Room, Orphans' Court and County Commissioners Office and such Metal Cases as may be required.

A copy of the specifications may be seen at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland or a list of articles may be obtained by applying to the Secretary.

At the same time and place the Commission will receive PROPOSALS FOR GAS AND ELECTRICAL FITTINGS.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to accept part and reject the remainder.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON,
Chairman.
W. McCULLOH BROWN,
Sep 24-3. Secretary.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

JOHN W. BOYCE,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of September, 1908.

JOHN T. BOYCE,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY-SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $90 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contageous diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, vs. The Stayer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 153 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21st day of September, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by Land Title and Trust Company, of Philadelphia, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 23d day of October, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $21,000.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

NOTICE OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS,
FOR GARRETT COUNTY,
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 8, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 34, as amended by the acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election District of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, September 29,

Tuesday, October 6,

and on

Tuesday, October 13,

for revision only

(No one can Register after Tuesday, October 6.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all others duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration of the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election Distict Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Martin Storeroom corner Third and Oak Streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration of the Ninth Electi n District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Charles R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of G. W. Enoch in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the West building, Alder street in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM TURNER,
JOHN A. WRIGHT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

JASPER GUARD,
WALTER G. MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

DANIEL W. DORSEY,
ELISHA B. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

STEPHEN F. BROADWATER,
HENRY BARNARD,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

ADAM J. RICHTER,
CONRAD SPIKER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

W. H. BARTLETT,
GEORGE D. WHITE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
RICHARD McKENZIE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

SEBASTIAN HINEBAUGH,
BENJAMIN F. THRASHER,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH BROADWATER,
HUGH McMILLAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

O. C. BUCKLE,
URNER BEACHY,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

LEWIS C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

JOHN O. THAYER,
BERT C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

D. M. MASON,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage from Christian J. Yoder and Amanda Yoder, his wife, to the undersigned bearing date the 29th day of December, 1906, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folio 231, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, default having been made under the same by said mortgagors by failing to pay the money secured by said mortgage when due and the interest thereon, the undersigned hereby gives notice that on

THURSDAY,

the 15th Day of October, 1908

at 2 o'clock p. m., on the premises, he will sell at public auction the following described real estate and improvements:

All that piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, beginning for the same at a stone standing on the west side of the County road leading from Grantsville to the Pennsylvania Line, and running thence N. 1 degrees E. 31 rods, N. 85 degrees W. 128 rods and 11 links, S. 9 degrees W. 41½ rods, S. 81 degrees E. 121 rods and 9 links to the beginning, containing thirty-six acres and seventy-one perches, and being the same property that was conveyed to the said Christian J. Yoder and wife by the said Jacob S. Miller on the 30th day of June, 1904, and to secure the purchase money therefor the above mortgage was given.

Said Property is improved by a Good Dwelling House and Barn and other Out-Buildings; also by an Orchard of good fruit; about all of it is under cultivation and would make a desirable home to anyone needing a small farm.

The same is situated about three-fourths of a mile North of Grantsville on what is known as the lower Salisbury road.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale or on the ratification thereof.

Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser.

JACOB S. MILLER,
Mortgagee.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF

Valuable Bar Fixtures, Liquors, Etc.,

at Oakland, Md.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage executed by Charles A. Hesen to Margaret Shaffer and Ella Shaffer, dated the 15th day of November, 1907, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folio 215, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, and assigned to the undersigned for the purpose of foreclosure, default having been made in said mortgage, the said undersigned assignees hereby give notice that they will on

SATURDAY,

the 31st day of October, 1908

at the hour of 1:30 o'clock a. m., at the Hesen Saloon on Railroad Street, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer at public sale to the highest bidder, the following property, to-wit:

One Bar and Fixtures, One Roll Top Desk, Two National Cash Registers, One Table, Four Chairs, Four Stools, One Gasoline Range, and Cooking Utensils. Two Stoves, and stock of Whiskies, Wines, Brandies, Alcohol, Beer, Lot of Jugs and Bottles, Tobacco, Cigars, and Cigar Cases, and other Fixtures and Appliances in the C. A. Hesen Saloon.

TERMS: Cash on day of sale.

WM. R. OFFUTT,
J. C. RENNINGER,
Assignees of Mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure.

ORDER NISI.

Charles E. M. Hilleary, vs. Joseph Thomson and wife

No. 152 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered, this 1st day of October 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the Coal franchises, rights and priviledges made and reported by Chas. E. M. Hilleary, Mortgagee, in the above entitled cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 6th day of November, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $24,100.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1908. NUMBER 33

THE GARRETT COUNTY EXHIBIT OF APPLES

Many Specimens of Fine Fruit Shown In Oakland.

AUSPICES HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Twenty-Five Farmers showed Their Interest By Exhibiting Products of Their Orchards—The Prize Winners Not Announced.

For several days this week in Townshend Hall on Alder street State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, vice president of the Maryland Horticultural Society, has had arranged and on display a great variety of apples grown by the Garrett county farmers, the exhibitors numbering twenty-five and from nearly every section of the county.

This exhibit is intended to awaken greater interest in local horticulturalists to the possibilities of Garrett county as an apple producing section, and the showing made is one which no resident of the county need be ashamed.

Senator Brown through the columns of this paper, has invited the farmers several times during the past few months to make a showing of their products and by his earnestness has succeeded in making the exhibit a success.

As prizes he has offered sums for the best exhibit of any one variety and also for the best exhibit of the greatest number of varieties, the prizes being awarded this morning, but not yet announced.

The exhibitors at the show and also the kind of apples exhibited follows:

D. J. Swartzentruber, Gortner—King.

N. M. Fazenbaker, Dry Run—York Imperial.

J. M. Lowdermilk, Hoyes—Wolf River.

Thomas E. Bishoff, Hoyes—Grimes, Baldwin, Northern Spy.

Benj. F. Thrasher, Deer Park—Wolf River, Northern Spy, Ben Davis and Grimes.

Cecilia White, Oakland—Pumpkin Sweet, Rhode Island Greening. Other varieties unnamed.

Ridder Bros., Oakland—York Imperial, Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening, Stark, Russet, Richard Sweet, Ridder's Seedling. Two varieties unnamed.

J. Arthur DeWitt, Hoyes—York Imperial, Baldwin, York Stripe.

D. J. Slabaugh, Oakland—Northern Spy, Ben Davis, Kswick Codling.

David T. Enlow, Oakland—Baldwin, Wolf River.

Charles M. Miller, Swanton—Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening, Northern Spy.

John Hughes, Oakland—American Beauty.

The H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland—Northern Spy.

Jesse Warnick, New Germany—English Rambo, York Imperial.

P. P. Gortner, Oakland—Wolf River.

Henry Myers, Oakland—Twenty Ounce, Fallawater, Mountain Beauty.

David Gnegy, Oakland—Wolf River.

William R. Mason, Oakland—Fallawater, Baldwin, Black Apple, Famouse, Northern Spy, Deacon Jones, Mother, Salome, Sweet Russet, Summer Rambo, Twenty Ounce.

G. L. Ridder, Oakland—Wolf River, Yellow Bellflower.

James H. Wilson, Kitzmiller—Northern Spy.

U. D. Yoder, Grantsville—Mother, Baldwin.

Daniel Wilson, Kitzmiller—Baldwin.

Abe Moon, Gormania—York Imperial, Stark, Twenty Ounce.

N. B. Browning, Oakland—Wolf River.

OAKLAND DISTRICT APPOINTMENTS

Ministers Who Will Fill M. E. Pulpits The Ensuing Year.

At the sixty-second annual session of the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, held at Moundsville, W. Va., and which adjourned on Monday morning of this week after the announcement of appointments was made by Presiding Bishop Moore, the following being assigned to work in the Oakland District, Rev. Dr. R. B. Ward, Superintendent:

District Supt., P. B. WARD.

Albright, J. D. Dickey; Aurora, A. M. Crabtree; Bayard, R nix Weese; Blaine, J. H. Funk; Brandonville, E. S. Withers; Bruceton, C. J. Price; Cranesville, Albert Engle; Circleville, G. A. Fedderer; Davis, R. O. Phi ips; Etam, W. H. Plum; Evansville, T eopolis McCoy; Friendsville, A. S. Wolfe; Gormania, E. P. Idleman; Grantsville, D. A. Friend; Hendricks and Evenwood, E. C. Bedford; Horton, C. G. Stater; Howesville, J. W. Engle; Italian Work, Nicola Di Stefano; Kingwood, G. W. Bent; Montrose, J. W. Funk; Mt. Lake Park and Deer Park, J. O. Bolton; Newburg, P. C. Musgrave; Oakland, J. B. Workman; Parsons, E. Weaver; Pendleton, P. W. Shrader; Rowlesburg, E. D. Hanna; Sinclair, Andrew Moore; St. George, James Marquess; Swanton, J. A. Brumbaugh; Terra Alta, Jas. W. Engle; Thomas, W. K. Stalnaker; Tunnelton, A. Merrells; Thayerville, H. E. Friend.

ASKS PLEDGES OF CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES

Anti-Saloon League Reported Friendly to Congressman Pearre.

NOTES OF CAMPAIGN IN DISTRICT

Both Candidates for Congress Stirring Up the Voters—The Baltimore Dailies of Sunday Have Something to Say of Conditions.

A special dispatch from Rockville, Md., to the Washington Star of Sunday says:

"Unless David J. Lewis, Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, assures the Anti-Saloon Leagues of the district that he is just as much a temperance man as his Republican opponent, Col. George A. Pearre, the influence of the organization will, it is understood, be thrown in favor of the Republican standard-bearer. That this is true is shown by the following letter, written by William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, to a member of the organization in this county:

" 'Col. Pearre is apparently conducting a vigorous campaign. Everybody knows by this time that he is a strong temperance man. His record speaks for itself. I have watched very carefully for an utterance from the Democratic candidate upon the liquor question, but have seen nothing. I am advised from Allegany county that the liquor men are, as usual, opposing the colonel. My judgment is that it is the part of wisdom for all temperance men to support Col. Pearre, unless the Democratic candidate comes out and makes a declaration which, taken with his general record, amounts to as strong a position as Mr. Pearre's. If he does take such a position, why then the people will be sure of a temperance man and the league can afford to be neutral. It would be a blow to the temperance interests if Col. Pearre should be defeated by a man who is not as strong on the temperance question as himself.'

"President Alfred Wilson of the Montgomery County Anti-Saloon League has addressed a letter to each of the congressional candidates in this district asking him to pledge himself to support the temperance measures to be presented in Congress by the organization, and the replies to these questions will be made public at a meeting of the league to be held at Olney, October 21."

The Baltimore Sun of Sunday says:

"In the Sixth district there is considerable bitterness between Mr David J. Lewis, the Democratic candidate, and his opponent, Congressman Pearre. The two were formerly law partners and friends. The law partnership was disrupted months ago and there does not seem much friendliness left between them. It is a heavy Republican district—the heaviest in the state—and the chances are strongly in Pearre's favor.

"Still Mr. Lewis is making a gallant fight and is confident of victory. He is the strongest kind of Bryan man, and the Bryan sentiment among the miners in Western Maryland is reported as strong. Mr. Lewis carried Allegany county once for the State Senate and is convinced he will do so this time by a decided majority, because of the Republican support of which he is assured. Some of the organization Democrats of the county also believe he will carry it, but there are still Garrett and Frederick to be reckoned with if he did, and both are Republican strongholds. Stranger things have happened, however, and Mr. Lewis' campaign has awakened enthusiasm among the Democrats of the district."

The Baltimore American of Sunday says:

"Probably the most unique campaign is that being waged by Senator Lewis, the Populist-Socialist-Democrat, who is opposing Congressman Pearre. Lewis is undoubtedly the most radical Bryanite in the state. He favors government ownership, the referendum and all the other issues Bryan has from time to time enunciated. It was Mr. Lewis who prepared the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, on December 18, 1899, entitled 'a bill to provide for the acquisition, purchase, construction and condemnation by the United States of America of railroads lying in the territories of the United States, etc., etc., and to provide for the operation of said roads.'

"Accompanying the bill was an argument submitted by him favoring the measure which he headed "Railway Nationalization." Mr. Lewis is not talking so much on government ownership just now, but the socialistic doctrines he advocates are none the less radical. If anything he out-Bryan's Bryan. He is now playing up the anti-injunction plank with the view of catching the votes of the miners in his home county and claims to be able to defeat Colonel Pearre in Allegany.

"The Republican candidate pursues the even tenor of his way in making a thorough canvass of his district and, judged by the attendants at the meetings held in Garrett and Allegany counties, he has nothing to fear from his opponent. Lewis will lose the votes of many of the leading Democrats in the district, who regard him as a Populist. He will be fortunate indeed if he carries as much as one county.

"From all parts of the state the Republicans are receiving the most encouraging news. They have more than held their own in the registration and are daily receiving accessions to their ranks."

SI PERKINS WRITES

Wants to Know What Kind of Religion Taft's Critics Carry Under Their Hats.

Pine Swamp, Md., Oct. 12, 1908.

MISTER EDITUR—

SUR:—Them fellers wot print them two dimocrat papers called the jurnal and the dimocrat are orful buzzy jist now tryin to make beleve thet this taft feller wot is a runnin is no chrystun and nun or we uns shud voat fur him, but say I am gittin tired of sich rot.

ef the dimmycrat papers cant giv us sum reson why we shud not voat fer taft better nor this I hev made up my mind that I will voat fer him any way.

I was down to jim higgins' last week and jim he gits down yure paper the publican and s zs jim, sez he,

"si, I jist want to rede this mission speech uv taft's and then tel me if you think he ain't a christyun" wel, jim he red thet speech and says I, "jim, I hev hed enuf of thet rot of them two dimmycrat papers at okeland and I am goin to vote fur thet taft feller because if they can't bring nutthin else agin him only his religin he must be a purty good feller, especially jim, when we know thet the fellers who are kickin up such a muss 'bout taft's religin hev nun to spare their selves."

Jim sez, sez he, "si, I thot you'd git yure eyes open," sez he.

Says I, "jim, as long as I war jined to the dimmycrats I never knew they wuz so strong on religion afore, I'm sprised to see it" sez I.

"why jim huggins," sez I, "sum of the dimmycrats who air willin to git on a big bender jist as often as they kin raise the price and sum other dimmycrats who kin cuss a blue streke air now tellin uv thet we shed not voat fer taft becase he is no follerer of Christ"

"Jim" sez I, "thet mission speech shows thet he beleve in chrystanty." I don't beleve them any more, and I hev made up my mind to vote fer thet taft feller.

I wish, mister editur, you wud plese ax them same dimmycrat fellers wut they mene? only a short time ago the dimmycrat spekers wuz down our way axing uv us to vote fur a man fur turney gineral uv the state who duz not beleve thet Christ is the Son uv God.

it hez only bin a short time since the dimmycrat legislater of this state uv Md. wich stand fur maryland, lected another feller name uv Rainer to the united states uv ameriky senit, and Rainer is also a feller who duz not beleve that Christ is the son uv God.

Now mister editur, I am tired uv this kind of politiks a cussin uv other peeple fur wot we do ourselves. they use to tell us thet our old dimmycrat party wuz the wite man's party. they talked a heap about nigger domination but since Brine guv them nigger fellers a bankit at his home in linkin we hev not got a chanst to cuss teddy no more fur a feedin Booker washinton.

I am tired of all this rot, and then tel me this Lewis feller is a poppylist, but then I spose thet the dimmycrats could not git a dimmycrat to run. but I dont bleve in this poppylist bizness, ef i did I'd voat fur Ira Kulp. It wasn't this away in the good ole times and I hev made up my mind to voat fur taft if they can't say nuthin agin him 'cept his religin, when at the same time they would hev enuf to do a cartin uv the dirt frum in frunt uv their own dores.

They use to tell us that the publican party wuz the nigger party, and then brine to git their voats takes these same niggers they hev always cussed to his buzum as it wer, and then stick up a poppylist to run like that feller Lewis, I hev hed enuf. I hev med up my mind thet I will do wot Lewis hez did afore and vote fer col. Perry this time so good by, old dimmycrat. 'Taint bin long since you wuz sendin around jugs uv red likker, and now you fellers who can beat a methodist parson a talkin religin at big meetin time and can cuss wuss then a hoss trader and drink more red likker than a hog, I'm tired uv yure rot and will voat fur thet taft feller and colonel Perry, and I hope mister editur you will ax them dimmycrat fellers wot they mene?

Yours.

SI PERKINS.

ONE OF GARRETT COUNTY'S BEST YOUNG MEN DEAD

Russell Browning, of Kitzmiller, Met With Fatal Accident Last Thursday.

SUPERINTENDENT HAMILL COAL CO

While Engaged in Anjusting Clutch on Aerial Tramway, Bucket Broke Loose and the Man Was Crushed to Death in Collapsed Carrier.

Last Thursday afternoon a fatal accident befell one of Garrett County's best young men, the victim being Russell S. Browning, son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Meshech A. Browning, of Kitzmiller.

The unfortunate man at the time of the accident and a for a year or more prior thereto held the position of superintendent of the Hamill Coal Company, operating at Kitzmiller. From the mouth of the mine located on the north side of the river, to the railway dump on the south side and at an elevation in some places of more than a hundred feet, there is an aerial tramway more than eight hundred feet long. On this tramway two buckets, with a coal carrying capacity of two tons each, are operated. On one of the buckets the anchor had become loosened. While inside the adjusting the bolts, it broke loose and descended the tramway, gaining speed every second; at the railway the bucket came in contact with heavy posts and was crushed like an eggshell, and the unfortunate young man, in the awful contact, received such injuries as to produce almost instant death. While making the descent Mr. Browning exerted every endeavor to stop the car, but was unsuccessful.

He was 25 years, 11 m nths and 21 days old, and leaves besides his father four sisters: Mrs. E. J. Hamill, Mrs. R. A. Smith, Mrs. V. G. Pew, and Mrs B. T. Laughlin, all of Kitzmiller. The deceased was a member of the M. E. church, and also of the Loyal Temperance Legion and Knights of the Mystic Chain, both organizations attending the funeral in a body, which was held on Sunday afternoon from the church at Kitzmiller the services being conducted by Rev. J. H. Funk, the pastor, and was attended by a very large crowd of sympathetic friends and neighbors, attesting the esteem in which the young man was held by all who knew him.

Public Sale.

I will offer a public sale at my farm, four miles south of Oakland at Gortner on Tuesday, October 20th, beginning at the hour of nine o'clock a. m., live stock, consisting of horses, cattle etc., and farming implements of all kinds. See large posters for particulars.

FRED GORTNER.

WILL VOTE ON TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

Residents of District No. 3 Will Ballot Under Provisions of Anderson Law.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, under the provisions of the Anderson Anti-Saloon Law, passed at the session of the Maryland Legislature last winter, gives notice in this paper today that the question whether or not District No. 3 shall become Anti-Saloon territory, will be balloted on at the general election to be held on Tuesday, November 3rd.

Under the provisions of the law the question will be submitted to the voters, a sufficient number having signed a petition to the Supervisors for its submission at the above time. In addition to the petition filed for the district generally another petition was filed asking that the question be submitted to the voters of Grantsville as a municipality. The latter petition was returned to the signers by the Supervisors, that body holding that they have no warrant in law for its submission to the voters of the town when permission had already been granted for a vote by the citizens of the entire district.

What position the Grantsville voters take in the matter is not known but there is a probablility that a mandamus will be asked from the Court compelling the Supervisors to grant the petition of the voters of the municipality.

FIKE.

We are still having dry weather in this section and the farmers are making use of it to get all their out-door work done.

Many have cut their 'phones off the Evans' extension of the Connecting Telephone line and have put their phones of the new farmers line which has just been connected.

On last Saturday the Fike ball team played the South Avenue team. The game was interesting as the score was almost a tie, although the avenue team came out ahead by one.

The school at this place has now an enrollment of 32 pupils and the number present for the past few days has been 30.

Mrs. Louisa Fike, who has been at Mr. Andrew Chrise's all summer, has come home and Mrs. Ida Marshall has gone to take her place.

Miss Pearl Fike made a trip to Markleysburg, Pa., one day last week.

Mr. Playford Thomas and his grandmother made a trip to Accident last week and spent a few days on a visit.

Mr. Geo. W. Vansickle accidentally drove his wagon over his little boy's leg but very fortunately it did not injure him.

Miss Mary Fike, of Gladys, W. Va., has returned to this place to visit relatives and friends for a short time.

DIXON & KELSO

One-half Car-load of

Pears Pears

JUST RECEIVED.

75c a bushel

Will pay 10c a pound for Live Chickens—either young or old.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

Now is the time to buy your

FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING

while stocks are complete. I have hundreds of Suits of new Fall Goods and can please almost anvone in both Quality and Price.

A lot of Men's Suits to close out

At $3.75

were $6.00

Plenty of Good, Warm UNDERWEAR.

And the most complete line of SHOES in town, from the cheapest that is good, to the best that is made.

COME AND SEE!

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

BUILDING GOOD ROADS

Highway Expert Tells Why the Government Should Help.

HAS THE RIGHT AND ABILITY.

Secretary of Farmers' Good Roads League Points Out How States Can Be Helped by Bond Issue—Definite Conclusions on Construction Methods.

H. H. Cross, secretary of the Farmers' Good Road League, has written as follows from Chicago to the editor of the New York Tribune on the subject of building improved highways:

Should the federal government by a bond issue assist the states to build public roads? If so, to what extent? The answers to the above questions involve the consideration of several things—first, the right of government to do so, the need of it, its ability and, last, whether it is a wise policy to adopt. In the brief space available we must assume the necessity of good roads; that their condition affects market conditions and thus concerns all the people; that bad roads are productive of a great and preventable waste that amounts to several dollars a person a year; that one of the greatest needs for the social and economic development and welfare of all the people is good roads.

As to the right or power of the federal government to build or assist to build highways, section 8 of article 1 of the constitution says among other things.

Congress shall have power "to establish postoffices and post roads."

More than 40 per cent. of all the highways and most of the main roads are used for rural mail delivery and so are postroads in the meaning of the constitution. President Monroe in a message to congress May 4, 1802, says:

In whatever sense the term "establish" is applied to postoffices it must be applied in the same sense to post roads.

Cooley in his book on constitutional law says:

Every road within a state, including railroads, canals, turnpikes and navigable streams, existing or created within a state, became a post road whenever by action of the postoffice department provision is made for the transportation of the mails upon or over it.

The above is deemed sufficient to show the government has the unquestionable right to improve highways used for rural mail delivery.

Article 1, section 8, clause 1, provides in part: "The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imports and excises to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States."

Is not highway improvement for the general welfare?

On March 14, 1818, the house of representatives passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That congress has power under the constitution to appropriate money for the construction of post roads, military and other roads and of canals and for the improvement of waterways.

Among the early statesmen who held that the federal government had ample power to build roads were Jefferson, Madison, Clay, Webster, Calhoun and others.

The government has expended millions on the old Cumberland road and a number of millitary roads, establishing a precedent. The public roads of nearly every civilized country in the world have been built in whole or in part by its general government. It is the only plan that has ever succeeded. It is the world precedent.

As to the need for better highways no argument is necessary. The general government is expending $35,000,000 a year on rural delivery. According to Senator Bankhead of Alabama, the postoffice department estimates that uniformly good roads would mean longer routes, more regular service and a saving of 20 per cent. in the cost. Thus the loss to the postoffice department due to bad roads is now $7,000,000 a year and is increasing as the service is extended. It will soon reach $10,000,000 a year. While bad roads entail a loss to the mail service of $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year, the loss to the farmers and consumers of farm produce cannot be less than twenty times as much.

As to the ability of the federal government to assist in building good roads, how better can we judge this than by comparing the debt per capita of our country with the leading nations of the world that have built good roads and found it paid to do so?

The per capita debt of Germany, according to the Chicago Daily News Almanac and Year Book for 1908, is $49; England, $88.83; Italy, $82; Spain, $98; France, $144, and the United States, $11.11. The amount of annual interest charged to be met by a citizen of Germany is $2; France, $6.05; England, $3.47; United States, 29 cents.

The panic of 1907 was occasioned largely by the enormous demand for currency "to move the crops." Why need the crops be moved with such haste and at such great inconvenience to the railways and so completely drain the cities of money as to cause a panic and the loss of many millions? The farmer knew the winter and bad road season was approaching and that if he didn't get his crops off before the roads broke up he didn't know how long the embargo of bad roads would prevent him from doing so.

Another factor was the insufficient amount of government bonds to serve as the basis of national bank circulation. As no bonds were available the banks could not increase their circulation, as they would have been glad to do and which would have immediately relieved the financial strain. The country needs good roads, and it needs a large debt (strange as that may sound). Out of this dilemma the way is easy.

If the federal government was to issue as needed $400,000,000 of 2 per cent thirty to fifty year bonds to aid in road building it would carry the national debt up from $11.11 to $15.55 and the interest charge from 29 to 39 cents per capita. The debt per capita would be almost exactly where it was ten years ago.

It would require $8,000,000 a year to pay the interest on the bonds, but every dollar of it would be saved upon the one item of rural delivery.

Of the 2,100,000 miles of highways about 900,000 miles are post roads, and about 800,000 of these are unimproved. The $400,000,000 for national aid would give about $600 a mile, or about 25 per cent. of the average cost of building hard roads upon these highways.

After ten years of study of road building at home and abroad the writer has reached the following definite conclusions:

First.—That if we are to have good roads within a generation the federal government must assist in building them.

Second.—That the government contribution be pro rated among the states as the work is done on the basis of one-half the gross sum upon the full road mileage of the state and one-half upon the basis of population. The plan works out fairly to all the states. This plan would make available out of $400,000,000 approximately $25,000,000 for New York, $26,000,000 for Pennsylvania, $22,000,000 for Illinois, $17,000,000 for Ohio, $13,000,000 for Michigan, etc.

Third.—That the actual construction of the roads should be done under state supervision upon specifications approved by the United States government engineers.

Fourth.—That the initiative should be left with the respective townships, road districts or parishes, these to furnish at least one-third of the total cost, with the state clothed the power to veto any improvement if of insufficient importance. This power would probably be seldom if ever used. It may be assumed if the road was not a main highway and needed the people of a township would not vote to build it when they had to raise at least one-third of the money required to do so.

Fifth.—That if this country is to fulfill its high destiny and meet the requirements placed upon it by its wealth, position and its opportunity good roads are a paramount necessity, and to get them speedily requires both federal and state aid to hearten the people to undertake this great work. Good roads will do more for the educational, social and economic development of the whole country than any other single agency.

COAL PRDUCTION OF WHOLE WORLD

United States Furnishes Almost Half of Entire Output.

In a report recently published by the United States Geological Survey, an advance chapter from Mineral Resources of the United States, Calendar Year 1906, E. W. Parker, the coal expert and chief statistician of the Survey, estimates the world's production of coal for 1907, at 1,209,184,109 short tons, of which the United States furnished 39.7 per cent. The following table from Mr. Parker's report, showing the production of the principal coal producing countries for the year nearest the one under review for which figures could be obtained, gives the details of this estimate. For sake of convenience in comparison the quantities as reported have been reduced to short tons of 2,000 pounds each.

	Short tons.
United States (1907)	480,363,424
Great Britain (1907)	226,773,605
Germany (1907)	226,773,605
Austria-Hungary (1907)	43,954,315
France (1907)	40,708,215
Belgium (1807)	26,261,745
Russia and Finland (1906)	23,856,961
Japan (1907)	15,362,467
India (1906)	10,957,240
Canada (1907)	10,510,961
New South Wales (1906)	8,541,524
Spain (1906)	3,620,588
Transvaal (1907)	3,261,633
New Zealand (1906)	1,937,080
Natal (1905)	1,264,995
Mexico (1906)	847,416
Queensland (1907)	765,265
Holland (1907)	587,282
Italy (1906)	521,711
Sweden (1906)	327,361
Victoria (1906)	179,907
Cape Colony (1906)	142,877
Tasmania (1907)	65,968
Other Countries	8,400,000
Total	1,209,184,109
Percentage of the United States	39.7

It will be observed that in 1907 the United States produced 60 per cent. more coal than Great Britain and over 100 per cent. more than Germany. Exclusive of Great Britain the United States produced in 1907 more coal than all the other countries of the world combined. It may also be noted that more than 98 per cent. of the total world's production of coal is from countries north of the equator, the countries south of that line producing less than 200,000,000 tons annually.

Mr. Parker also presents a table showing the growth of the coal mining industry in the United States since 1868 in comparison with that of other countries of the world, from which it appears that during the period of 40 years the percentage of the world's total produced by the United States has increased from 14.32 to 39.73, and that since 1869 this country has held first place among the coal producers. It now stands far in the lead of all others, having so far outdistanced Great Britain that that country can no longer be considered a rival, although it is only nine years since it was supplanted by the United States as the greatest coal producing country in the world.

Your Stationery

is your silent representative. If you sell fine goods that are up-to-date in style and of superior quality it ought to be reflected in your printing. We produce the kind that you need and will not feel ashamed to have represent you. That is the only kind it pays to send out. Send your orders to this office.

Man's Work Is More Than Breadwinning.

By President KENYON L. BUTTERFIELD of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

THE sharp distinction sometimes drawn between vocational studies and culture studies is already being modified. Some time it may be obliterated. Probably we shall have a NEW DEFINITION OF CULTURE. At any rate, vocation hereafter is to be glorified not only for what it contributes to national and individual prosperity, but for its educational possibilities.

VOCATION IS NOT MERELY TECHNIQUE. IT IS NOT MERELY BREADWINNING. AT ITS BEST IT IS A FORM OF SOCIAL SERVICE IN WHICH THE WHOLE MAN IS ENGAGED.

It relates itself to most of the individual demands for growth and even more vitally to the social demands of family and of state and of civil society. Hence we shall discover a way of making a vocational training also a liberal training. Agriculture is to be amply recognized in the schools. If agriculture, properly defined and taught, is efficient educational material, both city boy and country boy may PROFIT by it, the one because he will reach a knowledge of and a SYMPATHY with nature not easily secured in any other way, the other because he is utilizing his environment—physical, industrial and social—as a MEANS OF EDUCATION.

Electricity and Sun's Rays To Accomplish Work Of Coal In Future.

By GUGLIELMO MARCONI, Wireless Telegraph Inventor.

IN all ways science is more and more studying to perfect the practical comfort and well being of the world. Of course there will always be ships upon the sea. The mysterious primeval voice of the ocean will continue its spell over the human imagination.

BUT THERE WILL NOT ALWAYS BE STEAMSHIPS. THEY WILL PASS THE WAY OF THEIR PREDECESSORS, AND BEFORE LONG WE SHALL CROSS THE OCEAN IN SHIPS RUN BY ELECTRIC POWER.

There will be no coal smoke, no sickish odor of stale steam, no blazing caverns in the hold, where human beings with staring eyes and blackened faces sweat their lives away that the pulse of the engines may not stop.

THE STORAGE BATTERY WILL TAKE THE PLACE OF COAL AND FIRE AND WATER.

Instead of coaling the great ship will quietly and cleanly renew its batteries at its journey's end, and if coal is used it will be far from the linen and the noses of men.

In time coal will cease to be our only source of energy. In every land men of science are patiently studying the problem of utilizing the ENERGY OF THE SUN—storing it, in fact, so that the generation of electric force may be cheapened by its use to a point where the storage battery on a large scale will be an economic as well as an academic possibility.

The wasted energy in coal as now used may in the interval be brought to do its work and so bring about the monster storage battery sooner than we now expect.

BUT SOONOR OR LATER WE SHALL ENSLAVE THE SUN'S RAYS TO OUR USES AS WE HAVE THE OTHER PRODUCTS OF HIS BEING.

The Law Has No Strong Arm.

By President ELIOT of Harvard.

IN no other civilized country of the world is there such absence of effective police supervision as in the United States.

One must say that there is none in country districts and that in urban districts it is ordinarily ineffective. Even well known members of the CRIMINAL CLASS ARE UNDER NO EFFECTUAL CONTROL and by merely changing from time to time their field of operations often succeed in preying on the community for years.

THE LAW HAS NO STRONG ARM.

Watchful Parents Rear True Children.

By Mrs. JOHN A. LOGAN.

PARENTS should never relax their watchful care of their children from their birth to their majority, by which time such comradeship should have been established between parents and children that no temptation would be strong enough to win the children from their parents.

THEY SHOULD BE BOUND TOGETHER BY THE STRONGEST POSSIBLE TIES, INSEPARABLE IN ALL OF THEIR AIMS AND AMBITIONS OF LIFE.

This can be done if parents would look upon their children as the GREATEST BLESSING OF LIFE, the mother consecrating herself to her children in their infancy and the father supplementing the mother's vigilance as soon as their children are out of the nursery, both uniting their efforts to keep their children pure and undefiled by being left to the care of hired servants, tutors, governesses and teachers, who are RARELY WORTHY of the trusts that are constantly confided to them.

The mother who has no time from her "social duties," devotion to amusements and the frivolities of society to give to the homelier ones of caring for her children and training them for usefulness in life can blame no one but HERSELF if they go astray. Furthermore, a mother should make it her conscientious duty to try as far as in her lies to avoid the transmission of evil propensities or idiosyncrasies that are destined to afflict the offspring probably through life.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT, DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST, OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building, KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m., Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBDELAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse-power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars

Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.
Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Real Estate Bought and Sold.
Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land:

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contains some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and wnen ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber and Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Departm't
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

The Moose

BY
THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

THE moose is the giant of all deer; and many hunters esteem it the noblest of American game. Beyond question there are few trophies more prized than the huge shovel horns of this strange dweller in the cold northland forests.

I shot my first moose after making several fruitless hunting trips with this special game in view. The season I finally succeeded it was only after having hunted two or three weeks in vain, among the Bitter Root Mountains, and the ranges lying southeast of them.

I began about the first of September

We then dropped on hands and knees.

by making a trial with my old hunting friend Willis. We speedily found a country where there were moose, but of the animals themselves we never caught a glimpse.

The moose which lived in isolated, exposed localities were speedily killed or driven away after the incoming settlers; and at the time that we hunted we found no sign of them until we reached the region of continuous forest. Here, in a fortnight's hunting, we found as much sign as we wished, and plenty of it fresh; but the animals themselves we not only never saw, but we never so much as heard. Often after hours of careful still-hunting or cautious tracking, we found the footprints deep in the soft earth, showing where our quarry had winded or heard us, and had noiselessly slipped away from the danger. I began to think that this moose-hunt, like all my former ones, was doomed to end in failure.

However, a few days later I met a crabbed old trapper named Hank Griffin, who was going after beaver in the mountains, and who told me that if I would come with him he would show me moose. I jumped at the chance, and he proved as good as his word; though for the first two trials my ill luck did not change.

At the time that it finally did change we had at last reached a place where the moose were on favorable ground. A high, marshy valley stretched for several miles between two rows of stony mountains, clad with a forest of rather small fir-trees. This valley was covered with reeds, alders, and rank grass, and studded with little willow-bordered ponds and island-like clumps of spruce and graceful tamaracks.

Having surveyed the ground and found moose sign the preceding afternoon, we were up betimes in the cool morning to begin our hunt. Before sunrise we were posted on a rocky spur of the foot-hills, behind a mask of evergreens; ourselves unseen we overlooked all the valley, and we knew we could see any animal which might be either feeding away from cover or on its journey homeward from its feeding ground to its day-bed.

As it grew lighter we scanned the valley with increasing care and eagerness. The sun rose behind us; and almost as soon as it was up we made out some large beast moving among the dwarf willows beside a little lake half a mile in our front. In a few minutes the thing walked out where the bushes were thinner, and we saw that it was a young bull moose browsing on the willow tops. He had evidently nearly finished his breakfast, and he stood idly for some moments, now and then lazily cropping a mouthful of twig tips. Then he walked off with great strides in a straight line across the marsh, splashing among the wet water-plants, and ploughing through boggy spaces with the indifference begotten of vast strength and legs longer than those of any other animal on this continent.

After a while he reached a spruce island, through which he walked to and fro; but evidently could find therein no resting-place quite to his mind, for he soon left and went on to another. Here after a little wandering he chose a point where there was some thick young growth, which hid him from view when he lay down, though not when he stood. After some turning he settled himself in his bed just as a steer would.

He could not have chosen a spot better suited for us. He was nearly at the edge of the morass, the open space between the spruce clump where he was lying and the rocky foot-hills being comparatively dry and not much over a couple of hundred yards broad; while some sixty yards from it, and between it and the hills, was a little hummock, tufted with firs, so as to afford us just the cover we needed. Keeping back from the edge of the morass we were able to walk upright through the forest, until we got the point where he was lying in a line with this little hummock. We then dropped on our hands and knees, and crept over the soft, wet sward, where there was nothing to make a noise.

At last we reached the hummock, and I got into position for a shot, taking a final look at my faithful 45-90 Winchester to see that all was in order. Peering cautiously through the shielding evergreens, I at first could not make out where the moose was lying, until my eye was caught by the motion of his big ears, as he occasionally flapped them lazily forward. Even then I could not see his outline; but I knew where he was, and having pushed my rifle forward on the moss, I snapped a dry twig to make him rise. My veins were thrilling and my heart beating with that eager, fierce excitement, known only to the hunter of big game, and forming one of the keenest and strongest of the many pleasures which with him go to make up "the wild joy of living."

As the sound of the snapping twig smote his ears the moose rose nimbly to his feet, with a lightness on which one would not have reckoned in a beast so heavy of body. He stood broadside to me for a moment, his ungainly head slightly turned, while his ears twitched and his nostrils snuffed the air. Drawing a fine bead against his black hide, behind his shoulder and two thirds of his body's depth below his shaggy withers, I pressed the trigger. He neither flinched nor reeled, but started with his regular ground-covering trot through the spruces; yet I knew he was mine, for the light blood sprang from both of his nostrils, and he fell dying on his side before he had gone thirty rods.

Later in the fall I was again hunting among the lofty ranges which continue towards the southeast the chain of the Bitter Root, between Idaho and Montana. There were but two of us, and we were travelling very light, each having but one pack-pony and the saddle animal he bestrode. We were high among the mountains, and followed no regular trail. Hence our course was often one of extreme difficulty. Occasionally, we took our animals through the forest near timber line, where the slopes were not too steep; again we threaded our way through a line of glades, or skirted the foot-hills, in an open, park country; and now and then we had to cross stretches of tangled mountain forest, making but a few miles a day, at the cost of incredible toil, and accomplishing even this solely by virtue of the wonderful docility and sure-footedness of the ponies, and of my companion's skill with the axe and thorough knowledge of woodcraft.

Late one cold afternoon we came out in a high alpine valley in which there was no sign of any man's having ever been before us. Down its middle ran a clear brook. On each side was a belt of thick spruce forest, covering the lower flanks of the mountains. The trees came down in points and isolated clumps to the brook, the banks of which were thus bordered with open glades, rendering the travelling easy and rapid.

Soon after starting up this valley we entered a beaver meadow of considerable size. It was covered with lush, rank grass, and the stream wound through it rather sluggishly in long curves, which were fringed by a thick growth of dwarfed willows. In one or two places it broadened into small ponds, bearing a few lily-pads. This meadow had been all tramped up by moose. Trails led hither and thither through the grass, the willow twigs were cropped off, and the muddy banks of the little black ponds were indented by hoof-marks. Evidently most of the lilies had been plucked. The footprints were unmistakable; a moose's foot is longer and slimmer than a caribou's, while on the other hand it is much larger than an elk's, and a longer oval in shape.

Most of the sign was old, this high alpine meadow, surrounded by snow mountains, having clearly been a favorite resort for moose in the summer; but some enormous, fresh tracks told that one or more old bulls were still frequenting the place.

The light was already fading, and, of course, we did not wish to camp where we were, because we would then certainly scare the moose. Accordingly we pushed up the valley for another mile, through an open forest, the ground being quite free from underbrush and dead timber, and covered with a carpet of thick moss, in which the feet sank noiselessly. Then we came to another beaver-meadow, which offered fine feed for the ponies. On its edge we hastily pitched camp, just at dusk. We tossed down the packs in a dry grove, close to the brook, and turned the tired ponies loose in the meadow, hobbling the little mare that carried the bell. The ground was smooth. We threw a cross-pole from one to the other of two young spruces, which happened to stand handily, and from it stretched and pegged out a piece of canvas, which we were using as a shelter tent. Beneath this we spread our bedding, laying under it the canvas sheets in which it had been wrapped. There was still bread left over from yesterday's baking, and in a few moments the kettle was boiling, and the frying-pan sizzling, while one of us skinned and cut into suitable pieces two grouse we had knocked over on our march. For fear of frightening the moose we built but a small fire, and went to bed soon after supper, being both tired and cold. Fortunately, what little breeze there was blew up the valley.

At dawn I was awake, and crawled out of my buffalo bag, shivering and yawning. My companion still slumbered heavily. White frost covered whatever had been left outside. The cold was sharp, and I hurriedly slipped a pair of stout moccasins on my feet, drew on my gloves and cap, and started through the ghostly woods for the meadow where we had seen the moose sign. The tufts of grass were stiff with frost; black ice skimmed the edges and quiet places of the little brook.

I walked slowly, it being difficult not to make a noise by cracking sticks or brushing against trees, in the gloom; but the forest was so open that it favored me. When I reached the edge of the beaver-meadow it was light enough to shoot, though the front sight still glimmered indistinctly. Streaks of cold red showed that the sun would rise soon.

Before leaving the shelter of the last spruces I halted to listen; and almost immediately heard a curious splashing sound from the middle of the meadow, where the brook broadened into small willow-bordered pools. I knew at once that a moose was in one of these pools, wading about and pulling up the water-lilies by seizing their slippery stems in his lips, plunging his head deep under water to do so. The moose love to feed in this way in the hot months, when they spend all the time they can in the water, feeding or lying down; nor do they altogether abandon the habit even when the weather is so cold that icicles form in their shaggy coats.

His vast bulk loomed black.

Crouching, I stole noiselessly along the edge of the willow-thicket. The stream twisted through it from side to side in zigzags, so that every few rods I got a glimpse down a lane of black water. In a minute I heard a slight splashing near me; and on passing the next point of bushes, I saw the shadowy outline of the moose's hindquarters, standing in a bend of the water. In a moment he walked onwards, disappearing. I ran forward a couple of rods, and then turned in among the willows, to reach the brook where it again bent back towards me. The splashing in the water, and the rustling of the moose's body against the frozen twigs, drowned the little noise made by my moccasined feet.

I strode out on the bank at the lower end of a long narrow pool of water, dark and half frozen. In this pool, half way down and facing me, but a score of yards off, stood the mighty marsh beast, strange and uncouth in look as some monster surviving over from the Pliocene. His vast bulk loomed black and vague in the dim gray dawn; his huge antlers stood out sharply; columns of steam rose from his nostrils. For several seconds he fronted me motionless; then he began to turn, slowly, and as if he had a stiff neck. When quarter way round I fired into his shoulder; whereat he reared and bounded on the bank with great leap, vanishing in the willows. Through these I heard him crash like a whirlwind for a dozen rods; then down he fell, and when I reached the spot he had ceased to struggle. The ball had gone through his heart.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM H. TAFT,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

JAMES S. SHERMAN,

OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

BRYAN made 26 speeches Saturday. And 25 of them sounded much like the first one.

MR. TAFT'S voice is not equal to his flow of thought. With some campaigners the case is different.

MR. BRYAN'S voice is the one which has not given out during the campaign. No one has disputed that in the matter of voice Mr. Bryan's equipment is unsurpassed

---

MR. BRYAN has been his own advance agent for so long that the public will hardly be disposed to recognize him in his new role as a self-constituted advance agent of prosperity.

"WE ENTER this campaign more united than we have been since 1892," says Mr. Bryan. For particulars regarding the united condition of the Democratic party since 1892 consult "The New York World's" "Map of Bryanism."

MR. TAFT'S RELIGION

The News has received a few letters attacking Mr. Taft because he is a Unitarian. Attacks of this nature are not made publicly by men of standing among the opponents of the Republican candidate, because, in the first place, very shame would deter them from it, and, in the second place, their own object would be defeated by the indignant protests which such a display of intolerance would provoke. But there are not wanting indications that in Maryland, as elsewhere, there is in progress a secret and shame-faced appeal to the prejudices of narrow-minded sectarians.

Such a warfare is so despicable that it is difficult to speak of it patiently. In the public prints recently Cardinal Gibbons, Rev. Randolph H. McKim and other prominent men have been claiming for their respective sects the honor and credit attaching to the establishment of religious liberty in Maryland. It is an empty honor they are disputing about if 300 years after the foundation of the colony there are to be found within its borders any considerable number of individuals who would be moved to discriminate against a man of the stainless character and great public services of Mr. Taft on the ground that he is a Unitarian. "Ye shall know them by their fruits," says the Founder of the religion which these narrow-minded critics profess. The church which produces men of the type of Taft and scores of other prominent Unitarians might rest its claims to consideration on the Master's words.

If nothing else suggests silence from these pitiable fanatics, self-interest ought to. For there is nothing more certain than this, that if a real issue were made of Mr. Taft's religion the great mass of the voters would forget the tariff and bank deposits and trust-busting and everything else under the sun and line up solidly for freedom of conscience as against bigotry and intolerance. Baltimore News.

GOV. JOHNSON presented a Minnesota college $42,000 which he had secured by soliciting contributions. Which is more than he is doing to help out Bryan's showing in the electoral college.

TAFT'S ACTS VS. BRYAN'S TALKS.

In the interchange of compliments between President Roosevelt and Mr. Bryan each charges the other with too close an association with the trusts and the agents of monopoly. Mr. Roosevelt alleges that Mr. Bryan received contributions in a former campaign from the silver magnates who favored his election, believing that in that event they would be enabled to coin 50 cents' worth of their silver into legal-tender dollars. Mr. Bryan replies that the contributions he received from the silver magnates were insignificant in comparison with those which Mr. Roosevelt received from corporations. Mr. Roosevelt reproaches Mr. Bryan with Haskell and Standard Oil and Mr. Bryan reproaches Mr. Roosevelt with Harriman. And so the recrimination has gone on, with averment and reply, rejoinder and surrejoinder. Mr. Bryan is to some degree in the predicament of Icarus in the ancient legend. That promising young man undertook to fly, but imprudently approached too close to the sun, and the heat from that luminary melting the wax with which his wings were affixed, Icarus fell into the sea. Mr. Bryan went into the campaign flying upon beautiful white and spotless wings, as the "holier-than-thou" candidate, the chosen of Heaven for the destruction of the wicked trusts and as the terrible foe of predatory wealth. But it seems that these wide-spreading wings, which have excited the admiration of mankind, were, like those of Icarus, assumed for the occasion, and the fierce heat of the Presidential campaign having melted the wax, Mr. Bryan has tumbled from his lofty height. Apparently the Standard Oil Trust and some other trusts view the possibilty of his election with no more apprehension than is excited by the appearance of the pumpkin head ghost at Halloween. The fear that has been excited is among the ordinary men of business, among the railroad companies that are struggling to put idle cars and locomotives back into commission; among the workingmen who are looking forward with anxiety to the coming winter and the prospects of getting employment.

All the smoke that is raised by the crimination and recrimination on the trust question cannot obscure the real issue in this campaign—the issue that concerns the country and every man in it who is dependent for the success in his vocation upon the resumption of business. That great and practical issue is, which of the two men presented, respectively, by the two principal parties will it be best for the country to elect as President. One or the other will be President, in the course of human events, on and after the 4th day of March next. Which will the people have—a theorist, a dreamer, an agitator who has been agitating and proposing remedies for 12 years, but whose theories and remedies have never been tested?

Or will the people prefer the calm and honest man of affairs who is experienced in government and has made good in each one of the high and important places in which he has been tested? Do the people want talk and threats of annihilation or do they want action that will restore confidence? If they want talk, Mr. Bryan is the man for the place. If they want action and achievement, Mr. Taft is to be preferred.

The country wants a rest from agitation; there is need of business peace. Mr. Taft promises this, and he will keep his promise. His whole record is surety for him. He will enforce the law and punish violators of the law, high or low, rich or poor. But he will not undertake to establish an autocracy at Washington and prescribe how much a manufacturer shall be permitted to sell. He will not undertake to say what prices shall be charged; he will not undertake to wipe out the States and establish a new form of government. He will not take away the money of depositors in honest banks to pay the debts of dishonest banks. Mr. Bryan promises to keep the country stirred up by ringing messages to Congress and by all kinds of political nostrums which will make the patient worse instead of better. We want no quack political doctors or quack prescriptions, and consequently we do not want Mr. Bryan.—Baltimore Sun.

BRYAN'S FAILURE.

With election day only three weeks off, the one clear fact of the political situation is that Mr. Bryan is steadily losing strength as a Presidential candidate. He is weaker today than he was a month ago, and he has apparently no reserves on which to draw for the closing weeks of the canvass.

Why has he proved so valuable this year as a leader and a vote getter, asks the New York Tribune. The cause is not far to seek. What made him potential in 1896 and 1900 was his uncompromising radicalism. He was an agitator and a revolutionist, advocating policies without regard to their cost to the nation and asking votes from no element which did not accept his views as unconvertible and sympathise absolutely with his attempt to inflate commodity values by debasing the money standard. He was aggressive, consistent and fearless, and rode imperiously over the backsliders who wanted in 1900 to dodge the losing issue of free silver coinage. He was not willing to win the Presidency through suppression of recantation.

But this year the fatal shadow of vacillation has come over his spirit. He is more anxious to win than to be consistent, courageous and aggressive. Instead of insisting that the party platform of 1908 should be framed so as to reflect the views which he has publicly expressed he had it framed so as to contain the views which he considered temporarily popular and to omit the views which he considered temporarily unpopular. Then he announced with the eagerness of a politician relieved of an unwelcome burden of responsibility that he would be "bound by the omissions of the Denver platform."

Such an attitude could not attract voters who had formerly supported him as an outspoken radical and a high-minded foe of compromise. In this campaign he has shown none of his old dexterity as a vote maker because he has tried to appease the conservatives without disgusting the radicals, and riding two horses successfully is not Mr. Bryan's forte. He has taken up various issues and exploited them half-heartedly and now near the close of the campaign the public has ceased to look to him for serious or sustained discussion of any question. He has experimented with the compulsory blind pool guarantee of bank deposits, with tariff reform, "Shall the people rule?" approbation of President Roosevelt and a noisy claim of heirship to the Roosevelt policies, denunciation of President Roosevelt and silence about his rights of inheritance, a restriction of the output of any corporation to 50 per cent. of the total American output in that line of production and the guarantee to everybody of a "fair return" for his services, said return to be fixed according to specifications wisely withheld, and with each of these issues he has succeeded only in emphasizing his merely temporary devotion to it for vote-getting purposes.

Our discriminating contemporary "The Charleston News and Courier," which is heartily supporting Mr. Bryan, recently commented on the change which has come over the spirit of the Commoner's once radical dreams. It said:

"The history of the last four months tends to prove that Mr. Bryan is by nature a mild-mannered and cautious person who weighs his words nicely, and the thought arises that his rash utterances and demeanor twelve years ago were the outburst of immaturity."

It is as "a mild-mannered and cautious person who weighs his words nicely" that Mr. Bryan has disappointed and alienated hundreds of thousands of his former supporters. If his present attitude indicates "maturity," they prefer him as he was when he was still courageous, aggressive and immature.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Leaders of the Democratic party have a great deal to say about the Republican campaign fund. From Mr. Bryan down they are endeavoring to make it appear that the party of Taft and Sherman is being supplied with unlimited munitions of war by the predatory rich and large corporations. They would have the country believe that money is the chief asset of the Republican campaign and that it is to be poured out with lavish hand for the corruption of voters. "I have no corporation behind me," exclaimed Mr. Bryan with bitterness on Thursday. "I have no rich relatives behind me." This latter remark is directed at Judge Taft, whose brother is a wealthy man. On the same day that relic of departed glories, Col. Watterson, was bellowing rot at Louisville, talking of the "black-mailing of protected manufacturers and the predatory corporations" in behalf of the Republican ticket. And so it goes all along the line, every cheap orator and every disgruntled organ of the Democracy making cash the determining factor and holding up the Republican party as the possessor of uncounted riches which are to be employed in purchasing the presidency.

News reports, however, which will find their way into the columns of even the most purblind Democratic newspaper, do not bear out these charges. For instance here is part of a dispatch published in the press of the country last week:

"CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—With a liability of about $390,000 on his hands, in connection with the Republican headquarters, and only $100,000 collected in the western field, Chairman Hitchcock of the national committee has decided to postpone his trip east and see what could be done in a last appeal for money. In Chicago the Republicans are worse than strapped; they are in a state of bankruptcy.

"Delegation after delegation from the western and mountain states have been turned away empty handed by Mr. Hitchcock in the past two weeks and more will be told tomorrow that the cupboard is bear."

This does not look as if the "rich relatives" of Judge Taft were exploiting their millions unduly. It does not indicate that manufacturers and corporations are unbelting to an alarming extent. Fact is that the campaign has reached a stage when Mr. Bryan realizes the hopelessness of his fight. He and his followers are losing their tempers. They are sore. But meanwhile they have their agents in New York with Tammany's aid, and in Chicago, under Roger Sullivan, holding up every corporation and corporation man that can be touched. Having started in with Haskell of Standard Oil they have never let up, in any state where the proper degree of pressure can be brought, on collaring every predatory and tainted dollar they can reach.

K. of G. E. Social.

The members of Olive Branch Castle, No. 9, K. G. E., are requested and invited, with their families, to a social and entertainment at the Castle room, Monday evening, Oct. 26th, 1908.

Committee.

SCRAPS FROM "SCRIBBLER."

Timothy Pepper Replies to Some of the Utterances of An Irresponsible Writer.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

The readers of the Garrett Journal may have noticed in last week's issue of that paper "Scribbler's" generous donation of nonsense, all bundled, wrapped and labeled: "For Timothy Pepper," and containing many unmanly thrusts at a Somerset county editor.

A study of the article above referred to cannot fail to arouse in the minds of reasonable and thoughtful men a profound sense of pity for the writer who can boast of no better tool, or more effective weapon of defence, than the forked tongue of cheap and slummy sarcasm.

"Timothy Pepper's" former letters, published in the columns of THE REPUBLICAN during the closing weeks of September, like all public utterances, were open to honest criticism, but they seem to have become the target of an ironical and egotistical braggart, and we hear "Scribbler," forgetful of every claim of honor and manhood, with a high-handed and hot-headed recklessness, carelessly and recklessly exhausting his musty stock of vituperations in a childish attack upon "Poor Timothy," but only succeeding in laying bare to the public gaze his own narrowness of thought.

Were it not that "Scribbler" has scribbled certain false interpretations of our utterances we should treat his article with the silent contempt it so richly merits, but our position was not taken to be abandoned at the first discharge of a pop-gun.

We criticised those who unjustly assailed the personal liberties and rights of Judge Taft on account of his religious views and along comes "Scribbler," with a howling charge that we were defending an atheist, virtually declaring the Republican candidate to be an atheist, a statement for which he cannot produce the shadow of proof. Even his own admission in his article, that Judge Taft held a peculiar religious opinion, proves his own words to be false, as an atheist holds no religious faith.

In refutation of "Scribbler's" charge we most emphatically declare that we are not seeking to defend any man's religious faith, but shall always defend the constitutional rights of every citizen.

Many participants in the present campaign are adding another stain to the many blotches upon the robes of Democracy and are aiming a malicious blow at the constitution.

"Scribbler's" high pretences to Christian ideals are not carried out by the tone and character of his letter, as we question the possibility of such rank originating in the heart where true Christianity reigns.

We are also charged, in the same article, with having tried to prove that Lincoln was an irreligious man, which all will see to be false by a reference to our statement. Lincoln's noble self-sacrificing and irreproachable life and Christian utterances declare him to be more than an outward professor of beliefs, and his record puts to open shame the pretences of less sincere men.

"Scribbler" asserts that there were other men of Jefferson's time, who were as competent to fill the presidential chair, a statement we are inclined to doubt. However, the Democratic party chose him in spite of his atheism and it is a source of everlasting satisfaction to know that there was not a Republican in the country small enough to "blubber" about it.

We will consider the following quotations from "Scribbler's" letter: "Give honor to whom honor is due." Most assuredly; nothing that "Poor Timothy could say would detract from the honor of "The man whose place in history is assured." "Bryan was an advocate of tariff reform for 28 years," and in those years he had at least one chance to reform tariff and he showed his handiwork in the Wilson-Gorman Tariff law, the scheme that clogged the wheels of industry, mortgaged a million homes and made many an honest man a common tramp.

"Scribbler" tells that Bryan favors "the election of U. S. Senators by the people, Government Ownership, Freedom of the Philippines," but didn't tell that he favored trusts and if you don't believe it, just ask Haskell. The world always admires a man who is true to his principles and the advocates of democracy shall have my cordial respect as long as they are true to themselves and wage their political battles on fair, honest and manly issues, and do not, like our critic, hover over the outskirts of reason and hurl rubbish from the garbage can of personal prejudice.

After rambling through a labyrinth and many repetitions of the words, "Gas Bag," the author of the Journal's letter at last forgot how to spell "Gas Bag" and wrote "Scribbler" instead.

TIMOTHY PEPPER.

Conference Minutes Being Printed Here.

Rev. J. B. Workman, who was elected Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Conference at Moundsville on Wednesday of last week, has awarded the contract for printing the minutes of the Conference to THE REPUBLICAN, work upon which is already under way. An edition of 2500 copies will be printed.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

The Joy of Winter!

WINTER is enjoyable if the home is filled with healthful, genial warmth in every nook and corner. You can place your reading-lamp anywhere in any room if your home is Steam or Hot Water heated by

AMERICAN & IDEAL RADIATORS & BOILERS

They make the weather inside just what you want it to be—no matter what it is outside.

Then, too, the house is kept warm all through the night—you rise, dress and breakfast in warm rooms. No ash-dust or coal-gases in living-rooms—saves housework and caretaking, cuts down the coal bill. Let us tell you all about it. Call or write us today.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,

OAKLAND, MD.

For Sale Cheap.

I have for sale two three seated Hacks, 2o pen Surreys and 1 top Surrey, 1 three seated Trap, 1 two seated Trap, 1 Runabout, 1 set No. 1 Work Harness, 2 sets Double Carriage Harness and other articles too numerous to mention. Call at Sebold's Livery Stable, Loch Lynn Heights. Will sell cheap.

2t-p M. A. JOLLIFFE.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnisdhe or unfurnished.

BIDS FOR WATER WORKS AND A SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, will be received until SEVEN O'CLOCK P. M., MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908, for the construction of a SYSTEM OF WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE FOR THE TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Plans and specifications and full information, for both water and sewerage, can be obtained upon application to the Clerk to the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, or to Pemberton and Fairley, engineers, Baltimore, Md.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17–3t

SEALED PROPOSALS FOR MUNICIPAL BONDS.

$60,000 TOWN OF OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, BONDS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, until

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1908,

for the purchase of SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FIVE PER CENT. WATER WORKS AND SEWERAGE BONDS.

These bonds will be in denominations of $1000 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year, and dated on the first day of their issue. They shall be numbered serially, and Bond No. 1 shall be and payable two years from date of issue and thereafter each bond shall mature and be payable each consecutive year from the maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland to have the right to redeem any or all outstanding bonds twenty-five years from date of issue.

All of said bonds to be exempt from municipal and county taxation.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Address, Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland.

By order of Council.

TRUMAN WEST, Mayor.
J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk. Sept. 17–3t

See The Republican for Job Printing

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$267,336 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured,		NONE
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers		3 3 66
Due from approved reserve agents.		48,061 10
Checks and other cash items		478 25
Notes of other National Banks		545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$19,881 95
Legal-tender notes	6,265 00	26,146 95
Redemption fund with U. S Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$561,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,061 22
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,909 04
Due to State Banks and Bankers	80 74
Individual deposits subject to check	213,029 28
Time certificates of deposit	201,928 94
Cashie 's checks outstanding	373 46
Total	$561,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.
HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank
OF
Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. Will B. Miller, of Deer Park, was in the city Saturday on business.

Mr. James. L. Pollock went to Philadelphia Friday night on business, expecting to be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. D. H. Shank and daughter Miss Mabel, both of whom were ill several days last week, are much im roved.

Mrs King Delawder, who spent a week with relatives in Piedment, returned to her home in Oakland Monday morning.

Mr. L. K. White, of near Germania, was a business visitor to Oa land Monday when he made this office a brief call.

Principal Sterling, of the Bloomington public schools, was in the city last Saturday for an hour or two on business.

Messrs. James H. and Daniel Wilson, of near Blaine, were in the city Tuesday on business, when both gentlemen called at this office.

Mr. M. M. Ashby, substitute carrier on Rural Route No 2, has succeeded Mr. George Fulmer, who resigned the position.

Mrs. Thomas Martin left Oakland this morning for Parkersburg, West Va., where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. John Kennedy.

Mrs. Emma Davis, daughter of Mr. John Yelloly, left Oakland this morning accompanied bo her little son, for a visit to relatives at Co umbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Hiram Mason, of Kansas City, Mo., formerly of Frostburg, Allegany county, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Robinson at their home on Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman R. Sanner and children, of Thomas, West Va., have moved to Oakland where Mr. Sanner will take a position in the Oakland Pharmacy.

Rev. Wayne K. Stalnaker, who was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Ward at their residence in Oakland for a day or two, left this morning for Thomas, West Va., his new charge.

Mrs. J. W. Kennedy and daughter Miss Elsie, of Washington, D. C., who were guests for several weeks of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sincell returned to their home Monday night.

Sincell & Co.'s cloak and suit stock is greater than ever.

Monday being Columbus Day and a legal holiday by proclamation of Governor Crothers, the post office in Oakland was closed. The banks, however, were open for business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Loraditch went over to K tzmiller last Thursday night in response to a message informing them of the sudden death of their friend Russell Browning

Mr. C. A. Bolden, of Meyersdale, Pa., has completed the installation of a combination hot water and steam heating plant in the store and esidence of Mr. Herman Creutzburg on Alder street.

Mrs. Austin Brown, of Oakland, accompanied by Mrs. James A. Hayden, of the Park, drove down to Selbysport Saturday morning where a day or two was spent at the home of Mrs. Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Frazee.

A ong those from Oakland who attended the funeral of the late Russell Browning at Kitzmiller on last Sunday afternoon were Messrs. M. R. Hamill and Notley B. Browning, the former a close friend of the young man and the latter a relative.

In the Orphans' Court on Tuesday Mr. John W. Frush, of Brookside, was appointed administrator of the personal estate of William Frush, his recently deceased father. In this paper today the administrator gives the usual notice to creditors.

Mr. Edward I. West, representing certain creditors, went to Friendsville Monday and took charge of the store of John Shartzer & Co. The stock of goods was seized by the sheriff some time ago to satisfy certain executions and Mr. West will dispose of the merchandise under direction of the court.

In our next issue a fac simile of the official ballot to be used at the election to be held on November 3rd, will be published. The ballot will contain about sixty-five names, there being five National tickets in the field—the Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, Socialist and Independence. All of these, with the exception of the latter, have made nominations for Congress in this district.

Helbig & West, of the Oakland Roller Mills, have the best grades of spring and winter wh at flour in town, which they will trade for buckwheat flour and also pay cash for buckwheat grain. 2t

CAPITAL 50,0 0,00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

GEORGE WARNICK TO BE BONDED

One of the Men Implicated in the Murder of D. T. Broadwater to Be Released.

Yesterday Sheriff Austin Brown, accompanied by Attorney Thomas J. Peddicord and State's Attorney Julius C. Renninger, took George Warnick, who is being held in the Garrett Caunty jail as an accomplice in the klling of D. T. Broadwater, to Cumberland, for a hearing on habeas corpus proceedings before the Court, Judges Boyd and Henderson sitting.

The witnesses in the case were also in Cumberland, and after an examination the Court fixed the bond of Warnick at $2500, which will probably be furnished in a few days.

Lester Warnick, son of George, who is also being held in the custody of the Sheriff, was not made a party in the proceedings, and he will probably remain in jail until the case is called at the December Term of the Circuit Court.

OPERATED ON FOR APPENDICITIS.

Bernard I. Gonder Confined To a Hospital in Butte, Montana.

Yesterday Justice A. B. Gonder was informed by a telegram from Butte, Montana, conveying the infor ation that his son Bernard I., who recently made a visit to his home here, had been operated upon for appendicitis the day preceding. This morning Mr. Gonder was in receipt of another message stating that his son was r sting well and that no serious results were anticipated.

The many friends of the young man in Oakland will be pained to learn of his condition and hope for his speedy recovery.

Free Lecture.

Mr. F. A. Hall, representing The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Allegheny, Pa., will deliver a free lecture October 25th, Sunday, 2:30 p. m., in the Opera House, Oakland Maryland. Subje t: "The Mystery of God" "What is it?" Eph. 3:9. This a mystery that is being unfolded as recorded by Dan. 12:8,9, and is specially interesting to Bible students and christians generally. Mr. Hall is a convincing speaker, using much scripture thus assisting his hearers to grasp the subject, leaving no doubt as to the purpose of God as recorded in His word. Every body welcome. Seats free; no collections. Oct. 25th, 2:30 p. m.

Mr. Hall will also deliver a free lecture in Garthright's Hall, Loch Lynn, Md. Oct., 24th, Saturday, 7:30 p. m. Subject will be announced in these columns next week.

StorK News.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Elwood Offutt, of Oakland, are receiving the congratulations of their friends over the arrival at their home of a son, who was born Tuesday. The happy father, always good-natured, has the smile now that won't come off.

Mrs. Louis Swauger, of Grantsville, Md., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Swauger, of the South Side. After visiting here a few days, she will leave for Punxsutawney, whence she and her husband will leave next month to make their permanent home at Whittier, Cal.—Johnstown Tribune.

Subscribe for The Republican

The Collins Company, wholesale lumber dealers of Pennsboro, W. Va., has applied for the benefit of the bankrupt law. The company dealt very extensively with a number of Garrett county lumbering firms and at the time of the failure owed local people sums aggregating several thousand dollars.

The Board of County Commissioners, with all members in attendance, has been in session since Tuesday attending to routine business. The Board met Tuesday afternoon and yesterday with the Court House Commission when that body awarded contracts for the furniture for the new court house. Wm. J. C. Delany Co., of Baltimore, was the successful bidder.

A full silk lined Broadcloth Cloak, any color, for $12 at Sincell & Co.'s.

Dr. Joseph Lee, of Mt. Lake Park, one of the fathers of Methodism in this section of the country, was a visitor to the city yesterday. Dr. Lee is well known in all sections of this and adjoining states as an author of religious works, among them being an encyclopedia of the bible, containing information valuable to both the minister and the layman. The work is a great help in the study of the bible, giving a plain conception of the words and phrases contained therein.

Rev. Dr. R. B. Ward, District Superintendent, Rev. A. S. Wolf, of Friendsville, Rev. H. E. Friend, of Hoyes, and Rev. E. J. Westfall, of Mountain Lake Park, who attended the Conference of the M. E. church at Moundsville, returned to their respective homes Monday afternoon, the Conference having adjourned Monday morning after the appointments had been announced by Bishop Moore, who presided. Rev. J. B. Workman, of Oakland, who was elected secretary of the Conference, was detained at Moundsville for a day or two completing his work and did not arrive here until Tuesday.

FOR SALE.—At half price, one new first-class repeating shot gun. Apply at HOTEL BOSLEY. 2t

STORE ROBBED AT ALTAMONT

And an Attempt Made to Burglarize the Shaffer Store at Deer Park.

Last Friday night the store of James Wright, located at Altamont, this county, was broken into and robbed of merchandise valued at a small sum and later the same night an attempt was made to rob the general store of William L. Shaffer at Deer Park, but the robbers were frustrated by Mr. Shaffer, who, profiting by past experienced, had constructed a burglar alarm connecting his residence with his store and when the door of the latter was opened the alarm was sounded, which roused him from his slumbers. Armed with a heavy revolver Mr. Shaffer went to his window and opened fire in the direction of his store premises and the burglars made off without securing any booty.

CORNER STONE TO BE LAID.

With Masonic Ceremonies at the New Baptist Church at Loch Lynn Heights.

On Sunday afternoon, October 25th, a half past two o'clock the corner stone of the proposed new Baptist Church at Loch Lynn Heights, will be laid by the members of Oakland Lodge Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons.

The lodge will meet at one o'clock and go from the Lodge room to Loch Lynn Heights in carriages to be provided. All members are urged to be present.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m. and 7.3 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Sunday school at 2.15 p. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching 7.30 p. m.
Luther League every Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.
Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sunday at 11 a. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Deep Creek—Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Revival services will begin at Deer Park, Monday evening, Oct. 19th, to continue through the week.
Everybody invited to attend.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Swanton's Festivities.

In May's Hall, Swanton, Oct. 16, 1908, the ladies of that place will hold a festival, at which will be served refreshments consisting of fruits, oysters, ice cream, candies, and many things that will tempt the most cultivated taste.

On Friday evening, Oct. 23, in the same hall and by the same ladies, will be given an attractive play entitled, "My Cousin Timmy," with many other amusements. Adults will be admitted for twenty five cents and children for only ten cents. Both of these entertainments are given to repair board walks in Swanton.

Installation at Conference.

The Allegany conference of the Maryland Synod, Lutheran church, which was in session at the new St. John's Lutheran church, Red House, Garrett county, witnessed Tuesday night the installation of Rev. P. J. Wade as pastor of the church. The charge to the pastor was delivered by Rev. Edmund Manges of Oakland, and the charge to the people by Rev. John S. Braren of Cumberland.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. J. O. Baines, Miss Catherine Boyd, John Brick, H. Gresham, W. H. Holden, Miss Gertrude Lipscomb, Miss Rebecca McLin, Philip Saucer, Robert T. Wilson. A. M. Young.

GORTNER.

Mr. H. G. Sanders and wife, of Mt. Lake Park, spent Sunday at the home of T. J Miller.

Lee Gortner, who has been employed at Sanford, Ill., for several months, returned to his home on last Friday.

Mrs. G. J. Slabach and children, of Oakland, spent last week with relatives at this place.

Lewis Slabach and wife, of Wellman, Iowa, arrived here last week and will spend a few weeks with relatives at this place and Bittinger.

There will be preaching at the Union church next Saturday and Sunday evenings by Rev. Ed. Miller, of Springs, Pa. Also Sunday School at 9:30, and preaching at 10:30 Sunday morning.

Subscribe for The Republican.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

FASHIONS 1908

The CLOAKS and SUITS we are showing this season at

$5.50 TO $30.00

are far superior to any previous effort.

See this line before you buy and be convinced that the

Fit and Style

you get here is what you desire.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

Ladies' Exchange.

Beginning on Saturday afternoon next at 2 oclock and continuing each Saturday afternoon thereafter during the present month, the ladies of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will conduct an exchange at the furniture store of Mr. D. E. Bolden on Second street. Homemade bread, pies, cakes, confections and other articles will be on sale. The proceeds will be used for church and charitable purposes. A liberal patronage is solicited

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

See Sincell & Co. before buying cloaks and suits.

FOR BABY.

We have the finest stock of baby fixings it's possible to get. Sweet pure soaps—soft little brushes to make the tender skin firm and pink—soothing powder-medicines for his little aches—and mercy me—sponges, big and spongy for his bath. Good things for mama's baby; good price for mama's purse

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

HUTTON.

C. Grusendorf and H. Wend spent Sunday in Keyser.

Train No. 2 killed a valuable cow near the tool house Saturday belonging to Dennis Glover.

F. A. Thayer has built a comfortable and commodious dwelling on his farm one mile from here.

The Tioga Tanning Company is building a dry loft addition 40x40 feet.

Engraved calling cards and wedding invitations may be procured by leaving your orders at this office. A very attractive and stylish line at moderate prices is shown.

Subscribe for the Republican.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

CLERGY INDORSE TAFT

Class Him as Highest Type of Christian Gentleman.

FREQUENT HIS HEADQUARTERS

Declare He Is Broad Minded and Represents Ideals of Best Statesmanship—A Bishop's Opinion of the Republican Nominee.

"Because he is the highest type of the Christian gentleman."

This is the way in which I heard the pastor of a Methodist church in southern Illinois end an argument with a layman on the train coming over here from St. Louis, says the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat in a dispatch to his paper from Cincinnati. The dispatch continues: The layman, paying due respect to the cloth of his opponent, was trying to convince him that he should not support Mr. Taft for the presidency and instead should vote for his Democratic opponent. The churchman defended the principles of the Republican party and, as indicated, defended the man for whom he said he expected to vote from his personal standpoint of a churchman, "because he is the highest type of a Christian gentleman."

It gave me a new idea about Mr. Taft. It seemed to answer some of the criticisms I had heard of the Republican candidate and his creed. In recent years the Democratic candidate has interlarded his well paid Chautauqua lectures with Sunday sermons before religious and semireligious societies. It seems that he has made the most of this influence in this campaign, and I was curious to discover on my arrival here whether there was support from the church and semireligious elements in the country for the Republican nominee.

My arrival in this connection could not have been better timed. As I entered the office of Mr. Taft's private secretary Friday I saw Bishop J. C. Harizell of the Methodist Episcopal church emerging from a conference with Mr. Taft. The bishop, I knew, has episcopal supervision over the work of his great church in Africa. He has been so engaged for the past twelve years and has met and formed the acquaintance of many leading men not only in Africa, but in Europe and America. His acquaintance and influence within the Methodist church are second to those of few men, as he was for fifteen years an officer of the society which founded and now maintains a system of institutions of learning among both white and colored people in the southern states. He came to induce Mr. Taft to make a speech in Chicago before a society of which the bishop's son, Rev. M. C. Hartzell, is president.

It seemed odd to attempt to interview a churchman of his prominence on a political question at the headquarters of the Republican candidate, but I asked him for his view of Mr. Taft and the support of him by Christian people. He answered very readily:

"The American people are to be congratulated upon the fact that whether Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan is elected president of the United States they will have a man at the head of the nation who is not only clean in moral character, but whose pen and speech and example are always for the best ideals of our civilization as represented in the teachings of the Christian church."

The bishop thought for a moment and then continued: "On some theological points I differ from both. As a good Presbyterian I suppose Mr. Bryan assents to the doctrine of 'divine decrees,' which teach that from all eternity it has been fixed who should be saved and who should be lost. I do not so read Scriptures. Mr. Taft, I understand, is one of the Edward Everett Hale type, believing that Christ was a divinely perfect man whose precepts and life on earth are the key to man's salvation in time and eternity. With the church I believe that in that perfect man dwelt the divine nature."

Applying his discussion in a practical way, Bishop Hartzell continued: "Which of these men I shall vote for will not be decided by their religious beliefs, but what they are as men and by the principles and policies they stand for in the administration of the government. I believe that in acting upon this view, as an American citizen, I am in harmony with the spirit and purpose of the founders of our republic, who put into the constitution that there should be 'no religious test as to qualifications to any office or public trust under the United States.' My conviction is that the future safety of the nation depends very largely upon our people heeding that constitutional prohibition. Our nation owes much in moral character, statesmanship, literature, art and religion to those who have not been in strict harmony with some of the dogmas of the church. The days of the inquisition are past."

Secretary Root on Tariff Wars.

Threatened tariff wars between the United States and Germany and the United States and France have been averted by commercial agreements under the power conferred upon the president in the third section of the Dingley tariff act.

Perhaps the Bryan managers display such fondness for campaign rainbows because they dream of the traditional pots of gold at their end.

It is possible to concede that after Mr. Gompers' speeches in Texas that state may go Democratic.

DUNCAN OPPOSES GOMPERS' IDEA.

James Duncan, first vice president of the American Federation of Labor and international secretary-treasurer of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, has sent out numerous identical letters declaring the absolute independence from partisanship of the American Federation of Labor. The letter is written on the stationery of the Granite Cutters' union. Mr. Duncan is next in command of the American Federation of Labor to Mr. Gompers, and his letters are a direct repudiation of the attitude of the president of the American Federation of Labor in taking the organization into politics and exerting his influence to elect Bryan and Kern. Mr. Duncan is not advising union workingmen to vote either for Bryan or Taft, but to rely on their own judgment and to exercise their own individual preference. The letter is as follows:

Sept. 17, 1908.

My Dear Sir—Your inquiry is similar to a number of other inquiries on the same subject and therefore needs the general answer.

The labor movement of our country, in as far as the political situation is concerned, is now, as heretofore, independent of parties. Those who have given the greatest thought to the subject within the ranks of organized labor have been busy from year to year for a long time, as part of their trade unionism, teaching or at least advising organized workers to not be bound to any particular party, but to vote for the principles they believed were for the greatest good to the greatest number of all the people, and that if any person aspired to public office to deal with the aspirant upon his merits and not because of his belonging or not belonging to any particular party. The intensity of recent events has caused more activity among the organized workers, in as far as political affairs are concerned, than in the past, and we may expect as men become educated to the public needs and study the science of government they will become still more active politically.

The labor movement advises study of the different subjects and principles of the great political parties and admonishes each organized worker who is a citizen and a voter—and all should qualify as fully as possible in both ways—to cast his vote on election day in strict accordance with his conscience as to what would be the best for the whole people.

The hue and cry sent out by a portion of the public press that the labor vote was being bartered is but one of the forms of political buncombe which is used for every generation and to befog the public mind. The views, beliefs and inclinations of candidates for public office should be ascertained before carefully scrutinized by all good citizens, and while [illegible] all voting examined subject, instead of simply voting for a man to cause he says he's [illegible] party affiliations, and the election this year, and the succeeding [illegible] to it, as far as organized labor is concerned, will be no exception to that rule. Very truly yours,

JAMES DUNCAN

Lightning has struck the Bryan farm, but it has a confirmed habit of not striking the owner.

Where Did It Come From? A Story In Seven Chapters.

I.
Mack and the Campaign Fund.
(New York Newspapers.)

Just before leaving New York for Chicago Chairman Mack of the Democratic national committee said that he had secured $300,000 from the past committee administration.

II.
What William Randolph Hearst Said In His Speech at Columbus, O., Sept. 17.

"Mr. Roosevelt prosecuted the Standard Oil, and the Standard Oil went out of the Republican party and into the Democratic party. The Democratic party welcomed it. Mr. Bryan appointed C. N. Haskell, political paymaster of the Standard Oil, to be chairman of his committee on platform. After a platform had been drawn up by Mr. Haskell which was satisfactory to the Standard Oil Mr. Bryan made Mr. Haskell treasurer of his national campaign fund to collect from the Standard Oil substantial evidence of the great monopoly's appreciation."

III.
What President Roosevelt Said.

"Governor Haskell stands high in the councils of Mr. Bryan and is the treasurer of his national campaign committee. * * * The publication of this correspondence not merely justifies in striking fashion the action of the administration, but also casts a curious side light on the attacks made upon the administration both in the Denver convention, which nominated Mr. Bryan, and in the course of Mr. Bryan's campaign."

IV.
What Haskell Said In His Telegram to Hearst on Sept. 19.

"Should this committee (of newspaper editors) find your charges sustained I shall withdraw from all connection with the present presidential campaign."

V.
What Chairman Mack Said.

"I regarded the question as to whether Taggart had turned over $300,000 to me as a joke, and my answer was intended as a joke also."

VI.
What Governor Haskell Said.
(From New York Evening Post, Sept. 22.)

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 22.—Charles N. Haskell, governor of Oklahoma and treasurer of the Democratic committee, passed through Kansas City last night, bound for his home in Oklahoma, from the east, where he has been making speeches. * * * As his train pulled out Mr. Haskell shouted, "And don't forget to say that the campaign fund is growing fine."

VII.
What Governor Haskell Did.
(From Newspapers of Sept. 26.)

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Governor Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma resigned as treasurer of the Democratic national committee shortly after midnight after a protracted conference with Judge Wade of Iowa and Josephus Daniels, director of the Democratic publicity bureau.

AGAINST CORPORATIONS.

Judge Taft's Decision In the Narramore Personal Injury Case.

If men who labor come to know Mr. Taft and study what he has done for their interests they will wonder how there could be any sincerity in the attempt by the Democratic party to prejudice labor against him.

Take the Narramore personal injury case in Ohio, which when considered should forever set at rest all this manufactured talk for political effect charging Mr. Taft with being the "father of government by injunction." Judge Taft's decision in the Narramore case when he was on the bench has been of tremendous benefit to employee as against employer in Ohio in personal injury cases.

The facts of the Narramore case are these: Early in 1899 Narramore was a brakeman on the Big Four road. One day while at work his foot caught in an unlocked frog. A train came along and he was maimed for life. The railroad refused to do anything for him and his wife and children dependent upon him for support. Narramore sought the aid of the courts.

Ohio law held that the frog should not have been left open and courts generally held that an employee, knowing that his employer was in the habit of disobeying a law intended for the employee's protection, by continuing at work assumed the risks of the employment. The judge before whom the case was tried promptly dismissed the complaint.

On appeal the case reached the United States court of appeals and came before Judge Taft. Judson Harmon argued very masterfully for the railroad, but the Republican candidate for president went squarely against Ohio court precedents and of courts in many other parts of the country in rendering a decision in favor of Narramore. In his decision Judge Taft said:

"The intention of the Ohio legislature was to protect the employees of railways from injury from a frequent source of danger by compelling the railway company to adopt a well known safety device. And, although an employee impliedly waives a compliance with the statute and agrees to assume the risk from unblocked frogs and switches by continuing in the service without complaint, this court will not recognize or enforce such agreement. The imposition of a penalty for the violation of a statute does not exclude other means of enforcement, and to permit the company to avail itself of such an assumption of risk by its employees is in effect to enable it to nullify a penal statute and is against public policy."

Judge Taft's decision still stands as the law in federal courts. When the common pleas court in Cleveland took an opposite stand in 1903 the Ohio legislature in the spring of 1904 passed a law which made Judge Taft's decision one of the laws of Ohio. Who shall estimate the service that Judge Taft performed for all who labor in dangerous employment by his decision in the Narramore case, by which he made the law on the side of those who work?

The decision in the Narramore case was against gigantic corporate interests and in the face of Ohio supreme court decisions, but Judge Taft found a way to justice through the meshes of the law skillfully drawn to do incalculable service for all time to those who labor. His record on the bench is not one requiring explanation, but understanding, to see its convincing justness and fairness. In all this talk for the purpose of creating misguided prejudice there is not a Democrat in the land who has said that any of his decisions were wrong.

In all his career Judge Taft by deeds has shown the broadest sympathy for all who labor. No man will go further than he in efforts in their behalf, but he is not indulging in cheap talk of the Democratic type of hoodwinking by mere promises and misrepresentations to catch a vote.

WORLD BLAMES BRYAN.

Says He Must Have Been Familiar With Haskell's Record.

[From the New York World, Sept. 27.]

The main fault to be found with Governor Haskell's resignation as treasurer of the Democratic national committee is that it came a week too late.

Haskell should have been forced out at once, and Mr. Bryan should never have challenged Mr. Roosevelt to prove the Hearst charges or any other charges against the Oklahoma governor. Mr. Bryan must have known Haskell's record when he assumed personal responsibility for the man. If he did not it was because he had chosen to be "a fugitive from information." It was inevitable that the moment Mr. Roosevelt succeeded in making an issue of Haskell's record the Democratic organization would be compelled to drop him. The attempt to defend him was a sorry political blunder.

President Gompers and the Democratic Party.

President Samuel Gompers has allied himself with Bryan and the Democratic party.

Has he acted wisely?

The majority of the Democrats in the national house of representatives come from the south.

The south is an enemy of union labor and believes in child labor.

Some southern states have no laws regulating the hours of labor for women and children, and some have regulations that are not enforced.

What does Gompers expect from a party dominated by the south?

What benefit can the rank and file of labor receive by following President Gompers politically?—Wage Earner.

TAFT LABOR'S FRIEND

Rendered Valuable Service to Railroad Men.

THE TOLEDO-ANN ARBOR CASE

Advice Given In Judge Taft's Decision Adopted by the Railway Brotherhoods—Democratic Politicians Trickery to Deceive the Toilers.

The members of the various brotherhoods connected with the great railroad systems of the country are generally regarded as possessing more than the average degree of intelligence. Their callings and the obligations springing from those callings make the possession by them of a high order of intelligence indispensable.

Notwithstanding this fact the same system of absurd falsehood is relied on to deceive and trick them into withdrawing their support from the Republican party that is in general use by Democratic politicians to influence even the commonest and most ignorant of the unskilled laborers of the country.

One form which this system of trickery most frequently takes is that of hinting at what terrible things William H. Taft did against labor organization and its members while he was on the bench.

The one official act and declaration of Judge Taft which is being used in that way on railroad men is his decision in what is known as the Toledo-Ann Arbor case. Yet in that case through his decision Judge Taft rendered an actual, tangible and really invaluable service to the cause of labor organization. His advice given to labor organizations in that case has been generally adopted by the various brotherhoods and their members. One of the rules of a great labor organization, the Brotherhood of Engineers, which was the cause of the trouble (rule 12) has long since been voluntarily dropped as being contrary to the best interests of both the public and the organization itself.

More than all that, Judge Taft's decision in the Toledo-Ann Arbor case contains as good, broad and sound labor doctrine as ever found its way into print.

Now, what was that Toledo-Ann Arbos case? Most enlightened railroad men know all about it. Many of them, particularly the younger generation of them, do not.

A strike of locomotive engineers prevailed on the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railway. One of the rules of the brotherhood (rule 12) required in substance that when so ordered by the head of the organization the men of the brotherhood or other roads should refuse to handle the cars of the road on which the strike prevailed.

This rule was a dangerous one. It probably never should have been adopted. The attempt to enforce it in this case brought eight or ten railroads into court. They sought protection against what on its face was at least an unwise policy for any body of men to adopt and involved in operation a possible stoppage of the carrying commerce of the entire country.

It was a case of sympathetic strike. And the sympathetic strike stands today, from choice, repudiated by all responsible organizations of laboring people and their members.

The principal outcome of that Ann Arbor case was that the right of employees to leave their employment whenever dissatisfied with its conditions was fixed beyond all possible future question and some admirable advice given to the members of the organization, to which they have faithfully lived up, both individually and collectively, since.

"We wish to make plain if we can," said Judge Taft in his decision, "to the intelligent and generally law abiding men who compose the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as well as to their usually conservative chief officer, what we cannot believe they appreciate—that, notwithstanding their perfect organization and their charitable, temperance and other elevating and most useful purposes, the existence and enforcement of rule 12 under their organic law make the whole brotherhood a criminal conspiracy against the laws of the country."

That the rendering of this decision by Judge Taft was, then, in result an enduring service to all railroad men instead of embodying anything conflicting with their rights and privileges before the law must appear plain to any ordinary man. If there still remained any doubt on that score it would be removed by the reflection that the rules laid down by Judge Taft in that case are now made a part of the contracts and agreements of all great railroad brotherhoods.

President Roosevelt on Taft's Judicial Record.

Mr. Taft's record as a judge makes the whole country his debtor. His acts and decisions are part of the great traditions of the bench. They guaranteed and set forth in strong fashion the rights of the general public as against the selfish interests of any class, whether of capitalists or of laborers.

A Question the New Bryan Has Not Answered.

If you were president and were called on to exercise your discretion affirmatively to maintain the parity between gold and silver, what would you do?—Judge Taft to Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Taft can be trusted to exact justice from the railroads for the very reason that he can be trusted to do justice to the railroads.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

Angles.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Keep still, Jack. I'll take your picture."

Ethel Deane pointed her camera at her brother, there was a click, and, with "All right," she wound off the film. "I'll send you a post card as soon as it's developed," she added. "I'm sorry that I didn't take one of you when you came. You'd make a great 'before and after' picture for the hotel advertisements. I declare Agnes won't know you when you get back, you've grown so stout and handsome."

Her big brother smiled at the compliment, and Ethel clicked the camera again.

"That will make a good advertisement for a dentist," she commented. "I wish I could smile like that."

"You could," insinuated her brother, "if you were as happy as I am."

"Back to home and Agnes!" scoffed Ethel. "Here comes your train, Jack. I'm sorry you have to go. This little vacation has done you a world of good."

Deane kissed his sister goodby and swung on to the train, glad to get out of the press of the station platform and into the comfortable wicker chair in the Pullman smoker. He was sorry his vacation was over. He had worked hard for two years and needed the rest. He was going back to Agnes Weston, and a tender smile played about his lips as he drew a tiny leather case from his pocket and glanced at the picture within. It was one of Ethel's snapshots, but the girl was clever with the camera, and she had caught more of the personality of her subject than a professional could have done.

"It will only be a few days now, little woman," Jack whispered to the photograph. "I'll be in town tomorrow, and Sunday week you'll be there too. It's some comfort even to be nearer to you."

He slipped the case back in his pocket and reddened as he saw a man

INSISTED ON GOING HOME IN A CAB.

across the aisle watching him with an amused smile. The man's lips were puckered, and above the roar and rattle of the train Jack caught the shrill notes of "The Girl I Left Behind."

He smiled at the man's mistake, for Ethel's kiss had been most fervent. The stranger, however, could not know that she was only his sister and that the train was bringing him nearer to the girl whose photograph was in the case.

There was no formal engagement between Jack and Agnes Weston, but an understanding existed that when his salary was increased there would be an announcement. The raise had come in the shape of promotion while he was on vacation. A letter had told him that on his return he would sit at the superintendent's desk. He wanted to start back at once and tell Agnes of his good fortune, but he had sacrificed his vacation last year in his struggle for advancement, and he needed the rest. Agnes had gone to visit relatives in a distant resort, and Ethel wisely persuaded him to stay.

Now he was on his way to town, and in another week Agnes would join him. He could then put the question, to which the answer seemed assured.

It was a trying week. Had it not been that Jack was busy getting the angles of his new position he would have jumped on a train and headed for the west, as no letter had come from Agnes during the latter part of the week. He telephoned her mother to learn the time of her expected arrival.

Jack was at the station when the train rolled in, but the greeting chilled him. In place of the sunny smile the girl was coldly formal. She addressed him as "Mr. Deane" and insisted upon going home alone in a cab.

Deane was in despair. He could not come with her in the station, and not until after dinner did he go to the house for an interview.

The explanation was simple in the extreme. Agnes declared that she no longer loved him; that she was glad she had discovered his true character before it was too late. More than that she would not say. After a brief but hot hour Jack gave up and left the house to pace the streets and dumbly wonder what had happened to make so great a change in his life.

Perhaps when Ethel returned she might be able to find out. It was obvious that Jack could offer no explanation when he was not conscious of having given offense, and it was with leaden feet that he sought his home and fumbled into bed to toss until dawn.

Haggard and hollow eyed, he rose for breakfast and made a pretense of going through the meal. He was idly sipping his coffee when the maid handed him a thick letter from Ethel.

There was the promised post card, with the crowd as a background. There was also another card showing him looking down with a tender smile into the eyes of a girl whose ardent glance was even more fervid than his own.

The girl was an entire stranger to him, and Jack wondered by what trick of photography Ethel had brought about the result. He knew how she delighted in performing the seemingly impossible. He turned to the letter for explanation.

"Dear Jack," he read, "do you remember that I promised to get even with you for playing that joke on Ben Drummond and me? I guess I've done it. I am inclosing one of the postals I promised. That silly little Bedford girl was standing right behind you when you smiled that silly smile because I told you how handsome you were. From the angle at which I stood it looked as though you were smiling at her and she was making moon eyes at you instead of Dick Odell. Dick is just off the edge of the film. I sent one of these to Agnes on Monday, and, unless I am very much mistaken, you did not enjoy your Sunday. Let this be a lesson to you not to play tricks on your affectionate sister. P. S.—I am sending this same explanation to Agnes."

In an unlucky moment Jack had rendered Ethel and her latest adorer ridiculous. Ethel had sworn to be revenged, but Jack had paid little attention to the threats. Now he could understand what Agnes meant when she said she knew him for what he really was.

He hurried from the house to the telephone station and called up Agnes Weston.

"This is Jack," he explained over the wire. "Did you get a letter from Ethel?"

"I might have known that it was one of Ethel's jokes," came the response.

"And is it all right? May I come around tonight?"

"As long as that?" came in tender tones. "Why can't I meet you and have lunch with you at that little place where you take me. There's a jeweler right around the corner."

The telephone girl laughed at the fervent "darling," which was all the answer Agnes needed. Telephone girls are used to such things, but the telegrapher laughed loudly as he took Jack's message to Ethel from the wire.

"Agnes will marry me despite your camera. You can photograph the wedding, but try to get the proper angle or you'd have me married to some one else."

"I did have the proper angle," exclaimed Ethel to Ben Drummond.

"Same here," assented Drummond as he tilted the piquant face to the proper angle of forty-five degrees. "Let's wire him that we'll have a double wedding."

Ethel could not be expected to reply with Drummond's lips against hers, but her assent was not necessary. They had arranged all that beforehand.

Of Use After All.

It happened once upon a time that a man who felt that he was of no use in the world decided to commit suicide. "I will hie home," he said, "and there kill myself. I am of no use to anybody, and it will be best." So he hied home and found his wife gone. "I will cut my throat," he said, and hunted up the butcher knife. But he slashed and hacked and slashed his throat, and the knife was so dull he couldn't penetrate his skin. Then he tried the bread knife, and it was duller then the butcher knife. "I will hit myself on the head with the ax," he said, but he looked and looked and couldn't find the ax. Finally he found the handle, but the head was lost. "I will try the scissors," he said, but after he found the scissors couldn't cut thread he had to give it up. Then a bright thought struck him. He would become of some use to the family by sharpening the knives and scissors! He did so and is now loved more than most men. And his wife, with knives that will cut and scissors sharp enough to cut thread, is the happiest woman in her neighborhood.—Atchison Globe.

Asbestus Mining.

Asbestus, popularly known as "mineral wool," is a compound of silica, lime, magnesia and oxide of iron and is probably the most curious natural product in existence. Being composed of fine fibers, it can be spun and woven into cloth, indestructible by fire, which renders it invaluable in many of the arts.

Mining is carried on by cutting down the hills of asbestus bearing serpentine, much as a farmer cuts down a stack of hay or straw, or by open quarrying on the level.

The rock is blasted out, and the asbestus, separated from the containing rock, is "cobbed"—that is, separated by hammering from inferior foreign matter. The cobbing is comparatively easy in the case of the finer quality, as it usually separates readily from the other minerals which the ore contains, but in the lower grades much difficulty is experienced in separating the fibrous matter from the nonfibrous.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Made It Clear.

A Scottish blacksmith, being asked the meaning of metaphysics, replied: "When the party wha listens disna ken what the party wha speaks means, and when the party wha speaks disna ken what he means himself, that's metaphysics."—Dundee Advertiser.

CROFOOT HAS RIVAL.

Promoter of Industrial Enterprises Finds He's an Amateur.

TOLD OF SOME GOOD THINGS

What a Caller Had to Offer People With Money Seeking an Investment. Four Hundred Per Cent In Dividends on $5,000,000 Capital.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

Major Crofoot, grand promoter of thirty-two of the grandest enterprises on the face of the earth, sat in his office dead broke. He had two keys in his pocket, but not a stiver in cash. His landlady had given him the cold hand that morning, and his office rent was due, and he was expecting the landlord every minute. He was wondering if the last sucker in America was dead when there was a step in the corridor, and his half open door was pushed open and a stranger entered and queried:

THE MAJOR LAID HIS HEAD ON THE DESK AND WEPT.

"Is this Major Crofoot, please?"

"It is."

"The man who always has a good thing for investors?"

"Sure."

"My name is Dawson, and I have come in to talk business to you."

Things changed with the major in an instant. The usual smile came back to his face, the usual blandness to his voice, and as he bade the stranger welcome he toyed with the six old check books stacked up on the desk to show that he was doing business with six different banks.

"What is the best thing you can offer an investor today?" continued the caller as he seated himself.

"You mean something extra good?"

"The very best there is in the box. Don't talk to me of anything paying less than 30 per cent dividends."

Would Pay 60 Per Cent.

"No? Well, I've got just what you want. Yesterday I just finished incorporating the Great American Novelty Refrigerator company. It's going to be the greatest thing on earth. It's sure to sweep the land like a tornado. I'm the inventor, patentee and president of the company, capital $5,000,000, and I feel sure I can guarantee you 60 per cent dividends. You put hot water into the refrigerator and it freezes it to ice. Attached to and working with it are a music box, an alarm clock, a French dictionary, a typewriter, a washing machine and a phonograph. Can be worked singly or altogether. Keeps tabs on the hired girl. Records the exact moment the husband comes in at night. Can be fitted with a torpedo to blow up tramps calling for something to eat. Possibilities unlimited, and the demand will be unprecedented. The czar of Russia writes"—

"Never mind the czar of Russia," interrupted Mr. Dawson. "Is that your very best?"

"But think of it, man, 60 per cent dividends, and I make you general manager at a salary of $20,000 a year."

"Poor, very poor. Not half good enough. I thought you had something gilt edged. It wouldn't pay to fool away my time on that."

"But, man"—

"Come in with me and learn how to promote. You don't know the A B C of it yet. One of the very poorest companies I have is the Arabian Celery and Horseradish syndicate. We propose to buy 5,000,000 acres of desert land and supply the world with celery and horseradish. The dividends are positively guaranteed at 75, and yet we don't think much of it. We shan't try very hard to push the stock. I could give you the vice presidency at a salary of $50,000 a year, but I don't want to see you starve to death."

The major turned pale, opened his eyes very wide and began to breathe hard.

"A promoter who can't see an even 100 per cent dividends in an enterprise should drop it," continued the caller. "It's one horse. It's wasting his time. I organized the Universal Gas Saving company and figured out it would pay 90 per cent dividends. Looked to me like a big thing in my then callow days, but I laugh at it now. It cut gas bills down from $6 a month to 15 cents and is still doing it, but the stockholders are kicking for greater dividends. Ninety per cent looks like skimmilk to them. The secretary resigned last week, and I could give you his place at $30,000 a year, but I know you'd refuse it. You would consider it small potatoes."

"Great Scott!" whispered the major as he leaned forward in his chair.

"After the Gas Saving company was out I saw I was wasting my time. I then originated and promoted the Great Sahara Fruit and Vegetable company. Twenty million acres of land to grow strawberries in summer and sweet potatoes in the fall. The enterprise is referred to in the press as colossal. Kings and emperors have written to us commending it. We let the Rothschilds in on the ground floor, and they were tickled to death, and yet when we came to figure up the dividends they didn't go but 105. I was so disgusted with the thing that I came near dropping out of the promoting business. I did think of turning the presidency over to you at a salary of $100,000 a year, but I know you'd refuse it. It isn't up to a man of your caliber. You don't want to fiddle faddle with trifles."

Started New Company.

The major opened his mouth and tried to speak, but words would not come.

"Then I originated the worldwide lemon squeezer. Up to that date any one who wanted to squeeze a lemon had to call in the hired man or place it under a board and stand on it. Hitting a lemon with a sledge hammer wasted part of the juice, and sometimes it dodged the blow, and the cat or one of the children was killed. I saw what was needed and invented the squeezer. Our first order was for a million. The sultan of Turkey ordered half a million right off the reel. Couldn't keep up with our orders and can't now, but what do you suppose the dividends are? Just a measly 120 per cent. Rockefeller and Morgan sold their stock in digust after the first year. I believe that a few widows and ministers still call it a fairly good thing, but think of financiers like us being satisfied with such dividends. I could offer you"—

"Yes, yes; you could offer me"—

"I could offer you the vice presidency and a salary of $150,000 a year for life, but I don't want to insult you. I must look for some cheap skate."

"I—I might take it," groaned the major.

"Nonsense! You take a cheap thing like that and humiliate yourself to the earth! I won't be a party to it. I have now finally got a thing worth looking at—worth investing in. Have you heard of the Universal Instinctive Bedstead company?"

"N-no."

Behind the Times.

"You haven't? Why, you are away behind the times. Thought you kept better track of things financial. My dear sir, you must have heard that there is an electric current sweeping through the earth from north to south?"

"Yes."

"And that all human beings should lie with their heads to the north in order that they may first receive this current on the back of the neck?"

"Yes."

"Well, there you are. You go to a hotel and the bedsteads may stand east and west. The landlord doesn't care a copper for your health. My instinctive bedstead instinctively turns itself north and south, no matter where placed. Keeps the current flowing from head to heel. Hotels have got to have 'em or go out of business. We start on a capital of $5,000,000, and the lowest we can figure the dividends is 400 per cent. Some of us think they will reach 500. The principle can be applied to bunks on Pullmans and aboard steamers. Baby's crib and family lounge have got to head to the north. Will save a million human lives a year and put 10,000 drug stores out of business. I could let you in on the ground floor and pay you a salary of a quarter of a million dollars a year as secretary, but I won't insult you. You have probably got something much better on hand. Ta, ta, major. I must be going."

And when the man had departed the major laid his head on the desk and wept. He was a failure, and he realized it.

M. QUAD.

Youthful Assurance.

"When I was your age," said the stern parent, "I was accumulating money of my own."

"Yes," answered the graceless youth, "but don't you think the public was easier then than it is now?"—Washington Star.

Worth the Risk.

Jenny—If you eat all those sweets and fruits, ma says you'll die.

Freddy (his birthday)—Oh, death, where is thy sting?

Literary Note.

"What did he get for his last novel?"

"Well, the publisher says that had he been a judge he would have given him three years!"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Enamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows and Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows.

Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

REAL ESTATE BARGAINS

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, OAKLAND, MD.

JUNGLE EYES.

The grewsome jungle depths lay dark one dire and stormy eve.
The haughty tiger slunk in fear and left his lair to grieve.
For he had heard that to these parts a hunter bold had come
Whose reputation, rifle made, was more than "going some."
And from the thickets he looked out with thumping heart amiss,
And nature fakirs give report his eyes they looked like this:
(O) (O) (O) (O) (O) (O)

When Teddy hit the jungle trail, his rifle in his clutch,
He plucked the tiger from his haunts, which pleased him overmuch.
Bang! bang! another spiteful shot rang on the evening air.
Click, click! his bold typewriter gave repeated echo there.
And as the night eyes glared at him his soul was filled with bliss,
And as he jotted down the facts the optics looked like this:
($) ($) ($) ($) ($) ($)
—New York Globe.

What It Cost Them.

"How much did it cost you to get into society?" asked Mrs. Newrich.

"Well, I don't know exactly," replied Mrs. Lardleaf. "My husband always keeps track of the expenses, but I think he said he put up about $50,000 to keep the Uppingtons' son-in-law out of the penitentiary that time he embezzled from one of our firms."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Advance Thought.

Diggs—Windham thinks he has invented a successful flying machine.

Biggs—How far has he been able to fly it?

Diggs—Oh, he hasn't tried it yet. That is why he has invented a successful machine.—Detroit Tribune.

When Bill Took His Discharge.

The Powder Manufacturer—Fancy old Bill of all people going into the gunpowder shed with a lighted candle. I should have thought that that would be the last thing he'd do.

The Workman—Which, properly speakin', it were, sir.—Sketch.

Knew What to Expect.

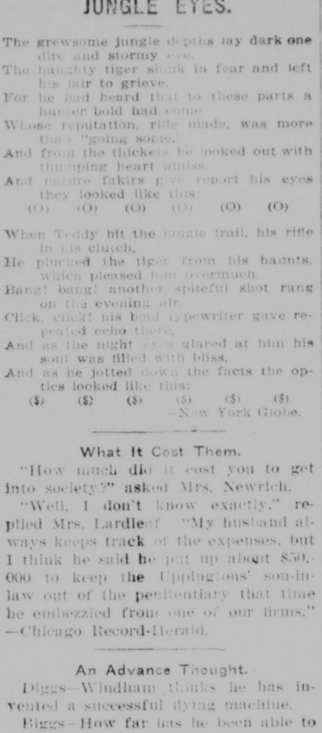
Waiter—How will you have your steak, sir?

Guest—Have you the same steak you had last week?

Waiter—Yes, sir.

Guest—Then I'll probably have it burned.—Boston Post.

No Cause to Be Thankful.



Tammas (to McTavish, whom he has just pulled out of the water)—Man, Donal! Ye sud be lookin' happy. Are ye no thankfu' ye're life's saved?

McTavish (sourly)—I dinna see nae cause to be thankfu'. The glass o' whusky I had afore I fell intil the watter's gotten fair drooned!—Tatler.

Love's Young Dream.

Together they were occupying a rustic seat on the lawn, he and she, and she at least seemed to be unconscious of the flight of time.

"How bright and shimmering the evening star appears tonight, George!" she said.

"Pardon me, my dear," replied George, "but that is the morning star!"—Chicago News.

Looking Ahead.

"I've often wondered," said the thoughtful man, "why they throw old shoes and slippers after a bridal couple, but I think I see the idea now."

"Yes?" asked the other.

"Yes. I suppose the idea is that they'll come in handy for spanking purposes in the future."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Another Thrust.

Mr. Stubb—That old chap Argus had a hundred eyes.

Mrs. Stubb—So they say.

Mr. Stubb—And I suppose, Maria, if I had a hundred eyes I could see everything too.

Mrs. Stubb—Everything but your own faults, John.—Chicago News.

Paternal Ambition.

"Is your boy Josh going to study law?"

"I don't know," answered Farmer Corntossel. "I'm kind o' hopin' that Josh 'll develop financierin' energy enough to git to be one of the fellers that hires the lawyers."—Washington Star.

Her Crowning Glory.

She stood before the mirror
In flowing robe de nuit.
"What could be more alluring,"
She cried, "than what I see—
A figure soft and rounded,
A face of beauty rare,
A neck of snowy whiteness,
A crown of golden hair?"
She paused and added sadly,
"Uneasy lies the head
That wears a crown!" She doffed it
And made a break for bed.
—Brooklyn Life.

SHORT RUN.

As "Underfoot" seems a little slow about writing again, I will try to pen a few items.

The farmers of this vicinity are busy gathering apples, digging potatoes and husking corn, while the women are making apple butter.

Messrs. J. H. and Daniel Wilson were in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Misses Bessie Hogue and Wilna Longridge, of Upper Potomac, were visiting Miss Emma Harvey Sunday.

Mr. Harrison Hardesty was seen in this place last week.

Mr. Harry Hamill is visiting his uncle Mr. A. E. Harvey, at this writing.

Mr. Earl Hamill was visiting at Mrs. S. E. Harvey's Sunday.

Messrs. George Harvey and Thomas Wilson were visiting in Keyser, W. Va., Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Jane Wilson was calling on her cousin, Miss Delea Wilson, Sunday.

The stork visited the home of Mr. Richard Tasker Monday, leaving a flourishing boy.

Wishing THE REPUBLICAN and Billy Taft every success ???

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent,
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT KITZMILLERVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23, 1908.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$53,851 45
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		6,250 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		218 75
Bonds, securities, etc		7,375 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		5,347 95
Other real estate owned		400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		965 86
Due from State Banks and Bankers		67 80
Due from approved reserve agents		7,654 76
Checks and other cash items		221 00
Notes of other National Banks		495 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		34 89
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$3,820 15
Legal-tender notes	30 00	3,850 15
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent. of circulation)		312 50
Total		$ 87,045 11

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	3,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	926 98
National Bank notes outstanding	6,250 00
Due to other National Banks	1,916 58
Individual deposits subject to check	24,314 14
Demand certificates of deposit	25,538 26
Certified Checks	25 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	74 15
Total	$ 87,045 11

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of September, 1908.

GEO. J. POOL, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH,
WADE SAPP,
A. C. SMITH,
Directors.

WELLINGTON ON BANK GUARANTEE

Former Senator States Position Before Methodist Men's Association.

At Frostburg on October 13th, Ex-Senator George L. Wellington of Cumberland delivered an address in the lecture room of the First Methodist Episcopal church, on "Shall National Banks Guarantee Bank Deposits?" Subjects of national importance will be taken up during the winter before the Methodists Men's Association.

Senator Wellington said he was opposed to the guarantee of bank deposits by either the Federal or State government. He continued: "The proposition seems to be of kith and kin with several financial heresies which have preceded it. The great panic of 1873 was followed by the Greenback craze. The proposition then was that these wise doctors would cure the financial evil by an unlimited issue of irredeemable fiat notes. The sober second thought of the American people declined to act on the Ohio idea. The great panic of 1890 brought us face to face with the free silver heresy, when, according to the Kansas idea, our government was to make forty cents worth of silver good as one dollar and cause it to pass currency as such among the great nations of the earth. Again the calm after thought of the people decided there could be only one standard of value and that the gold standard.

"The panic of last year, different from either of the preceding ones, again brings the quack doctor of finance to the fore and upon this occasion he presents the guarantee by the Federal government and by the State governments of the deposits in the national and other banks. This is the Oklahoma idea, but the same old guard that stood for unlimited irredeemable money for depreciated silver money, now stand for guarantee of deposits. The Oklahoma idea is not new. It was tried eighty years ago in the great state of New York. It was weighed and found wanting and the trial cost to the state of New York some millions of dollars and the remaining solvent banks of the guaranteed chain bore the burden of taxation and had to make good to the state the deficiency. It is the most vicious exhibition of paternalism in government that has yet been offered to our people. If we are unfortunate enough to adopt it we will place a premium upon incapacity, negligence and dishonesty among banks. We will make the worst bank in the country as good as the best and the best no better than the worst. We will cause a greater panic, should it be put into operation and more widespread disaster will come to the country than was with us in either '75, '90 or 1907. Instead of acting as a safeguard to depositor, it would bring about difficulty and trouble for him as much as for the bank."

SPRUCE HOLLOW.

We are having fine weather at present.

Mr. Ira Glotfelty was a pleasant caller at Mr. J. W. Knox's Friday evening.

Rev. Ed. Miller preached at the Glades church Sunday morning.

Miss Cora Knox and Miss Martha Ferguson were visiting at Mr. Ed. Alexander's Friday evening.

Mr. Thad Glotfelty of Kingwood, was visiting his parents last week.

Our school is getting along fine under the management of Mr. Ross Durst.

Mr. Newton Bittinger attended the love feast at Flatwoods Saturday night.

Mr. J. W. Knox took a flying trip to Oakland Thursday.

Mr. Mahlon Bender of Grantsville, is visiting his brothers and sisters at this writing.

Mr. Jess Glotfelty had a corn husking Friday last.

Miss Ferguson and Miss Knox were visiting at Mr. Peter Bowser's last Sunday.

Mrs. Fanny Bowser was visiting her sister Mrs. Knox, last Wednesday.

BITTINGER.

A little rain fell in this section last week, but not sufficient to relieve the drouth.

Wm. Railey and wife, of McHenry, passed through here last Monday afternoon.

Chas. Sechler was here last Monday looking for a farm and informed us that he had sold his farm near Accident to Newton Gies and would like to locate here.

Mrs. Sallie Ralston has rented a house in Keyser, W. Va., and will move to that place in the near future.

Messrs. Lloyd and Cleaver Brennemen who have been employed on a saw mill at Springs, Pa., for the past year, are home again for the winter.

Rev. Alvin Yugel returned from New York City last Friday night with his bride and on Saturday evening the boys turned out and serenaded them, and on Monday evening the members of his congregation made a liberal donation of good things to eat and spent a pleasant hour at the parsonage.

Mrs. Perry Broadwater is visiting relatives and friends at Mill Run this week.

WOOD'S SEEDS.
Best qualities obtainable.

Winter or Hairy Vetch

makes not only one of the largest-yielding and best winter feed and forage crops you can grow, but is also one of the best of soil-improvers, adding more nitrogen to the soil than any other winter crop.

Wood's Descriptive Fall Catalogue gives full information about this valuable crop; also about all other

Farm & Garden Seeds

for Fall planting. Catalogue mailed free on request. Write for it.

T. W. WOOD & SONS,
Seedsmen, - Richmond, Va.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices.

NOTICE OF PROPOSITION TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF ELECTION DISTRICT NO. 3, AT THE ELECTION TO BE HELD ON TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1908.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS,
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 12, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to a petition filed by certain qualified voters of the Third Election District of Garrett County, in accordance with Chapter 60, of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland for 1908, that at the election to be held on Tuesday, the 3rd day of November, 1908

the proposition "Shall District No 3 of Garrett County, Maryland, Become Anti Saloon Territory," will appear on the ballots for said District No. 3.

D. M. MASON, Pres't.,
S. LAWTON,
C. V. GUARD,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON,
Clerk.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM FRUSH,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of April, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 11th day of October, 1908.

JOHN W. FRUSH,
Administrator,
R. F. D., Oakland, Md.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located. Said new road to begin at a point on the county road leading from Thayersville to Altamont, near the residence of Solomon Hozue, running between the lands of Henry Myers, S. O. Clark, Thomas Garrett, Abel Jewitt, Martin Flisinger and Mrs. E. Fundenberg to intersect the Deer Park road at a point near Mrs. Fundenbergs farm, to extend a distance of about one and one-half miles, which is now a private road but used by the public, and examine whether said road shall be located as a county road, will meet on the 5th day of November, 1908 for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

ANDREW SHARTZER,
JOHN W. HANEY,
P. J. LOHR,
Examiners.

ORDER NISI.

Charles E. M. Hilleary, vs. Joseph Thompson and wife

No. 1532 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered, this 1st day of October 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the Coal franchises, rights and privileges made and reported by Chas. E.M. Hilleary, Mortgagee, in the above entitled cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 6th days of November, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $24,100.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,
4tf Oakland, Md.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

The Best Bargain

in reading matter that your money can buy is your local paper. It keeps you posted on the doings of the community.

This Paper

will tell you the things you want to know in an entertaining way; will give you all the news of the community; its every visit will prove a pleasure; it gives more than full value for the price asked for it.

FACTS

¶ The news items of the home community.

¶ The things in which you are most interested.

¶ The births, weddings, deaths of the people you know.

¶ The social affairs of our own and surrounding towns.

These are the kind of facts this paper gives you in every issue. They are certainly worth the subscription price.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C. & P. Telephone Comp'y

LOCAL LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 24, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Oct. 13th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals will be received by W. McCulloh Brown, Secretary of the Court House Commission of Garrett county, Maryland, until noon of

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1908,

FOR THE FURNISHING OF SAID COURT HOUSE.

The Bench, Tables and Chairs for the Court Room, Orphans' Court and County Commissioners Office and such Metal Cases as may be required.

A copy of the specifications may be seen at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland or a list of articles may be obtained by applying to the Secretary.

At the same time and place the Commission will receive PROPOSALS FOR GAS AND ELECTRICAL FITTINGS.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to accept part and reject the remainder.

ROBERT R. HENDERSON,
Chairman.
W. McCULLOH BROWN,
Sep24 3 Secretary.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

JOHN W. BOYCE,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of September, 1908.

JOHN T. BOYCE,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.
FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.
MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."
Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bath rooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $60 per quarter, payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contagious diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF Valuable Coal SURFACE AND Mining Rights.

In Garrett County, Maryland, Near Henry, West Va.

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias, issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December Term, 1908, of said Court, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of Charles D. Gillaspie against Edward R. Pence, I did sieze and take into execution, on the 29th day of September, 1908, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, the following property, situate, lying and being in Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, West Virginia.

1. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of the tract of land called "Elk Garden," situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two Birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," South 73 degrees West, 315 perches; North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone; North 54 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 315 acres.

2. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all that part of the surface of the said tract of land called "Elk Garden" contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with part of the 12th line of said whole tract, South 73 degrees West, 65¾ perches to a stone; thence North 37½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of said whole tract, thence with part of said 14th line, North 53 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of "Elk Garden" thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 100 acres.

3. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to the right to use, in connection with a like use by a certain Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, of the water from a spring upon the land of the said Ada A. V. Halterman, adjoining the above described part of "Elk Garden," and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ the said water in business, the property, rights, &c., siezed, taken into execution and above described being the same undivided one-third interest in and to the same which were conveyed to the said Edward R. Pence by A. A. V. Halterman and husband, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 142 &c., one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland, and I hereby give notice that I will on at the hour of 11 o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder, all of the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence in and to the property above described and conveyed by the aforesaid deed.

FRIDAY, the 23d Day of October, 1908

Said property lies in District No. 8, of Garrett County, Maryland, and will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.
AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1533 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21st day of September, 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by Land Title and Trust Company, of Philadelphia, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 23d day of October, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $21,000.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF Valuable Bar Fixtures, Liquors, Etc.,

at Oakland, Md.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage executed by Charles A. Hesen to Margaret Sharrer and Ella Shaffer, dated the 15th day of November, 1907, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 55, folio 215, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, and assigned to the undersigned for the purpose of foreclosure, default having been made in said mortgage, the said undersigned assignees hereby give notice that they will on SATURDAY, the 31st day of October, 1908

at the hour of 10:30 o'clock a. m., at the Hesen Saloon on Railroad Street, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer at public sale to the highest bidder, the following property, to-wit:

One Bar and Fixtures, One Roll Top Desk, Two National Cash Registers, One Table, Four Chairs, Four Stools, One Gasoline Range, and Cooking Utensils, Two Stoves, and stock of Whiskies, Wines, Brandies, Alcohol, Beer; Lot of Jugs and Bottles, Tobacco, Cigars, and Cigar Cases, and other Fixtures and Appliances in the C. A. Hesen Saloon.

TERMS: Cash on day of sale.
WM. R. OFFUTT,
J. C. RENNINGER,
Assignees of Mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure.

SAMPLE COPY.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1908. NUMBER 34

Mr. Taft Was Enthusiastically Greeted In Oakland.

What the Republican Party Has Accomplished

Would you rather vote for a party that has done things, or a party which simply cavils at things done?

Without harking back to remote times, the Republican party during the administrations of McKinley and Roosevelt has accomplished these constructive works:

Extended National Power and Commercial Prestige.

The Republican party gave freedom to Cuba, and is aiding her in the effort to established responsible self-government.

The Republican party has added to the area of influence of the United States:

Porto Rico, with an area of 3,435 square miles and a population of 1,000,000;

Guam, with an area of 200 square miles and 11,000 inhabitants;

The Hawaiian Islands, with an area of 6,449 square miles and a population of 154,000;

The Philippine Islands, with an area of 127,853 square miles and a population of 7,500,000.

The Republican party has knit together the interests of this country and the Latin-American republics in a manner to command their confidence and increase our trade.

The Republican party has maintained the open door for American commerce in the Orient.

The Republican party, through President Roosevelt, put an end to the war between Russia and Japan, and commanded the affectionate recognition of both countries.

The Republican party restored confidence in Santo Domingo and made an adjustment of her obligations, which does justice between her creditors and the people of the island.

Services for Sound Finance.

The Republican party established the gold standard by the law of March 14, 1900, thereby placing the country in the rank of other advanced commercial nations.

The Republican party passed the currency measure of May 30, 1908, designed to prevent currency suspension in case of a crisis.

The Republican party has appointed has appointed a monetary commission to consider further reforms in the currency system which may be required by our great commercial expansion.

The Republican party aided Mexico to establish the gold standard, thereby creating new and safe openings for American capital.

The Republican party has extended to the surviving veterans of the Civil and Spanish wars, and their widows, the benefits of a service pension. It has in the meantime reduced payments of interest on the public debt in almost the same proportion as the increase of payments to the veterans. The following figures show the decrease of interest on the debt and the increased disbursements for pensions at intervals of ten years:

Year.	Interest on Debt.	Pensions.
1867..	$143,000,000	$20,000,000
1877..	97,000,000	27,000,000
1887..	47,000,000	75,000,000
1897..	37,000,000	141,000,000
1907..	24,000,000	139,000,000

Thus what has been taken from the bond-holder by reducing and refunding the debt has gone to the veterans who fought the battles of the Civil and Spanish wars.

Measures for the Benefit of Labor.

The Republican party has provided for the arbitration of labor disputes between railroads and their employees, under the direction of the Interstate Commission and the Commissioner of Labor.

The Republican party has regulated the hours of railway employees in a way to entitle them to adquate and necessary rest after prolonged labor.

The Republican party has modified the old common law principle of common employment so as to make it possi- for the laborer in the public service to recover for injuries received while at work.

The Republican party has restricted the emigration of the criminal and defective classes, there by reserving this country for the honest laborer.

Measures for the Protection of the Public.

The Republican party has safeguarded the public health and saved the lives of thousands of infants and adults by establishing proper standards under the Pure Food Law.

The Republican party has initiated the Roosevelt measures for the protection of the forests and the water sources.

The Republican party has put an end to timber-thieving on the public lands.

The Republican party has abolished railway rebates, and thereby established equality of treatment and opportunity for shippers, communities and consumers.

The Republican party has sought to insure the purity of elections and the correct expression of the people's will by prohibiting corporations from contributing to national elections.

Measures for Defending the Nation and Protecting the National Prestige.

The Republican party has built up a navy containing nearly three-score fighting ships capable of meeting any other navy in the world.

The Republican party has reorganized the army by creating a general staff in order to make an effective fighting force.

The Republican party acquired control of the Panama Canal, and has pushed rapidly the work of construction with the object of connecting the two oceans

Is not the enactment of constructive measures like these better than a policy of criticism and negation.

Even if trivial errors can be found, are they not far outweighed by this sort of accomplishments?

The Democrats at Denver stopped the clock while they were nominating a candidate for the Presidency. Do you wish to stop the clock of the nation's progress by electing him?

MR. BRYAN is a ready letter-writer. Yet even he will admit that there are others.

"SHALL the People Rule?" shrieked the parrot, and the eagle screamed "You bet," or words to that effect.

MR. BRYAN declares that he stands by his record. He should stand close or it will fall over and smash him.

WM H. TAFT

Tuesday afternoon at 1.15 o'clock the Taft Special, composed of six Pullman cars and drawn by two of the largest locomotives in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, arrived in Oakland and was greeted by a throng of people numbering probably fifteen hundred. On the rear of the last car of the train there were several newspaper men and one or two United States Senators, among them being Senator N. B. Scott, of Wheeling. Mr. Taft was on the inside of the car but cheers from the assembled crowd soon brought him out and with his appearance the enthusiasm of the people broke out afresh. Mr. Taft wearing the smile which has made him famous—the smile that won't rub out—bowed to the crowd and said:

"My friends, there is no one here to introduce me and therefore you probably do not know who I am, but taking for granted you do know, I am in no condition to make an address, my throat being so badly affected that I cannot make myself heard. I will be pleased, however, to shake hands with all who can come within reach."

The candidate grasped the hands of many during the few minutes' stop of the train and was presentsd with a handsome bunch of crysanthemums by one of Oakland's ladies.

The candidate was extremely hoarse, those standing nearest him hardly catching the few words that he did utter.

The train stopped here but five minutas and when it pulled away from the station Mr. Tatt was again greeted with cheers. He remained on the rear platform waving his hat until the train passed out of sight around the bend west of the station.

His visit here awakened the enthusiasm of many Republicans who had been lukewarm in his support and the lathargy which seemingly held them has been dispelled.

The candidate is a man of commanding and pleasing appearance and his visit to this section of the country, even though he did not make an extended speech, will do much toward making the Republican majority in Garrett county greater than heretofore.

GOT LETTER FROM JUDGE TAFT

Rev A. J. Gill Fully Satisfied With Him From Religious Standpoint.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 19. Rev. A. J. Gill, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in response to a letter addressed to William Howard Taft, Republican nominee for President, asking for his ecclesiastical view along certain lines as a member of the Unitarian faith, received a reply which, the pastor says, sets aside all doubt that he is not a good and great man, fully equipped to be the nation's Chief Executive.

"My object in writing to Mr. Taft," said Dr. Gill, "was to obtain from him an expression as a member of the Unitarian Church, which, as a minister, I deemed it advisable to be familiar with. I was prompted to do this because some of our ministers have had this subject under discussion. His reply is worthy in every way of the broad-minded, intelligent man that he is. I can say that his religious views are free from sectarianism, and for anyone to refrain from voting for him on account of ecclesiastical views would be purely religious persecution. I know him personally and regard him as a safe and capable man, who, I believe, will be elected."

Rev. Gill is a well-known member of the Baltimore Conference, serving his second term in the Methodist Church in this city. He came here from Martinsburg, W. Va., having in recent years been stationed in Baltimore and Cumberland. He was a personal friend of the late Chief Justice McSherry, and is a prominent member of the Frederick Ministerial Association.

See Sincell & Co. ebfore buying cloaks and suits.

How Bryan Could Injure The Country If Elected

We continue to hear from time to time of men who purpose to vote for Mr. Bryan, not because he is the better man for President, not because he is a safe statesman and a wise ruler, but because his hands would be tied by a Republican Senate and he could do no harm. Of all the astonishing arguments in favor of the election of a Presidential candidate this is the most astonishing and the most uncomplimentary to the candidate. That men should be so unpatriotic as to be willing to put a man in the Presidential office who, according to their own admission should not be elected without having his hands tied, is almost inconceivable.

The fallacy of the theory that Mr. Bryan as President could do no harm is apparent to all who take the trouble to consider the question. In the event of Mr. Bryan's election there is no assurance whatever of a Republican Senate. There would almost of necessity be a Democratic House along with a Democratic President, and a tidal wave which would carry Mr. Bryan into office would, in all probability, change the complexion of the Senate. The Democratic party, in order to control the Senate, must gain 17 Senators. On or before the middle of the next Presidential term—that is to say, March 4, 1911—the terms of no less than 42 Republican Senators expire, and out of that number, if Mr. Bryan is elected, it is probable that the Senate would be Democratic during the last two years of Mr. Bryan's administration. But, whether it would be Democratic or not, the great power of the Executive would, with reasonable certainty, control in some degree Congress, and especially as to confirmation of appointments.

Even if the Senate should remain Republican during the whole of Mr. Bryan's term, Mr. Bryan himself feels confident that he could force it to carry out his ideas. He expressed this belief and declared this purpose in his speeches in Nebraska Wednesday, when he said, as he has said in effect frequently during the campaign: "I should feel mighty lonesome in Washington if both the Senate and the House were against me, but if you give me the House, I am sure we will make the Senate feel lonesome." In other words he would use all the power in his office and of his administration to coerce the Senate into acquiescence in his program, and with the backing of a radical popular majority he might possibly succeed, even if it was Republican. With a Democratic Senate, which Mr. Bryan's election would render probable, there would be almost no question that he would dominate Congress.

Even if the President can put no laws upon the statute books, his power is enormous and he could work untold havoc in the public affairs. Mr. Roosevelt has not caused the enactment of all the laws against trusts which he has urged, but he has been the cause, to a great extent, of upsetting the legitimate business of the country by careless agitation. A President having unsafe ideas about finance could so conduct the Treasury department as to impair the public credit, cause a run upon the Government for the redemption of its obligations in gold and create panics and injure business. He would be able to select as judges of the Supreme Court men who could change the Constitution and in effect abolish the reserved rights of the States, which seems to be Mr. Bryan's plan. In case his theories were enacted into laws he could appoint judges who would decide that the plan of Federal license of corporations, of Federal partnership with the trusts, the limitation of products, the regulation of prices and government ownership of railroads are constitutional.

Even were it true that the hands of Mr. Bryan as President could be tied by the Senate, is a man whose hands have to be tied to keep him from trying to have enacted unwise laws the kind of man the people want? At this particular time, more than in ordinary times, the people want a statesman in the White House. They want a man of prudence, with the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of council and strength and knowledge, who can guide the ship of state away from the rocks and shallows into the commercial waters of prosperity. They want a man of performance and achievement, one more intent upon enlarging and encouraging business and giving people employment than in declaring that mills must be shut down or sold and that factories must reduce their output. If we follow Mr. Bryan, with his various panaceas and nostrums for all the ills of the body politic, real and imaginary, we seem to be journeying, as Governor Hughes said in a land of dreams. If we follow Mr. Taft, we are in a land of achievement, of success, of common sense, which will lead us to renewed prosperity, to revolving wheels and humming industries. Which shall the wage-earner follow?

DIXON & KELSO

One-half Car-load of

Pears Pears

JUST RECEIVED.

75c a bushel

I will pay 10c a pound for Live Chickens—either young or old.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

Now is the time to buy your

FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING

while stocks are complete. I have hundreds of Suits of new Fall Goods and can please almost anyone in both Quality and Price.

A lot of Men's Suits to close out

At $3.75

were $6.00

Plenty of Good, Warm UNDERWEAR.

And the most complete line of SHOES in town, from the cheapest that is good, to the best that is made. COME AND SEE!

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

TAFT AND COLOR LINE

None In Philippines While He Was Governor.

TREATED NATIVES AS EQUALS

Filipinos Welcomed to His Table and to Other Social Functions—Rich and Poor Alike Were the Objects of His Solicitude.

After Mr. Taft assumed charge of the Philippines there was no color line so far as he was concerned. There had been one for centuries. The Spaniards introduced it. The Spaniard would not mate, even a suggestion of social equality between him and the Filipino, although in intelligence, breeding, education and attributes which constitute manliness the upper class Filipino is fully on a par with the Spaniard or American.

Mr. Taft's first step in the prosecution of his "policy of attraction" in the Philippines was to demolish the color line. Leading Filipinos were bidden to dinner and to other social affairs at his home, and their wives and daughters were asked to stand on the receiving line with Mrs. Taft. At dinners Mr. Taft invariably took in the leading Filipino woman. He did not marry himself in so doing, either, for the Filipino women are bright, vivacious and possessed of a keen sense of humor, which last quality alone would insure their getting on well with Mr. Taft. So far as he could Mr. Taft became one of the people. A man who accompanied him on his first tour of the Islands tells of having seen Mr. Taft in close conference with a young Filipino lawyer, who, when he quit Mr. Taft's side, left with him a piece of paper covered with diagrams. The secret came out the next night at the ball, which invariably formed a conspicuous part of the ceremonious entertainments. The ball was opened with the rigadon, or Spanish quadrille. It is a more complicated dance than our quadrille, and the figures are not called out. Mr. Taft, to the surprise of his companions, stepped off with the wife of the president and led her through the quadrille without a mistake. He kept his eyes fairly closely glued to a bit of paper. It was the same that the lawyer had left him and upon which he had drawn a diagram of the figures of the rigadon for the instruction of the governor.

In his office and at all times Mr. Taft received the poorest as well as the richest and most influential Filipino. An American contractor tells of having waited in Mr. Taft's anteroom for an hour while he explained to an old Filipino woman what measures she should take to obtain a balance of $1 which she asserted the government owed her on an unsettled claim. Had he not met the Filipinos on such grounds of equality Mr. Taft could never have so successfully striven with the problem in the Philippines. He had to have the help of the Filipinos, and he obtained it by making friends of them.

RESTORING CONFIDENCE.

Country Impressed With Utterances of Judge Taft.

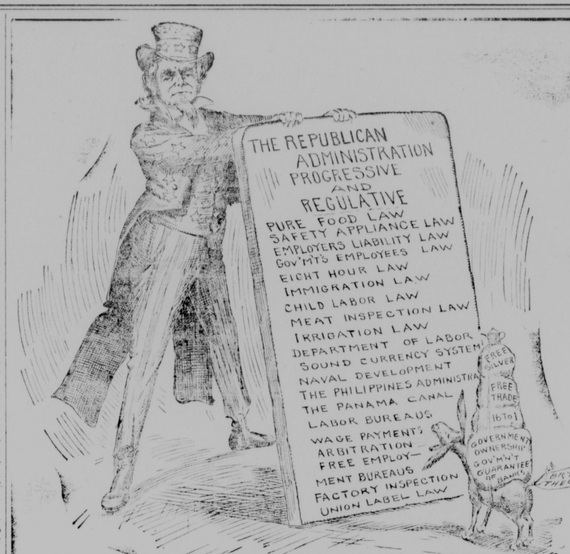
Judge Taft has steadily grown on the country since his nomination. His judicial poise, his sobriety of utterance and his attitude of deep responsibility have all impressed the country. They are what is wanted to give confidence in a period of doubt and depression.

S. M. Felton, president of the Mexican Central railroad, who was one of Mr. Taft's visitors last week, said in an interview: "In my judgment the election of Mr. Taft is of the utmost importance to railroad interests as a whole because it means the restoration of confidence, which is necessary before we can hope for a permanent revival of business. The great trouble with the railroads has been their inability to raise the necessary money with which to carry on extensions and improvements. To get this money there must be confidence on the part of the investing public, and this confidence will certainly be secured by the election of Judge Taft."

The campaign has reached the point where it is time to make the personality of Mr. Taft known and familiar over the country. The campaign is marked by its sober discussion and the manifest movement of the great current of public opinion toward a conservative desire to see the great issues now pending handled with care, consideration and a judicial scrutiny.

Judge Taft is a man of action, combative and aggressive. He appeals to the precise conditions of the campaign. He has the qualities which draw men to him in times like these. The speechmaking campaign on which he recently entered will not only echo votes by arousing public interest, but it will add to the strength of the Republican party in every doubtful state he visits by showing the people a man they can trust.

Prosperity dwells with the American people, who are not going to turn it out at the door to make way for Bryanism.



KEEP IT UP!

BRYAN HIMSELF AGAIN.

Preaches Economic Absurdities In Same Old Way.

Mr. Bryan, who started out very cautiously at the opening of the campaign, resolving evidently to get the confidence of certain editors and business men who could not stand his aforetime radicalism, has broken through the traces and given up trying to be good. His speech on the trusts at Indianapolis puts him back in his old position of advocating the destruction of anything that does not meet his views without regard to method or consequences.

As usual, he is not specific as to what means should be employed to carry out his designs. He simply in a general way wants to destroy the so called trusts, both large and small, regardless of the consequences to others engaged in similar business or of the consuming public. He tells us one day that the American people should be allowed to purchase where they can buy the cheapest, and another day he tells us that the money from the pockets of the people is flowing into the coffers of the trusts. If the latter be true it must be because the people are buying where they buy the dearest, and if the trust made goods are the cheapest then they serve the consumer rather than injure him.

Mr. Bryan simply does not know what a trust is. Mr. Bryan does not know how to handle financial problems, industrial problems or even political problems. We gave on our statute books today laws providing for the machinery to punish any illegitimate business and to remedy any inequalities objective. Mr. Bryan has not put forth any views showing how to improve present methods.

BRYAN AT TREASURY HELM.

How Would Business Men Regard Secretary Chosen by Him?

How would the financial community like to face a panic under a Bryan secretary of the treasury? This question goes to the heart of the degree of confidence which could be placed in a Bryan administration. Even if we had a new Bryan, sobered by the responsibility of his office, would business men feel the assurance of prompt, energetic and intelligent action to protect the public faith and save the money market from disturbance which would be looked for under a secretary of the treasury named by Mr. Taft? Business men are likely to ponder this seriously between now and November.

It is not necessary to assume that Mr. Bryan still favors opening the mints to the free coinage of silver to raise a grave doubt as to his attitude on all questions affecting the maintenance of the financial fabric of the country. Up to the convention of 1900 he would not even agree to an expression of opinion that the silver question had been submerged by the great output of gold, and his present associations and surroundings are such that it is doubtful if he could make any sincere declaration which would go far to establish confidence in his financial sanity.—Boston Transcript.

Colonel Henry Watterson in 1896 somewhat succinctly described Mr. Bryan as "a big orator." Mr. Bryan it is fair to assume, is still an orator whose oratory retains all its former quality both as to extreme eloquence and lack of meaning.

The people of republican may not exceed the output this year, but it appears that republicanism must be forced his own reward, and Bryan will get his.

Some of the democratic products seem to be fairly edible to be without honor in their own country.

REV. FRANCIS BURGETTE SHORT EXTOLS MR. TAFT.

It is striking that no one has yet declared that Bryan is a wise statesman. Those who are most anxious for his success do not urge especial fitness, but rather that he may at last have found an issue that the people will not repudiate at the polls. To return to power is the main thing of the Democratic party, no matter if it floats into office on Bryan bubbles or on any other conceivable pretext.

In pronounced contrast is the statesmanship that is universally expressed on Taft's equipment for the presidency. Irrespective of party, all attest to his mastery of affairs and wonderful administrative ability. The clergy are equally outspoken. Among those who gained upon Mr. Taft at Cincinnati during the week was the Rev. Francis Burgette Short, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church at Salt Lake City. Discussing politics, Mr. Short said:

"Judge Taft is eminently fitted in character and practice to occupy the highest office in the land. His efforts to raise a high standard of life at home, his insistence on and solicitude for equities across the sea, mark him as a man of sane visions and decide. Such a man this nation needs and needs now at its head if we are to continue to hold the individual admiration of those at home and those abroad. Such a man we must have if we would make history that is gloriously humane."

MILK PAIL IS FILLING.

Business Picking Up on Assurance of Taft's Election.

Business is becoming more active, factories are running, some full time, others nearly so; savings banks find that deposits are increasing and many new accounts are being opened. The tendency is very lined for the man who has goods to sell and the man who has labor to dispose of. The same conditions are reported east and west.

"The small country jobbers," writes a newspaper correspondent from Ohio "are doing better, the railroad trains are jammed with travelers whose testimony is to the effect that things are slowly but surely righting themselves, and in the manufacturing districts there is a return to 90 per cent of the activity of a year ago."

The 100 per cent is not far off if the election of Taft shall give to manufacturers, merchants and wage earners the sense of security which attaches to impartial and efficient administration of the laws and protection from sudden changes which tend to unsettle commerce and labor and cause confusion, loss and disappointment to both.

Many patriotic Democrats frankly declare that their party has never had a leader like William Jennings Bryan. Whether this is an exultant boast or a melancholy admission is a matter of conjecture.

It is proudly contended by Bryan's advocates that he is a successful lecturer. So was the immortal Mrs. Candle, for that matter. Yet the White House was never designed as a lyceum agency.

Of course the former United States senator who proudly boasts that he led the mob that recently lynched a negro wretch in Mississippi is solid for Bryan and the reign of law.

MR. GOMPERS REBUKED BY TYPOGRAPHERS' CHIEF

Norman E. McPhail Declares Union Labor's Vote Cannot Be "Delivered" by Any Man or Set of Men.

"The vote of organized labor as a body will not, should not and cannot be delivered to any party or by any man or set of men." This is the declaration of Norman E. McPhail, president of the Typographical union, in a letter to Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau. Thus another voice is added to the rising protest of union labor against the attempt of Mr. Gompers to "deliver" the vote of free American citizens.

President McPhail's letter is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Moore—Your letter of Sept. 22 has just been received and read by me, as I have today returned from a tour of some of our New England cities for our organization.

"In reply to the question you ask me, I will state that in my opinion the vote of organized labor in this country as a body will not and cannot be delivered to any one party by any one man or set of men. To allow such a thing would be suicidal to the labor movement of the country.

"Members of labor unions, as citizens, have the right and should carefully consider the platforms and promises of the different political parties and should vote as they believe the broadest and best interests of our country lie.

"There can be no objection to this from any source, and it is something which every citizen should do. To claim that any man or set of men, as has been plezoned forth in the newspapers, will deliver the vote of organized labor to any party is absurd as it is an impossibility. Sincerely yours,

"NORMAN E. M'PHAIL."

LABOR LEGISLATION.

Republican Party Aims to Conserve Interests of All the People.

Various injunction bills were considered in committee during both sessions of the Fifty-ninth and first session of the Sixtieth congresses. During the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress several bills were before the judiciary committee, and hearings were accorded and considered. It was found, however, that the labor interests of the country could not agree upon any one bill and that different labor leaders were opposed to one or the other bills under consideration.

Again, during the first session of the Sixtieth congress the judiciary committee of the house gave more time and attention to the various bills presented, but it was found that no bill could be introduced that would be satisfactory to all the labor interests and no bill upon which all members of congress could agree. This so called anti-injunction legislation is by no means a partisan matter, and so far neither Democrats nor Republicans have been able to agree among themselves to a bill that would seem to satisfy all concerned. There is no doubt, however, that in the near future some bill will be enacted into law, and when it is it will be found that it will provide protection for not only labor and capital, but for the public as well. First it must be constitutional, and then it must be of such a nature that it will not lead to disorder and riot, but will conserve the best interests of the people at large and not be drawn in the interest of either capital or labor, but for the good and protection of all.

Economic betterment, not partisan politics, is the true purpose of organized labor. Mr. Gompers has become a misleader.

FAIRNESS OF TAFT.

Scrupulous In His Desire to Render Exact Justice.

REVIEWS OF COURTS MARTIAL.

Refused to Approve or Disapprove Findings of Military Tribunals Until He Had Carefully Read the Evidence—A Case In Point.

When he was secretary of war Mr. Taft never unreservedly trusted to the judgment of courts martial upon offending officers to determine his action in approving or disapproving the findings of these military tribunals. He was scrupulous in insisting that all the evidence should be laid before him to be passed upon and weighed by him personally. No pressure of work could be too severe or lack of time too evident to prevent him from satisfying himself that exact justice had been done the accused, according to the evidence and the facts. One evening four after the rest of the departments had closed Mr. Taft, at the end of an unusually hard day, took up a bundle of papers relating to the case of a lieutenant who was sentenced to dismissal. The chief of staff was there, and he suggested, with a view to saving Mr. Taft work: "I think that you will not need to go deeper into the case if you read the conclusion of the judge advocate's memorandum and my memorandum. The man is a bad egg. The army will be better off without him."

"No," said the secretary; "I always prefer to go through these cases myself."

The officer had failed to pay his debts. Carefully and slowly Mr. Taft read the evidence through to the end. When he finished he looked up and exclaimed, "But he lied about it!" Rapidly he dictated a note to be sent with the papers, to the president and continued as he laid them aside: "He tried, as he admits, to get out of it. I think the sentence should be carried out. There might have been some excuse for the other thing, but there could be none for the lie. If he tries to stop this tendency among the officers who get into trouble, it must be discouraged for the honor of the service.

"I want to go over the rest of these myself," said he, indicating another pile of court martial papers. "I have done that sort of thing all my life, and I'd rather do it than take the judgment of some one else."

BIG AND BROAD.

Methodists Indorse the Candidacy of William H. Taft.

An unqualified approval of William H. Taft as a presidential candidate was given by the Rev. James Coote, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Thompsonville, Conn., when he called at the headquarters of the Republican national committee. For years Dr. Coote has taken a prominent part in Methodist circles in New England and in New York, having been a presiding elder and occupied leading pulpits.

"No man has spoken so earnestly in favor of the great work that Christian missions are doing in the Philippines, in China and in the orient generally as Mr. Taft," said Mr. Coote. "In an address at Yale university he emphasized that idea particularly, and on several other occasions he spoke enthusiastically of the good being done by aggressive Christian evangelicalism in the islands of the orient which he visited. It seems to me that no evangelical Christian should hesitate to support Judge Taft. He is just as big and broad in his religious ideas as he is in his physical proportions. He can be trusted to do what is fair and right with all denominations.

"I am convinced that what Judge Taft has said on religious matters was not for political effect. He has gone hither and thither doing the work before him, and at the same time his keen observation and his sense of fairness have led him repeatedly to give expression to his appreciation of the work of Christian missions everywhere.

"In Thompsonville is one of the largest carpet manufacturing plants in the world," continued Dr. Coote. "During the last Democratic administration that establishment was compelled to close, and the thousands of employees were thrown out of work. A very large proportion of those had to leave the town. My observation is that the people in that section of the country remember from experience and that they do not care for another administration that is likely to result so disastrously."

To oppose revision of the tariff by the laborers in protest to American wages would be a supreme folly; he is invite it, revision by Democratic believers in free trade the products of cheap labor.

Nevertheless friends and brethren. It must be admitted that for twelve years Mr. Bryan's views has constantly vibrated for his native land.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS.

Many Important Measures Enacted by the Majority.

The Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth congresses will go down in history as record breakers because of the large number of important measures enacted, measures having directly to do with the great business interests of the country and standing between the people and corporate greed and oppression. The Fifty-ninth congress opened a new era in American legislation, giving emphasis to the fact that the constitution is amply sufficient for all the needs of the people, safeguarding their interests and furnishing them adequate means of protection. The Fifty-ninth congress was a Republican congress, and all the great measures enacted by it were Republican measures, originating with the Republicans and passed by Republican votes.

There is still much to be done to perfect the work begun by the Fifty-ninth congress. Experience has demonstrated that a Democratic congress cannot be depended upon to work out any great system of reform. No reform in administration or in legislation has ever come about under a Democratic regime. As at present constituted the Democratic party is made up of too many isms to be safe in handling great questions of political economy. Two great questions will soon come up for legislation—a revision of the tariff and a remodeling of our currency system. Twice since 1860 the Democrats have attempted tariff legislation, and twice the business of the country was brought to the verge of ruin and hundreds of thousands of workingmen were thrown out of employment. Twice within the last thirty years the Democratic party has set up its standard of monetary legislation. First it declared in favor of putting the printing presses to work to manufacturing greenbacks without limit and, second, by declaring for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. No evidence has been furnished that the party has recanted from its stand for fiat money. Is it safe to trust the party now?

MR. TAFT ON BANK GUARANTY.

Explodes Bryan's Pet Proposition in Speech at Minneapolis, Sept. 26.

My information with respect to the Oklahoma system is that it is developing as might be expected. I have a correspondent who is intimately acquainted with the conditions in Oklahoma. In a letter of Sept. 22, 1908, in speaking of the effect of the guaranty of deposit law, he uses the following language:

"Conditions in Oklahoma are growing worse than was expected on account of the recent decision there whereby it was decided that the bank commissioner has no right to refuse to grant a charter to parties proposing to organize a bank. As an instance, in a town of less than 500 people as many as four banks have been organized. Application is now in for the organization of a fourth bank in one town of only 450 population.

"Men whose past record proved them to be incompetent are engaging in the banking business and getting in control of banking institutions. I have knowledge of one instance where a man was engaged in business some years ago and failed. He went to another town and engaged in the same line of business in his wife's name, but conducted her affairs in such an unbusinesslike way that she failed. Some time afterward he went to Oklahoma territory and started a small state bank, but found he could not succeed and sold to other parties and left the territory. A few months ago, however, he returned and started another state bank, advertising that the depositors are secured under the state guaranty law, and after sixty days' operation he now has over $100,000 deposits. I have it from the best authority that he now owns two of the largest of the new state banks throughout the state, two of which have already been organized and one now doing business."

Bryan declared for small appropriations and for sympathy with the suffering farmer. It isn't the size, but the purpose and the honest expenditure of appropriations, that counts, and the greater the purchasing and consuming power of the rest of the commonwealth the better it is for the farmer.

"Shall it be people rule?" It is a curious quirk worth of democracy that Bryan should mean the maintenance of patriarchalism. If all the Bryan theories—"ancient, present and possible"—could be put into practice, the United States would be Russianized.

The greater the prosperity of wage earner the more jocund the flavor whose produce the wage earner buys. The Republican party is the tried and proved friend of each.

The greatest productiveness and therefore the greatest reward of organized labor are directly in the with the policies of the Republican party.

The gospel of Bryanism regarding those who dissent from its dogmas begins, "With charity for none, with malice toward all," etc.

Democratic Ticket.
5th District—WILLIAM H. FELDMEYER. Annapolis, Md.
6th District—FRANCIS B. SAPPINGTON.

PROHIBITION — WILLIAM A. HARRIS, Felton, Md.

INDEPENDENCE — PROHIBITION

AGAINST PROPOSITION
The above proposition will only appear on the ballots

	Baltimore, Md.
5th District—	WILLIAM H. FELDMEYER, Annapolis, Md.	PROHIBITION
6th District—	FRANCIS B. SAPPINGTON, Frederick, Md.	PROHIBITION

For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District.
VOTE FOR ONE.

HARVEY NELSON CUPPETT, Mountain Lake Park, Md.	PROHIBITION

For President and Vice-President of the United States.

EUGENE V. DEBS, BENJAMIN HANFORD	SOCIALIST

For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States.
VOTE FOR EIGHT

CLARENCE H. TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.	SOCIALIST
JAMES POWERS, Baltimore, Md	SOCIALIST
ROBERT E. CLAGGET, Baltimore, Md	SOCIALIST
WILLIAM H. WARFIELD, Franklinville, Md.	SOCIALIST
CHARLES W. SMILEY, Arlington, Md.	SOCIALIST
WILLIAM W. GROVE, Hagerstown, Md.	SOCIALIST
OSWALD WEBER, Cumberland, Md.	SOCIALIST
BENJ. F. ADAMS, Silver Springs, Md.	SOCIALIST

For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District.
VOTE FOR ONE.

SYLVESTER L. V. YOUNG, Hagerstown, Md.	SOCIALIST

WILLIAM A. HASL[illegible] Falston, M[illegible]	INDEPENDENCE

For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District.
VOTE FOR ONE

For President and Vice-President of the United States.

For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States.
VOTE FOR EIGHT

For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District.
VOTE FOR ONE

AGAINST PROPOSITION

The above proposition will only appear on the ballots for District No. 3.

Published by order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections of Garrett County, Maryland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

D. M. MASON, President,
C. V. GUARD,
SAMUEL LAWTON,
Board of Supervisors of Elections of Garrett County, Maryland.

SPLENDID TYPES OF FEMININITY

The South African Girl—An Example of Beauty and Intelligence.

The day of the South African girl has hardly arrived yet, but when it comes let the Americans see to their laurels, for they will have dangerous competitors in the field.

The Dutch women of the Transvaal are tall and splendidly developed, and there are two distinct types, the purely Dutch with golden brown hair, gray or hazel eyes and creamy skin, and the brunette of French descent with dark eyes and hair and rich dark coloring. Both types are on a larger scale than their European antecedents. The sun of South Africa is a great vitalizer, and the children of that land of vast spaces have more room to grow and develop in, and they lead from their infancy such an out of doors life that they are bound to be an improvement physically over their sisters of the northern hemisphere.

Dutch women of South Africa always accompanied their husbands in their large-hooded, slow-moving wagons. Their nomadic existence tended to carelessness of habits and of dress, but it developed in them an infinite capacity for preserving effort as strength of character, a stubbornness as well as great vitality, all of which excellent qualities go to the making of a strong nation.

The present generation can be divided into two distinct classes, the inhabitants of the veld and those of the towns and villages, and while the fundamental characteristics are the same—grit, tenacity, levelheadedness, independence—still, there is a wide difference between the Boer woman of the country and the educated Dutch woman of the towns.

The former, on reaching the age of thirty, are large, fat and beamy. They marry very young and have patriarchal families, and over husband and children they wield a great sway, an influence very much greater than that of the English woman.

To a stranger the Boer woman appears stupid and silent; she shirks her breath ostentatiously and sits stolidly through his visit; but in reality she is taking a detailed memorandum of his appearance, ways and manners, and nothing escapes her notice. If she is persuaded of his friendliness and good intentions she may relax a little, but the Dutch never by any chance tell you anything more than they wish you to know.

The Boer women have always been accustomed to a good supply of Kaffir servants on their farms and they are not quite the energetic housewives one imagines, but they generally prevail on their servants to get the work done to their satisfaction and there is one branch of housewifery in which they excel—the making of "konfyt" or preserves, whether jam-making of the ordinary kind or a more elaborate method of preserving the delicious fruit of the land.

Wide as the poles asunder are the educated Dutch women of the towns or indeed those of the country who have been sent to Cape Colony or to Europe to school. As adaptable as the Americans, with a delightful naturalness and an air full of common sense, of good tempered gayety and an inherent sense of savoir vivre.

A girl who has been to a good school in South Africa and afterward in Europe has something most fascinating and charming about her, with a clear idea of what she wants and how to get it, she carves a pleasant and useful way for herself through life.

Her out of doors life has made her strong and healthy and she sees the advantage of a certain independence, and even if not before, she has taken a great interest in politics as well as in the work of her father or husband and in philanthropical matters she displays strong organizing ability. She has not yet developed the "female bachelor" ways of independence which are nearly every one, there is a large surplus of men in South Africa in nearly every colonies young and rules her husband and the Dutch girl invariably marries young and family ever after.—London Queen.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM H. TAFT,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,
GEORGE A. PEARRE,
OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

MR. BRYAN has suffered two defeats at the hands of an Ohio man.

THE West reports bumper crops of all kinds, including Taft votes.

A DEMOCRATIC guarantee for the return of borrowed umbrellas would touch the hearts of millions.

EVENTS have nullified every prophecy ever made by Bryan. Such a prophet merits no trust for the future.

REPORTS from the front state that Candidate Bryan looks somewhat worn. His political policies present a somewhat similar appearance.

MR. TAFT calls Mr. Bryan's speechmaking "an oratory of fancy." Only a few years ago Col. Watterson called it an oratory of infancy.

MR. BRYAN challenges Mr. Taft to take the people into his confidence. It isn't necessary. The people long ago took Mr. Taft into theirs

BRYAN is not talking about the tariff. His vote in Congress for the Wilson-Gorman bill brought its own sad eloquence of subsequent disaster.

THE Democratic Campaign Text Book can hardly be reckoned among the season's "best sellers," but its originality as a work of fiction cannot be denied.

MR. KERN has lost his railroad pass. Happening at this time of the year, when walking is bound to get worse and worse, this is indeed a misfortune.

MR. BRYAN'S running mate, Mr. Kern, predicts a Democratic victory in Ohio. Someboby has been painting little rainbows on Mr. Kern's eyeglasses.

THERE is much speculation as to the sort of platform the perpetual candidate will adopt in 1912. But whatever it may be the paramount issue will inevitably be W. J. Bryan.

TAFT PRESENTS THE FACTS.

Those who have been reading Mr. Taft's speeches during the present campaign must have observed that the Republican presidential candidate illustrates his argument continuously by the citation of circumstantial evidence. He it not given to a fanciful, glittering generality sort of speechmaking. As he himself has expressed it, he does not "float away into the cerulean blue." He proves his statements with the care of a lawyer arguing a case before a critical and discriminating judge.

In the speeches which he has been delivering in Ohio this week he has taken up his own record while a judge of the United States District Court upon issues in which organized labor is interested. He claims that his act in granting an injunction in what is known as the Arthur case has been not a hindrance to trade-unionism, but to have operated to the building up and numerical increase of labor organizations. In his speech at Zanesville he said:

"I only expressed what the law was at that time, in an opinion which it happened to me to formulate. Under that opinion the trades-unions have doubled in this country; they never were in such a prosperons state; the American Federation of Labor has increased 100 per cent The labor organizations have never reached the point of usefulness before that they now have. They have never exercised the useful influence or the power in protecting their own interests before as they have under the law as I laid it down some ten or fifteen years ago."

To prove more full his assertion that his decision in the famous injunction case, to which reference has so often been made during the present campaign, has been a benefit and not a hindrance to labor organizations, he recited what has been told him by the present head of one of the great labor orders as to how his decision in the Arthur case had been relied upon and was effective in winning a strike that was brought into court for adjustment. This labor leader declared to Mr. Taft:

"We did not know what was in your opinion until we came up against the question again, and then we found that you had laid down the magna charta of our rights, upon which we were able to stand lawfully."

In his addresses to labor organizations Mr. Taft is not taking the advice of the elder Mr. Weller, and "proving an alibi." On the contrary, he is assuming the responsiblity for his record and proving that he was right.

CHANGES IN THE ELECTION LAW WHICH VOTERS SHOULD NOTE.

Two or three changes in the election law were made by the Legislature last winter. One of these, which is embodied in a bill introduced by Mr. Lehmayer, is of distinct importance and will make it easier for the voter to mark his ballot. The significant part of this act is contained in the following words:

"No ballot shall be rejected solely because any mark or portion of the cross mark extends beyond the square, if the point of intersection is within the square."

The law of 1896 required that the cross mark must be entirely within the squrre and any discernible extenson beyond the square invalidated the ballot. Under the act of 1896 nearly all voters made a single mark in the big square after the party emblem and so but few persons lost their votes by the strict requirement of the law. The election law of 1901 retained this provision of the former law, but abolished the emblem and the big square. After that the voter had to mark within the small square opposite each name, and thousands of persons who were not accustomed to the use of the pencil or whose eyesight was not good lost their votes by making their marks extend beyond the square. The act of 1908 will save many ballots in the State which would otherwise be lost.

Another change made in the law deprives voters in the so-called "Wilson bill counties" of the use of sample ballots. In the other counties and in the city sample ballots, showing the arrangement of names on the official ballots, are published before election. These the voter can study before going into the booth, and they can be used to instruct the illiterates. But in the Wilson bill counties this aid is denied, and the posting of cards of instruction and a list of the candidates is all that is required. There has also been a change in the counties which come under the this law. Dorchester and Queen Anne's have been added to them and Frederick and Garrett taken out The counties in which there are no sample baliots and in which the party to which the candidates belong is not designated on the ballot are Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, Dorchester, Kent, Prince George's, Queen Anne's, St. Mary's, Somerset, Talbot and Worcester.

In the entire State this year the ballots will be printed with the last names of the candidates for President and Vice-President above the electors of their party. To the right of the names of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates there will be a square so to include both names. A mark in this square will be a vote for all the electors of the party. In addition, there will be a square after the name of each elector, so that if a voter so desires he can vote for some of the electors of a party without voting for all of them. Except in the eleven Wilson bill counties the names of the candidates for Congress will be arranged with the name of the party of which each is the candidate immediately following the name and on the same line.

A correspondent asks, "How can a Democrat mark his ballot so as to vote for Judge Taft and still not count for the Republican party on State issues?" At the election this year there are no political State issues involved. The only candidates to be voted for are the Presidential electors and Congressmen. In order to vote for the Taft electors it will be necessary to make only a single mark, that mark to be placed in the large square to the right of the names of Taft and Sherman. Then the voter to vote for the Congressman must make another mark in the square to the right of the name of the candidate for whom he wishes to vote.

CANDIDATE BRYAN isn't saying a word this year about the Wilson-Gorman bill which he helped to enact and which President Cleveland denounced as "a creature of perfidy and dishonor." Can it be that Mr. Bryan is ashamed of the only important measure he ever helped to place on the statute book?

Lecture At Loch Lynn.

The subject of the lecture to be delivered at Loch Lynn Heights on Saturday by Mr. Hall, of the Watch Tower Society, will be "Bible Proof of Salvation Beyond the Grave." All are cordially invited to be present.

WHO IS "H. P. T."

What Is His Present and What Has Been His Past Record?

To the Editor of the Oakland Republican:

It is astounding to many intelligent readers that the editor of the Mountain Democrat would yield so much valuable space to the whangdoodle rantings of a wild-eyed, self-imposed moral leader and theological expositor, signing his initials "H. P. T." His divine afflatus breaks out in spasmodical regurgitations of tawdry politics and half-baked theology. Such a long drawn out array of words, clearly devoid of truth or sense, one rarely ever sees. He seems to have just learned that a great man lives, moves and has his being, who is a member of the Unitarian Church, and disbelieves in a part of the orthodox creed. He seems ignorant of the fact that we have had Unitarian Presidents before.

He says that his father once gave away an acre of ground. I wonder how many "H. P. T." has donated. How is his record for integrity, moral ideals, and citizenship? With what elements of society does he operate, and by whom the best known? Is his influence in the community for bad or for good? Is it exemplary and representative, commanding the respect and admiration of the church and society, or is it besmirched by the low and bestial, the thriftless and the irresponsible? Or may be like the hero of Dryden's satire;

"A man so various that he seemed to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong,
Was everything by starts, and nothing long;
But in the course of one revolving moon,
Was rhymist, fiddler, statesman and buffoon."

A man who has disingenuously or otherwise, wasted column after column of newspaper space, mixing up stale political platitudes with scripture verse after scripture verse, irrelevant to the subject excites suspicion at once. We conclude he is either insane, bordering on insanity or has the cerebro spinal meningitis. The only remedy for him is a good, strong dose of common sense taken after each religio-political attack. This remedy never fails and does not even require the phycho-mental assistance of Christian Science.

It is a sin to scatter pearls around promiscuously, but when the sower casts his seed it may fall on both stony and good soil, and bring forth fruit. A truth, although crushed to earth, never dies. The religious faith of Judge Taft is as old as any faith recorded in history, sacred or profane; so old that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and that faith will die only when human reason atrophies and man's soul turns to dust. Who are the great Unitarians? The poets, Longfellow, Bryant, Lowell, Emerson, Holmes and in faith Whittier; the historians, Parkman and Irving; the philanthropists, Enoch Pratt, George Peabody, Peter Cooper; the ministers, Edward Everett Hale, Robert Collyer, Theodore Parker, and thousands of others in every department of life, whose names are household words.

The man who would call into question the religious belief of an acknowledged great, good and useful man, before casting his ballot, deserves not only pity, but the severest condemnation. It was just such narrow-minded bigotry and fanaticism as this which has held back human progress through the centuries, and menaced the advance of true religion and civilization. The same narrow mind during the Dark Ages made it the blackest page in church history, and the church with an iron bound creed then predominated over state. Deed, and not creed, is the only thing that counts. Any man might well be proud to lay down his armor at the end of life's journey, with the record of heroic deeds, and a name that stands as a synonym for all that is good and noble in American mannood, as does that of William Howard Taft, and yet he is still in the zenith of his life and activity. No living man has done better work for his country than he, and his race but half run.

What charge does "H. P. T." bring against this man? A man who pretends to question a candidates's creed before casting his vote, being satisfied with his character, should certainly stand as a paragon of perfection himself. His character should scintillate with virtue, and his record be a galaxy of good and noble deeds. But is it not true that the exact opposite of this condition exists? Is it true that this juggler of scripture texts, this jabberwock of campaign literature, has been weighed in the balances and found wanting? Ask the growler, the prowler, the rum mills, and the totally irresponsibles. The sheriff and even the jail warden, it is said, stands out in bold relief and points he finger at him, ecce homo—"Thou art the man." Ask the proprietor of Giessman's Hotel, who "H. P. T." is and his claim on personal integrity. Information concerning him might also be rendered by the court docket, wherein may be recorded facts most damaging to character and reputation. I invite your attention to this docket on date of September, 1888, and in the next week's issue of THE REPUBLICAN I will give further interesting data concerning this individual. The immortal bard prophetically described the subject, when he wrote:

"They never taste who always drink,
They always talk who never think."

I ask again what charge this man "H. P. T." brings against Judge Taft? Well, in plain words, he says that Mr. Taft is a Unitarian and consequently does not believe in the "divinity of Jesus Christ." Well, he is a Unitarian, and a good one. He attended the Unitarian Church with President Roosevelt last Sunday, in Washington. But when you say he denies the divinity of Christ, you say what is false, what is utterly andabsolutely untrue. He does not deny the divinity of Christ, and no wel read man will say so. It is the divinity in men and in Christ, that he most believes, the difference being in degree only, which is certainly true. The Scriptures teach that we are alike the children of God. Every son of man is potentially also a son of God, but we recognize the deepest union existed with Christ. It is through the divinity of man and the humanity of God, that we have reached out and learned as much as we know about God. But I have no space here to argue theology, but remember, that the belief of a creed is not religion. Devils believe and tremble. The creed is something which the philosopher, more or less skillfully has wrought out of the experience of those who have turned toward the Infinite. To perceive what they perceive is not religion. Knowing a man is one thing; knowing about him is another. Religion is not following a creed concerning God, but it is the office of religion to bring men to an acquaintance with the Infinite. Not a single scripture verse that the man "H. P. T." jumbles together bears the remotest upon the life and religion of William Howard Taft. To use more words upon so base and irreligious a charge would be wanton waste, and when the stakes are so small, well-nigh criminal.

AN INDEPENDENT WHO IS DISGUSTED WITH THE "MOUNTAIN DEMOCRAT."

Grantsville, Md., Oct. 19, 1908.

AND HE CLAIMS TO BE INDEPENDENT.

Was The Journal Too Cowardly To Publish The Following.

To the Editor of The Republican.

MY DEAR MR. EDITOR:

I herewith enclose copy of an article which fully explains itself. I sent same to the editor of the Garrett Journal on October 9th, and after perusing very carefully two succeeding issues of his paper, I find he made no reference to same. I now appeal to you for space in your paper.

KINGWOOD, W. VA., OCT. 8, 1908.

James D. Hamill, Editor, Garrett Journal.

DEAR SIR:

A few days ago I had occasion to look over the issue of your paper of the 24th inst., and while I was much impressed with its literary style, and paid more attention to its contents than I do ordinarily to a weekly paper, yet I was very much surprised in reading an article that in my judgment was an absolute contradiction of the spirit of fairness that seems to usually govern the policy of your paper.

The article to which I refer was headed "Taft and Christianity," and subheaded "Not in accord with his Country's Religion." I feel that every patriotic American should deplore articles of that kind in any newspaper, for you will agree with me that if "American" means anything, particularly on religion, it means the right of every man to worship his God according to the dictates of his own conscience, formality being only a rule developed through custom, association and environment. All denominations are branches of the same great tree, "Christian Religion," and believe in the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." This teaches us to be broad, to be fair, to be charitable, to be manly, and not to be cowardly, and the trend of this article from beginning to end is, in my judgment, the embodiment of absolute cowardice, because there is no authority specified or even intimated for its origin. Appearing, as it does, apart from your editorial columns, it is not submitted by any correspondent, but is given as a news article, without authority, and is an absolute apology from the standpoint of intelligence, reason and decency. A more sacreligious article I never read, and I trust as an American and a member of the Protestant faith, I shall never again be called upon to witness such rabid hypocrisy as is shown in that article, and which must have proven an insult to the intelligence of the community into which that issue of your paper entered.

The Hon. William H. Taft needs make no apology for his religion. His life is an open book. Kind, charitable, christian fortitude has characterized his life in its every sphere from childhood to the present day. He is an honor to the religion of Christ, regardless of form or formality, and no one can substantially prove to the contrary.

I hesitate at being a party to any religious controversy, but I do feel it to be my duty to resent the insult that has been thrust upon the people of this section of the country by this cowardly attack upon one of the foremost citizens of our nation. I ask you, as the editor of your paper, to either assume the responsibility or place the responsibility for that article where it properly belongs. I not only brand the author of the article (I hope it is not you) as a cringing coward, but one who morally, spiritually and politically is unworthy of any consideration upon the part of any intelligent citizen of this country of the free.

Kindly give this letter space in the columns of your paper.

I will be pleased to discuss the question over my own signature, either with you, as the editor of the paper, or with the author of the article, independent of who or what he may be.

Trusting you will, in the spirit of fairness, give this space in your paper, and awaiting your answer as to same, I am,

REASON.

Mr. Lloyd Shaffer, of Carmel, W. Va., was in Oakland yesterday on business.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant,
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

THE SALOON AND THE ELECTION IN DISTRICT NO. 3

Voters to Decide Whether or Not Liquor Can Be Legally Sold Therein.

To the Editor of The Republican:

At the November election the saloon question will confront the voters in many sections of the country. In our own county in District No. 3 the voters will be called upon to either continue or put their stamp of disapproval on the legalized saloon, and from the present outlook it seems to indicate that the people will rise in righteous indignation and smite this baneful institution and place old Grantsville in line with her sister towns in this and other counties and states which have shaken off the chain of slavery and asserted their intelligent manhood and declare that the saloon shall no longer spread death, sorrow and shame throughout the land. We would appeal to every fair minded man to lay aside all prejudice and consider this great question impartially.

Let me ask you, Mr. Saloon-Keeper and your supporters, a few questions: What are you doing to improve your fellowmen? Can you claim to be a benefactor of your race? Are you helping your brother to a higher plane of life? Has the saloon ever accomplished any good in any commuity? Ah! the answer is such that you should hang your head in shame! We need not go to distant cities for proof against you, but go only to the cemeteries in your neighborhood and there will be recalled familiar faces who owe their downfall to your nefarious traffic—your traffic in human souls. Oh! if you will only recall some of the lamentable scenes of the past your heart should bleed if it is not as hard as stone.

We will not mince words; it will not pay. Let us be outspoken on this matter. Who was that young man and what was the cause of his untimely end who yielded up his life on one of the merchants porches in your town. Oh! we fear that some day you will stand before that Eternal Court, that Just Judge, that Highest and Final Tribunal, to answer for numerous crimes committed in other names.

Think of the ragged and hungry wives and children at home, in the cold of a wintry night, while you are taking the last penny from a poor broken husband or father and when you have crazed his mind with rum and he becomes disorderly you kick him out on the street, only to be taken in by some officer to spend the night in a gloomy cell, while his starving family is at home anxiously waiting his return.

How many blasted lives in your own town who would have been useful men had it not been for your business. Go and ask your neighbors who have suffered from rum but have not yet fallen and they will point to you as their chief enemy. Go and search out the cause for the murders in this county and the writing will appear in bold letters on the wall: Rum! Rum! Rum!

Go and ask that young man behind the prison bars, "what brought you here?" and the answer will come like the wail of a lost spirit; RUM! RUM RUM!

Go and ask the murderer who is about to be hurled into eternity by stern justice: "How came you here," and the answer will come like the dismal cry of a lost soul in hell: Rum! Rum! Rum! Go into the slums of our cities and inquire of the inmates what was the beginning of their degredation and the answer will come like the shriek of a perishing soul: Rum! Rum! Rum!

Mr. Saloon Keeper we are not opposed to you because your name is Smith, Jones or anything else, but because we do not believe it to be an honorable business to be engaged in. Come out from it and be men; we believe you have a conscience still. Let it assert itself. Oh! may you hear "your brothers blood crying unto you from the ground."

Voters of Grantsville and vicinity, rise in your might and shake off this leech. It is not the question of your right to take a drink of beer, but a question whether you should legalize this death dealing institution any longer. Stop and think for a moment: Is there anything uplifting in a saloon? what kind of language flows from it's door? the most obscene possible. Voter, would you want your son or daughter to be brought up in a bar room?

Voter, the saloon robs man of his money, his character and his health. Do you believe this? Can you not recall some example.

As you are your brother's keeper, it is your duty to put all things away that do not improve the moral welfare of the community.

Some will say if we vote the saloons out of our town right over the line others will continue to run. Never mind that, my friend, you do your duty here and the responsibility of other places will not rest with you. Let every voter ask himself these questions, and then go to the polls and vote, and if he votes for the saloon be ready to stand in part responsible for the crimes of the saloon.

GRANTSVILLE VOTER.

Resolutions of Respect

Adopted by the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church on the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Rebecca Townshend.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His wise providence to call from labor to reward our beloved and esteemed co-worker Mrs. Elizabeth Rebecca Townshend, thus taking from the circle of our Society one of our most faithful workers and wisest counsellors; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Divine Father who doeth all things well.

Second, That we feel in a deep sense our loss, and that we shall miss her pleasant smile and kindly greeting at our gatherings.

Third, That we extend to her children and loved ones the sympathy of our society and shall pray that the God of all Grace may soothe and comfort them.

Fourth, That with renewed determination we press on in the work which had ever been so dear to her heart and in which she had so faithfully wrought.

Fifth, That the Secretary of our society be requested to spread a copy of these resolutions on our records, and that the Oakland papers be asked to publish the same.

Respectfully submitted,
J. B. WORKMAN,
MRS. J. D. TAGGART,
L. THAYER WATERS,
Committee.

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$297,336 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured.		NONE
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers		373 66
Due from approved reserve agents.		48,061 10
Checks and other cash items		478 26
Notes of other National Banks		545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$19,881 95
Legal-tender notes	6,265 00	26,146 95
Redemption fund with U. S Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$561,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,061 32
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,969 01
Due to State Banks and Bankers	80 74
Individual deposits subject to check	213,020 28
Time certificates of deposit	201,828 94
Cashie 's checks outstanding	373 46
Total	$561,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Prof. J. C. Beahm, of Grantsville, was in Oakland yesterday on business.

Mr. Clarence V. Guard, of Friendsville, was in the city Monday on business.

Mrs. W. R. Offutt is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Humbird, in Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Beeghley, of Accident, were visitors to this office on last Saturday morning.

Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, spent a day or two in Oakland last week with his mother and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Hamill, of Upper Potomac, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with relatives.

Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, of Baltimore, spent Saturday in Oakland on business, returning to Baltimore the same night.

Miss Alice Hessen went to Grafton last Friday to visit her father, who recently suffered a second stroke of paralysis.

Mr. Jonas C. Beachy, of Bittinger, was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday, having come to town to consult his physician.

Walter, Hershman, of near Deer Park, will sell at public auction at his farm near that place on November 7th, personal property, consisting of wagons, hay, feed grain, etc.

Mrs. B. Frank Laughlin, of Kitzmiller, who was the guest for several days of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Loraditch at their home on Liberty street, left for her home Monday morning.

Rev. T. A. Watson, A. M., Field Secretary for the West Virginia Wesleyan College of Buckhannon, W. Va., will preach in St. Paul's M. E. church Sunday evening at 7.30.

Mrs. Belle Cropp left Oakland this morning for Richwood, W. Va., where she went to care for her son, Hosmer, who has been ill for several weeks with an attack of typhoid fever.

Messrs. A. F. George and Harvey J. Speicher, two of the County Committeemen, were in Oakland last Saturday arranging some campaign details with Col. A. G. Sturgiss, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Shaffer, of Wheeling, W. Va., arrived in Oakland last night and are the guests of relatives. Mr Shaffer will return to Wheeling tonight while Mrs. Shaffer will remain here a week or two.

Mr and Mrs. F. T. Peaslee, of Washington State, who are making an extended visit to relatives at and near Crellin, were in Oakland yesterday where Mr. Peaslee renewed many acquaintances of years gone by.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hammond went to Meyersdale, Pa., last Wednesday, where they attended the wedding of a relative. The former returned to Oakland Monday, Mrs. Hammond remaining there to visit friends for a short time.

Miss Lily Hagans, of Morgantown, was in Oakland and at the Park yesterday. At the latter place she purchased a lot and will erect a five room, modernly-constructed dwelling house, making the Park her future permanent residence.

Mr. Joseph Hostetler and wife, of Montana, who were on a visit of several weeks to friends in and about Accident, came to Oakland yesterday, accompanied by Mr. D. J. Bender, where they took the train for home, Mr. Bender returning to Accident this morning.

The cornerstone of the new Baptist church at Loch Lynn, opposite Mt. Lake Park, will be laid next Sunday, Oct. 25, at 2.30 p. m., by the Oakland Lodge, A. F. and A. M., with the impressive rites of the Masonic fraternity. A large crowd is expected to be present to witness the ceremony.

We mail THE REPUBLICAN today to every Republican voter in the county, many of whom are non-subscribers. We ask that after a careful perusal of its columns, if they think it worthy of their support, to send their names to this office as regular subscribers. The rate is only $1.25 per year.

We are mailing this week a sample copy of this paper to every Republican voter in the county. The paper contains the ballot to be voted on Tuesday, November 3rd, arranged as it will appear on the official ballots. It will repay every voter to give the published ballot a close perusal, thus lessening the chances of making an error when election day comes and the voter is called upon to mark his ballot.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

FOREST FIRES IN ALL DIRECTIONS

Resulting In Damage To Timber And Other Property.

For the past two or three weeks fires in the woods in all sections of Garrett county have been raging with unabated fury, destroying timber, fences, and in some cases getting into fields and burning them over, the dry condition of the earth and the parched grasses and stubble adding fuel to the flames.

Last Thursday afternoon a fire which had been burning for a day or two on the west slope of the hill back of the Oakland Hotel, was driven by a slight breeze which had sprung up, and in an incredably short time the flames overtopped the hill and were rushing downward on the north slope toward the hotel. An alarm was given and a large crowd of men and boys went to the spot and succeeded in staying the progress of the fire, thus saving the buildings.

On Thursday night fire entered a corn field belonging to Mr. Truman W. Casteel and burned a large quantity of corn in the shock.

West of town along the B. & O. railroad tracks the country has been burned over two or three times within the past three weeks, resulting in some damage to fences and timber.

As a result of the continued fires every morning a pall of fog and smoke has settled all over the country, making it impossible to see more than a few feet away. The smoke is very disagreeable, smarting one's eyes and making it difficult to breathe. The fog generally disappears by nine or ten o'clock and then the sun, obscured by the smoke, resembles a great ball of fire in the heavens.

Another result of the dry weather is the drying up of innumerable wells and springs. Of more than a dozen wells in one section of Oakland all are dry with the exception of one or two, and people are compelled to carry water for household use great distances.

The streams are in many cases as dry as they can be. The Yough was never known to be as low as it is now, while smaller streams which flowed into it are nothing more nor less than dry, barren, rocky beds.

Capt. James A. Hayden, of the United States Agricultural Department, returned to his home in Mountain Lake Park last Saturday from his trip of inspection through the lower end of Maryland. His report of crop conditions in all parts of the state indicate a prosperous year for the farmers and agriculturalists generally.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Furbee and daughter, who have been residing in Oakland for upwards of two years, left on Monday for their former home near Enterprise, W. Va. Mr. Furbee retains ownership of the Jamison property which he purchased when he moved to Oakland and has rented it to Mr. Norman R. Sanner, who expects to arrive here this week with his household goods.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HARRY CLAYTON SAUCER.

Died, on Sabbath, Oct. 11th, of pneumonia after an illness of two days at Crellin, Harry Clayton, the pretty and interesting little son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Saucer, aged 8 months and 27 days. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church, in the presence of a large audience. In the absence of their pastor Rev. E. Manges of St. Mark's Lutheran church, of Oakland, officiated.

MISS LAURA BRITT.

Died, at her home in Oakland Wednesday, October 21st, after an illness extending over more than a year of tuberculosis, Miss Laura Britt, aged a little more than thirty-five years. The deceased lived with her sister, Miss Bertha Britt, who tenderly cared for her through the long months of her suffering, showing a devotion rarely seen. The deceased was also a sister of Mrs. George Geissman, of Oakland. Her funeral will occurr tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock from St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, of which Miss Britt was a consistent member from early childhood. She was a good woman and will be greatly missed by her associates in the church and elsewhere.

KILLED IN KEYSER YARDS.

Harry Newman, Son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Newman, Met Untimely Death.

J. Harry Newman, aged nearly twenty-two years, son of Mr and Mrs. W. B. Newman, of Keyser, W. Va., formerly of near Hutton, this county, was instantly killed in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad yards at Keyser on Saturday afternoon by falling from a train and being crushed to death beneath the wheels of a car.

Mr. Newman was employed as a freight brakeman and was on his train just leaving the yards for the run to Grafton when he was seen to fall from the car and his death resulted as above stated.

His funeral took place at Terra Alta on Sunday afternoon, interment of the remains being made by the side of his sister, who died a year ago of typhoid fever.

The Republican for Job Work.

THE APPLE EXHIBIT.

Award Was Made Last Thursday By Senator Brown, Assisted By Mr. William Weber.

Last Thursday after this paper was printed Senator W. McCulloh Brown, who conducted the apple exhibit in Townshend's Hall on Alder street from Monday until Saturday evening, made the award of prizes, being assisted in the task by Mr. William Weber, President of the H. Weber & Sons Company, of Oakland, as follows:

FIRST PRIZE FOR GENERAL COLLECTION

William R. Mason, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 2, $5 in gold.

SECOND PRIZE

Ridder Brothers, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 2, $3.

Thomas E. Bishoff, Hoyes, 1st premium, Grimes Golden.

Ridder Brothers, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 2, 1st premium, York Imperial, and 2nd premium, Baldwin.

N. M. Fazenbaker, Bond, 2nd premium, York Imperial.

Rolla White, Oakland, 2nd premium, Pumpkin Sweet.

J. Arthur Dewitt, Hoyes, 2nd premium, York Stripe.

C. M. Miller, Swanton, 1st premium, R. I. Greening.

John Hughes, Oakland, 2nd premium, Alexander.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, 2nd premium, Northern Spy.

Jesse Warnick, New Germany, 1st premium, English Rambo.

William R. Mason, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 2, 1st premium, Sweet Russet, and 2nd premium, Mother.

James H. Wilson, Kitzmillerville, 1st premium, Northern Spy.

U. D. Yoder, Grantsville, 1st premium, Mother.

Daniel Wilson, Kitzmillerville, 1st premium, Baldwin.

Abe Moon, Gormania, W. Va., 1st premium, 20 Ounce.

George Porter, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 1, 2nd premium, Ewalt.

Nicholas Merrill, Oakland, 2nd premium, Smokehouse, and 2nd premium, Starke.

J. M. Lowdermilk, Hoyes, 2nd premium, Wolf River.

P. P. Gortner, Oakland, R. F. D. No. 1, 1st premium, Wolf River.

On Saturday night Senator Brown completed packing the apples which had been on exhibition and forwarded them by express to Baltimore, where they were placed in cold storage to be preserved until the December meeting of the State Horticultural Society, when they will be entered in competition with exhibits from other sections of the state.

Senator Brown requests this paper to state that additional specimens to be entered at the State Society meeting may be sent to him at Oakland, from which point they will be forwarded to Baltimore and cared for until the meeting in December. He is extremely anxious that Garrett county make as good showing as possible and that as many prizes be carried off this year as were won by the local people two years ago when nearly every premium offered came to Garrett county.

K. OF P. MEETING A BIG AFFAIR.

Over A Thousand People in Parade at Frostburg Yesterday.

Yesterday was a gala day among the Knights of Pythias in District No. 1 of Maryland, comprising Allegany and Garrett counties. The annual district meeting was held in Frostburg. The exercises began at two o'clock in the afternoon with a big conclave and public meeting in Frostburg Opera House at which there were many brave Knights and their ladies as well as a large number of friends who are not members of the order. Addresses were made by some of the most prominent members of the order, including Grand Chancellor Olin Bryan, of Baltimore.

At two o'clock a grand parade of the Knights of Pythias, Pythian Sisters and Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, participated in by a thousand or more persons, marched over several of the principal streets of the town, giving a grand spectacular view of the strength of the great brotherhood in this section.

The parade was followed by a splendid banquet in the upper room in the Frostburg Opera House, which was one of the most delightful affairs of the kind ever held in that section. Nearly a thousand persons sat around the tables and enjoyed a feast of good things of which there was an abundant supply. The ladies of the Pythian Sisters did the honors on this occasion.

The event of the day was the conferring of degrees upon a large class of candidates which took place at 8 o'clock. The degree work was performed by the very efficient degree team from the Oakland, Garrett county, lodge.

This team, probably one of the best in all the order, made a lasting impression upon the minds of the candidates and all others who witnessed their work, and gave many Knights a more vivid idea of the great Pythian brotherhood.

The splendid appearance of the Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias on parade invited most favorable comment from spectators all along the line of march.

There were visitors from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and other counties in this state.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

The CLOAKS and SUITS we are showing this season at

$5.50 TO $30.00

are far superior to any previous effort.

See this line before you buy and be convinced that the

Fit and Style

you get here is what you desire.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

VACANT DWELLING BURNED.

House Owned by William Broderick Consumed Monday Afternoon.

Early Monday afternoon the dwelling house owned by William Broderick, located on Alder street at the corner of Sixth, known as the Cinnamon property, was entirely consumed by fire, the flames originating in the attic of the back wing of the building, catching, presumably, from a defective flue.

The house had been vacant for several months, the family having moved to another house nearby. On Monday a fire had been kindled in a cook stove by some member of the family and preparations made to do some laundry work. While absent from the building the fire occurred and before the alarm had been given and people arrived at the scene the flames had made such headway as to make it impossible to save the structure. Effective work, however, was done in keeping the fire confined to the one building.

There was an insurance of $1000 on the house, which will cover the loss.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m. and 7.3 p. m.

L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Sunday school at 2.15 p. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Ferndale—Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Loch Lynn—No preaching as the cornerstone of the new church will be laid at 2.30 p. m.
Revival services will continue throughout the week at Deer Park.
Everybody invited to attend.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

Ladies' Exchange.

Beginning on Saturday afternoon next at 2 oclock and continuing each Saturday afternoon thereafter during the present month, the ladies of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will conduct an exchange at the furniture store of Mr. D. E. Bolden on Second street. Homemade bread, pies, cakes, confections and other articles will be on sale. The proceeds will be used for church and charitable purposes. A liberal patronage is solicited.

Agricultural Fair At Swanton On Saturday.

Swanton Grange will have its Fair as stated in THE REPUBLICAN two weeks since, on Saturday, 24th inst. Prof. T. C. Atkeson, the Overseer of the National Grange, who is an able speaker, will make two addresses one at 10 a. m., and one at 2 p. m. A good literary program has been arranged for the evening, beginning at 7:30, consisting of songs, addresses, recitations and select readings. This part of the program will be held in May's Hall. The Agricultural Exhibit will be held in May's store room, Mr. G. S. Hamill having kindly given us the use of it for that purpose. Admission to all will be free. Everybody will be welcome.

A. F. GEORGE, Lecturer of Grange.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

List of Nominations Certified to the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland.

OAKLAND, MARYLAND, October 19th, 1908.

In compliance with the provisions of Section 47 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, we do hereby certify that the following are the names and descriptions of the candidates of the different parties whose certificates of nomination have been duly filed with us and for whom the voters of Garrett County may vote at the election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, November 3rd, 1908:

For President and Vice-President of the United States.
WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. JOHN W. KERN.	DEMOCRATIC
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
At Large—JAMES ENOS RAY, JR., Chillum, Prince George's County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
At Large—JAMES W. DENNY. Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
1st District—EDWIN H. BROWN, Jr., Centreville, Queen Anne's County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
2nd District—JOHN F. WILLIAMS Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
3rd District—HAMPSON H. BEIDLER, Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
4th District—JOHN CHARLES LINTHICUM Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
5th District—WILLIAM H. HELLEN. Solomon's, Calvert County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
6th District—CHARLES H. CONLEY. Adamstown, Frederick County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE
DAVID J. LEWIS Allegany County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC
For President and Vice-President of the United States.
EUGENE W. CHAFIN AARON S. WATKINS	PROHIBITION
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
At Large—JOSHUA LEVERING, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION
At Large—WILLIAM KLEINLE, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION
1st District—JAMES T. ANTHONY, Chestertown, Queen Anne's County, Md.	PROHIBITION
2nd District—WILLIAM S. NORRIS, Govans, Baltimore County, Md.	PROHIBITION
3rd District—JAMES R. WHITEHURST, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION
4th District—WILLIAM GISRIEL, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION

For President and Vice-President of the United States.
WILLIAM H. TAFT. JAMES S. SHERMAN.	REPUBLICAN
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
At Large—JOHN A. ROBENSON. Sharon, Harford County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
At Large—ALBERT G. TOWERS. Denton, Caroline County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
1st District—ROBERT S. ADKINS. Berlin, Worcester County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
2nd District—LUTHER KEMP. Uniontown, Carroll County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
3d District—JOSEPH BROOKS. Baltimore, Md	REPUBLICAN
4th District—MILLARD F. BURGESS. Baltimore, Md.	REPUBLICAN
5th District—J. WEBB THOMAS. Baltimore, Md.	REPUBLICAN
6th District—MOSES BOMBERGER. Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States from the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE
GEORGE A. PEARRE. Allegany County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
For President and Vice-President of the United States.
THOMAS L. HISGEN. JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.	INDEPENDENCE
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
CHAS. A. BRISCOE. Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
EDWARD H. TRAINOR. Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
CHARLES H. WINKLEMAN. Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
JOHN HENRY GOUDY. Salisbury, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
THEODORE A. PAYSLEITNER. Mt. Washington, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
JOSEPH SIR. Baltimore	INDEPENDENCE

In compliance with Chapter 649 of the Laws of Maryland, January Session, 1908, the following proposition will be submitted to the voters of District No. 3 of Garrett County, Maryland:

SHALL THIS DISTRICT BECOME "ANTI-SALOON TERRITORY." VOTE FOR ONE.
FOR PROPOSITION

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and wnen ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber AND Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing, which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Printing Departm't
ELKTON, MARYLAND.

VOTE FOR ONE

INDEPENDENCE	PROHIBITION	FOR PROPOSITION
INDEPENDENCE	PROHIBITION

3rd District—JAMES R. WHITEHURST, Baltimore, Md. — THEODORE A. PAYSLEITNER, Mt. Washington, Md.
4th District—WILLIAM GSRIEL, Baltimore, Md. — JOSEPH SIR, Baltimore

HUNTING THE MOUNTAIN SHEEP

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1885, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

BIG-HORN, more commonly known as mountain sheep, are extremely wary and cautious animals, and are plentiful in but few places. This is rather surprising, for they seem to be fairly prolific (although not as much so as deer and antelope), and comparatively few are killed by the hunters.

In size the big-horn comes next to buffalo and elk, averaging larger than the black-tail deer, while an old ram will sometimes be almost as heavy as a small cow elk. In his movements he is not light and graceful like the prong-horn and other antelopes, his marvellous agility seeming rather to proceed from sturdy strength and wonderful command over iron sinews and muscles. The huge horns are carried proudly erect by the massive neck; every motion of the body is made with perfect poise; and there seems to be no ground so difficult that the big-horn cannot cross it. There is probably no animal in the world his superior in climbing; and his only equals are the other species of mountain sheep and the ibexes. No matter how sheer the cliff, if there are ever so tiny cracks or breaks in the surface, the big-horn will bound up or down it with wonderful ease and seeming absence of effort. The perpendicular bounds it can make are truly startling—in strong contrast with its distant relative the prong-horn which can leap almost any level jump, but seems unable to clear the smallest height. In descending a sheer wall of rock the big-horn holds all four feet together and goes down in long jumps, bounding off the surface almost like a rubber ball every time he strikes it. The way that one will vanish over the roughest and most broken ground is a perpetual surprise to any one that has hunted them; and the ewes are quite as skilful as the rams, while even the very young lambs seem almost as well able to climb, and certainly follow wherever their elders lead.

To him the barren wastes of the Bad Lands offer a most attractive home; yet to other living creatures they are at all times as grimly desolate and forbidding as any spot on earth can be; at all seasons they seem hostile to every form of life.

Occasionally the big-horn come down into the valleys or along the grassy slopes to feed, but this is not often, and in such cases every member of the band is always keeping the sharpest look-out, and at the slightest alarm they beat a retreat to their broken fastnesses. At night-time or in the early morning they come down to drink at the small pools or springs, but move off the instant they have satisfied their thirst. As a rule, they spend their time among the rocks and rough ground, and it is in these places that they must be hunted. In color they harmonize curiously with the grayish or yellowish brown of the ground on which they are found, and it is often very difficult to make them out when lying motionless on a ledge of rock.

Up the slippery ice-covered buttes we clambered.

Time and again they will be mistaken for boulders, and, on the other hand, I have more than once stalked up to masses of sandstone that I have mistaken for sheep.

When lying down the big-horn can thus scan everything below it; and both while feeding and resting it invariably keeps the sharpest possible look-out for all danger from beneath, and this trait makes it needful for the hunter to always keep on the highest ground and try to come on it from above.

As far as lay in us, on our first day's hunt we paid proper heed to all the rules of hunting-craft; but without success. Up the slippery, ice-covered buttes we clambered, clinging to the rocks, and slowly working our way across the faces of the cliffs, or cautiously creeping along the narrow ledges, peering over every crest long and carefully, and from the peaks scanning the ground all about with the field-glasses. But we saw no sheep, and but little sign of them.

Finally we struck the head of a long, winding valley with a smooth bottom, and after cantering down it four or five miles, came to the river, just after the cold, pale-red sun had sunk behind the line of hills ahead of us. Our horses were sharp shod, and crossed the ice without difficulty; and in a grove of leafless cotton-woods, on the opposite side, we found the hut for which we had been making, the cowboy already inside with the fire started. Throughout the night the temperature sank lower and lower, and it was impossible to keep the crazy old hut anywhere near freezing-point; the wind whistled through the chinks and crannies of the logs, and, after a short and by no means elaborate supper, we were glad to cower down with our great fur coats still on, under the pile of buffalo robes and bear skins. My sleeping-bag came in very handily, and kept me as warm as possible, in spite of the bitter frost.

We were up and had taken breakfast next morning by the time the first streak of dawn had dimmed the brilliancy of the stars, and immediately afterwards strode off on foot, as we had been hampered by the horses on the day before. This day, though the weather had grown even colder, we did not feel it, for we walked all the while with a quick pace, and the climbing was very hard work. The shoulders and ledges of the cliffs had become round and slippery with the ice, and it was no easy task to move up and along them, clutching the gun in one hand, and grasping each little projection with the other.

When on the way back to camp, where the buttes rose highest and steepest, we came upon fresh tracks, but as it was then late in the afternoon, did not try to follow them that day. When near the hut I killed a sharptail for supper, making rather a neat shot, the bird being eighty yards off. The night was even colder than the preceding one, and all signs told us that we would soon have a change for the worse in the weather, which made me doubly anxious to get a sheep before the storm struck us. We determined that next morning we would take the horses and make a quick push for the chain of high buttes where we had seen the fresh tracks, and hunt them through with thorough care.

We started in the cold gray of the morning and pricked rapidly off over the frozen plain, columns of white steam rising from the nostrils of the galloping horses. When we reached the foot of the hills where we intended to hunt, and had tethered the horses, the sun had already risen, but it was evident that the clear weather of a fortnight past was over. The air was thick and hazy, and away off in the northwest a towering mass of grayish white clouds looked like a weather-breeder; every thing boded a storm at no distant date. The country over which we now hunted was wilder and more mountainous than any we had yet struck. High, sharp peaks and ridges broke off abruptly into narrow gorges and deep ravines; they were bare of all but the scantiest vegetation, save on some of the sheltered sides where grew groves of dark pines, now laden down with feathery snow. The climbing was as hard as ever. At first we went straight up the side of the tallest peak, and then along the knife-like ridge which joined it with the next. The ice made the footing very slippery as we stepped along the ledges or crawled round the jutting shoulders, and we had to look carefully for our footholds; while in the cold, thin air every quick burst we made up a steep hill caused us to pant for breath. We had gone but a little way before we saw fresh signs of the animals we were after, but it was some time before we came upon the quarry itself.

We left the high ground and descending into a narrow chasm walked along its bottom, which was but a couple of feet wide, while the sides rose up from it at an acute angle. After following this for a few hundred yards, we turned a sharp corner, and shortly afterward our eyes were caught by some grains of fresh earth lying on the snow in front of our feet. On the sides, some feet above our heads, were marks in the snow which a moment's glance showed us had been made by a couple of mountain sheep that had come down one side of the gorge and had leaped across to the other, their sharp toes going through the thin snow and displacing the earth that had fallen to the bottom. The tracks had evidently been made just before we rounded the corner, and as we had been advancing noiselessly on the snow with the wind in our favor, we knew that the animals could have no suspicion of our presence. They had gone up the cliff on our right, but as that on our left was much lower, and running for some distance parallel to the other, we concluded that by running along its top we would be most certain to get a good shot. Clambering instantly up the steep side, digging my hands and feet into the loose snow, and grasping at every little rock or frozen projection, I reached the top; and then ran forward along the ridge a few paces, crouching behind the masses of queerly-shaped sandstone; and saw, about ninety yards off across the ravine, a couple of mountain rams. The one with the largest horns was broadside toward me, his sturdy, massive form outlined clearly against the sky, as he stood on the crest of the ridge. I dropped on my knee, raising the rifle as I did so; for a second he did not quite make me out, turning his head half round to look. I held the sight fairly on the point just behind his shoulder and pulled the trigger.

At the report he staggered and pitched forward, but recovered himself and crossed over the ridge out of sight. We jumped and slid down into the ravine again, and clambered up the opposite side as fast as our lungs and slippery ice would let us; then taking the trail of the wounded ram we trotted along. We had not far to go; for, as I expected, we found him lying on his side a couple of hundred yards beyond the ridge, his eyes already glazed in death. The bullet had gone in behind the shoulder and ranged clean through his body crosswise, going a little forward; no animal less tough than a mountain ram could have gone any distance at all with such a wound. He had most obligingly run round to a part of the hill where we could bring up one of the horses without very much difficulty. Accordingly I brought up old Manitou, who can carry any thing and has no fear, and the big-horn was soon strapped across his back. It was a fine ram, with perfectly-shaped but not very large horns.

We found him lying on his side.

The other ram, two years old, with small horns, had bounded over the ridge before I could get a shot at him; we followed his trail for half a mile, but as he showed no signs of halting and we were anxious to get home we then gave up the pursuit.

It was still early in the day, and we made up our minds to push back for the home ranch, as we did not wish to be caught out in a long storm. The lowering sky was already overcast by a mass of leaden-gray clouds; and it was evident that we had no time to lose. In a little over an hour we were back at the log camp, where the ram was shifted from Manitou's back to the buckboard. A very few minutes sufficed to pack up our bedding and provisions, and we started home. Merrifield and I rode on ahead, not sparing the horses; but before we got home the storm had burst, and a furious blizzard blew in our teeth as we galloped along the last mile of the river bottom, before coming to the home ranch house; and as we warmed our stiffened limbs before the log fire, I congratulated myself upon the successful outcome of what I knew would be the last hunting trip I should take during that season.

The death of this ram was accomplished without calling for any very good shooting on our part. He was standing still, less than a hundred yards off, when the shot was fired; and we came across him so close merely by accident. Still, we fairly deserved our luck, for we had hunted with the most patient and painstaking care from dawn till nightfall for the better part of three days, spending most of the time in climbing at a smart rate of speed up sheer cliffs and over rough and slippery ground. Still-hunting the big-horn is always a toilsome and laborious task, and the very bitter weather during which we had been out had not lessened the difficulty of the work, though in the cold it was much less exhausting than it would have been to have hunted across the same ground in summer. No other kind of hunting does as much to bring out the good qualities, both moral and physical, of the sportsmen who follow it. If a man keeps at it, it is bound to make him both hardy and resolute; to strengthen his muscles and fill out his lungs.

Mountain mutton is in the fall the most delicious eating furnished by any game animal. Nothing else compares with it for juiciness, tenderness, and flavor; but at all other times of the year it is tough, stringy, and worthless.

ITALIAN WAS FATALLY INJURED.

Struck by Train Yesterday and Lived for More Than a Hour with Broken Neck.

An Italian named Michelangelo Sangi, a member of the track repair crew working at Fifty-eight cut, six miles west of Oakland, was struck by train No. 72 yesterday afternoon, and so badly injured that he died about an hour afterward, his death occurring in the railroad station in Oakland, having been brought here by the train that struck him.

The man was crossing the track and was caught by the train, his body was hurled into the air, and when he was picked up an investigation of his injuries revealed the fact that his neck was broken and his skull crushed. His body was prepared for burial at the undertaking rooms of D. E. Bolden in Oakland and the interment will be made either today or tomorrow.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Mr. Shirk, of Lancaster, Pa., is looking after his lumber interests.

Mr. Bert Deharen has returned from Morgantown and intends opening a barber shop and pool room.

Mr. Semmes Hamill, who has been spending a few days in our town, returned to Oakland this morning.

Mrs. Thompson and little granddaughter of Ursina, Pa., has been visiting Mrs. Ward Friend.

Mrs. Gray, who has been very ill for the past week was seen on our streets yesterday.

Mr. Willy has been shaking hands with his many friends here this week.

Dr. Mason, who was severely injured in a runaway about three weeks ago, is much improved at this writing.

BITTINGER.

Many lawless persons are suspected of being guilty of kindling forest fires in this section, which is doing much damage to timber and threatening farm buildings.

Prof. E. A. Browning, of Oakland, visited our public school last Monday afternoon and our people are much disappointed at his refusal to hear a request that an assistant teacher be appointed for the school as all agree that the school deserves an additional teacher in order to accomplish a good year's work.

Messrs. Urner and Christian Beachy spent part of last week on the South Branch of the Potomac river, near Romney, W. Va., with a view to purchasing a farm in that locality.

Miss Vernie Shrock, teacher in the Beachy school, attended the local teachers' institute at Grantsville last Saturday.

The Democrats of this district have selected Messrs. C. E. Ellithorp and H. B. Wiley as candidates for appointment as district road supervisor.

Attorney E. H. Sinceil and wife, of Oakland, passed through this village one day last week.

O. C. Buckle is enlarging his storeroom in order to accommodate his rapidly growing business.

Two balloons, Nos. 2 and 3, sent out by the U. S. Weather Bureau, equipped with instruments for recording atmospheric conditions, came to earth near here one day last week and were found by Messrs. Ira Durst and Christian Shrock.

HUTTON.

Chicken thieves are again prevalent.

Miss Mary Salzman, of the Oakland High School, spent Sunday here with her parents.

William O'Conner, of the Tioga Tanning Co., was in town Sunday, returning to Tioga, Pa., on No. 55.

Forest fires have done considerable damage in this vicinity during the past ten days by destroying fences, hay stacks, etc.

Jas. Willison and family, of Oakland, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thomas Sunday.

It is rumored that the mines at Corinth have been leased by former Supt. Jordan and O. C. Crane and will soon again be in operation.

Several from this place attended the funeral of Harry Newman at Terra Alta on Sunday.

Marshall Collier and family, of Clifton Mills, W. Va., have been visiting Mrs. Collier's parents near here—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shafer—after an absence of thirteen years.

Harold Glover, of Keyser, was visiting his home here Sunday.

SWANTON.

AND RANDON NOTES.

Last Saturday evening, October 16th, 1908, marked the planting of another mile-stone in the better march of Swanton's progress. Many public spirited men and enterprising young ladies gathered in May's Hall and heartily participated in the advertised proceedings and pleasures of the evening.

Tables had been arranged over the floor of the hall and from the tables were served oysters, salads, cake, ice-cream, nuts, fruits and other luxuries.

The occasion was a very delightful one and the undertaking a decided success. And, that we may not lapse too precipitously into the tedium of an old monotomy, these same parties will, next Friday evening, 23rd inst., produce a second entertainment with an altered programme of new attractions. All this in Swanton, please remember.

Talking about Swanton, did you see the other day that a Swanton fellow in a brisk competitive rivalry won the stake? In a country contest for a production of the best "Green" Swanton distanced all competitors and captured the "fruitful" prize without a word of challenge.

And, sir Knight of the Quill, are you aware that, five days in each week, right under your editorial nose, occurs a picture beautiful to behold and calculated to survive as a pleasure in the memory? Put down the pen and take a walk of less than three minute and be convinced. You will find it precisely at the noon hour before the portal of the Public School Building. Stand there just at that minute one day last week, to the marshal raps of the drum, this writer saw the head of an orderly column of pupils stepping with the precision of military drill in double file in a march to the pavement, where one half turned quietly to the right and the other half in like manner to the left, each division moving on without jam, tumult or confusion. As the well formed ranks passed in exit a careful count showed two hundred and twelve pupils to be in line, and it was said one class had been dismissed some minutes in advance. The beat of the drum, the foot-fall in time, the bright young faces and strict observance of order combined in the creation of a spectacle bevond any praise of ours.

RELLIM.

FIKE.

Some of the farmers have finished husking corn.

Mr. W. H. Thomas made a trip to Somerset, Pa., last week.

Elder S. C. Umbel preached at this place last Sunday.

Miss Mary C. Barnthouse and brother, Quinter, of Uniontown, Pa., were visiting friends and relatives in this section last week.

Mr. Chas. A. Fike and family, of Braddock, Pa., are in this vicinity.

The school at this place has now an enrollment of thirty-four pupils.

The Farmers Telephone Co. has cut it's wires loose from the Connecting Co. and is having quite a time changing wires at different points.

Mr. Isaiah Umbel was at Friendsville last week.

Mr. John S. Fike was in Friendsville a few days ago.

CARTER.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Many changes have taken place at the Park since we last reported.

Our summer visitors have all gone to their winter homes with the exception of the Ruhls, Mr. and Mrs. Winchell, Mr. and Mrs. Harmison, Mrs. Annan and daughter, of St. Louis; Mrs. Bussell and daughters, Mr and Mrs. W. C. Dunnington and daughter and Miss S. C. Harris.

The Ladies Civic Club have made improvements at the bowling alley by the erection of an ornamental open fire place and the planting of trees and rododrendon about their grounds; they have also planted many trees along the walks and drives throughout the park.

There has been a change of pastors in this circuit. Rev. E. J. Westfall, who has so acceptably served this charge for the past two years, going to St. Mary, in the Wheeling District, and Rev. J. O Bolton, from the Zane Street church, Wheeling, coming to this charge. The membership here was loth to give up Bro. Westfall, but are pleased to have Bro. Bolton come in his stead. Bro. Westfall and family left here this morning and Brother Bolton and family will arrive the last of this week.

Rev. Mr. Reed and family have movee into the Binkley cottage on E street.

Our postmaster, Rev. L. A. Rudisill, contemplates taking apartments in Loch Lynn for the winter in order to be near the postoffice.

Mrs. P. T. Garthright is visiting the family of Charles May in Hagerstown.

Mrs. F. P. Arnold is visiting relatives and friends in West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Preaching in the M. E. church Sunday morning at 11.00 o'clock, by the new pastor, Rev. J. O. Bolton.

Supt. W. W. Davis was in Baltimore and Philadelphia this week to examine different devices for the rapid cutting and loading ice at the lake.

K. of G. E. Social.

The members of Olive Branch Castle, No. 9, K. G. E., are requested and invited, with their families, to a social and entertainment at the Castle room, Monday evening, Oct. 26th, 1908.

Committee.

Colts Bring Big Price.

Last Thursday Mr. H. C. Hostetler, of near Oakland, disposed of a pair of ten-months old sorrel colts to a Pennsylvania horse dealer, receiving for the animals the sum of $330. Mr. Hostetler raised the colts from a pair of mares he owns and the price received by him should be an incentive to other horse breeders to increase the quality of their stock. The colts weighed in the neighborhood of a thousand pounds each and were delivered to the purchaser at Meyersdale, Pa., by Mr. Hostetler, who drove there, accompanied by his family, on last Thursday.

Call for Your Letters.

William Bell, Mrs. J. Durst, Mrs. Harriet C. Lincoln, David Mossy, Mrs. Mary Pope, Miss Addie Reagan, E. H. Simmons.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 22, 1908.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Wednesday, Nov. 4th, 1908,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

SUPERVISORS NOTICE OF ELECTION.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 19, 1908.

Notice is hereby given to the Judges and Clerks of Election and to the qualified voters of Garrett county, Maryland, that in accordance with the provisions of Article XXXIII of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, passed at the January session, 1896, and amended by the Acts of 1900, 1901, 1902, 1904, 1906 and 1908, an election will be held in the several districts of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding elections and hereinafter set forth, on

TUESDAY, The 3rd day of November, 1908

for the purpose of balloting for—

Eight Electors of President and Vice President of the United States and

One person for member of the House of Representatives of the United States in the Sixty-first Congress from the Sixth Congressional District of the State of Maryland.

Also for or against the following proposition to apply only to District No. 3:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to a petition filed by certain qualified voters of the Third Election District of Garrett County, in accordance with Chapter 649, of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland for 1908, that at the Election to be held on the proposition "Shall District No. 3 of Garrett County, Maryland, Become Anti Saloon Territory," will appear on the ballots for said District No. 3.

Tuesday, the 3rd day of November, 1908

The polls of said election will be opened in each and every Election District of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding the polls, at 8 o'clock a. m. and will be closed at the hour of 6 o'clock p. m. when the ballots shall be counted according to law.

For the information of all persons concerned the following Act of the Legislature, passed March 24, 1865, is published:

CHAPTER 161.

AN ACT prohibiting the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of election.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall not be lawful for the keeper of any hotel tavern, store, drinking establishment, or any other place where liquors are sold, or for any person or persons, directly or indirectly, to sell, barter, give or dispose of any spirituous or fermented liquors, ale, beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind on the day of the election hereafter to be held in the several counties of the State.

SEC. 2. And be it enacted, That any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be liable to indictment by the Grand Jury of the county where the offense is committed and shall, upon conviction by a Judge of any Circuit Court of the State, be fined a sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense—one half the fine shall be paid to the informer, the other half to the County Commissioners for the use of public roads.

And the places of election in the several Election Districts of said Garrett county will be as follows:

Election District Number One—Swanton.

In the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

In the Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

In old Postoffice building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

In Postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

In the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

In the Election Building in the village of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

In the Martin Store House, corner Third and Oak streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

In the Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

At the building of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

In the building owned by Chas. R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

At the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

In the G. W. Engle building in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

In the Paul Shultz building in the town of Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

In the office of the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the town of Oakland.

By order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

D. M. MASON, Pres.,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Jacob S. Miller, Mortgagee, vs. C. J. Yoder and wife.

No. 1565 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21th day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 18th day of November, 1908; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 14th day of November, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $3200.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Order of Publication.

Alice Armstrong vs. John Armstrong.

No. 1572 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree, a vinculo matrimonii, the plaintiff from the defendent.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married by the Rev. Harris, in Tucker county, West Virginia, at Easter, 1895, and that they resided together in the State of West Virginia, until the month of March, 1908, and that though the conduct of plaintiff toward the said John Armstrong, her husband, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said John Armstrong, in the month of March, 1908, without just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted her, while they were living in Nicholas county, West Virginia, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation, and that immediately after such abandonment and desertion, the plaintiff removed to Garrett county, Maryland, where she has since made her home and supported herself and three children by manual labor, and the bill further states that the plaintiff and defendant have had three children born to them from said marriage, the oldest, Mary A., now past sixteen years of age; Charles, past thirteen years of age, and Sarah J., now past ten years of age, the custody of which youngest child the plaintiff prays may be awarded to her. The bill then prays that the plaintiff may be divorced, a vinculo matrimonii, from the said defendant, John Armstrong, for the custody of said youngest child of the plaintiff, and for general relief, and an order of publication against the defendant, who is alleged to be a non-resident of the State of Maryladd.

It is thereupon, this 22nd day of October 1908, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of November, 1908, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of December, 1908, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy, test: E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

FOR BABY.

We have the finest stock of baby fixings it's possible to get. Sweet pure soaps—soft little brushes to make the tender skin firm and pink—soothing powder-medicines for his little aches—and mercy me—sponges, big and spongy for his bath. Good things for mama's baby; good price for mama's purse

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
OAKLAND, MD.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. Telephone Comp'y

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

JOHN W. BOYCE,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 30th day of September, 1908.

JOHN T. BOYCE,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller Md.

Maryland Agricultural College.

College Park, Maryland.

FIFTY SECOND YEAR OPENS SEP. 15 AND 16 FOR EXAMINATIONS.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY
Six Courses of Instruction
Leading to the Professional Degree of "B. S."

Agricultural. Civil Engineering.
Mechanical. Horticultural.
Scientific. Chemical.

Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

THE DEMAND OF THE AGE IS TRAINED MEN FOR LIFE'S ACTIVITIES.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements; bathrooms, steam heat and electric lights.

New buildings with modern improvements. Location unsurpassed for health. Tuition books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in annual charge of $150 quarterly payable in advance. Sanitarium for isolation of contagious diseases; resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to short course of ten weeks in agriculture.

Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student. Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM FRUSH,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of October, 1908.

JOHN W. FRUSH,
Administrator,
R. F. D., Oakland, Md.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said new road to begin at a point on the county road leading from Thayersville to Altamont, near the residence of Solomon Hague, running between the lands of Henry Myers, S. O. Clark, Thomas Garrett, Abel Dewitt, Martin Filsinger and Mrs. E. Fundenberg to intersect the Deer Park road at a point near Mrs. Fundenberg's farm, to extend a distance of about one and one-half miles, which is now a private road but used by the public, and examine whether said road shall be located as a county road, will meet on the 5th day of November, 1908 for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience recuires the said road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

ANDREW SHARTZER,
JOHN W. HANEY,
P. J. LOHR,
Examiners.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF Valuable Coal SURFACE AND Mining Rights

In Garrett County, Maryland,
Near Henry, West Va.

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December Term, 1908, of said Court, and to the undersigned Sheriff directed, at the suit of Charles D. Gillaspie against Edward R. Pence, I did seize and take into execution, on the 29th day of September, 1908, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, the following property, situate, lying and being in Garrett County, Maryland, near Henry, West Virginia.

1. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying all that part of the tract of land called "Elk Garden," situate, lying and being in Garrett County and State of Maryland, contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two Birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and also at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with the 12th, 13th and 14th lines of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," South 73 degrees West, 315 perches; North 32 degrees West, 110 perches to a stone; North 53 degrees East, 270 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," then crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stone pile and stake, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 315 acres.

2. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to all that part of the surface of the said tract of land called "Elk Garden" contained within the following metes and bounds, courses and distances, to-wit: Beginning for the same at two birches growing from one root, and a spruce pine, standing at the end of the 6th line of a tract of land called "Mount Pisgah," and at the end of the 11th line of the whole tract called "Elk Garden," and running thence with part of the 12th line of said whole tract, South 73 degrees West, 65½ perches to a stone; thence North 37½ degrees West, 198 perches to a stone standing in the 14th line of said whole tract, thence with part of said 14th line, North 53 degrees East, 48 perches to a stone standing at the end of the 14th line of "Elk Garden," thence crossing said tract, South 58 degrees East, 171 perches to a stake and stone pile, thence due South, 76 perches to the beginning, containing 190 acres.

3. All the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence, in and to the right to use, in connection with a like use by a certain Ada A. V. Halterman, her heirs and assigns, of the water from a spring upon the land of the said Ada A. V. Halterman, adjoining the above described part of "Elk Garden," and to lay a pipe or pipes from said spring or from a reservoir to be built near said spring, and to use and employ the said water in business, the property, rights, &c., siezed, taken into execution and above described being the same undivided one third interest in and to the same which were conveyed to the said Edward R. Pence by A. A. V. Halterman and husband, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 47, folio 142 &c., one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland, and I hereby give notice that I will on

FRIDAY,

the 23d Day of October, 1908

at the hour of 11 o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, offer and sell at public auction to the highest responsible bidder, all of the undivided one-third interest of the said Edward R. Pence in and to the property above described and conveyed by the aforesaid deed.

Said property lies in District No. 8, of Garrett County, Maryland, and will be sold to satisfy said execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Sheriff of Garrett County, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Charles E. M. Hilleary, vs. Joseph Thompson and wife

No. 1562 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered, this 1st day of October 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the Coal franchises, rights, and privileges made and reported by Chas. E. M. Hilleary, Mortgagee, in the above entitled cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 6th day of November, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $24,100.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

At Large—WILLIAM KLEINLE, Baltimore, Md.

1st District—JAMES T. ANTHONY, Chestertown, Queen Anne's County, Md.

2nd District—WILLIAM S. NORRIS, Govans, Baltimore County, Md.

3rd District—JAMES R. WHITEHURST, Baltimore, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1908. NUMBER 35

Valiant Champions of Congressman George A. Pearre

HOW TO VOTE.

To the Republicans of Garrett County:

Election day will be Tuesday, November 3.d. The polls will be open at 8 o'clock a. m. and close at 6 o'clock p. m.

It is our hope that every regis'ered Republican will go to the polls as early as he can and vote.

See that the ballot given you has endorsed upon it the initials of the judge who gave it out.

See that the judge who gives you the ballot calls out your name and residence in a distinct voice.

Vote the ticket by making a cross (X) mark in the space provided therefor to the right of and opposite the names of Taft and Sherman; and also by making a cross (X) mark in the square to the right of and opposite name of the Republican candidate for Congress. These two marks are all that are required to carry the whole Republican ticket in the county.

Do not make any other mark whatever on the ballot.

Any mark whatever on the ballot except the cross (X) mark, will cause the ballot to be rejected.

Do not make a dot or a circle or any other mark but a cross (X) mark in the square.

If you mark any square on your ballot with any kind of a mark other than the cross (X) mark your ballot will not be counted.

Be sure not to deface or tear your ballot in any way.

If you make a mistake in marking it, do not attempt to make a correction; return it to the judge and get another. You are entitled to a third ballot if the first two have been spoiled and returned, but you mustn't consume more than seven minutes in marking it.

Mark your ballot with the indelible pencil which you will find in the election booth.

Do not use your own pencil; your ballot will not be counted if you do.

After marking your ballot, fold it exactly as it was folded when handed to you by the judge, and give it to the ballot judge without permitting any one to see how you have marked it.

See that the judge tears off the coupon and deposits the ballot in the ballot box.

A. G. STURGISS,
Chairman.

DEMOCRATS have discovered a lot of things in this campaign except reasons why any man who voted for Theodore Roosevelt in 1904 should vote for Bryan in 1908.

DEMOCRATS would have more hope of securing the support of the first voters if the first voters did not read American history.

WORDS OF AN OLD SOLDIER.

Our candidate for Congressional honors in the coming election from this district, as you all know, is the present incumbent—Hon. George A. Pearre. He has acceptably filled his seat in the House of Representatives for the past five terms. He is a man of intelligence, integrity and efficiency in the discharge of his duties to his constituents, regardless of their politics. His years of ardent service in the lower House have eminently fitted him for the duties to which he again aspires. He is capable and he is honest. Thoroughly seasoned in the work which he is called upon to perform, he has never shirked his duty. Pearre is no sluggard. He never sleeps on the job. Wide awake and alert to the needs of his people, he is ever ready and active when legislation regarding their welfare is at stake. He is the one man above all others whom we should all feel proud to have represent us in the next administration.

We, as old veterans, know his worth. He has been our friend in every thing that was for our good. And it seems that he is never happier than when he is working in the interests of the old soldiers who left their homes and went upon the battlefield to fight for home and country. How many of us might testify to his untiring zeal in his efforts to have the boys of '61 receive all that was their due. And how many of our pension claims has he so successfully pushed for us to a satisfactory conclusion.

Then again we do not want an unknown man to represent us. We do not want a man who has never been tried. We want a man like Col. Pearre who has ten years of valiant service to his credit. A man who knows all the ins and outs of his profession—for statesmanship is a profession.

If we elect a new man, no matter how good he may be personally, he will have to learn the ways of Congress. He will have to acquire knowledge and influence in the House that would take a great deal of time. This our candidate has already at his command. And he would be at least ten years ahead of a new man in this one particular alone. The new man would have to begin at the bottom of the ladder, even if he were equal in ability, when he entered the race, with the present incumbent.

Then why make a change for the mere sake of changing?

His bill for the re-establishment of the old national pike alone is of such importance that it vitally concerns every voter and every taxpayer in this part of Garrett county. The great amount of labor employed is a big item in itself. But it is not to be compared with the benefits that will accrue and redound to Garrett county and those adjoining, by placing this once famous highway in it old condition. Congressman Pearre has not only introduced this bill, but he has done much to impress upon the minds of his colleagues the importance of its passage. Hence it is our duty to see that he is returned to his seat in Congress in order that he may be enabled to finish the work so nobly begun. Col. Pearre has effected much good work during his terms in Congress and has many other good bills in line for passage.

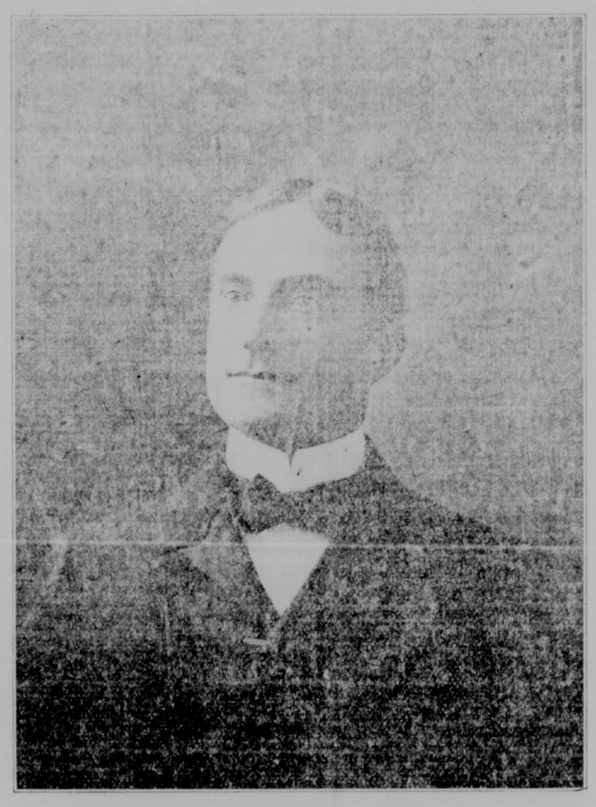
He is, and always has been, a close adherent to the principles of Lincoln, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. He is pledged, along with the Republican party, to revise the tariff. Mind you I said "revise," not "abolish," as the Democratic free traders are agitating.

Do we want a man in Congress from this district when this great economic question is being discussed who is a free trader? A man who would vote to put upon the free list the products of the coal mines of Western Maryland, and place the products of these mines in competition in eastern cities with the coal mines along the southern borders of Canada? What would be the result? The reduction not only in the output of our mines, but a reduction in the price paid our labor, which in turn would effect the markets to such an extent that the farmers in our county could not sell their products.

He stands for a revision of the protective tariff. He believes in giving every man a square deal, as his past record will show. He believes, with Taft, that all men should stand equal before the law. Not one law for the rich man and another for the poor man. He has honestly and faithfully represented this district for nearly ten years, and his splendid record, his ability, his patriotism and his fidelity to our interests have so preeminently marked him as worthy of re-election that we must come out to the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 3, and return him to Congress with such an overwhelming plurality that we may show to the balance of the state that old Garrett is still the rock-ribbed Republican county that it has always been for decency and good government. Let all the old veterans, sons of veterans, and neighbors of veterans not only come to the polls themselves but bring some one else with them.

Here's for a glorious victory to Taft, Sherman and Pearre.

ONE OF THE BOYS OF '61.
Friendsville, Md., Oct. 27, 1908.



CONGRESSMAN GEORGE A. PEARRE.

WHAT A LUMBERMAN SAYS.

A Laborer in the Lumber Mills Gives the "Mountain Democrat" and "Garrett Journal" a Hard Nut to Crack.

We notice that the Democratic county papers insinuate that undue influence was being used in this county with parties interested in lumber mills to have their employees vote for Taft. In reply, while I have never written an article for a newspaper, I wish to inform both the editors of the Journal and the Mountain Democrat that no persuasion is needed to influence our vote. We who have worked in the mills for many years, have talked this matter over, and all the boys state that their vote this year is still influenced for Taft and Pearre by their memory of the Gorman-Wilson tariff bill, which Bryan helped to frame during Cleveland's last administration. This caused the greatest panic ever known in American history, throwing us out of employment for more than four years, and by the reduction in the price of lumber we could not get employment at any price, and we feel sure that if Bryan is elected we will all be out of work again.

ONE WHO HAS WORKED IN THE LUMBER MILLS FOR THE LAST 20 YEARS, EXCEPT WHEN WE HAD A DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENT, AND I REGRET TO SAY I VOTED FOR CLEVELAND.

Crellin, Md., October 27, 1908.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. CHARLES MICHAEL.

Died, at her home in District No. 9, Garrett county, October 6, 1908, Mrs. Charles Michael, aged 76 years, 6 months and 12 days. She leaves her husband and eight children to mourn her loss. The children are, Mrs. Peter Pope, Miss Rebecca who tenderly cared for her aged mother till death came to her relief; Mrs. William Hager, Chas. S., all of Garrett county; Mrs. William Hunter, Mrs. Clara Boetner, Calvin L., of Frostburg and George W. of Confluence, Pa. One son (Thomas) preceded her to the spirit land a few years ago. Mrs. Michael was a true woman in every sense of the word, a sincere Christian, an affectionate wife and mother and a good neighbor. Her greatest care was always for her home and family and their welfare her highest aim. The pallbearers were her grandchildren, George Pope, George Turner, William and Frank Turner, Charles Boetner and Grover Michael. Mr. Michael and family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends and neighbors in their sad bereavement.

MR. BRYAN thinks he has answered Governor Hughes. As a matter of fact, he has only replied to him.

GOVERNOR HUGHES refers to Mr. Bryan's paramounts as "vagrant theories." Probably because they have no visible means of support.

See our 5 and 10c glassware. Baumgartner.

CITIZEN MAKES A COMPARISON.

Particularly during this month thoughtful men have been considering how they can best promote the welfare of the commonwealth and secure prosperity to themselves and their fellow man through the exercise of their suffrage at the approaching election. The solution to this life-problem can only be reached through a process of clear and unprejudiced reasoning, based upon the facts of the past and the conditions of the present, but there is a vast number of voters, good, honest, hardworking men, who are indolent in the matters of public interest and who are practically unacquainted with the principles of the several political parties and the history of their past successes and failures, consequently they become the easy prey of campaign sensationalists and unknowingly become the material out of which unscrupulous office seekers build their temporary success.

It is upon this element of our citizenship that the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District is seeking, with much head shaking, hand flourishing and feet stamping to impress his main, meaningless and pet theory, that his opponent, Col. Geo. A. Pearre, must be defeated on the ground that he has already been in Congress too long, while his half hearted coachers are raising the cry that the Colonel has done nothing but draw his salary. If the Hon. David J. Lewis is really sincere let his conscience prompt him to tell the people why he supported his opponent in three different campaigns to keep him in office "too long," and only to draw a salary, and while he is doing that the people will discern the character of a man who can stick to a principal and support a policy only so long as he can reap a personal benefit and then openly repudiate it, which weakness is the root of all political as well of private corruption and the symbol of an unsafe official. Is the plea of "to long in office" any reason why we should not vote for Pearre, or on the other hand, can we see in that plea, even the shadow of a reason why we should support Lewis.

Consider what would be the natural decision of an honest employer, who had been enriched by years of faithful services from a skillful workman, if a job hunter should ask him to put away his faithful old servant and give him the place. The honest employer would stand by his tried friend and servant and would let the "other fellow slide," and that is how the people will settle the question between Pearre and Lewis.

Shall not these ten years of faithful and successful service in Congress be a strong reason for Col. Pearre's re-election, rather than an excuse for his defeat, when we consider that in all these years he has been gathering a fund of experience, which, coupled with his eminent ability, renders him better equipped to advocate our rights and defend our interests, than his opponent who lacks much in natural ability and all in experience. Those who assert that Col. Pearre has done nothing but draw his salary, deserve no consideration, as their own assertions prove them to be too little interested in the doings of Congress to be informed on the subject, since no man with the least regard for truth, can know the record of Congressman Pearre and make the assertion that he has been an idler.

Ten years ago, George Alexander Pearre saw the stubborn doors of financial and professional success opening before him and he heard the siren voice of mercenary and selfish ambition luring him onward, but his countrymen called him to a place in the U. S. Congress and he gave all his energies to their service and through five consecutive terms he has labored almost to the limit of his life, never yielding when he might have speculated upon the interests of his constituents, never stooping to become a caterer to sectional interests, never the tool of corporations, never the dupe of political tricksters and never a bigoted servant of partisans, but always a diligent servant of all his people without respect to party, position or social condition.

Rich in experience, strong in the confidence of the people, firm in his conviction of right and possessed of sufficient moral courage to always stand for the right George Alexander Pearre is the man in whose hands the honor of the Sixth District is the safest. Democrats and Republicans alike know it, and in the loud voice of the ballot, on the third day of November, they shall proclaim him their champion for another term in Congress.

A CITIZEN.

Sunday School Convention.

The Garrett County Sunday School Association will hold its annual convention in the U. B. church at Loch Lynn on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st, convening at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning. An interesting program has been arranged, and a large attendance of delegates and other Sunday School workers generally is earnestly desired. Dr. Chas. Roads, the State General Secretary, will be present and render valuable service.

When in town don't pass me by but come in and see Baumgartner.

DIXON & KELSO

Dixon & Kelso are headquarters on

WOOL & COTTON BLANKETS

Kindly notice the following prices and come and see the quality, and we will save you money:

10-4 Cotton Blanket was 85c, now ..... 69c per pr

11-4 Cotton Blanket was $1.25, now ..... 95c per pr

11-4 Cotton Blanket wool finish, was $2, $1.25 per pr

Wool Blankets—we have the best on the market; in white and brown, white and blue, white and pink plaids; extra heavy all-wool, in all colors $3.75 per pr

"Fort Pitt" the best $5.00 Blanket on the market for ..... $4.25 per pr

Plenty of Blankets from ..... $1.00 to $2.00

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

E. A. WEIMER.

Now is the time to buy your

FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING

while stocks are complete. I have hundreds of Suits of new Fall Goods and can please almost anyone in both Quality and Price.

A lot of Men's Suits to close out

At $3.75

were $6.00

Plenty of Good, Warm UNDERWEAR.

And the most complete line of SHOES in town, from the cheapest that is good, to the best that is made. COME AND SEE!

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.

NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

TAFT IN THE ISLANDS

Why McKinley Sent the Judge to the Philippines.

STRONG, HONEST AND TACTFUL

Relinquished Certainty of Elevation to Supreme Bench at Call of Duty Proved His Ability as a Nation Builder—A Real Altruist.

In the beginning of our occupation of the Philippines the problems there were military. Nothing of civil functions could be essayed until the rebellion had been put down. In the midst of this the first Philippine commission was sent out to look over the situation "as bearers of the blessings of a liberating rather than a conquering nation," as President McKinley wrote. The commissioners decided that it was a bad mess.

Mr. McKinley was advised to try to do nothing by civil power, but to give a military governor full sway. This would have been a fatal error. Any continuance of the military government beyond the time when its stern restrictions were required to induce peace and maintain it would still further have jeopardized the trust of the natives in our good faith. And it had already been so strained that it would stand no more tension.

The people at home, too, were growing thoroughly out of conceit with "the little brown brother." Our appetite had become sated of military conquest. Too many long, narrow boxes were shipped over sea and land for interment in village churchyards, too many mothers mourned sons, done to death by bullets or bolo, to support general conviction in the doctrine of expansion. We thought we had no prototype of Cromer, no giants of colonial administration upon whom Mr. McKinley might call to "lay the foundations of a superior civilization, with specific reference to the needs of the people to be governed and with definite reference to the welfare of the islands, both material and moral," as he had put it.

There was dearth of men wholly in harmony with the president's conception of what our national duty to the Filipinos comprised, who would constantly bear in mind that it was liberty they wanted, liberty that they should have, as Mr. McKinley had promised, pledging our faith as a nation—liberty, as he wrote, "of the whole Filipino people and not of a decimal fraction of them, who through the leadership of education and property have acquired a domination over the great mass."

Mr. Taft had not been thought of. If his sentiments on the Philippine question was known it was patent that he was neither a believer in Mr. McKinley's policy nor in our ethical right to be in the islands. Said the president one day to the then secretary of state, William R. Day, "I want a man who is strong, honest and tactful, a man of education and executive ability, a man who is fearless, but conservative, who will get along with the army people."

"Judge Taft fills the bill if he will take the job," said Mr. Day in a stroke of inspirational genius. They sent for Judge Taft, who was then on the supreme court bench, and told him what was wanted. He shook his head.

"I cannot be of use to you there, Mr. President," he answered. "I didn't want to take the Philippines. It was a mistake." The president regarded him musingly for a moment, then "Nor did I want to take them," said he. "I had to. There was nothing else to do. We must build a new nation out there. I want you to help us."

Secretary of War Root added his persuasions. He showed both sides of the medal to Judge Taft. Perhaps he was motived more shrewdly than he affected, for he descanted upon the difficulties of the task compared with the congenial and relatively easy work that Judge Taft had upon the bench, with the almost ultimate certainty of being elevated to the supreme court. He must forego all this, said Mr. Root.

But what a chance offered in the Philippines to do, to create, to disprove the infallability of some of England's pet theories of colonization, to bring into being a nation. Such arguments turned the tide. Judge Taft accepted one of those duties "which," to quote him, "is an entirety and not fulfilled until it is entirely fulfilled."

As he took ship, and always afterward, there was in his mind the concluding paragraph of the instructions given him by the president:

"A high and sacred obligation rests upon the government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom and wise, firm and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the peoples of the Philippine Islands. I charge this commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the people in the Philippines may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to the American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and the protection of the people of the United States."

Altruistic, perhaps, but Mr. Taft is an altruist. It needed an altruist to compass the requirements specified in the quotation to the letter and pave the way for the fulfillment of Mr. McKinley's "firm hope," as Mr. Taft has done.

The Republicans will revise the tariff, and they will revise it so that no American workingman shall suffer loss of wages or pay more to fill his dinner pail.

What Four Years of Bryan Would Mean.

Uncle Sam—If somebody would only chloroform him and let me have a much needed rest!—Harper's Weekly.

"BILLY BRYAN."

By REV. HY J. BOATMAN.

[No tune.]

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
Still a-tryin', still a-tryin',
Vainly tryin';
Thrice before us like a chorus,
Jackass chorus most uproarious,
Tried to floor us.

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
Far too high your kite's a-flyin'—
Wind's allayin'.
Cease to mouth us, cease to mouth us,
Jackass discords don't affright us,
Only rouse us.

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
Vainly cryin' like one dyin'—
Calf a-dyin'.
Once you'd give us halves for whole uns—
Silver dollars, them sixteen uns,
For our gold uns.

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
Give up tryin'; quit your tryin'.
Call your "cry" in.
Once you hitched the ass and monkey,
Now you'd ride that poor old donkey—
Played out donkey.

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
Forces routed, forces flyin',
Still you're tryin';
Still you're pleadin' like a lover,
Oft rejected for another,
Better brother.

Billy Bryan, Billy Bryan,
You're a good un; you're a lion
(Little chained un).
But your roarin' sounds too chaffy—
'Deed it's daffy. Give us Taft-y!
Give us Taft-y!
T-A-F-T!

—Fullerton, Cal., September, 1908. Copyright Applied For.

Campaigning In 1908.

[From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

The train comes whizzing down the track
And halts amid the cheers,
And on the platform at the back
The candidate appears.

And then the engine hoarsely shrieks
His words are far from plain,
And then the engine hoarsely shrieks
And drags away the train.

TRIBUTE TO MR. TAFT

How China Apologized For the American Boycott.

JUDGE SIGNALLY HONORED.

Recognition of His Efforts to Bring About Remission of Boxer Indemnity. National Friendship Reaffirmed and Commercial Amity Restored.

It was through Mr. Taft, when he was in Shanghai last fall, that the Chinese apologized for the American boycott that was instituted in the kingdom a few years ago and expressed their appreciation of the remission by our government of the indemnity granted because of the Boxer rebellion. When it became known that Mr. Taft was coming to Shanghai representatives of all the Chinese guilds in the city met and arranged to give him a suitable reception. The guilds in China control every branch of commercial activity and united form in every city and community a thoroughly representative body. Each of the scores of guilds in Shanghai took part in the demonstration to Mr. Taft. For the purpose the beautiful Yuyuen gardens in Bubbling Well road were obtained. Governmental cognizance of the greeting to Mr. Taft was through the vicarious participation of Tuan Fang, viceroy of the Liangkiang province, in which Shanghai is. The viceroy ordered his representative, the taotai tong, to spare no expense in arranging a suitable reception for Mr. Taft and to present the bills to him.

Americans long resident in Shanghai agreed that no such signal honors had ever been paid to another foreigner by the Chinese. A heavy rainfall, which began the previous night, threatened to mar or wholly prevent the garden party. At great cost and an expenditure of labor the committee completely roofed over with canvas a good share of the gardens, including long walks and paths, so that Mr. Taft and the other guests were enabled to move about freely, fully protected from the storm.

All of the speakers referred to the obligations under which China had been laid by the remission of the Boxer indemnity and the contributions made by Americans for the relief of victims of the recent famine in China. Mr. Taft was cheered and applauded for several minutes when he said:

"When I was here a little more than two years ago there was just a little bit of mist, a little bit of fog, in the clear sunshine of our friendship. But we gave assurances at that time which I am glad to say have been carried out on the one hand, and on the other there is every evidence that the mist has cleared away. The boycott is a thing of the past. It is a closed episode."

Two young Chinese ladies bore forward a massive silver bowl and presented it to Mr. Taft as a memento of his visit. The bowl, which was a rare specimen of Chinese silver work, was inscribed, "Presented to the Honorable William H. Taft, Secretary of War of the United States of America, as a Memento of the Garden Party Given In His Honor by the Chinese Residents of Shanghai."

Copious comments were printed by the eastern press upon the reception by the Chinese to Mr. Taft and its significance as a tribute to the man and as a renewal of the old time bonds of amity between the nations.

LABOR MOVEMENT IS NONPARTISAN.

Daniel J. Keefe, Sixth Vice President of the A. F. of L., Insists That President Gompers Has Been Misrepresented and Denies That Any Attempt Has Been Made to Swing Labor Vote to Bryan.

TAFT A FRIEND OF LABORING MAN.

"We insist that the labor movement shall remain as free and independent from political domination as it has ever been in its history."

That sentence is the keynote to a statement made by Daniel J. Keefe of Detroit, Mich., president of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association and sixth vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

In his statement, which he made in answer to a query from the editor of the Buffalo Republic, Mr. Keefe says:

"I desire to say that the American Federation of Labor is not committed to any political party, nor has any candidate for president been indorsed by the executive council.

"I am of the belief that the general public does not fully understand the position of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in the present campaign. The policy of the labor movement is nonpartisan and is as follows:

"We desire to refute here the aspersions that have been cast upon the executive council and particularly one of its members, President Gompers, that it is our purpose or his to dictate to the working people of our country how they shall cast their votes in the coming elections, nor has any one promised the vote of the working people to any particular party. We have strongly, clearly and emphatically, as it was our duty, presented the situation in which the working people of the country find themselves, the demands which labor has made upon both political parties as to necessary action, which they should take, the treatment they have received, and have appealed to the judgment and patriotism of the working people and the friends of labor throughout the country, since both political parties have spoken, to make their choice as their conscience may dictate.

"The misrepresentation of newspapers and others to the contrary notwithstanding, we repeat and insist, and we have so conducted and propose to so conduct our course, that the labor movement shall remain as free and independent from political domination as it has ever been in its history.

"The federation does not commit the American Federation of Labor to any political party and is nonpartisan, which permits union men to vote for whom they may please for president and other offices without fear of criticism. All of which I heartily indorse.

"Some of the members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor no doubt will support and vote for Mr. Bryan, which is their individual right. I shall support and vote for Mr. Taft, who was admitted to membership in the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men on account of his strong advocacy of the enforcement of the eight hour law on all government work coming under the jurisdiction of the war department, and if the eight hour day did not become an established fact in connection with dredge work it was the fault of the workmen and not the fault of the secretary of war.

"I might add further that Mr. Taft, as secretary of war, has done more to inforce laws in favor of organized labor than all his predecessors."

"OLD BILL TAFT."

By REV. HY J. BOATMAN.

[Tune: "America."]

For leader strong and great
To man the ship of state,
Both fore and aft;
To guide where breakers roar,
To safely land our store,
To quiet all uproar,
There's old Bill Taft.

To White House, there to stay
And Bryan send away
Upon a raft;
To do, as Teddy did,
What all our people bid,
For man upon the lid,
There's old Bill Taft.

To do what's good and just,
Strike down the evil trust
And all of graft;
To keep our money pure
And plenty, too, and sure,
The hard times' only cure,
There's old Bill Taft.

Reform his flag unfurls,
Against all evils hurls
Unerring shaft.
Then let our trumpets blare,
"He's always on the square,
At home and everywhere,
Is old Bill Taft!"

—Fullerton, Cal., September, 1908. Copyright Applied For.

[Official Circular.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 7, 1908.

To the Officers and Members United Mine Workers of America:

Greeting—We are in the midst of a political campaign. Every method known to political managers will be used to secure votes for their respective candidates. This is especially true in the attempt to obtain expressions from those holding official positions in labor unions.

I am in receipt of hundreds of letters from men of all shades of political beliefs and from all parts of the United States asking for my opinion of the different candidates or my views upon the issues involved in the political campaign.

The United Mine Workers did not elect me international president to influence your political preferences or how you should cast your vote on election day. You have elected me to direct the affairs of the United Mine Workers. The success of the United Mine Workers and the welfare of its members have and will receive my first and only consideration as long as I have the honor of representing you.

I am not responsible for interviews appearing in the newspapers, alleged to be from me, that I favor any particular candidate. I have declined to express or to give any statement politically for or against any candidate or issue, nor do I intend to do so. This letter will be my answer to all who ask me for any advice along political lines.

I have the honor to represent an organization of nearly 300,000 members of every known nationality and different political views. We have among our members Prohibitionists, Populists, Independents, Socialists, Democrats and Republicans. From what I know of our members you are fully competent to decide for yourselves how you will vote on election day.

All my time is required to look after the interests of the United Mine Workers. Those interested in the subject matter of this letter will please refrain from writing me in connection with politics if they hope to get an answer.

The United Mine Workers as an organization has been in existence for many years before this political campaign, and we all wish that it may live many years after the present campaign has passed into history and until every wrong of which the miner complains is honorably adjusted. Yours fraternally and for harmony,

T. L. LEWIS,
President U. M. W. of A.

The Esperanto Vote.

[From the New York Sun.]

Oh, why is it neglected so—
The Esperanto vote?
Both parties should awake and, lo,
Immediately take note
And send some cart tail speakers out
To tell those people that
Gik mettoskis, terrado skowt
Tok mokku vezok zat.

Why are no pamphlets sent abroad,
To each new language sharp,
Some presidential boom to laud
And on some issue carp?
Were all those highbrows made to see
The doctrine in this light:
Hip toogle ping e toot toot whee
Zing gok, they'd vote all right.

The field is big and yet untilled,
And there great crops will grow
If seed is only wisely spilled,
As candidates should know.
So haste, you literary men,
Press agents for the great,
Sook noop owhoo tikantu gen
Eo hunkus ceto tate.

His Unforgettable Speech.

[Los Angeles Examiner.]

The Bryan speech which will be remembered longest consists of four words: "Workingmen are public beggars."

The Bryan Policies.

[Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle.]

"Policies of folly and disaster" is what Governor Hughes calls Bryan's varied assortment of schemes.

In the time of political warfare prepare for peace and prosperity by deciding to vote the Republican ticket in November.

One great American puzzle is to find the relation between what Bryan says on Monday and what Bryan says on Saturday.

The unemployed asked for jobs, and Colonel Bryan handed them out a copy of his platform.

SKILLED IN THE LAW

Success of Mr. Taft as Solicitor General.

WON MANY NOTABLE SUITS.

Victorious In the Celebrated Alaskan Seal Fisheries Controversy—His Defense of the McKinley Bill—Refused Golden Offers For a Seat on the Federal Bench.

Mr. Taft's eight years of history making utility upon the bench of the Sixth federal circuit, during most of which period he was presiding judge, were prefaced by three years of high accomplishment as solicitor general of the United States. President Harrison picked him to be the legal representative of the United States in active litigation in 1890, when he was only thirty-three years old and still had three years of his elective term upon the superior court bench in Ohio to serve. Solicitor general of the United States at thirty-three! Scarcely more than a boy in years as ripened maturity is reckoned and already doing deeds of national moment—deeds of international moment, to be exact, for inside of two weeks of taking the oath he had put up to him the defense of the government in the Alaska seal fisheries controversy, at which the courts and the diplomats of three countries—the United States, England and Canada—had been dinging for fourteen years.

Briefly the sum and substance of it was this: We had captured and condemned to be sold the Canadian schooner Sayward for illegal sealing in Alaska waters. England and Canada supported the claim of the owner for damages, which we rejected. Pending arbitration the case was brought unexpectedly before the supreme court. It was clever tactics on the other fellow's part, and it put us in rather a pickle. While Canada would not be bound by an adverse decision if the case went against her—that is, she would not be compelled to accept the decision as final—should we lose the fact of our losing in our own court would count against us.

The new solicitor general sailed in. He read the documents. He clutched and held fast. When he emerged from the murk of international law, treaties, precedent and kindred clarities he had a 300 page brief ready to present to the court. It won for him and for the United States against two of the best lawyers in the land—Joseph H. Choate and Calderon Carlisle, Jr.

Then it fell to him to defend the McKinley bill in an action brought by an importing firm who objected to paying higher duties imposed by the bill and pleaded that Speaker Reed's way of counting a quorum, by which tactics the bill had passed the house of representatives, was unconstitutional. The importers urged that enough members present in the house, although constituting a numerical quorum, could break a quorum by not voting.

"If voting and not present is necessary to make a quorum, why is the speaker empowered to employ the sergeant at arms of the house to compel absentees to attend with the object of making a quorum?" queried Mr. Solicitor General Taft. The McKinley bill was saved.

The young solicitor general won, won, won and kept on winning for the government for the two years he was in office. Then President Harrison set him upon what Mr. Taft felt would be the track leading to his real ambition—the supreme court bench. He named him as circuit judge. Judge Taft accepted unhesitatingly. He did it in face of the well meant advice of friends who wanted him to be a money maker. Attractive partnerships were proposed to him by big law firms, partnerships that meant $40,000, $50,000 and $100,000 a year. The emoluments of the bench were only $6,000 annually. Judge Taft shook his head. "There are bigger and better things than money," was his reply to these gilded suggestions. He was then thirty-five. He was a poor man, but he had enough. He is now fifty-one and a poor man still by the standard of the dollar.

Mr. Taft at Yale.

Mr. Taft was seventeen years old when he entered Yale and had just passed his majority when he was graduated with the class of '78. Numerically '78 was the largest class in the history of the institution, with one or two exceptions. Of its 185 members 129 graduated. There are now ninety-six of the graduate members living. "While Mr. Taft dominated the class physically," writes the class historian, "his, even at that time, was a dominating mentality as well."

Scholastic and social honors came to him unsolicitedly. He was a member of Delta Kappa, Phi Theta Psi, Linonia, Skull and Bones and Phi Beta Kappa. In his freshman year he was president of the class boat club and a member of the Delta Kappa campaign committee and of the freshman class supper committee. With Roger Foster he tied for second place in the freshman scholarship, divided the first mathematical prize with John I. McDonald and won two first sophomore composition prizes. In the fall games, senior year, he pulled with the winning tug of war team. He prepared a philosophical oration at the junior exposition and at commencement. He was the salutatorian and also the orator of his class.

"My Maryland" is not a Bryan campaign song this year.

Ba Md.		Balti		FOR PROPOSITION
5th District—W AM H. FELDMEYER, Annapolis, Md.	PROHIBITION	WILLIAM A. HAMMOND, Falston, Md.	INDEPENDENCE	AGAINST PROPOSITION
6th District—FRANCIS B. SAPPINGTON, Frederick, Md.	PROHIBITION			The above proposition will only appear on the ballots for District No. 3.
For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE.		For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE
HARVEY NELSON CUPPETT, Mountain Lake Park, Md.	PROHIBITION
For President and Vice-President of the United States.		For President and Vice-President of the United States.
EUGENE V. DEBS, BENJAMIN HANFORD	SOCIALIST
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT		For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
CLARENCE H. TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.	SOCIALIST
JAMES POWERS, Baltimore, Md	SOCIALIST
ROBERT E. CLAGGET, Baltimore, Md	SOCIALIST
WILLIAM H. WARFIELD, Franklinville, Md.	SOCIALIST
CHARLES W. SMILEY, Arlington, Md.	SOCIALIST
WILLIAM W. GROVE, Hagerstown, Md.	SOCIALIST
OSWALD WEBER, Cumberland, Md.	SOCIALIST
BENJ. F. ADAMS, Silver Springs, Md.	SOCIALIST
For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE.		For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE
SYLVESTER L. V. YOUNG, Hagerstown, Md.	SOCIALIST

Published by order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections of Garrett County, Maryland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

D. M. MASON, President,
C. V. GUARD,
SAMUEL LAWTON,
Board of Supervisors of Elections of Garrett County, Maryland.

Wheels Will Go Round if Taft Is Elected.

SO SAY MANUFACTURERS.

The National Association of Manufacturers, through its organ, American Industries, has just completed a canvass of its 8,000 members in the United States in nearly every line of trade to ascertain the country's condition as it stands twelve months after the panic. The canvass was not made to serve any political purpose, and the forthcoming election was not mentioned. The object was to ascertain the present condition of trade, and to learn whether the country is to enjoy prosperity depends upon the election of Taft.

The canvass was made by means of questions very carefully framed, and relating to the exact condition of trade at present, the percentage of increase in business in the last ten months, the cause of increase, and answers which might serve to better future conditions. Everybody answered the last question by suggesting that Taft be re-elected.

The answers show the largest percentage of increase and the smallest percentage of increase with a little over twenty-six per cent. Very little attention is paid to the tariff as a contributing element, but a number of manufacturers, especially those in the textile industries and allied trades, complain against pending or threatened tariff legislation.

The returns from the movement of the several trades and the movement of members of trade conditions make a distinctly encouraging report as to the future. Of the 8,000 manufacturers heard from, 78 per cent have had an increase during the last ten months, and 85 per cent have reason to believe that prospects for the immediate future are excellent throughout the country. Seventy-eight per cent of the machinery manufacturers have had an increase since January 1, and 94 per cent have had an increase in the last ten months. Of the business done, 34 per cent have had an increase, while 56 per cent of them have had no increase. Of the future, 94 per cent have had an increase and 85

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1908.

FOR PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM H. TAFT,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

JAMES S. SHERMAN,

OF NEW YORK.

FOR CONGRESS,

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

OF ALLEGANY COUNTY.

ORGANIZED labor is making it clear that its vote is in its own individual pockets.

A FREE trade tariff appeals neither to the farmers nor to the factory wage earners.

THE Republican party opposes all class legislation because it is the party of equality before the law.

THE farmers demonstrate at every railway crossing that they are for the candidate of Republican prosperity.

AN INCREASE in wages of $100,000,000 every year under Republican administration is one substantial reason why the railroad employees of the country are overwhelmingly for Taft and Sherman.

WAITING FOR THE NEXT PROPHECY

The season of "prophecy" for 1908 is tardy, Candidate Bryan having not yet announced in full review the fearful calamities that are to befall the nation in the event of his failure to be elected and his policies approved by the people, as he did in 1892 to 1900 inclusive.

While the prediction of great and overwhelming disasters to all people is sure to come from the prophet, citizens will await them without fear and without anxiety. For fourteen years the people of the state and nation have listened to the "warnings" and the "prophecies" of Candidate Bryan only to see them, in every case, disproven and discredited by the march of events.

The people will await the prophecies of 1908 calmly and serenely; enjoy the bountiful prosperity so abundant in this country, and with the recollection of "tariff crushed farmers," "homes destroyed and schools closed by the gold standard" and "no-more-Fourth-of-July," will wonder WHAT NEXT?

THAT MORTGAGED MULE.

During Mr. Taft's speechmaking tour through Indiana last week, at a point where a large number of farmers were gathered to greet and to listen to him, a farmer penciled and passed up to him a note, which read as follows:

"Twelve years ago I drove a mortgaged mule to this city to hear Mr. Bryan speak. Today I came in my own automobile to hear you. Can you guess who I am going to vote for?"

The suggestiveness of that farmer's note is plain enough to land-tillers everywhere, and its meaning will be clear to anyone who will take the trouble to look up the history of the farming industries during the four years that followed the adoption of the Democratic tariff—the Wilson-Gorman bill—which became operative in 1894. In September of that year wheat dropped to fifty cents per bushel and when Mr. Bryan was stumping Indiana in 1896, the year the farmer who wrote the note to Mr. Taft went to hear him on the mortgaged mule, the cereal was selling in the West around fifty-five cents per bushel. Corn in those years of depression dropped below thirty cents per bushel. It was not the farming industries alone, but manufacturing, trade and all forms of business were prostrated: labor was unemployed to an extent that was calamitous.

Mr. Bryan, who was that year for the first time running as the presidential candidate of his party, was preaching to the farmers and everybody else who came within the range of his voice the doctrine of the unlimited coinage of silver at the 16-to-1 ratio. As to the tariff, he was then a free-trader, as he perhaps is now. His universal panacea for hard times was cheap money; the situation for the farmers and for labor, he assured those who listened to him, would grow a great deal worse if the gold standard should be adopted and business be regulated according to the single yellow metal standard.

Bryan was defeated in 1896, and during the first administration of President McKinley, who was elected in that year, a Republican tariff—the Dingley measure, which is still operative—was passed. Not only was the tariff remodeled in conformity to the Republican policy of protection to home labor and home industries, but the monetary system of the country was braced and steadied by the adoption of the gold standard.

As a result of the financial and industrial policies inaugurated during the first administration of President McKinley the country has enjoyed a decade of unparalleled prosperity. Farm prices have grown better steadily, and during this present year they range from 40 to 100 per cent, better than they were in 1896. Last year and this year the Indiana farmers, and those of Maryland also, sold their wheat and corn at just about double the average prices obtained in 1896. Last year there was a financial panic, brought on by Wall Street gambling, which resulted in temporary industrial demoralization. Already the business of the country is getting back to the normal, however. Good times will be quickly restored if Mr. Taft is elected next week. The election of Mr. Bryan would mean not only mortgaged mules, but a good deal of other mortgaged property before his official term will have expired.

MR. TAFT HAS SPOKEN. MR. GOMPER HAS SPOKEN. BUT MR. BRYAN, THE PEERLESS ONE, WILL NOT ANSWER.

Up to the present time Mr. Bryan has made no reply to the President's question as to his interpretation of the injunction plank in the Denver platform. Mr. Taft in his notification speech declared that this plank was loosely drawn and framed for the especial purpose of rendering it susceptible to one interpretation by one set of men and to a diametrically opposite interpretation by another set. Mr. Bryan, before the question came up as a direct issue, said that the language is so clear that only one meaning could be attached to it, and he gave his interpretation of its meaning. Mr. Gompers, the author of the plank, gives an entirely different interpretation. Mr. Gompers did not say that the plank of the Democratic platform, which he wrote, means this or that in direct terms. But he explained to a committee of Congress and in an article in McClure's Magazine what labor—meaning himself—wants and on several occasions he has declared that the Denver convention gave labor what it wanted.

This statement of Mr. Gompers verifies what Judge Taft said of the plank, and as the voters are left in doubt as to the real meaning of the plank from a Democratic standpoint a further declaration from Mr. Bryan is demanded. Mr. Gompers has said that the Democratic convention at Denver made labor's contention its own. Then Mr. Gompers told the committee of Congress what is "labor's contention," as he understands it. He demands the enactment of House bill No. 94 in the Sixtieth Congress. The bill which Mr. Gompers says embodies labor's contentions forbids the courts to afford any protection to the man whose right to do business is attacked during a strike. Mr. Gompers further says that the Democratic party pledged its candidates for every office to these remedies which labor had submitted to Congress, and it appears from the record that bill No. 94 had been submitted to Congress by Mr. Pearre "by request," and that Mr. Gompers went before the committee to indorse it as the only measure proposing satisfactory remedies.

Mr. Bryan should explain whether he agrees with Mr. Gompers that the Democratic platform pledges the candidates of the party to support this measure, which will paralyze the courts and legalize the destruction of a man's business. This question cannot be evaded. It is in the platform upon which Mr. Bryan is standing. He has said he cannot be induced to discuss the race question, or 16 to 1, or government ownership of railroads, or any other question outside the platform upon which he stands. But here is a question right in the platform in which every business man, every laboring man and every manufacturer in the land is interested, and a plain reply is needed. Mr. Bryan cannot take refuge in words. The question for him to answer is whether he holds to his first interpretation of the injunction plank of the Denver platform, or whether the interpretation of Mr. Gompers, the man who wrote it, is to be taken or repudiated. For ourselves, we do not believe that "labor" makes any such contention as that set forth by Mr. Gompers. Mr. Gompers is an Englishman and may have ideas suitable for England. But they are not American, and we do not believe American labor will approve them. We do not believe Mr. Gompers is "labor." We believe that the laboring people are too fair-minded, too patriotic and too wise to ask for special privileges, and have too strong a sense of fair play to contend that a man has no property right in the "good will" which he has built up in his business or has purchased. We do not believe that labor asks the privilege of breaking up a man's business by forcibly keeping his customers out of his store. That may be Mr. Gompers' idea of a free and democratic government—but it is not the American idea.

Mr. Bryan should have the courage of his convictions. Mr. Taft was attacked, and replied in a way that left no doubt in the public mind where he stands. Mr. Bryan has treated the President's pertinent inquiry in a flippant manner. He has tried to shirk its responsibility by putting it on Mr. Gompers. Mr. Bryan is running for President. Mr. Gompers is not. Mr. Taft has expressed his views, Mr. Gompers has expressed his, and Mr. Bryan, the Peerless One of the Democratic party, refuses to answer a question which is of vital interest to all classes of citizens. America, above all, loves courage. Where is the courage of Mr. Bryan, the Peerless One.—Baltimore Sun.

THE INDEPENDENCE (?) OF THE JOURNAL

A Shot at that Paper and a Rap at "Edward, If You Please."

To the Editor of The Republican:

It has been said that when Charles A. Dana, the great editor, was asked what is the first essential in publishing a newspaper, he replied: "Raise Cain and sell papers." This is about as true as any general definition of the governing principle in newspaper office as you will likely get.

Now the Garrett Journal may have instuitions which would lead him in successfully raising "Cain," but through bad interpretation of the modus operandi, it has failed, signally failed, in raising anything but a little wonder and surprise. The wonder is that it hobnobs eleven months of the year with Republicans, exchanging potatoes, pumpkins, and perhaps parsnips, and damns them with faint praise, to say the least, the balance of the year. The surprise is, that after affiliating with the Republicans until just before election time, it takes up the Democratic cause and opens its columns to every whimpering gust of Democratic winds that winds around in that direction. It claims to be independent, eh? It may be dependent, but independence and party regularity in aiding and abetting the Democrats at the only season in which Republicans seek recognition, do not work on the same job.

With absolute Democratic regularity the Garrett Journal swings its entire influence to the cause of Democracy when the campaign is on, and then no Republican slides down its cellar door until away after election, when by some means they return again to its office and bring in the fruits of the farm.

It is certainly beyond one's imagination how this so-called independence is perpetuated. Why would Republicans subscribe to or patronize a paper of that vacillating policy and purpose, which with party regularity disclaims its friends interested at election time and take up another. Its Republican sentiments evaporate rapidly and die away amid the applause and condemnation of its Democratic friends, who are glad to have the opportunity. A friend in need is a friend indeed. Republicans, no not be fooled. The Garrett Journal is not an independent; it is Democratic when politics are at issue.

Josh Billings says a very true thing: "Heaven save us from the weak man, whoze deceptions have no fraud in them, and whoze friendships are the worst desighns they have on us.

Such hypocritic characters are generally "friends" to everybody and therefore can be friends to nobody, and what they are going to do next is as unknown to them as to every one else. The man who dares to be true in this world of hypocrisy and cant is as much a hero as the name that is emblazoned on brass and marble, but the man who is a Republican 364 days in a year, and a Democrat on the 365th, or election day, certainly results in him raising Cain both in his political and personal integrity.

I was amused recently by reading a diatribe in one of the papers, headed: "A Christian Man," and signed by C. Edward Bender. From this article the Christian and intelligent man, in Mr. Bender's judgment, is Mr. Bender. The predominating point of this article is, that Mr. Bender went to school up near Huntingdon. The paramount issue is that Mr. Bender has associated with a lot of Y. M. C. A. delegates and that he had developed much mental strength, as well as attainments while at the Juniata school. He succeeds in making this definite impression, and I presume it is true, as the editor of the Mountain Democrat would not have yielded a column and a half for him to deceive the people. He so much resembles the man in Lowell's "Fable of the Critics," of whom it was said:

"He has so much muscle and loves so to show it,
That he strips himself naked to prove his a poet
And to show he could leap Art's wide ditch, if he tried Jumps clear over it, and into the hedge t'other side."

After using half a column in setting fortn his claim of worshipping at the shrine of Parnassus, and submits samples of his own lispings to differentiate the religion of Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan, he seems to stand upon the apex of a refulgent cloud amid the solitude of light and his own rapturous murmurings and sends down a halo for Mr. Bryan, and an anti-religious lemon for Mr. Taft. What a pity!

It is said that when Mr. Bender returned fro the Juniata school, his near friends, who knew him when he lived and moved in swaddling clothes, said "Good morning, Chris." With great dignity and disgust he swirled about and said, "Edward, if you please." Our poet, extemporizing on this abnormal mental growth, booke out like this:

"There was a man in our town,
He was so wonderous wise,
He yanked himself off to school
For greater heights to rise
And suddenly so great he grew—
"Good morning, Chris," as was the rule,
"Edward, if you please," he cries."

Now in reference to Judge Taft's religion the nation know and will give its verdict in comparison with Bryan's next Tuesday. I wonder if this Mr. Bender knows that we have had four Unitarian Presidents and the world continues to move. Does he know that the greatest senators of the United States from the East for half a century have been Unitarians? Does he know that the chaplain of the Senate now, Dr. Edward Everett Hale, is a Unitarian? The old stock phrases that Mr. Bender uses in reference to Jude Taft's religion is unworthy of notice in an intelligent community. For instance: "A Monotheistic doctrine, God exists only in one person, denies the individuality of both Christ and the Holy Spirit." Such tommyrot is not worth answering. I absolutely deny the truth of every word of this and will stake my life that the Unitarian belief is no such belief, and I know, as I am familiar with the denomination.

ONE WHO HATES HYPOCRISY.

Friendsville, Md., October 27, 1908.

W. C. SHAFFR IS DEAD.

The Well Known Sunday School Man Died From Injuries.

The news dispatches from Kentucky bring the sad information that William C. Shaffer, the well known Sunday School man, of Wheeling, and formerly of Fairmont, died from his injuries in a runaway accident at Winchester, where he was visiting friends.

Mr. Shaffer is a native of Terra Alta and of a prominent West Virginia family. For about fifteen years he resided in Fairmout and up to three years ago conducted a photograph gallery there. He had always taken a great interest in Sunday School work and became general secretary of the West Virginia association. When the headquarters were moved to Wheeling three years ago he left Fairmont to attend to the duties of the Wheeling office.

A YOUNG MAN KILLED.

Harry Dellinger Struck in Stomach at Bond and Died Shortly Afterward.

Harry Dellinger, aged about nineteen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Dellinger, of Bond, was struck in the stomach by a piece of timber while operating a machine on the lumbering plant of Messrs. DuBois and Bond Bros. at Bond, this county, last Wednesday, and died from the effects of his injuries a short time afterwards.

Young Dellinger had been in the employ of the firm for a number of years and was engaged in operating a bolting machine when the board he was handling was thrown back by the saw, striking him in the stomach with the results as above stated.

His funeral took place from his late home on Friday and was largely attended.

Subscribe for The Republican.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

WILL GET WATER FROM WELLS.

Oakland System Started With the Boring of a Well on Third Street.

That Oakland will eventually be supplied with water of a good quality and it is to be hoped in sufficient quantity to meet all requirements, seems to be an assured fact, as work has been started on the system to supply the town.

After making careful investigations it was deemed best by members of the council and the advisory board appointed by that body at a recent meeting, to sink a well or a series of wells instead of relying on a stream of running water which may dry up when water is in most demand, hence a contract has been made by the Council with Mr. R. S. Jamison for the boring of a well, eight inches in diameter, and to be sunk to a proper depth on a lot owned by A. D. Naylor on Third Street and the Deer Park Road, just across the corporation line. Work in boring the well was started last Saturday and already a considerable depth has been reached.

A DWELLING HOUSE BURNED.

Home of Mr. L. T. Friend, Near Deer Park, Reduced to Ashes.

Last Thursday morning the residence of Mr. L. T. Friend, of near Deer Park, caught fire and was entirely consumed, along with nearly all the furniture and other contents of the building, including clothing, provisions and other property.

The fire originated from a defective flue and occurred at an early hour, the only things saved from the building being a few pieces of furniture from the rooms on the lower floor.

Upon the building and contents there was an insurance of $1000, placed by the F. A. Thayer agency of Oakland, which will probably cover the loss.

Corner Stone Laid.

On last Sunday afternoon members of Oakland Lodge No. 192, A., F. and A. M., upon invitation from the pastor of the church, laid the corner stone of the proposed new Baptist church at Loch Lynn Heights, opposite Mountain Lake Park, when the impressive ceremonies attending such an occasion were carried out in full by the Worshipful Master, Capt. J. M. Jarboe, assisted by the brethren of the local lodge. Immediately after the Masonic ceremonies were concluded, Rev. N. Hart, the first Baptist minister at work in this field, made a short address, being followed by the pastor of the church, Rev. C. W. Hudson. In the corner stone of the edifice was placed a box containing a short history of the church, a list of the names of every person who contributed anything toward the erection of the church, a list of the members of the church, a copy of THE REPUBLICAN and a copy of the by-laws of the Masonic lodge laying the corner stone, besides the names of the architect of the building and the builder of the foundation. The choir of the church rendered quite a number of selections, the music being excellent, reflecting much credit upon the singers.

STRENGTH

STABILITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$297,336 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured.	NONE
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc	120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers	31 96
Due from approved reserve agents.	48,081 10
Checks and other cash items	478 26
Notes of other National Banks	545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $19,881 95
Legal-tender notes 6,265 00	26,146 95
Redemption fund with U. S Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation	2,500 00
Total	$561,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,061 22
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,969 04
Due to State Banks and Bankers	80 74
Individual deposits subject to check	213,020 28
Time certificates of deposit	201,828 94
Cashie 's checks outstanding	373 46
Total	$561,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.

HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

SECURITY

Garrett National Bank

OF

Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. L. C. Bray, of Kitzmiller, is in Oakland today on business.

Mrs. Emily Droege, of Deer Park, spent today in Oakland shopping.

Messrs. Harvey J. and Henry Speicher, of Accident, were in the city a day or two this week.

Mrs. Julius C. Renninger is at Eglon, West Va., where she is the guest of relatives and friends.

Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft spent yesterday in Oakland on business, returning to Baltimore this morning on No. 2.

Rev. N. L. Baumgardner, of Buckhannon, W. Va., spent a few hours in Oakland this morning on business.

Mr. H. C. Gruesendorf, of Keyser, W. Va., has sold the Enterprise Store at Hutton to Mr. Page R. Wotring, who has assumed charge.

Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell and aunt, Miss Julia Byrne, who spent a week in Kingwood, returned to their home in Oakland yesterday.

Mrs. Scott T. Jones went to Terra Alta this morning to attend the funeral of the late William C. Shaffer, which takes place there today.

Mr. Charles J. Newman, of the rural route service, who is taking a well earned vacation, spent a few days last week in Frederick where he attended the Frederick County Fair.

Mr. H. S. Whetsell, editor of the Preston County Journal at Kingwood, West Va., was in Oakland last Friday on business, returning to his home the same afternoon.

State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of Bayard is spending a number of days this week in Oakland where he is rendering valuable service to the Republican Committee.

Dr. R. B. Ward, District Superintendent of the Oakland District, M. E. church, left Oakland this morning for a week's visit to appointments in Pendleton and other West Virginia counties.

Attorneys Thomas J. Peddicord and E. H. Sincell and Messrs. E. I. West and A. C. Mason went to a point near Grantsville Monday where they are engaged this week making a survey of some land in dispute.

2-qt. agate bucket 10c at Baumgartner's.

Mr W R. Offutt, in company with Mrs. Offutt, spent last week in Baltimore, the former returning to Oakland Monday. Mrs. Offutt is remaining in the east where she is visiting relatives and friends.

Rev. Edmund Manges, pastor of the Lutheran church here, and Mr. Daniel Hinebaugh, one of its members, left Oakland this morning for Frederick, Md., where they went to attend the annual synod of the church. T ey will return to their homes on Monday or Tuesday.

Mrs Elmer Haulenbeck is entertaining at "Uplands," near Deer Park, her friend Mrs. Oscar B. Ward, of Philadelphia. This is Mrs. Ward's initial visit to Garrett county. She in company with Mrs. G. W. Haulenbeck and her daughter, Miss Irene, attended the corner stone laying of the new Baptist church at Loch Lynn Sunday afternoon.

This morning Dr. J. Lee McComas, the pioneer physician of Oaklatd, suffered a fainting spell on the street near the Presbyterian church and fell to the pavement. He was taken to the office of his son, Dr. H. W. McComas, where he was treatd and was soon very much better. For several days past our venerable friend has been unwell and the sudden attack this morning resulted. We hope that no recurrence may ensue.

10-qt. tin dish pans 10c at Baumgartner's.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Messrs. Murrel Nickow, Paul Ross, Morris Largent and L. Long drove over from Addison and spent Sunday with friends.

Ernest Dunham and family are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dunham.

Mrs. R. C. McCandlish and two children are visiting friends in Piedmont, W. Va.

Miss Mary Mitchell of Addison, is visiting at the Crawford Hotel.

Quite a number of our people attended the dedication of the new Rush church.

Geo. D. Browning left today for Cumberland on a business trip.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

An Epidemic of Suicides.

In the death of Mr. A. Frederick George, of near Swanton, which occurred last Sunday afternoon shortly after one o'clock Garrett county lost one of its most prominent citizens, and the manner of his death came as a distinct shock to his many friends in all sections. That the man at the moment of his rash deed was insane there is no doubt in the minds of all who have been made acquainted with all the facts attendent upon his demise.

From a reliable source it has been learned that on Sunday morning Mr. George went to Sunday School accompanied by his wife and members of his family. Being superintendent of the school he conducted the services as usual, an incident occurring, however, during the service, which may have had a bearing upon the later acts of the deceased. Returning to his home the family had dinner and immediately thereafter Mr. George armed himself with a shot gun and with it drove the members of his family from the house. Going to the home of his son Theo., nearby, he set fire to a bed, but the burning material was thrown from a window and the fire extinguished. On the return from the house of his son to his own dwelling he was compelled to pass his barn. After tying his horses in the stable he fired it and then passing to his home he secured an oil can and with the contents saturated an organ in his parlor, applied a match and then went to his library where oil was thrown about promiscuously and the room fired. In the meantime the barn was burning but by the arrival of his son in-law, Mr. George Lee, the horses were saved from the structure, the building, along with its contents, consisting of hay, grain, potatoes and apples, buggies, farming implements, etc., being consumed. At the home Mr. Lee fought the fire and succeeded in putting it out after working for fifteen minutes or more, the damage being considerable.

After setting fire to the buildings Mr. George went a short distance from the dwelling to a stable and there shot himself through the body, the load of shot taking effect just below the heart, but not entering it. In his pockets ten cartridges, a razor and twenty-one matches were found. His body was discovered lying with his head down the hill, death having resulted instantaneously.

Mr. George was about fifty years of age, was an ex-member of the Maryland Legislature, ex-Fish Commissioner for the Western Shore of Maryland, ex-U. S. Rural Route agent and inspector, and at the time of his death secretary of the Republican State central Committee for Garrett county. In addition to the prominent position held in the field of politics Mr. George was a local Methodist minister and took a prominent part in church and benevolent work.

His funeral took place on Tuesday from the M. E. church at Swanton, Rev. J. B. Workman, of Oakland, conducting the services. A delegation of the members of Garrett Lodge, K. of P., of Oakland, attended the funeral and acted as pall bearers. The funeral was largely attended, the crowd being so great that but a small percentage could gain admission to the church.

Charles H. Liston, of Friendsville, had been brooding for some time over the killing of Lupton Frantz, a well known character of that region, whom he shot about two years ago in a quarrel over a threat against him made by Frantz. Saturday evening he sent a bullet through his head the missile of death entering near the right ear and coming out on the left side of the head near the ear. He lived until four o'clock Sunday morning. He leaves a wife, a number of children and grandchildren.

The attempt at selfdestruction made by Mrs. John Harned, wife of ex-County Surveyor Harned, was the result of mental derangement from which she has been suffering for several months. Mr. and Mrs. Harned recently moved into Oakland and had taken rooms in the residence of Mrs. Wolfe, on Third Street. Sunday morning at four o'clock Mrs. Horned arose from bed and going down stairs she secured a razor belonging to her husband. Lydown on a couch she made three deep cuts across her wrist and allowed the arm to hang over the couch with the hand in a coal bucket into which the blood spurted from the wound. Mr. Harned discovered her and her condition as soon as he went down stairs. He telephoned for his son, Mr. Joseph Harned, who quickly bound the arm to stop the flow of blood. While the veins of the arm had been drained of blood she had not cut into the arteries and physicians administered salt solution quickly. It is thought Mrs. Harned will recover, although it whs feared that heart trouble, from which she has suffered some time, might end her life. Mrs. Harned is the third wife of Mr. John Harned and has been twice married herself. Her son Dr. Frank Freeland of New York City, arrived in Oakland Monday and administered to his mother's care.

AN INTERESTING CORN EXHIBIT.

Many Varieties Being Displayed at the First National Bank in Oakland.

From a small beginning—one exhibit—the varieties of corn being shown in the Second street windows of the First National Bank in Oakland, promises to soon exceed the space and additional room may have to be provided so that all contributing may stand on a equal footing. A few days ago Mr. C. E. Ellthorp brought from his farm at Bittinger some ears of corn labeled the Mortgage Lifter. These were placed in the bank window and now the entire space is taken up with other exhibits from many other sections of the county.

One exhibit is especially interesting it being named the Yellow Flint, the seed for which was brought to this county more than seventy-five years ago by the grandfather of Mr. Freemen DeWitt, of Hoyes, it being thought at that time that this country would produce this variety only. This variety of corn has been raised every year since its introduction into this county by the DeWitt family, the local exhibit being made by Mr. Freeman DeWitt, who also shows the White Cap variety.

Other exhibitors are Joel C. Slabach, of near Sunnysiee; F. A. Thayer, A. C. Wotring, Asa Coddington, E. E. Sollars, B. C. Feather, The H. Weber & Sons Co., J. T. Mitchell, all of Oakland and nearby, and James P. Wiley, of near Grantsville.

The exhibit attracts much attention, especially from those who are interested in agriculture.

Special 10-qt. tin water buckets 10c at Baumgardner's.

GREAT REPUBLICAN RALLY

OAKLAND THEATRE FRIDAY OCT 30

The voters of Oakland and vicinity are cordially invited to come and hear the issues of the campaign ably presented by

HON. GEO. A. PEARRE

Republican Candidate for Congress.

HON. LEO SIMMONS

Assistant U. S. Attorney of Washington, D. C.

A. G. STURGISS, Chairman State Central Committee.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

The CLOAKS and SUITS we are showing this season at

$5.50 TO $30.00

are far superior to any previous effort.

See this line before you buy and be convinced that the

Fit and Style

you get here is what you desire.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

SWANTON GRANGE FAIR.

A Fine Display of Products of Various Kinds at Swanton.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The organized farmers of Swanton district have decided to take the lead in the agricultural movements of Garrett county. As a starter in that direction an Agricultural Fair was held in Swanton on Saturday, October 24th, 1908.

In connection with this fair a fine dinner was served and an elaborate literary program carried out. A very large number of successful farmers, from various other districts, attended and participated in the entertainment. There was a fine display of products of various kinds, and a large attendance, which however would have been much greater had it not been for the heavy rain in the morning, which prevented many farmers from getting there with their families and exhibits.

The display of fruits was especially fine, much of which will be shown later by Senator Brown at the State exhibit in Baltimore city. There was also a nice display of fowls by a few enterprising poultrymen.

One of the strongest features of the occasion was the fine literary program, for the Grange believes that education is the foundation for all progress. After a prelude by Senator Brown urging the farmers of the county to heartily cooperate with him in securing the best display of fruits, etc., that will be shown at the State exhibit, the speaker of the day, Professor T. C. Atkeson, Dean of West Virginia Agricultural College, and a farmer by profession, entertained the audience for an hour and a half, in his characteristic and forceful manner. His reasons why the farmers should organize were most convincing.

It was very evident that the Grange is not only a social organization in name but in fact, as was attested by the large number of ladies and young folks in attendance. The children are the best crop of the farm, and the Grange encourages them in every possible way.

The night session was wholly devoted to an elaborate literary entertainment which was heartily enjoyed by a crowded house.

The music rendered from the "Grange Melodies," was grand; the recitations, tableaux, dialogues, and comic parts were well rendered, but the little chaps in their performances "took the cake."

THE EXHIBITS.

Among the exhibitors, a list of whom we obtained from the Secretary, we find the following:

C. T. Sweet, who exhibited fruit, poultry and vegetables, took eight first prizes and nine second; J. G. Friend, apples and corn, three first prizes; J. L. Fitzwater, apples, potatoes and corn, three first prizes; James Ashenfelter, apples, two second prizes; Mrs. Lucy McRobie, butter, first prize; Herman Steidling, corn, onions, honey, three first and one second prizes; Miss Anna Steidling, bedquilt, first prize; Mrs. Sue Steidling, canned fruit, first prize; Miss Mollie Friend, beans, first prize; H. R. Shank, apples, first prize; Ed Shank, corn, second prize; Walter Beckman, apples, three first and one second prizes; A. P. Enlow, Black Gilli flower apples, first prize; Thomas Bishoff, turnips, second prize; Jere Mankis, poultry, three first and one second prizes; Miss Florence Barnard, table beets, second prize; J. M. Conoway, seedling apples, first prize; Thomas McRobie, king apples, first prize; Milton Friend, "Empire State" potatoes, first prize; C. M. Miller, "Spy" apples, second prize; M. E. Garrett, butter, second prize.

There will be another Agricultural Fair at Swanton next October, and we will bet a big red apple that farmers all over the county will be prepared to make large exhibits.

H. P. T.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

List of Nominations Certified to the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland.

OAKLAND, MARYLAND, October 19th, 1908.

In compliance with the provisions of Section 47 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, we do hereby certify that the following are the names and descriptions of the candidates of the different parties whose certificates of nomination have been duly filed with us and for whom the voters of Garrett County may vote at the election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, November 3rd, 1908:

For President and Vice-President of the United States.			For President and Vice-President of the United States.
WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. JOHN W. KERN.	DEMOCRATIC		WILLIAM H. TAFT. JAMES S. SHERMAN.	REPUBLICAN
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT			For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
At Large—JAMES ENOS RAY, JR., Chillum, Prince George's County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		At Large—JOHN A. ROBINSON, Sharon, Harford County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
At Large—JAMES W. DENNY, Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		At Large—ALBERT G. TOWERS, Denton, Caroline County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
1st District—EDWIN H. BROWN, Jr., Centreville, Queen Anne's County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		1st District—ROBERT S. ADKINS, Berlin, Worcester County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
2nd District—JOHN F. WILLIAMS Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		2nd District—LUTHER KEMP, Uniontown, Carroll County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
3rd District—HAMPSON H. BIEDLER, Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		3d District—JOSEPH BROOKS, Baltimore, Md	REPUBLICAN
4th District—JOHN CHARLES LINTHICUM Baltimore, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		4th District—MILLARD F. BURGESS, Baltimore, Md.	REPUBLICAN
5th District—WILLIAM H. HELLEN, Solomon's, Calvert County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		5th District—J. WEBB THOMAS, Baltimore, Md.	REPUBLICAN
6th District—CHARLES H. CONLEY, Adamstown, Frederick County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		6th District—MOSES BOMBERGER, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE			For Representative in the Sixty-first Congress of the United States for the Sixth Congressional District. VOTE FOR ONE
DAVID J. LEWIS Allegany County, Md.	DEMOCRATIC		GEORGE A. PEARRE, Allegany County, Md.	REPUBLICAN
For President and Vice-President of the United States.			For President and Vice-President of the United States.
EUGENE W. CHAFIN AARON S. WATKINS	PROHIBITION		THOMAS L. HISGEN, JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES,	INDEPENDENCE
For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT			For Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. VOTE FOR EIGHT
At Large—JOSHUA LEVERING, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION		CHARLES A. BRISCOE, Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
At Large—WILLIAM KLEINLE, Baltimore, Md.	PROHIBITION		EDWARD H. TRAINOR, Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
1st District—JAMES T. ANTHONY, Chestertown, Queen Anne's County, Md.	PROHIBITION		CHARLES H. WINKLEMAN, Baltimore, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
2nd District—WILLIAM S. NORRIS, Govans, Baltimore County, Md.	PROHIBITION		JOHN HENRY GORDY, Salisbury, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
3rd District—JAMES R. WHITEHURST, [illegible]re, Md.	PROHIBITION		THEODORE A. PAYRI EITNER, Mt. Washi[illegible]n, Md.	INDEPENDENCE
4th District—W[illegible] GISRIEL,	PROHIBITION		JOSEPH SIR,	INDEPENDENCE

In compliance with Chapter 649 of the Laws of Maryland, January Session, 1908, the following proposition will be submitted to the voters of District No. 3 of Garrett County, Maryland:-

SHALL THIS DISTRICT BECOME "ANTI-SALOON TERRITORY."
VOTE FOR ONE

FOR PROPOSITION

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and wnen ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber AND Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Departm't
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

HUNTING THE WOLF

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1893, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

THOUGH I have never known wolves to attack a man, yet in the wilder portion of the far Northwest I have heard them come around camp very close, growling so savagely as to make one almost reluctant to leave the camp fire and go out into the darkness unarmed. Once I was camped in the fall near a lonely little lake in the mountains, by the edge of quite a broad stream. Soon after nightfall three or four wolves came around camp and kept me awake by their sinister and dismal howling. Two or three times they came so close to the fire that I could hear them snap their jaws and growl, and at one time I positively thought that they intended to try to get into camp, so excited were they by the smell of the fresh meat. After a while they stopped howling; and then all was silent for an hour or so. I let the fire go out and was turning into bed when I suddenly heard some animal of considerable size come down to the stream nearly opposite me and begin to splash across, first wading, then swimming. It was pitch dark, and I could not possibly see, but I felt sure it was a wolf. However after coming half-way over it changed its mind and swam back to the opposite bank; nor did I see or hear anything more of the night marauders.

Five or six times on the plains or on my ranch I have had shots at wolves, always obtained by accident and always, I regret to say, missed. Often the wolf when seen was running at full speed for cover, or else was so far off that though motionless my shots went wide of it. But once have I with my own rifle killed a wolf, and this was while travelling with a pack train in the mountains. We had been making considerable noise, and I never understood how an animal so wary permitted our near approach. He did, nevertheless, and just as we came to a little stream which we were to ford I saw him get on a dead log some thirty yards distant and walk slowly off with his eyes turned toward us. The first shot smashed his shoulders and brought him down.

The wolf is one of the animals which can only be hunted successfully with dogs. Most dogs, however, do not take at all kindly to the pursuit. A wolf is a terrible fighter. He will decimate a pack of hounds by rabid snaps with his giant jaws while suffering little damage himself; nor are the ordinary big dogs, supposed to be fighting dogs, able to tackle him without special training. I have known one wolf to kill a bulldog which had rushed at it with a single snap.

The true way to kill wolves, however, is to hunt them with greyhounds on the great plains. Nothing more exciting than this sport can possibly be imagined. It is not always necessary that the greyhounds should be of absolutely pure blood. Prize-winning dogs of high pedigree often prove useless for the purposes.

Once I had the good fortune to witness a very exciting hunt of this character among the foot-hills of the northern Rockies. I was staying at the house of a friendly cowman, whom I will call Judge Yancy Stump. He was at daggers drawn with his nearest neighbor, a cross-grained mountain farmer, who may be known as old man Prindle. There was one point, however, on which the two came together. They were exceedingly fond of hunting with hounds. The Judge had three or four track-hounds, and four of what he called wolf-hounds, the latter including one pure-bred greyhound bitch of wonderful speed and temper, a dun-colored yelping animal which was a cross between a greyhound and a foxhound, and two others that were crosses between a greyhound and a wire-haired Scotch deer-hound. Old man Prindle's contribution to the pack consisted of two immense brindled mongrels of great strength and ferocious temper.

The worrying, growling and snarling were terrific.

As I was very anxious to see a wolf-hunt the Judge volunteerd to get one up, and asked old man Prindle to assist, for the sake of his two big fighting dogs; though the very names of the latter, General Grant and Old Abe, were gall and wormwood to the unreconstructed soul of the Judge. Still they were the only dogs anywhere around capable of tackling a savage timber wolf, and without their aid the Judge's own high-spirited animals ran a serious risk of injury, for they were altogether too game to let any beast escape without a struggle.

Luck favored us. Two wolves had killed a calf and dragged it into a long patch of dense brush where there was a little spring, the whole furnishing admirable cover for any wild beast. Early in the morning we started on horseback for this bit of cover, which was some three miles off. The party consisted of the Judge, old man Prindle, a cowboy, myself, and the dogs. The Judge and I carried our rifles and the cowboy his revolver, but old man Prindle had nothing but a heavy whip, for he swore, with many oaths, that no one should interfere with his big dogs, for by themselves they would surely "make the wolf feel sicker than a stuck hog." Our shaggy ponies racked along at a five-mile gait over the dewy prairie grass. The two big dogs trotted behind their master, grim and ferocious. The track-hounds were tied in couples, and the beautiful greyhounds loped lightly and gracefully alongside the horses. The country was fine. A mile to our right a small plains river wound in long curves between banks fringed with cottonwoods. Two or three miles to our left the foot-hills rose sheer and bare, with clumps of black pine and cedar in their gorges. We rode over gently rolling prairie, with here and there patches of brush at the bottoms of the slopes around the dry watercourses.

At last we reached a somewhat deeper valley, in which the wolves were harbored. Wolves lie close in the daytime and will not leave cover if they can help it; and as they had both food and water within we knew it was most unlikely that this couple would be gone. The valley was a couple of hundred yards broad and three or four times as long, filled with a growth of ash and dwarf elm and cedar, thorny underbrush choking the spaces between. Posting the cowboy, to whom he gave his rifle, with two greyhounds on one side of the upper end, and old man Prindle with two others on the opposite side, while I was left at the lower end to guard against the possibility of the wolves breaking back, the Judge himself rode into the thicket near me and loosened the track-hounds to let them find the wolves' trail. The big dogs also were uncoupled and allowed to go in with the hounds. Their power of scent was very poor, but they were sure to be guided aright by the baying of the hounds, and their presence would give confidence to the latter and make them ready to rout the wolves out of the thicket, which they would probably have shrunk from doing alone. There was a moment's pause of expectation after the Judge entered the thicket with his hounds. We sat motionless on our horses, eagerly looking through the keen fresh morning air. Then a clamorous baying from the thicket in which both the horseman and dogs had disappeared showed that the hounds had struck the trail of their quarry and were running on a hot scent. For a couple of minutes we could not be quite certain which way the game was going to break. The hounds ran zigzag through the brush, as we could tell by their baying, and once some yelping and a great row showed that they had come rather closer than they had expected upon at least one of the wolves.

In another minute, however, the latter found it too hot for them and bolted from the thicket. My first notice of this was seeing the cowboy, who was standing by the side of his horse, suddenly throw up his rifle and fire, while the greyhounds who had been springing high in the air, half maddened by the clamor in the thicket below, for a moment dashed off the wrong way, confused by the report of the gun. I rode for all I was worth to where the cowboy stood, and instantly caught a glimpse of two wolves, grizzled-gray and brown, which having been turned by his shot had started straight over the hill across the plain toward the mountains three miles away. As soon as I saw them I saw also that the rearmost of the couple had been hit somewhere in the body and was lagging behind, the blood running from its flanks, while the two greyhounds were racing after it; and at the same moment the track-hounds and the big dogs burst out of the thicket, yelling savagely as they struck the bloody trail. The wolf was hard hit, and staggered as he ran. He did not have a hundred yards' start of the dogs, and in less than a minute one of the greyhounds ranged up and passed him with a savage snap that brought him to; and before he could recover the whole pack rushed at him. Weakened as he was he could make no effective fight against so many foes, and indeed had a chance for but one or two rapid snaps before he was thrown down and completely covered by the bodies of his enemies. Yet with one of these snaps he did damage, as a shrill yell told, and in a second an over-rash track-hound came out of the struggle with a deep gash across his shoulders. The worrying, growling, and snarling were terrific, but in a minute the heaving mass grew motionless and the dogs drew off, save one or two that still continued to worry the dead wolf as it lay stark and stiff with glazed eyes and rumpled fur.

No sooner were we satisfied that it was dead than the Judge, with cheers and oaths and crackings of his whip, urged the dogs after the other wolf. The two greyhounds that had been with old man Prindle had fortunately not been able to see the wolves when they first broke from the cover, and never saw the wounded wolf at all, starting off at full speed after the unwounded one the instant he topped the crest of the hill. He had taken advantage of a slight hollow and turned, and now the chase was crossing us half a mile away. With whip and spur we flew towards them, our two greyhounds stretching out in front and leaving us as if we were standing still, the track-hounds and big dogs running after them just ahead of the horses. Fortunately the wolf plunged for a moment into a little brushy hollow and again doubled back, and this gave us a chance to see the end of the chase from nearby. The two greyhounds which had first taken up the pursuit were then but a short distance behind. Nearer they crept until they were within ten yards, and then with a tremendous race the little bitch ran past him and inflicted a vicious bite in the big beast's ham. He whirled around like a top and his jaws clashed like those of a sprung bear-trap, but quick though he was she was quicker and just cleared his savage rush. In another moment he resumed his flight at full speed, a speed which only that of the greyhounds exceeded; but almost immediately the second greyhound ranged alongside, and though he was not able to bite, because the wolf kept running with its head turned around threatening him, yet by his feints he delayed the beast's flight so that in a moment or two the remaining couple of swift hounds arrived on the scene.

He rose on his hind legs like a wrestler.

For a moment the wolf and all four dogs galloped along in a bunch; then one of the greyhounds, watching his chance, pinned the beast cleverly by the hock and threw him completely over. The other jumped on it in an instant; but rising by main strength the wolf shook himself free, catching one dog by the ear and tearing it half off. Then he sat down on his haunches and the greyhounds ranged themselves around him some twenty yards off, forming a ring which forbade his retreat, though they themselves did not dare touch him. However, the end was at hand. In another moment Old Abe and General Grant came running up at headlong speed and smashed into the wolf like a couple of battering-rams. He rose on his hind-legs like a wrestler as they came at him, the greyhounds also rising and bouncing up and down like rubber balls. I could just see the wolf and the first big dog locked together, as the second one made good his throat-hold. In another moment over all three tumbled, while the greyhounds and one or two of the track-hounds jumped in to take part in the killing. The big dogs more than occupied the wolf's attention and took all the punishing, while in a trice one of the greyhounds, having seized him by the hind-leg, stretched him out, and the others were biting his undefended belly. The snarling and yelling of the worry made a noise so fiendish that it was fairly bloodcurdling; then it gradually died down, and the second wolf lay limp on the plain, killed by the dogs unassisted. This wolf was rather heavier and decidedly taller than either of the big dogs, with more sinewy feet and longer fangs.

INDEPENDENCE | FOR PROHIBITION | JOSEPH SIM... | 4th District—W... | GISKIEL,

METHODIST EPISCOPAL MINISTER ADMIRES TAFT

Rev. W. I. McKenney Found Him Anxious To Spread Christianity.

URGED WORK IN PHILIPPINES.

Methodist Pastor Depreciates Discrimination On Account Of Differences In Creed.

Rev. William I. McKenney, pastor of Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church, who is personally acquainted with Judge Taft, the Republican nominee for the Presidency, has a high regard for him. When asked yesterday to give the results of his observations of the personal side of the Judge, Rev. McKenney said:

"Yes, I am glad to say I have the pleasure and honor of a personal acquaintance with Mr. Taft, and have had a number of conversations with him concerning matters both of church and state.

"I had an intense desire to see the man who had made such a magnificent record in the Philippines, so, in company with another of our ministers, called on him at his office in the War Department. The readiness with which we gained access to his private office impressed me deeply, especially as I have spent a good many years of my life in Washington, have been brought into contact with a great many Government officials, and it was in striking contrast with some of my past experiences.

"When we entered his room he was seated at his desk, which was piled high with official documents, and he was, I remember, dictating to a stenographer. He immediately arose and came toward us with outstretched hand, and with that glowing, genial smile, which one who meets him even once can never forget, gave us a cordial handshake and bade us be seated.

"I at once said, 'No, Mr. Secretary, we did not come in to take your time. We know you are a busy man and we came in just to give ourselves the pleasure of a personal greeting, bidding you Godspeed and wishing you every possible success in your new post of governmental responsibility.'

" 'Oh, sit down!' he said, 'I've got time to give you.'

"We had no sooner been seated than he at once launched out on matters touching the Philippines from which place he had so recently come and whose interests lay so near his heart.

" 'I suppose you gentlemen are naturally interested in missionary operations in the Philippines,' he said. We told him of course we were, very much so. He then looked at us intently and with an expression of countenance that showed that he spoke from his heart, said subs antially as follows:

" 'I am afraid your church is not quite awake to the full measure of its opportunity and responsibility concerning the Filipino people. They urgently need all the help they can get from the Christian churches here in the home field. And, while I am not criticising churches at all, it seems to me that instead of appropriating $15,000 or $16,000 for a year's work, you ought to have appropriated at least $50,000. And instead of electing a Bishop for all Asia, you should have elected a Bishop for the Philippines alone to stay there and give his entire time to the supervision of that work.

" 'The Filipino people are for the most part mere children, religiously speaking, and what they need is that Christian missionaries and teachers shall go there and not only preach and teach Christianity, but live it as well. They need an objective lesson in what Christianity has done and can do for human character and life. They need to be brought in daily contact with the pure and spotless lives of Christian men and women, to lift them to a higher plane of Christian civilization.'

"He talked on this line until we were amazed and profoundly impressed that he had not only given attention to governmental matters, but the religious conditions as well; that he had kept tab on the churches, and knew what they had done and were doing, and had opinions as to what they ought to do to meet the exigencies of the case. No Bishop of any church could have taken a broader-guaged view of the religious situation, or had a clearer vision of conditions and needs."

"Then you think Mr. Taft's church affiliations and creed have not put him out of sympathy with the general work of the Christian church?" was asked.

"I certainly do not," replied Rev. Mr. McKenny. "His expressed words don't look like it do they?"

"You do not sympathize, then, with the suggestion that church people ought to be influenced by their religious differences in voting for men for public office?" was the visitor's next question.

"Emphatically, no. Why should they be? Religious toleration is one of the foundation stones of our governmental structure. Freedom of thought and speech and action inheres in the privileges of citizenship. When the exercise of these rights interferes with the rights of others, or undermines loyalty to our country, it is a different matter. But until they do, we claim these rights for ourselves, let us accord them to others. To our own Master we stand or fall. If Mr. Taft is judged by one passage of Holy Writ, he has, always and everywhere, conspicuously stood the test: 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' In personal character and public office he has stood four square for righteousness.

"We have not been influenced by the denominational labels of our Presidents in the past. Look at the facts:

"Washington was a member of the Church of England; John Adams was a Unitarian; Thomas Jefferson was a 'Freethinker;' James Madison and James Monroe were Episcopalians; John Quincy Adams was a Unitarian; Andrew Jackson was a Presbyterian; Martin Van Buren was of the Dutch Reformed Church; William Henry Harrison and John Tyler were both Episcopalians; James K. Polk was a Methodist in sentiment, and late in life was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Zachary Taylor was an Episcopalian; Millard Fillmore was a Unitarian; Franklin Pierce was an Episcopalian; James Buckhannan was a Presbyterian; Abraham Lincoln affiliated with the Presbyterian body, though not a communicant; Andrew Johnson, so far as he had any church affiliations, was a Presbyterian; Ulysses S. Grant was a Methodist in sentiment and a trustee of Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church of Washington; Rutherford B. Hayes was also a Methodist in sentiment and a trustee of the Methodist church; James A. Garfield was a member of the Church of the Disciples; Chester A. Arthur was an Episcopalian. Grover Cleveland was an attendant upon the Presbyterian church; Benjamin Harrison was a member of the Presbyterian church, William McKinley was a staunch Methodist, and Theodore Roosevelt, as is well known, is a member of the Dutch Reformed Church.

"These facts were published a few weeks ago in an editorial in the New York Christian Advocate, one of the most careful in statement of religious weeklies, and can be verified by anyone who will take the pains to do so. It will be seen that the country has taken a wide range so far as church relations are concerned, and I am not aware that any vital interest has suffered on account of it. Even Thomas Jefferson, the 'Freethinker,' rendered conspicuous service to his country. Why, then, should we, in this day of grace and advanced age of Christian civilization and toleration, make an issue of this matter. Especially is this true where the man is so magnificently equipped in every essential respect for the exalted office of President.

"I say these things from no denominational or political standpoint, but in simple justice to Judge Taft, whom, as I have said, I know and greatly admire."

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The melancholy days have come and our summer residents have flown to their winter homes.

Yesterday and today witnessed the departure of the families who had been lingering with us later than usual—Mr. and Mrs. Ruhl, Mr. and Mrs. Harmison, Mrs. Annan and daughter, Miss Ott and Miss Harris.

Mrs. Virginia Pierce and family will occupy the old Bowman homestead on L street.

Mr. Eugene Wilson, who has been critically ill for some time, is some better, but is still a very sick man.

Rev. L. A. Rudisill, who has been ill for several weeks, is able to walk about but has not yet resumed his duties at the postoffice.

Next Sunday there will be no services in the M. E. church because of the Sunday School convention in Loch Lynn.

Mrs. Alderton and little daughter Bettie were guests at Haydenhurst this week. Mrs. A. is here to put her cottage in order for the winter.

Our school is going on nicely. We think we have two of the best teachers in the county—Misses DeBerry and Wilson.

Our new pastor received his household goods and placed them in the parsonage this week but his family will not be here until Wednesday of next Week.

A number of our people attended the funeral of Hon A. F. George at Swanton Tuesday.

Bad Wreck Near Gorman.

Confusion of orders is given as the cause of a serious head-on collision which occurred about 4 o'clock Tuesday morning at a point one mile west of Gorman. First 89 westbound and extra 405 eastbound came together head-on resulting in serious damage to both engines, the derailment of a number of cars and the slight injury of two brakemen, whose homes are at Ridgely.

It appears that the trains had a meet order at Wallman, which was afterwards changed to Dobbin and in some manner the orders were confused, resulting in what might have been a very disastrous wreck.

The wreck crews from both Ridgely and Elkins were summoned to clear the track which was not accomplished until Tuesday afternoon, No. 1 due in Elkins at 11 59, arriving more than four hours late.

ANOTHER BROADSIDE AT "H. P. T."

What "Independent" Says Concerning The Mountain Democrat's Chief Editor.

To the Editor of Oakland Republican.

The intrepid gyascutus who has heretofore written in the "Mountain Democrat" under the initials "H. P. T." now reverberates through mountain and valley under his cognomen, H. P. Tasker. He accuses himself of speaking the truth, and while admonishing "our old Republican friends," fires a lurid broadside in the interest of hell fire and damnation. Whether the two-columns used up is a paid advertisement, or if the proprietor chose to waste so much sweetness(?) on the desert air, we are not advised, but it is evident that the self-anointed moralist(?) has worked himself up into a jiggering frenzy over the Christian principles of Judge Taft. This crass, dense, pudgy, grumpy grouch is like a mud-turtle attempting to criticise a carrier pigeon. The poet Burns seems to have had him in mind when he wrote:

"Hear how he clears the points o'faith
With rattlin an' thumpin'.
Now meekly calm, now wild in wrath,
He's stampin', and he's jumpin'."

It is noted that week after week, this Mr. Tasker, in jaundiced vision, breaks imbecility, and in the most ridiculous out in a Bible tirade with unscrupulous and absurd manner attempts to prove by scriptural quotation that Judge Taft is an infidel. Josh Billings, estimating a man, says, "He will talk to-day like a wize man, and tomorrow like a phool, on the same subject," but Mr Tasker never changes his talk, never "rings off," he always talks "to-morrow." As Pope says:

"Who shames a scribbler? Breaks one cobweb through
He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread anew;
Destroy his fib, or sophistry in vain,
The creature's at his dirty work again."

But can it be possible that any sane man would change his vote for such a travesty on truth and reason as Mr. Tasker is spinning? I cannot bring myself to any such conviction. On the contrary I have too much faith in the judgment and feeling of fair play in the citizens of our community, however prejudiced some may be.

There are some men, as well as animals, who at times beats their record, but only man may allow his record to beat him. The man who persists in the role of moral censor for a community and pretends to teach and lead the way for his neighbors, and we are all neighbors, must expect the light turned on his own past and present, that one may examine his credentials—he may be a blind guide, a false prophet, an ignisfatuus whose flickering and unsteady light would lead us in the swamps and marshes, the bogs and fens of religion and politics. We regret and are surprise upon investigation, to find that Mr. Tasker's court record does not square at all with his religious activity directed against William H. Taft. Here we find a blasting array of the most reprehensible acts of his, smirching and damning his course as friend, counsellor and guide.

As far back as in 1873, and several cases in the following years, this Mr. Tasker was bound to the amount of $100 each to keep the peace. In the years 1878 and 1887 he was held for bond for appearance at court on the charge of assault and battery. In 1893 and on July 17, 1884, he was before the court We have this data at hand and will probably go into details later. For want of space we will report but one charge against Mr. Tasker in Allegany county, Md. That was an assault upon Mr. Urner G. Carl, of Cumberland, which occurred in his office about two years ago. This was considered a most reprehensible act. This is the Mr. Tasker who is now juggling scripture texts and criticising Judge Taft's religious beliefs.

Fellow citizens, would you follow the dictates and counsels of this man? I will assure you there is nothing in them. Judge Taft is not only a Unitarian, and I will speak from knowledge, he is a sincere Christian, and a devout believer and follower of Christ and his teachings. I affirm this as an absolute fact, that no man more deeply believes in Christ and His divinity. To say the least, it is unchristian, as well as un-American, to bring into question any man's creed who is the regular nominee or candidate for the President of the United States. Maryland was the first State of the Union to assert religious toleration and freedom from sectarian bias, and it is turning the hand of progress back more than two centuries to attempt to dominate by creed at this late day.

The deeds that a man does determines the sort of man he is. We are told by the Great Teacher himself, that by their fruit we shall know them. Certain it is, neither the church nor the creed makes a Christian, and certainly, no reader of these lines will dispute this for one moment. The grandest definition of religion may be seen in the Congressional Library, Washington, as an inscription over the statue of "Religion": "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" I ask you with all sincerity, whose life better squares with this definition than Judge Taft's? Compare his record of noble acts well performed, his ideal and unselfish life with Mr. Bryan's, and the former towers dome-like in the empyrean above the large professions and little deeds of the other. And remember that Judge Taft has not amassed wealth, but in the same time Mr. Bryan has accumulated a fortune, and at whose expense. The former has added life and lustre to his country, the latter has darkened and befogged its outlook.

In conclusion, I will add that we have had four Unitarian Presidents, and the country did not go to the bowwows. They were Thomas Jefferson, in faith a Unitarian; Millard Fillmore, a regular Unitarian, as were also John Adams and John Quincy Adams. But few persons ever think of their religious faith; they made first class Presidents. Why should the religious faith of Judge Taft be criticised? Those who are fully acquainted with the Unitarian faith say the least concerning it.

INDEPENDENT.

P. S. Would like to know if the editor of the "Mountain Democrat" desires to place himself on a par with "H. P. T."

Grantsville, Md., Oct. 26, 1908.

BITTINGER.

The rain which fell in this section last Friday and Saturday was a very acceptable and beneficial visitation.

A general row occurred in the settlement of Slavish, located on Jennings Bros.' R. R., near this village, on last Sunday afternoon and as a result many of the foreigners have left the country and others are threatened with murder if they remain.

Peter Opal's apple butter factory and the sugar camp on the Selders farm, a short distance from here, were destroyed by fire on Tuesday night of last week.

Thomas H. Brenneman has his new dwelling well under way and expects to have it ready for occupancy in a few weeks.

Josiah Hostetler, of Cove, Md., was calling in this section last Sunday.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger and daughter, Miss Effie, were shopping in Grantsville last Monday.

Lloyd F. Brenneman made a business trip to Cove, Md., last Monday.

Amos H. Reckner spent last week visiting Oakland and other points on the B. & O. R. R. and returned to his home at this place on Saturday evening.

Silas O. Wiley and wife, of Elk Lick, Pa., spent Sunday with relatives here.

Order of Publication.

Alice Armstrong vs. John Armstrong.

No. 1532 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree, a vinculo matrimonii, the plaintiff from the defendent.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married by the Rev. Harris, in Tucker county, West Virginia, at Easter 1895, and that they resided together in the State of West Virginia, until the month of March, 1898, and that though the conduct of plaintiff toward the said John Armstrong, her husband, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said John Armstrong, in the month of March, 1898, without just cause or reason, abandoned her, while they were living in Nicholas county, West Virginia, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation, and that immediately after such abandonment and desertion, the plaintiff removed to Garrett county, Maryland, where she has since made her home and supported herself and three children by manual labor, and by full further states that the plaintiff and defendant have had three children born to them from said marriage, the oldest, Mary A. now past sixteen years of age; Charles, past thirteen years of age, and Sarah J., now past ten years of age, the custody of which youngest child the plaintiff prays may be awarded to her. The bill then prays that the plaintiff may be divorced, a vinculo matrimonii, from the said defendant, John Armstrong, for the custody of said youngest child of the plaintiff, and for general relief, and an order of publication against the defendant, who is alleged to be a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 22nd day of October 1908, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of November, 1908, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of December, 1908, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy, test:—E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphan's Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of

WILLIAM FRUSH,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of April, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of October, 1908.

JOHN W. FRUSH,
Administrator,
R. F. D., Oakland, Md.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located. Said new road to begin at a point on the county road leading from Thayersville to Altamont, near the residence of Solomon Hoppe, running between the lands of Henry Myers, S. O. Clark, Thomas Garrett, Abel Dewitt, Martin Filsinger and Mrs. E. Fundenberg to intersect the Deer Park road at a point near Mrs. Fundenbergs farm, to extend a distance of about one and one-half miles, which is now a private road but used by the public, and examine whether said road shall be located as a county road, will meet on the 16th day of November, 1908 for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

ANDREW SHARTZER,
JOHN W. HANEY,
F. J. LOHR,
Examiners.

An Appetite

No matter how critical your taste or capricious your appetite, we are sure to be able to please you with

Pure Ice Cream.

Our aim is to make it the finest, and we seem to be successful, judging by its great popularity.

Any flavor you may prefer.

Any quantity you want.

Henry Lauer,

4tf Oakland, Md.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING
Send for prices.

SUPERVISORS NOTICE OF ELECTION.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 19, 1908.

Notice is hereby given to the Judges and Clerks of Election and to the qualified voters of Garrett county, Maryland, that in accordance with the provisions of Article XXXIII of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, passed at the January session, 1896, and amended by the Acts of 1900, 1901, 1902, 1904, 1906 and 1908, an election will be held in the several districts of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding elections and hereinafter set forth, on

TUESDAY,
The 3rd day of November, 1908

for the purpose of balloting for—

Eight Electors of President and Vice President of the United States and

One person for member of the House of Representatives of the United States in the Sixty-first Congress from the Sixth Congressional District of the State of Maryland.

Also for or against the following proposition to apply only to District No. 3:

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to a petition filed by certain qualified voters of the Third Election District of Garrett County, in accordance with Chapter 649, of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland for 1908, that at the Election to be held on the proposition "Shall District No. 3 of Garrett County, Maryland, Become Anti Saloon territory," will appear on the ballots for said District No. 3.

Tuesday, the 3rd day of November, 1908

The polls of said election will be opened in each and every Election District of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding the polls, at 8 o'clock a. m. and will be closed at the hour of 6 o'clock p. m. when the ballots shall be counted according to law.

For the information of all persons concerned the following Act of the Legislature, passed March 24, 1865, is published:

CHAPTER 161.

AN ACT prohibiting the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of election.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall not be lawful for the keeper of any hotel tavern, store, drinking establishment, or any other place where liquors are sold, or for any person or persons, directly or indirectly, to sell, barter, give or dispose of any spirituous or fermented liquors, ale, beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind on the day of the election hereafter to be held in the several counties of the State.

SEC. 2. And be it enacted, That any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be liable to indictment by the Grand Jury of the county where the offense is committed and shall, upon conviction by a Judge of any Circuit Court of the State, be fined a sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense—one-half the fine shall be paid to the informer, the other half to the County Commissioners for the use of public roads.

And the places of election in the several Election Districts of said Garrett county will be as follows:

Election District Number One—
Swanton.

In the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—
Friendsville.

In the Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

In old Postoffice building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—
Bloomington.

In Postoffice building in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—
Accident.

In the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—
Sang Run.

In the Election Building in the village of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—
Oakland.

In the Martin Store House, corner Third and Oak streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—
Ryan's Glade.

In the Election Building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—
Johnson's.

At the building of Thomas Johnson on National Road.

Election District Number Ten—
Deer Park.

In the building owned by Chas. R. Savage in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—
The Elbow.

At the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—
Bittinger.

In the G. W. Engle building in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillerville.

In the Paul Shultz building in the town of Kitzmillerville.

Election District Number Fourteen—
Oakland.

In the office of the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the town of Oakland.

By order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

D. M. MASON, Pres.,
C. V. GUARD,
S. LAWTON,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Charles E. M. Hilleary, vs. Joseph Thompson and wife.

No. 1532 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered, this 1st day of October 1908, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, that the sale of the Coal franchises, rights and privileges made and reported by Chas. E. M. Hilleary, Mortgagee, in the above entitled cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 6th day of November, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 31st day of October, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $24,100.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Jacob S. Miller, Mortgagee, vs. C. J. Yoder and wife.

No. 1565 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 21th day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and eight, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the day of November, 1908, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 14th day of November, 1908.

The report states the amount of sale to be $7300.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber of Garrett County, in Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, letter Administration on the personal estate of

J. RUSSELL BROWNING,

late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 29th day of October, 1908.

M. A. BROWNING,
Administrator,
Kitzmiller, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

JOHN W. BOWERS,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 26th day of November, 1908.

FLORENCE M. BOWERS,
Admin strat'x,
Hodson, Md.

PUTTING UP PRESCRIPTIONS

Is the most exacting part of our business—a task we do not shirk. Giving you just what your doctor orders, never filling it with something "just as good," we deserve, and by means of this advertisement ask, your patronage. Everything in the drug and chemical line you'll want is here, too

OAKLAND PHARMACY
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor,
OAKLAND, MD.

The Republican for Job Work.

INDEPENDENCE | FOR PROSECUTING | JOSEPH SIR | 4th District—W

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 32. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1908. NUMBER 36

Great Republican Victory Places Mr. Taft at Country's Head!

Late Figures Show Democratic Gains Throughout State Sufficient to Overcome Vote of Baltimore City.

PEARRE ELECTED BY MAJORITY OF 400, AGAINST 4509 TWO YEARS AGO

Withholding Sample Ballots in Wilson Law Counties Worked Havoc With Republicans—Dorchester and Talbot for Bryan—Lewis Loses Fight Against Pearre.

THE VOTE OF MARYLAND FOR PRESIDENT:

	1908. Bryan. Dem.	Taft Rep.	1904 Parker. Dem	Roosevelt. Rep.
Allegany	4778	5168	3326	*5232
Anne Arundel	3320	2872	3001	2849
Baltimore city	49116	50853	47901	47444
Baltimore county	9949	9833	9394	7570
Calvert	678	1063	740	1030
Caroline	1923	1565	1809	1452
Carroll	3515	3237	3527	4357
Cecil	2822	2303	2554	2425
Charles	1163	1651	1180	1659
Dorchester	*150	....	2087	2680
Frederick	5120	5933	5004	5780
Garrett	1121	2055	947	2051
Harford	3134	2678	3151	2561
Howard	1710	1202	1914	1258
Kent	1913	1737	1956	1841
Montgomery	2922	2057	3082	2711
Prince George's	2580	2515	2270	2845
Queen Anne's	2080	1126	2258	1487
Somerset	1128	1394	1580	1874
St. Mary's	885	1190	1247	2174
Talbot	2036	1903	2861	1999
Washington	4493	4659	4064	4581
Wicomico	2699	2217	2593	2179
Worcester	*610	....	2000	1450
Totals	109512	109180	109446	109479

*Indicated pluralities.
 Two counties incomplete.

From the unofficial returns, William Jennings Bryan has carried the State of Maryland by a few hundred votes. The accompanying table gives the actual figures, except as to a few of the counties where the returns are not yet all in, where the pluralities have been estimate from the figures that has been received.

The majority is so small that it is quite possible that the official count and the full returns may change the result, or at least show that the electoral vote of the State has been split, as it was four years ago, when Roosevelt got one and Parker seven of the eight.

An examination of the election returns from 50 precincts of Baltimore city selected at random shows an average difference of four votes between the Democratic elector getting the greatest number of votes and the one getting the least.

If such an averages should be maintained throughout the State, which has 712 precincts, it would make a difference of 2848 votes, and one or more of the Republican electors would undoubtedly slip through.

John A. Robinson of Harford heads the list of Republican electors, and it was he for whom the greatest number of Republican voters cast their ballots. The easiest way to mark the was to put a cross-mark opposite the name of the Presidential candidate, but many voters evidently thought that a mark opposite the name of the elector at the head of the list carried the whole Presidential ticket.

While there is thus a probability of the election of one Republican elector—the one at the head of the list—the chances for the success of two of them are very remote, because the decrease in the Republican vote for the first elector of this party and his party associates is about the same as the decrease in the votes of the Democratic electors similarly placed on the ballot.

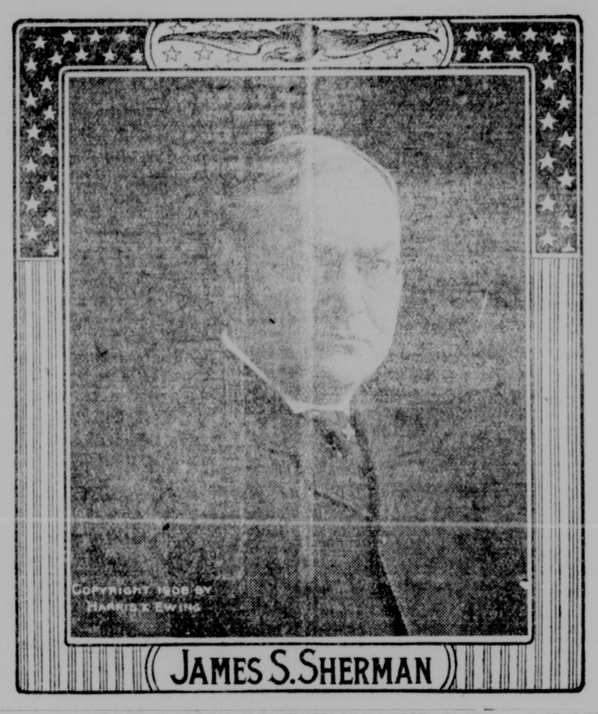
Four years ago Attorney-General Charles J. Bonaparte was first on the list of Republican electors, and he was the only one who won out. Consequently, Mr. Bonaparte went to Annapolis with seven Democratic electors to have himself officially recorded in favor of President Roosevelt.

As the returns from the counties came in several surprising situations developed. The most surprising was the tremendous falling off in the vote of Sydney E. Mudd for Congress in the Fifth Congressional district. The returns from the city wards of that district last night showed that Mr. Mudd had made considerable gains over two years ago, when he had a plurality of 3393 in the district, and seemed to make his election unquestionable. When the results from the counties arrived, however, they showed tremendous decreases, and enthusiastic Democrats had hope for a while of the success of the conductor-candidate, George M. Smith. The latter, however, failed of election by a trifle less than 400 votes. For the first time since it has been a city, Annapolis gave the Democratic Presidential candidate a majority.

The chief explanation of the surprising resnlt in the Fifth district is the change in the election law in the Wilson law counties, whereby no sample ballots are published. This evidently had its effect on the illiterate Republican vote in Mr. Mudd's district, as well as on the Eastern Shore, where such a Republican stronghold as Dorchester county not only reduced the Republican majority, but actually gave Bryan a plurality of more than 100.

Two explanations are offered for the tremendous dropping off of Pearre's vote in the Sixth district. One is the strength of his opponent, Lewis, among the mining population of Allegany county. Pearre himself has always been considered very strong with that element. The references made to the bill he introduced in Congress by President Roosevelt in the letter the latter made public during the last days of the campaign were of a nature calculated to gain the friendship of the union labor element for the Sixth district Congressman, but he himself was so affected by the implied criticism of the President that he issued a statement saying that he had introduced this bill in Congress merely by request. This act tended to weaken his hold on the labor people, while gaining for him no corresponding advantage among the voters opposed to the principles advocated in the Pearre bill.

Another and perhaps greater cause for the dropping in Pearre's vote was the apathy—not to use a more extravagant term—among the followers of Lloyd Lowndes in the district. Last year, when the Lowndes faction was successful in the Republican primaries, the Pearre people, it is alleged, "laid down" in the election and thus reduced the majorities in the district for the Governor and Legislative tickets. This time the Lowndes people seem to have retaliated in kind.



Garrett Republicans' Gibraltar

The following is the official returns of the election held in Garrett County on Tuesday of this week and places her in the counties of the State as the Gibraltar of Republicanism:

DISTRICTS.	Taft, R.	Bryan, D.	Pearre R.	Lewis, D.
No. 1—Swanton	133	93	133	80
No. 2—Selbysport	257	93	215	86
No. 3—Grantsville	240	149	238	134
No. 4—Bloomington	95	68	80	63
No. 5—Accident	115	126	124	116
No. 6—Sang Run	156	34	147	28
No. 7—Oakland, East	158	107	153	97
No. 8—Ryan's Glade	42	93	149	83
No. 9—Johnson's	153	54	31	54
No. 10—Deer Park	153	54	149	51
No. 11—Elbow	68	29	68	27
No. 12—Bittinger	118	32	111	29
No. 13—Kitzmiller	93	19	87	22
No. 14—Oakland, West	279	170	268	164
Totals	2055	1121	1981	1034
Majorities	934	....	947	....

In District No. 3 a proposition under the Anti-Saloon Bill passed at the last session of the Maryland Legislature, provided for the submission at the election of the proposition whether or not the District should become Anti-Saloon Territory, was carried by the temperance people by a vote of 195 to 175, a clear majority of the proposition of 20.

In various districts Mr. H. N. Cuppett, Prohibition candidate for Congress, received 114 votes.

Sylvester L. V. Young, Socialist candidate for Congress, received 20 votes.

Taft will Have Votes a-Plenty

So far as can be learned today, the following is the vote that will be cast in the electoral college, from the results attained in Tuesday's election. It will be seen that Mr. Taft will have a total of 308 votes and Mr. Bryan a total of 175 votes. There are in all 483 votes in the college, and 242 is necessary to a choice. Should the figures given below remain unchanged, Mr. Taft will have 66 votes to spare when the electoral college meets.

	Taft.	Bryan.
Alabama	—	11
Arkansas	—	9
California	10	—
Colorado	—	5
Connecticut	7	—
Delaware	3	—
Florida	—	5
Georgia	—	13
Idaho	—	3
Illinois	27	—
Indiana	15	—
Iowa	13	—
Kansas	10	—
Kentucky	—	13
Louisiana	—	9
Maine	6	—
Maryland	8	—
Massachusetts	16	—
Michigan	14	—
Minnesota	11	—
Mississippi	—	10
Missouri	—	18
Montana	—	3
Nebraska	8	—
Nevada	—	3
New Hampshire	4	—
New Jersey	12	—
New York	39	—
North Carolina	—	12
North Dakota	4	—
Ohio	23	—
Oklahoma	—	7
Oregon	4	—
Pennsylvania	34	—
Rhode Island	4	—
South Carolina	—	9
South Dakota	4	—
Tennessee	—	12
Texas	—	18
Utah	3	—
Vermont	4	—
Virginia	—	12
Washington	5	—
West Virginia	7	—
Wisconsin	13	—
Wyoming	—	3
Totals	308	175

Died.

BARNARD—Died, at the home of his father, Rev. W. H. Barnard, near Bloomington, on Tuesday, Harry Barnard, aged 18 years. About five years ago the young man received injuries in a mine near Bloomington which rendered him a helpless invalid, affecting his spine. As a result of these injuries his death ensued. His funeral took place yesterday.

Pension for Mr. Browning.

Hon. R. T. Browning, of Garrett county, a veteran soldier in the Civil War, of the Second Maryland Regiment, has been granted an increase of pension to $17, for wounds or disabilities incurred while in Civil War service. Mr. Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, was his attorney.

COMMISSION ON COUNTRY LIFE

To Be Held at College Park on November 9th.

To the Editor of The Republican:

There will be a meeting of the Commission on Country Life, appointed by the President of the United States, for the improvement of rural conditions, at the Maryland Agricultural College on Monday, Nov. 9, 1908.

The personnel of this Commission is of such a character as to make it worth while for every man and woman, interested in rural life in Maryland, to attend this meeting.

The Commission desires to have a representative gathering of men and women from Maryland, who have given the subject some thought and who are prepared to place their views before the Commission.

Every one conversant with Maryland rural conditions appreciates the facts that the operating agencies for an uplift in country life are not of a vigorous and progressive character. We need a campaign of agitation on this subject. Under the spiendid leadership of this Commission, untold blessing may be the harvest of our hearty co-operation with these able men:

L. H. Bailey is Dean of the Agricultural College of Cornell University.

Gifford Pinchot is Chief Forester of the Bureau of Forestry.

K. L. Butterfield is President of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Henry Wallace is editor of Wallace's Farmer, of Iowa.

Walter Page is editor of World's Work.

Prof. Bailey, in defining the work of the Commission, says: "These hearings are not to be speech-making meetings on the part of the members of the Commission. The Commission desires to take itself to as many localities as it can, in order that it may put itself in the way of receiving suggestions from those who are competent to make them."

Surely, we have in Maryland many men and women who are competent to formulate views on so vital a question as the one under consideration. A large and enthusiastic meeting is desired. An earnest appeal is made to those interested in the advancement of "Country Life" to be present with well defined views to place before this Commission.

Trusting that the zeal of the people of Maryland for the improvement of country life may be of such a character as to give us a large gathering of men and women ready for a heart to heart conference bearing upon the factors that make for the improvement of rural conditions.

Fraternally,
R. W. SILVESTER.

Elected Delegates.

At the annual Synod af the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Maryland, held in Frederick City last week Rev. E. Manges of Oakland, was elected ministerial delegate, and Mr. John T. Sincell, of Keyser, was elected lay delegate to attend the General Synod of the church which will be held at Richmond, Indiana, in May of next year.

Resolutions of Respect.

Adopted by Swanton Grange No. 194, at its regular meeting on Oct. 31, 1908:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the allwise Father to remove from our midst our Brother A. Frederick George, who departed this life on Oct. 25, 1908; therefore be it

Resolved, That we bow humbly to the decree of Divine Providence trusting that in Him all things are done for the good of them that love and serve Him.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy for we as a body do sadly mourn the loss of our departed brother who was a wise counsellor and a worthy lecturer in our beloved order.

Resolved, That our secretary be instructed to spread a copy of these resolutions upon the minutes of our order, and that our charter be draped in mourning for a period of six months.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and that a copy be sent to each of our county papers.

All will be well; let not our hearts be troubled
By passing clouds or shadows that may fall,
We must pass bravely on with faith undoubted,
The glorious end will justify it all.
I will believe that voice from heaven's portal,
Clear as the utterance of a silver bell—
It speaks to me a truth that is immortal—
All will be well.

J. G. FRIEND,
H. STEIDING,

KODAK SAFETY FILM

Federal Appropriations for Road Improvement

Address by HON. N. J. BACHELDER
Master of the National Grange, at Good Roads Convention, Buffalo, N. Y., July 7 and 8, 1908

As Master of the National Grange, I am pleased to have this opportunity for presenting some considerations of this important question from the farmers standpoint. The farmers have a common interest with all other advocates of road improvement, and although there may be difference of opinion as to methods, we are all working for the same ultimate purpose—the establishment of a complete system of properly constructed roads in all sections of the country. How such a road system can be secured is a problem that more directly concerns the farmers than any other class, and it may be safely said that the question of better roads is essentially a farmer's question.

It is true that all industrial interests are affected by the nature and condition of the roads over which the products of our farms are transported to market, but it is the farmers who suffer most from the inferior roads which constitute so large a percentage of the road system of the United States. And I am confident that it is to the farmers that we must look as the active force and influence that will secure the enactment of the legislature needed to bring about that improvement in road conditions that we all desire.

And here I wish to refer briefly to the seeming conflict of interests between the farmers and the owners of motor vehicles, which has in some districts given rise to pronounced antagonism and hostile legislation. That since the introduction and general use of the automobile there have been many instances of gross disregard by the drivers of motor vehicles of the public's right to the use of our highways, cannot be denied. The coming of the automobile has brought with it the victims of speed mania, who in their mad desire to beat records drive their high-powered machines along country roads at a speed dangerous to all others using these roads. It is only natural that the farmers, on whom in most sections of the country the chief burden of constructing and maintaining public roads has fallen, should resent the violation of their right to use these roads in safety, and should have sought to have severe penalties imposed on the offending parties. For myself I may say that I believe that the attitude of the farmers toward the automobile was to a large extent justified by the outrageous conduct of drivers of these vehicles. It is doubtless true, as is often asserted, that the "speed maniacs" constitute a very small percentage of the total number of automobile users. I am pleased to know that the abuses complained of in the earlier years of the automobile have to a large extent disappeared, and trust that through the influence of the automobile clubs and associations there may brought about a willingness to respect the right of the people to the use of the highways, that will give no occasion for hostility toward the orderly, reasonable use of the automobile.

I realize that the motor vehicle is here to stay, and that it is a factor that must be taken into consideration in discussing the improvement of our roads. The question as to how far it creates new problems of road maintenance and repair I must leave to the expert road makers and would only suggest that it is important that all the facts relating to the effects of automobile traffic on improved roads shoulds be ascertained before raising needless alarm over the alleged destructive tendencies of the inflated rubber tire.

One phase of the development of the motor vehicle that is of special interest to the farmers, is the possibilities of the commercial truck, power-operated farm wagon. It would seem that here is a large field for an industry that will be profitable to both the farmers and the manufacturers of such vehicles. With improved roads the use of motor trucks for the conveyance of farm products to market should become general in all sections of the country, thus enabling the farmer to market his crops more quickly an at less expense. I believe that no injury is caused to macadem roads by these commercial vehicles, but on the contrary their rubber tires operate practically as rollers and serve to keep such roads in good condition.

In this connection I wish to emphasize the fact that the road question in the United States is not only a farmer's question but first of all, a question of the commercial use of the highwys. To the farmer the roads are the means of transporting his products to market, and it is from this point of view that the farmers will insist that all plans for road improvement must be considered. Over our country roads there are annually hauled nearly 200,000,000 tons of staple farm products, and if to this add the smaller products such as fruit, milk, eggs, etc., and the fertilizers, feed, coal, lumber, etc., taken from the town to the farm we still have an aggregate of at least 250,000,000 tons carried for long or short distances over our highways. These figures show the enormous importance to the farmers of a system of improved roads that would enable them to reduce the cost of hauling this volume of freight from one-half to two-thirds of what it now costs them. It is estimated by competent authorities that over the ordinary country road the farmer draws an average of 2,000 pounds an average distance of 12 miles at a cost of $3.00, and it has been shown that with improved roads the cost of moving the same load that distance would be but little more than $1.00. Making allowance for exceptional cases it is certain that the cost of transportating a ton of farm products over improved roads is not onehalf of the cost over earth roads. Under a general system of improved roads the cost of hauling these 250,000,000 tons would be cut in two, thus effecting a direct saving to the farmers of the country of at least $125,000,000 annually.

Nor is this the only saving to the farmers that would be effected through improved roads. Because of bad roads the farmers or their hired men must now spend twice as much time on the road as would be required under a proper system. In bad weather the roads are often impassable, so that time must be taken from the farm work in fine weather to get the crops to market. With a system of good roads over which farm products could be hauled in one-half of the time now necessary, the farmers would have just so much additional time for other work, and could therefore greatly increase the productivity of their farms.

It is needless to say that I should not occupy your time with any extended statement of the benefit of good roads. The direct saving in dollars and cents is only one of the many advantages to the farmers that would result from improved roads. There can be no question that the deplorable condition of our roads is to a large extent responsible for the disatisfaction with country life, which drives so many of our people into the towns and cities. Bad roads make farming unprofitable and undesirbale. They increase the solitude of life on the farm by making more difficult and less frequent visits to the neighbors, and to the villages and towns. They limit opportunity by forcing the farmer to spend twice as much time in going to and from his market as he would with a good road system. In short, the greatest drawback to farm life today is the condition of the average country road, and the improvement of our roads is of greater importance to the farmers than any other suggested legislative reform.

Nor is it necessary to dwell upon the inferior character of our existing roads. The fact that out of a total road mileage in the United States of 2,151,570 only a fraction over 7 per cent. can be called improved, speaks for itself.

The facts as to present conditions have long been known to the thoughtful farmers of the country, and they have been the first to realize the urgent need for radical reforms in methods of road construction and improvement. It is true that the farmer is naturally conservative, and perhaps has not taken up the subject of better roads as quickly as the residents of towns and cities would act in a matter vitally affecting their interests, but from my wide acquaintance with the farmers of all sections of the country I am prepared to affirm that they are as a whole awake to the importance of this subject, and ready to do all in their power to further the work of road improvement.

The farmers recognize the need for better roads, and realize how largely such roads would contribute to their comfort and prosperity. They are anxious too that well-considered plans for road improvement should be submitted to the state and national legislatures, and will do all in their power to aid in securing the adoption of such plans.

It may be asked why, if the farmers favor good roads, the work of road improvement has not made greater progress. The chief reason is to be found in the lack of the money required for the construction and maintenance of improved roads. Many farming sections of the country are sparsely populated, and the economic condition of the farmers in general is such that they regard it as impossible for them to contribute in taxes the funds necessary for the construction of a permanent road system. While it is true that it would pay even the poorest communities to increase their expenditures for road improvement, it may be said that as a general proposition the means of the farming districts are wholly inadequate to provide for a proper road system.

In view of these conditions the farmers have in recent years come to realize that the road problem is not merely a question for the communities through which the roads run, but one that concerns the people of the states and of the nation as a whole. They are convinced that as the workers of the towns and cities, the manufacturers, merchants, and indeed all classes and interests, are affected by present conditions, the people of the entire country should aid in establishing a better system. Believing that appopriations for this purpose should be made from other sources than local taxation they have aided the movement for state aid for highway improvement which has been in progress for some years past, and their votes have aided in securing action on this matter in various states.

In many states, however, the same conditions which prevent the construction of the needed mileage of improved roads make it impracticable to secure the desired appropriation by the state. The necessity for better roads is admitted, but it is not believed that the states are justified in increasing their tax rate to the extent needful for this purpose.

The general recognition of these conditions has in recent years given rise to a growing demand for National aid for public improvement. It is urged by the farmers that they do not receive a fair share of the benefits of the money raised by taxes upon the people of the whole country, and that the improvement of public highways is as equally deserving of Federal assistance as is the improvement of our waterways, for which large amounts are annually appro,riated by Congress.

The expenditures for river and harbor improvement are justified on the ground of their importance to the trade and commerce of the country as a whole. The advocates of National aid for better roads believe that the improvement of the public highway is of even greater importance to the people of the entire country, since this is a matter that affects every industrial interest, and will benefit the trade and commerce of every section of the United States.

I have recently had brought to my attention in a striking form the facts as to the relatively small proportion of the nation's revenue that is devoted to purposes affecting the great agricultural interests of the country. Statistics of the exports from the United States for the ten years ending with 1906, show that nearly 60 per cent. (59.13 to be exact) of the exports during that period were the products of our farms, the total value of these products amounting to more than eight billions of dollars. Yet, for the benefit of the industry producing these enormous values, there was expended during the same period less than one per cent. of the total Federal expenditures, met chiefly by indirect taxes paid largely by the farmers of the entire country. During that period Congress appropriated $180,537,000 for the improvement of our waterways and harbors, but not one dollar (unless the few thousands annually appropriatnd for the Office of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, are so regarded) for the improvement of our highways.

The farmers are determined that this state of affairs shall not continue. They have made up their minds that Congress must devote a share of the annual appropriations to the construction and maintenance of our roads. They are not committed to any special policy as to how these appropriations shall be expended, so long as care is taken that the money is wisely devoted to the purpose for which it is intended. Some of us believe that the creation of a National Highways Commission, with power to organize an efficient corps of trained road engineers, who in co-operation with the state and local authorities, would supervise the disbursement, to be satisfactory solution of the problem. This is, however, a matter to be worked out by the Committees of the House and Senate which will pass on the legislation to establish the general policy of National aid, and I am confident that a plan will be devised that will be satisfactory to Congress, that state and local road officials, and the people of the country as a whole.

National aid will not, as some persons have suggested, lessen the interest of the states, counties, and townships in road improvement. On the contrary, the roads constructed with Federal assistance will serve to stimulate everywhere the desire for better roads, and will be the means of ultimately giving the entire country a uniform system of scientifically constructed public highways.

Last Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers

The undersigned, as County Treasurer for the years 1906 and 1907, hereby notifies all who have not paid their taxes that they must do so immediately, otherwise I shall be compelled to advertise the property of such delinquents, consequently costs will be added.

I have been as lenient with delinquents as I possibly could be; the county's debts must be paid and I am expected to pay all orders upon presentation. This I cannot do unless I have the funds on hand with which to meet the obligations of the county. There is yet outstanding several thousand dollars of uncollected taxes. The money is due the county and should have been paid months ago. I make this last appeal to the tax payers and request that they respond at once, otherwise the law will be invoked.

Let me hear from you.

Yours respectfully,
HORACE R. DEWITT,
tf Late Treasurer of Garret County.

Dissolution Notice.

This is to give notice that the firm of Reams & Browning, doing general mercantile business, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Browning retiring. The business will be continued by Mr. Reams.

REAMS & BROWNING.
Swallow Falls, Aug 8, 1908. 3t

TRUTH TOLD UNDER DIFFICULTY

When the Rules of Evidences Are Brought to Bear Upon Witness.

Recently the writer was called to testify as a witness in a case before a court in the city of Boston. He was told to hold up his right hand, and was made to swear that in his testimony in the case he would "tell the truth." This he proceeded to do to the best of his knowledge and belief. But in the cross-examination a lawyer was permitted by the court to do his best to induce the witness to tell something else than the truth, and he was also prevented from telling the whole truth as he had sworn to do; not because what he would say was not true, nor because it was not pertinent to the case, but because it was ruled out on certain technical rules of evidence which prevail in our court procedure. Moreover, a certain part of the testimony was stricken out; not because it was not true, nor because it was not pertinent, but on similar technical grounds. The part erased from the record was an essential part of the testimony, and the erasure left the witness as having testified to a matter of which he could not have testified except under the circumstance, mention of which was stricken from the record. In an attendance on a good many cases in court we have observed that according to the customary methods of the treatment of witnesses it is the careful and conscientious witness who is usually most embarrassed. The careless and perhaps conscienceless witness finds it easy to make statements which come within the rules of evidence; but the witness who tries to testify exactly in accordance with the oath he has taken is constantly harassed by objections of counsel and the limitations imposed by the courts. After a good deal of observation and several experiences the writer is convinced that the administration of an oath to a witness to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," and then the permission of practices by the court of methods which prevent the witness from keeping his oath strictly and fully, is nothing less than a solemn farce. —Boston Watchman.

Protection Against Loss By Fire.

Is your property insured? If not, could you afford to lose your home or your place of business at this time by fire? If such a misfortune should overtake you are you able to rebuild without borrowing money and putting a mortgage on your premises? If not, then insure your property at once in one of the large and reliable Fire Insurance Companies represented by our Agency, and in case of fire you will be promptly paid the amount of loss sustained under your policy, and it will not be necessary to borrow. Combined assets of Companies represented, more than $85,000,000. Write for information and rates.

FRED A. THAYER, Agent.
52-2t4s Oakland, Md.

DOES IT PAY?

to tramp errands, lose time and suffer inconvenience—to save the cost of a telephone message.

The C.&P. LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE Telephone Comp'y

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and anouncements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later at remnant counter prices. Think it over.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M.D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of Claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.
For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK. Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m.. Arrive *2.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBDELAND and Way Points. Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *2.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO. Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.). Depart *9.26 a. m., *5.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING. Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.). Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS. Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p. m.

FOR SALE.

We will sell at private sale at our farms between Mt. Lake Park and Oakland,

1 Gasoline Engine,

8 horse-power, made by the International Harvester Co. Almost new and in perfect running order. Will be sold for $275.

1 Hay Bailer,

operated by horse power. Makes standard size bales.

For further information call on or write to

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
Oakland, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars

Cameras and Photo Supplies

GETTY BROWNING,
CIVIL AND MINING
ENGINEERING.

Office—"Mountain Democrat Building,"
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Real Estate Bought and Sold.

Particular Attention Given
Railroad & Mine Surveying.

Surveys made for Town Sites, Sewerage and Water Works. Prompt attention given Land Surveying. Both Phones.

Land for Sale.

We have for sale the following valuable tracts of land :

One Military Lot of 50 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation. All good land, and every acre tillable. Watered by several good springs and a never failing small run. Contain some good timber. One-half mile from R. R. siding, and one and one-half miles from Oakland.

Also part of two Military Lots containing about 50 acres. This property is directly East of Oakland, on the South side of the B. & O. R. R. siding on the North side of tracks. Contains valuable grazing land, a portion of which is in cultivation. Valuable R. R. frontage.

Also 10 acres suitable for building sites, just East of Oakland on the North side of the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park road.

For further information, address

THE H. WEBER & SONS CO.,
6-tf Oakland, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Department

WITHIN the past year the increased made upon the Job Printing Department of The Republican necessitated many improvements, and to meet the requirements of our rapidly increasing business an addition of considerable proportions to our present building is in contemplation; new type and improved machinery must be purchased—but in the meantime all orders will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The products of our Job Printery are all models in the class—our customers are numerous and well satisfied, and when ordering

Statements, Vouchers,
Envelopes, Cards,
Sale Bills, Posters,
Bank Forms, Billheads,
Letterheads, Tags,
Programs, Folders,

and

Letter Press Printing of all Kinds

They are confident that the work will be Satisfactory in every particular---in WORKMANSHIP, PRICE and PAPER.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF PRINTING

Lumber and Coal Companies' Forms
Bank Stationery, Hotel Prospectus,
Lodge and Society Laws,
Reports, Etc.

It will cost you nothing to submit your Printing to us. Estimates will be cheerfully furnished you free. It must be borne in mind, however, that we do not do "cheap" printing, but we do Good Printing which has a par value of one hundred cents for every dollar invested in the product of THE REPUBLICAN PRINTERY.

THE REPUBLICAN
Job Printing Departm't
OAKI AND, MARYLAND.

HUNTING THE BUFFALO

BY
THEODORE ROOSEVELT

[Copyright, 1885, by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Published under arrangement with G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.]

ONE September I determined to take a short trip after bison. At that time I was staying in a cow-camp a good many miles up the river from my ranch; there were then no cattle south of me, where there are now very many thousand head, and the buffalo had been plentiful in the country for a couple of winters past, but the last of the herds had been destroyed or driven out six months before, and there were only a few straggliers left. It was one of my first hunting trips; previously I had shot with the rifle very little, and that only at deer or antelope. I took as a companion one of my best men, named Ferris (a brother of the Ferris already mentioned); we rode a couple of ponies, not very good ones, and each carried his roll of blankets and a very small store of food in a pack behind the saddle.

Leaving the cow-camp early in the morning, we crossed the Little Missouri and for the first ten miles threaded our way through the narrow defiles and along the tortuous divides of a great tract of Bad Lands. Although it was fall and the nights were cool the sun was very hot in the middle of the day, and we jogged along at a slow pace, so as not to tire our ponies. Two or three black-tail deer were seen, some distance off, and when we were a couple of hours on our journey, we came across the fresh track of a bull buffalo. Buffalo wander a great distance, for, though they do not go fast, yet they may keep travelling, as they graze, all day long; and though this one had evidently passed but a few hours before, we were not sure we would see him. His tracks were easily followed as long as he had kept to the soft creek bottom, crossing and recrossing the narrow wet ditch which wound its way through it; but when he left this and turned up a winding coulie that branched out in every direction, his hoofs scarcely made any marks in the hard ground. We rode up the ravine, carefully examining the soil for nearly half an hour, however; finally, as we passed the mouth of a little side coulie, there was a plunge and crackle through the bushes at its head, and a shabby-looking old bull bison galloped out of it and, without an instant's hesitation, plunged over a steep bank into a patch of rotten, broken ground which led around the base of a high butte. So quickly did he disappear that we had not time to dismount and fire. Spurring our horses we galloped up to the brink of the cliff down which he had plunged; it was remarkable that he should have gone down it unhurt. From where we stood we could see nothing; so, getting our horses over the broken ground as fast as possible, we ran to the butte and rode round it, only to see the buffalo come out of the broken land and climb up the side of another butte over a quarter of a mile off. In spite of his great weight and cumbersome, heavy-looking gait, he climbed up the steep bluff with ease and even agility, and when he had reached the ridge stood and looked back at us for a moment; while so doing he held his head high up, and at that distance his great shaggy mane and huge fore-quarter made him look like a lion. In another second he again turned away and made off; and, being evidently very shy and accustomed to being harassed by hunters, must have travelled a long distance before stopping, for we followed his trail for some miles until it got on such hard, dry ground that his hoofs did not leave a scrape in the soil, and yet did not again catch so much as a glimpse of him.

Wheeling, he charged me with lowered horns.

It was late in the afternoon before we saw any game; then we made out in the middle of a large plain three black specks, which proved to be buffalo—old bulls. Our horses had come a good distance, under a hot sun, and as they had had no water except from the mud-hole in the morning they were in no condition for running. They were not very fast anyhow; so, though the ground was unfavorable, we made up our minds to try to creep up to the buffalo. We left the ponies in a hollow half a mile from the game, and started off on our hands and knees, taking advantage of every sage-brush as cover. After a while we had to lie flat on our bodies and wriggle like snakes; and while doing this I blundered into a bed of cactus, and filled my hands with the spines. After taking advantage of every hollow, hillock, or sage-brush, we got within about a hundred and twenty-five or fifty yards of where the three bulls were unconsciously feeding, and as all between was bare ground I drew up and fired. It was the first time I ever shot at buffalo, and, confused by the bulk and shaggy hair of the beast, I aimed too far back at one that was standing nearly broadside on towards me. The bullet told on his body with a loud crack, the dust flying up from his hide; but it did not work him any immediate harm, or in the least hinder him from making off; and away went all three, with their tails up, disappearing over a slight rise in the ground.

Much disgusted, we trotted back to where the horses were picketed, jumped on them, a good deal out of breath, and rode after the flying game. We thought that the wounded one might turn out and leave the others; and so followed them, though they had over a mile's start. For some seven or eight miles we loped our jaded horses along at a brisk pace, occasionally seeing the buffalo far ahead; and finally, when the sun had just set, we saw that all three had come to a stand in a gentle hollow. There was no cover anywhere near them; and, as a last desperate resort, we concluded to try to run them on our worn-out ponies.

As we cantered toward them they faced us for a second and then turned round and made off, while with spurs and quirts we made the ponies put on a burst that enabled us to close in with the wounded one just about the time that the lessening twilight had almost vanished; while the rim of the full moon rose above the horizon. The pony I was on could barely hold its own, after getting up within sixty or seventy yards of the wounded bull; my companion, better mounted, forged ahead, a little to one side. The bull saw him coming and swerved from his course, and by cutting across I was able to get nearly up to him. The ground over which we were running was fearful, being broken into holes and ditches, separated by hillocks; in the dull light, and at the speed we were going, no attempt could be made to guide the horses, and the latter, fagged out by their exertions, floundered and pitched forward at every stride, hardly keeping their legs. When up within twenty feet I fired my rifle, but the darkness, and especially the violent, labored motion of my pony, made me miss; I tried to get in closer, when suddenly up went the bull's tail, and wheeling, he charged me with lowered horns. My pony, frightened into momentary activity, spun round and tossed up his head; I was holding the rifle in both hands, and the pony's head, striking it, knocked it violently against my forehead, cutting quite a gash, from which, heated as I was, the blood poured into my eyes. Meanwhile the buffalo, passing me, charged my companion, and followed him as he made off, and, as the ground was very bad, for some little distance his lowered head was unpleasantly near the tired pony's tail. I tried to run in on him again, but my pony stopped short, dead beat; and by no spurring could I force him out of a slow trot. My companion jumped off and took a couple of shots at the buffalo, which missed in the dim moonlight; and to our unutterable chagrin the wounded bull labored off and vanished in the darkness. I made after him on foot, in hopeless and helpless wrath, until he got out of sight.

So far the trip had certainly not been a success, although sufficiently varied as regards its incidents; we had been confined to moist biscuits for three days as our food; had been wet and cold at night, and sunburned till our faces peeled in the day; were hungry and tired, and had met with bad weather, and all kinds of accidents; in addition to which I had shot badly. But a man who is fond of sport, and yet is not naturally a good hunter, soon learns that if he wishes any success at all he must both keep in memory and put in practice Anthony Trollope's famous precept: "It's dogged as does it." And if he keeps doggedly on in his course the odds are heavy that in the end the longest lane will prove to have a turning. Such was the case on this occasion.

Shortly after mid-day we left the creek bottom, and skirted a ridge of broken buttes, cut up by gullies and winding ravines, in whose bottoms grew bunch grass. While passing near the mouth, and to leeward of one of these ravines, both ponies threw up their heads, and snuffed the air, turning their muzzles towards the head of the gully. Feeling sure that they had smelt some wild beast, either a bear or a buffalo, I slipped off my pony, and ran quickly but cautiously up along the valley. Before I had gone a hundred yards, I noticed in the soft soil at the bottom the round prints of a bison's hoofs; and immediately afterwards got a glimpse of the animal himself, as he fed slowly up the course of the ravine, some distance ahead of me. The wind was just right, and no ground could have been better for stalking. Hardly needing to bend down, I walked up behind a small sharp-crested hillock, and peeping over, there below me, not fifty yards off, was a great bison bull. He was walking along, grazing as he walked. His glossy fall coat was in fine trim, and shone in the rays of the sun; while his pride of bearing showed him to be in the lusty vigor of his prime.

As I rose above the crest of the hill, he held up his head and cocked his tail in the air. Before he could go off, I put the bullet in behind his shoulder. The wound was an almost immediately fatal one, yet with surprising agility for so large and heavy an animal, he bounded up the opposite side of the ravine, heedless of two more balls, both of which went into his flank and ranged forwards, and disappeared over the ridge at a lumbering gallop, the blood pouring from his mouth and nostrils. We knew he could not go far, and trotted leisurely along on his bloody trail; and in the next gully we found him stark dead, lying almost on his back, having pitched over the side when he tried to go down it. His head was a remarkably fine one, even for a full buffalo. He was lying in a very bad position, and it was most tedious and tiresome work to cut it off and pack it out. The flesh of a cow or calf is better eating than is that of a bull; but the so-called hump meat—that is, the strip of steak on each side of the backbone—is excellent, and tender and juicy. Buffalo meat is with difficulty to be distinguished from ordinary beef. At any rate, the flesh of this bull tasted uncommonly good to us, for we had been without fresh meat for a week; and until a healthy, active man has been without it for some little time, he does not know how positively and almost painfully hungry for flesh he becomes, no matter how much farinaceous food he may have. And the very toil I had been obliged to go through, in order to procure the head, made me feel all the prouder of it when it was at last in my possession.

Before he could go off I put a bullet in behind the shoulder.

A Deceptive Attitude.

A scene that was more than farcical, declares M. A. P., occurred in the house of commons last season. Two of the most respectable members of the house were seen with their coats off and with a staid old policeman standing between them. They two had been downstairs to wash their hands and by some mischance had changed coats. They went into the house together. One of them, putting his hand into his coat pocket, pulled out an old brier pipe of very strong flavor. It was not his.

He looked at the coat, also that of his neighbor, and, turning to his friend, said:

"Excuse me, but I think you have put on my coat."

"I beg your pardon. I have done nothing of the kind."

"I think," replied the other member, "this is your pipe, and if you put your hand into the right hand pocket of the coat you are wearing you will find a cigar case."

"Dear me!" was the reply. "You certainly are right. What shall we do?"

"We cannot change in the house," observed the first member. "Let us go into the division lobby."

Here is where the policeman came in. Seeing the two facing each other and at the same time taking off their coats, the policeman feared the worst. He rushed up and, placing a hand on the shoulder of each, said:

"Gentlemen! Gentlemen! Not here, please!"

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1908.

"H. P. T." is responsible.

IS BRYAN still running?

"H. P. T." will have our moral support in his efforts to "do better."

GARRETT stood steadfast, but the blush of shame is on Allegany.

WHILE Col. Pearre is elected by a small majority Garrett county furnished it more than double.

BRYAN, the Peerless Loser, has already started on the manuscript for his book, "The Third Battle."

COL. PEARRE'S close run for Congress may remove him as a possible candidate for Judge against His Honor A. Hunter Boyd.

THE ELECTION OF MR. TAFT.

The country is to be congratulated upon the result of the national election yesterday. The verdict of the majority of the voters was in favor of William H. Taft, the Republican candidate for President. Mr. Taft received the support not only of Republicans, but of many independent voters and of many Democrats representing the conservative elements in the Democratic party. The States carried by Mr. Taft insure him a decisive majority in the Electoral College, and this demonstrates most impressively the strength of his candidacy and the confidence which it inspired among all elements. In the result of the election all good citizens will patriotically concur, and regardless of party affiliations, stand shoulder to shoulder for the good of the country.

The election of Mr. Taft was due primarily to the profound conviction of the majority of the voters that the time had come to exercise the sober second thought, to moderate the tone and scope of agitation and to place at the head of the Government a man whose influence will be exerted firmly, but rationally, for necessary reform policies. Mr. Taft is honest, courageous and candid. He attempted no concealment of his position on any of the issues which entered nto the campaign. At the same time he refused to appeal to the prejudices or the special interests of any classes among the voters. He revealed himself to the people as a man of positive convictions, who adheres inflexibly to the fundamental principles of the law, a man who is essentially reasonable, who believes in the equality of all men before the law, who typifies constructive statesmanship, progress and the spirit of sane reform by orderly methods.

The election of Mr. Taft is not a reaction against reforms that are needed. It is, however, a reaction against indiscriminate agitation and against extreme legislation conceived in a spirit of destructiveness and enforced recklessly without regard to the consequences. It is a reaction against the executive policies and legislative expedients which take no account of the injury that may be done to the law-abiding business interests of the nation by spectacular methods and unbalanced and sweeping denunciations and threats. In the opinion of thoughtful men, Mr. Taft is the antithesis of impulsive and mercurial statesmanship. He has convinced the people that he is a man of fixed principles, definite purposes, essentially rational and deliberate; a man who acts upon knowledge and upon reason, and has a sufficient reason for every action. A President of this type is sorely needed in the White House.

While the country is to be congratulated that statesmanship of this type is again to hold sway in the office of President, the Democratic party is also to be congratulated upon its deliverance from the leader who has thrice led it to defeat—from the thraldom of extreme and unsafe political and economic doctrines. The Democratic party has had another impressive and, if the party has ordinary wisdom and courage, a final object lesson in the futility of attempting to re-establish itself in public confidence under the leadership of Mr. Bryan and the policies with which he is associated. If Mr. Bryan's third defeat has the result of bringing the Democratic party back to the paths of true Democracy, under the leadership of men loyal to the principles of the historic Democracy, the election of Mr. Taft will accomplish two important and valuable results: It will assure the nation a safe and efficient administration; it will rehabilitate and give new strength to a great political party.

With reference to the attitude of The Sun in this election, we can only repeat what we said at the beginning of the campaign—that we supported Mr. Taft because we regard him as the safer, the stronger and in every way the better man to be intrusted with the great responsibilities of the Presidential office and because we believe he stood for policies and methods which would tend to restore confidence and business prosperity and promote the best interests of all classes. In a word we supported him because we believed his election would be better in every way for the country than the election of Mr. Bryan.

Our indorsement of Mr. Taft, however, did not include the endorsement of all the Republican principles and and practics, and we take it that neither is the country's indorsement of him to be so construed. There are many things which the Republican party will have to do, many practices which it will have to repudiate and many reforms which it will have to institute if it hopes to retain the support and confidence of the country. Mr. Taft will begin his administration with a great opportunity and a great responsibility, and we sincerely trust that he will fully improve the one and measure up to the other.—Baltimore Sun.

A REPORT UPON FORESTRY WORK

Will be Submitted by Maryland to the National Conservation Commission.

Maryland will be one of the first States to make a report of what has been done in forestry work to the national conservation commission appointed by President Roosevelt. It is also stated that the information that the State board of forestry is to furnish will probably be more complete than that of any of the other States. The National board expects to make a report on conditions throughout the country, as far as can be learned, about the first of the year.

State Forester F. W. Besley said that the Forestry Board was at work collecting the data showing what had been done during the summer, and expected to be able to forward it to Washington in a week's time. With the information will go maps of counties, showing the timber tracts and indicating by means of different colors just what kind of trees predominate in each patch of forest land. Although the work has not been completed all over the State, Mr. Besley said that very full information could be furnished, and he expected that within a year there would be maps of every section of Maryland. During the past few months field surveys and comprehensive studies of forest conditions have been made in the following counties; Garrett, St Mary's, Allegany, Calvert, Queen Anne and Wicomico. Previous to that the work had been completed in Prince George's, Kent, Harford and Worcester counties.

"Maryland is better prepared to furnish the conservation committee with useful information than almost any other State that I know of," said Mr. Besley. "Many of the States will make conjectures and draw conclusions, but we have been careful in obtaining our data, and the information that we offer will be the result of accurate inspection. The maps are especially good and show the conditions at a glance in each of the counties in which work has been completed. It is our intention to draw up a State map after all the counties have been completed. We have gained much valuable knowledge through some of the recent surveys. In Prince George's and Wicomico counties it has been ascertained that cultivation of some pretty good tracts of land has been abandoned in recent years, and these are rapidly being covered with timber. The same is true to some extent of Prince George's and Calvert counties. In other sections of the State we find the reverse of this is true, a good deal of forest land have lately been taken over for agricultural purposes.

"The organization of a body of forest wardens two years ago has turned out to have been an excellent move and these men have done good work along the line of collecting data. They have also been able during the last few months to keep down the loss through forest fires. We have not suffered as have some of the adjacent States in this respect. There have been some fires in Allegany and Garrett counties, but they were soon gotten under control. You see, the wardens have the power to employ men to help them in time of great emergency. Just now there are big fires in West Virginia, but I don't think there is much danger of the flames spreading into Maryland.

"I expect to start on a rather extensive trip through the Eastern Shore about the first of November, and will make a carefnl examination of all wood lots in that section. A good many applications are beginning to come to us from farmers and land-owner who desire to take advantage of section 4 of the State Forest Laws, which provides that the State forester shall, upon request and under the sanction of the board of forestry, co-operate with counties, towns, corporations and individuals in preparing plans for the protection, management and replacement of trees, wood lots and timber tracts, under an agreement that the parties obtaining such assistance pay at least the field expenses of the men employed in preparing the plans.

"The forestry department at the State Agricultural College is doing a good work in an educational line and I will soon begin the work of preparing the lectures which I will deliver there during January, February and March. Last session 32 young men took these courses."—Baltimore Sun.

When in town don't pass me by but come in and see Baumgartner.

HEALTH REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

State Board Issues Warning to Parents About Care of Children.

During the month of September, tuberculosis, "the destruction that wasteth at noontide," caused 78 deaths. Sixty persons were massacred by typhoid fever alone, with 363 additional reported cases. Compared with the previous month, however, these figures show a very substantial diminution. Only two of the infectious and communicable diseases are on the increase, namely diphtheria and scarlet fever. The number of diphtheria cases has arisen from 32 to 93; the number of scarlet fever cases, from 30 to 54. As a majority of the cases occurred in school children, this increase can be ascribed to the role played by the public school as a disseminator of diseases.

The State Board of Health again wishes to urge upon parents and guardians, the importance of submitting to their family physician every case of sore throat or eruption, no matter how seemingly simple in character, occurring in school children entrusted to their care. The diseases of children are usually acute, that is, a sick child either gets well quickly or dies quickly. Should recovery ensue, irreparable damage has ofttimes been done to the tender tissues and organs of the growing child who is then compelled to go through life maimed and halt. In antitoxin we have a specified remedy for diphtheria, but no such curative serum has as yet been discovered for scarlet fever. Antitoxin should be administered at once, without waiting for the results of a throat culture, which, however, should always be made. Isolation and disinfection are invaluable adjuncts in the treatment of any contagious disease.

For the first time since October, 1907, the State has been entirely clear of mumps. No case of influenza has been reported for four months. June 8th was the date of the last smallpox case. Measles, which disease reached a maximum of 715 cases in the month of March, has dwindled down to 17 cases. Only 2 cases of chickenpox and 15 of whooping cough were reported.

Russia and the Philippine Island are now in the throes of a virulent and widespread cholera epidemic. In Russia, the the number of deaths from cholera average 250 per day. Yellow fever is present in Mexico, and plague in Venezuela.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of safety." Though the possibilities of cholera, yellow fever, or plague entering Maryland are exceedingly remote, yet the State Board of Health takes this opportunity to sound a note of timely warning. Baltimore is one of the largest seaport cities in the United States. Ships that come over all seas and from all lands anchor in its splendid harbor. A cholera contact, a yellow fever suspect, or a plague infected rat or ground squirrel may thus inadvertently gain entrance to our shores. Health officials and physicians are hereby admonished to be on the alert.

The part of the report devoted to typhoid fever says:

Deaths reported 60, as compared with 55 in August, 33 in July, and 15 in June. Additional cases reported 363, as compared with 402 in August, 215 in July, and 70 in June. Forty-two of the decedents were white, and 18 colored. The youngest decedent was a colored male, aged 1 year and 10 months; the eldest was a white woman 98 years of age. Of the 363 additional reported cases, 200 were males and 163 females; 325 were white, and 38 colored. The disease prevailed most extensively in Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick, Wicomico, and Worcester counties. In Cumberland, there were 13 cases; in Mt. Washington, 11 cases; in Frederick City and suburban towns, 30 cases; in Salisbury, 19 cases, and in Ocean City, 11 cases.

The following cases occurred on the Potomac River Watershed: Allegany Co.—Cumberland, 14 cases; Frostburg, 4 cases; Lonaconing, 3 cases; Mt. Savage, 4 cases; Barton, 1 case. Frederick Co.—Monrovia, 1 case; Frederick City, 12 cases; Brunswick, 6 cases; Buckeystown, 5 cases; Burkettsville, 6 cases. Montgomery Co.—Rockville, 3 cases; Boyds, Silver Springs, Montrose, each 1 case; Gaithersburg, Potomac and Norbeck, each 2 cases. Prince George Co. Brentwood and Capital Heights, each 1 case. Washington Co.—Hagerstown, 8 cases; Williamsport, 5 cases; Fairview, Big Pool and Clearspring, each 1 case. Total 86 cases.

Cholera Kills Marylander.

Mrs. A. C. McCardell, of Frederick, has received word of the death in a hospital at Manila, Philippine Islands, of her niece, Mrs. Grace Whitmore Mitchell. She was taken ill with cholera while her husband was absent from Manila and died while he was away. Mrs. Mitchell, who was twenty-eight years of age, graduated some years ago from the Woman's College of Frederick, and subsequently took a course in nursing in Philadelphia. She was commissioned by the foreign mission board of the Reformed Church as a missionary nurse, and was sent to China. In that country she met Dr. G L Mitchell, whom she married on May 26 last, and with whom she went to the Philippines.

She was a daughter of the late Rev. David Whitmore, a minister of the Reformed Church.

STATE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY GOES ON.

Work in Progress in Frederick, Carroll and Washington Counties.

The semi-annual meetings of the State Geological Survey and the State Forestry Commissions were held Tuesday at the offices of the State Geological Survey at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Dr. William Bullock Clark, the State Geologist, presented a report showing that during the last six months topographic surveys had been under way in Frederick, Carroll and Washington counties, which would result by the end of the season in the completion of the mapping of the southern half of Frederick county and nearly all of Carroll county.

Dr. Clark reported that the investigation of the lime and cement products of the State, which has been under way the last two seasons, was completed. A full report will be issued during the winter.

A report was made on the progress of highway work under the Geological Survey, which has charge of the administration of the State Aid act, commonly known as the Shoemaker law, and also of the construction of the highway to Washington. Since the last meeting surveys have been made by the engineering staff for 36 miles of road altogether. Contracts have been approved for 14.95 miles of roads at a total cost of $130,848.72. The Highway Commission ordered that work on the Washington road at Hyattsville and Laurel, already agreed on, be taken up at once and completed at the earliest possible date.

Work is now in progress in Allegany, Baltimore, Cecil, Harford, Howard, Montgomery, Worcester and Wicomico counties on about 20 miles of road, the greater portion of which should be completed before winter.

Mr. F. W. Beasley, the State Forester, reported that complete forest surveys had been made in St. Mary's, Calvert, Allegany and Queen Anne's counties during the summer and that surveys in Garrett, Harford and Wicomico counties started last season had also been finished.

Forest fires have been numerous during the last month and on account of the extremely dry condition of the woods they have been unusually severe, particularly in the western counties. The forest wardens have, in most cases, responded satisfactorily and have greatly reduced the actual damage.

There is a growing interest in forest management through the State, as indicated by the number of applications for wood-lot examinations and inquiries as to the most suitable trees for planting.

Resolution of Respect

In memory of District Deputy A. F. George, of Nantauquas Tribe Number 161, Improved Order of Red Men.

Your committee having been appointed by the Sachem to prepare suitable resolution of respect to the memory of our late Brother, District Deputy A. F. George, present the following:

It is a mournful duty at all times to consider the death of any member of our Tribe, but greater is the sorrow when the subject of our considerations is one with whom we have been intimate and loved as a brother.

Brother George's great usefulness and service in the Improved Order of Red Men is well known to many who have been attending its sessions. Seldom was he absent. It is hard to realize that the voice of one with whom we have been so closely associated is silent forever and that his manly form is shrouded for its long last sleep. He was well qualified for the several positions of trust and honor he was called upon to fill, but the knowledge and attainments could not stay the hand of the destroyer, Death. He had a kind, generous nature. He was an inspiring and stimulating associate, and most highly valued by those who knew him best. During his connection with our Tribe and the various Chieftancies he held, he came in close intercourse with many upon whom he left his moral impress for eternity.

He enjoyed life and happy in his work. He did not fear death nor shrink from the grave. His life is ended and the success or failure thereof rests in the hands of Almightly God, who one day, must judge us all. The form of Brother George has passed to the silent tomb, but pleasing is the memories of his life, his companionship, the work done by him for our Tribe; his generous heart, his pleasing voice, these memories shall endure with us: therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of District Deputy A. F. George, in the Nantauquas Tribe Number 161, of the I. O. R. M. lost an honored and faithful member.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed in our records and also printed in each of our county papers and that the original be presented to the family of our deceased Brother for preservation.

Fraternally submitted in F., F. & C.
WILLIAM W. SWEET,
JERRY MANKIS,
WM. B. SWEET,
Committee.

See our 5 and 10c glassware. Baumgartner.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany Couuty.

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

The New Year is rapidly approaching. This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and receive a 1908 Calendar.

DAVID SLOAN, President. R. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

The First National Bank

FRIENDSVILLE, MD.

Capital, $25,000. Surplus and Undivided Profits, $24,000.

OFFICERS:

L. E. Friend, President. J. W. McCullough, V. P.
R. C. McCandlish, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

L. E. Friend, Merchant.
J. W. McCullough, Lumber and Coal.
W. W. Savage, Merchant.
D. S. Custer, Merchant.
H. M. Rumbaugh, Farmer.
W. H. H. Friend, Pension Agent and Surveyor.
Horace R. DeWitt, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCandlish.

We will issue time or demand certificates of deposit and pay you 4 per cent. interest if your money is left with us.

In all its dealings this Bank combines absolute safety with satisfactory service and never loses sight of either.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

E. A. WEIMER.

Now is the time to buy your

FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING

while stocks are complete. I have hundreds of Suits of new Fall Goods and can please almost anyone in both Quality and Price.

A lot of Men's Suits to close out

At $3.75

were $6.00

Plenty of Good, Warm UNDERWEAR.

And the most complete line of SHOES in town, from the cheapest that is good, to the best that is made. COME AND SEE!

Yours Truly. E. A. WEIMER.
NEXT DOOR TO THE POSTOFFICE OAKLAND, MD

BITTINGER.

A party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Orendorf, Mr. and Mrs. John Stark and Mrs. Henry Bittenger and children left here last Tuesday for Norfolk, Va., and they expect to visit Washington and Baltimore before returning.

Cleaver Brenneman and sister, Miss Fannie, drove over to Meyersdale, Pa., on last Monday.

Clarence Brenneman and Miss Huldah Wiley spent last Sunday with friends at Springs, Pa.

G. W. Engle returned to Baltimore last Tuesday after spending a few days with his parents at this place.

Edward Knox had his leg broken one day last week, while wrestling with a schoolmate.

Rev. Alvin Yugel and Delegate C. E. Ellithorp returned from Frederick, Md., last Monday evening, after attending the meeting of the Ev. Lutheran Synod at that place.

Wm. Ralston, of Frostburg, came up last Monday to be on hand for election and to visit his mother.

FIKE.

We had a nice rain here one day last week, but not sufficient to raise the waters.

When Mr. Asa Fike and wife awoke on last Sunday morning they found their little daughter dead in bed. The funeral was preached on Monday at L. C. Fike's and interment was made at the same place.

The Connecting Telephone Co. met last Saturday evening and transacted considerable business. It was decided by the company that no exchange wou be given with the Farmers' Union.

The school at this place has now an enrollment of 35 pupils and the teacher and pupils have organized a literary society.

You can now hear the report of guns as the woods seem full of hunters.

CARTER.

HOUSE FOR RENT, possession given after October 1st; contains eight rooms; spring water. Apply to Mrs. L. F. Sincell, Oakland. Also cottage of six rooms, either furnisdhe or unfurnished.

STRENGTH

STABILITY SECURITY

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, at Oakland, in the State of Maryland, at the close of business, September 23d, 1908:

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$297,330 87
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured.		NONE
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		120,300 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		14,500 00
Due from State Banks and Bankers		13 66
Due from approved reserve agents.		48,061 10
Checks and other cash items		478 26
Notes of other National Banks		545 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		110 94
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$19,881 95
Legal-tender notes	6,265 00	26,146 95
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, (5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$661,782 78

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	35,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,051 32
National Bank notes outstanding	48,500 00
Due to other National Banks	9,909 94
Due to State Banks and Bankers	89 74
Individual deposits subject to check	213,020 28
Time certificates of deposit	291,928 94
Cashier's checks outstanding	373 46
Total	$661,782 78

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. JONES, Cashier of the above named bank do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1908.
HARLAND L. JONES, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: D. E. OFFUTT, GILMOR S. HAMILL, J. M. DAVIS, Directors.

Garrett National Bank
OF
Oakland, Maryland.

Mr. D. Y. Morris, of Kingwood, spent Sunday afternoon in Oakland with relatives.

Messrs. Theo. and McComas George, of Swanton, were in Oakland Monday on business.

Mr. John Lee Harne, of Bluefield, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with his father and other relatives.

Mr. James L. Pollock returned to his home in Oakland from a two weeks' business trip east, on last Friday morning.

Dr. J. Lee McComas left Oakland on last Friday morning for Washington, D. C., where he expects to remain during the winter months.

Mrs. Bowie Johnson and daughter, Miss Virginia, left Oakland for Washington on last Thursday, where they will spend the winter.

Miss Carolyn Miller, of Swanton, left Oakland last Thursday morning for Philadelphia, in which city she will prepare to become a trained nurse.

Mr. J. R. McKenzie, of near Frostburg, one of the election officials from that section of Garrett county, was a visitor at this office this morning.

Mrs. Wade Hinebaugh and little daughter returned to Oakland last Friday from a two weeks' visit to relatives and friends in Parkersburg, W. Va.

Mrs. William A. Sturgiss, who visited friends and relatives in Meyersdale, Pa., several weeks, has returned to her home in Oakland, accompanied by her sister, Miss Hocking.

Mr. Herbert L. Flowers, of Baltimore, arrived at his old home at the Park Monday where he remained until after he cast his ballot on Tuesday, when he returned to Baltimore.

The engagement of Miss Zellah Shaffer, of Carmel, W. Va., to Dr. Arnold Scherr, of Eglon, W. Va., has been announced by Miss Shaffer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Shaffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Townshend and family have moved from their former residence on Centre street to the old Townshend homestead on Water street, which will be their future home.

Mr. John A. Delawder, of Washington, D. C., arrived in Oakland Monday morning and went from here to McHenry, where he spent a few days, returning to Washington yesterday.

Dr William W. Grant, of the Maryland University dental department, arrived home Sunday afternoon and remained here until after Tuesday, upon which day he cast his ballot.

Robert, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Geissman, was assualted last Saturday by a boy named Shaffer, who is much the larger, and in the melee the Geissman boy's nose was broken.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tower and two children, of Cumberland, who have been the guests for two or three days of Mr. and Mrs. E. I. West at their home in Oakland, returned home Sunday afternoon.

The forecast for November of Weather Prophet Peter R. Smith, of Kingwood, W. Va., is published elsewhere in this paper today. The forecast predicts a continuation of the dry weather until well along toward the close of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Stull left Oakland Tuesday morning for Philadelphia, where they will remain a week and then go on to Wilkesbarre, Pa., where a stay until after the holidays will be made, when they will go to St. Augustine, Fla., for the balance of the winter.

Application has been made to the proper authorities for the surrender of the charter recently granted for the establishment of a bank at Eglon, W. Va. The charter was granted by the State of West Virginia and the bank was to have been operated under State Supervision.

Messrs. G. Semmes Hamill and William Miller, two of the members of the Democratic County Committee, made a trip to Baltimore last week, returning to Oakland Sunday night, without, so rumor has it, the sinews of war which they expected to get in the Monumental City.

Mr. E. Ray Jones, of Deer Park, has been twice promoted in the military department of the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, since the opening of the college six weeks ago, being first given a corporaley and two weeks afterwards promoted to the rank of sergeant. About three hundred men are in the battalion and promotions are won by competitive examinations on the theory and drill work. Mr. Jones is a member of the Junior class.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.
on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

FAIR AND DRY.

November Weather to Be a Continuation of the October Brand.

Peter R. Smith forecasts the weather for November as follows:

Fair and dry weather will generally follow through much of the month, as denoted by storm causes. The exciting influences which enter into the relations of storm or producing causes are absent during a large part of the month save those brought on by changes in the moon, which merely are changes in the direction of wind courses, and also to prolong a disturbed wave which is in force at new or full moon. Opposite wind currents will produce clouds, but unless charged with moisture from a wind current containing the necessary element they will pass off in bluster. Conditions of the atmosphere and the surface of the earth must stand in relation each to the other before clouds will form and discharge moisture.

A disturbed period will prevail touching the 3rd and 4th. Change in the direction of wind currents and much cooler weather attended by light freezing and frost will be experienced at this period.

The 8th and 9th will bring on changes of temperature, cloudiness, and light showers, and a cold wave on the 10th or 11th will follow in northern and central parts.

The 15th will be the center of a disturbed period. On the 13th and 14th changes to warmer will be experienced in all central and northern parts. The wave in its transit will give in some portions of the country a dash of autumnal rains and then be cooler about the 17th and 18th.

On the 19th, 20th and 21st the temperature will grow warm and rains will be on transit, moving eastward, attended in some parts of the wave by electricity. On the passage of the storm wave much cooler weather will follow.

The 26th is the center of a disturbed period which is much intensified by storm elements. About the 24th and 25th a warm wave will prevail, attended by black, threatening clouds, which denote the entrance of storms of wide and vigorous extent. Thunderstorms in central and southern parts will materialize in northern parts, rain and sleet will dominate, and then be followed by a cold wave from the north which will reach all central and eastern parts about the 28th or 29th.

Married.

DEWITT—VEACH—At the bride's home on Second street, Mrs. Annie Veach was quietly married to Mr. Horace DeWitt, ex-county treasurer of this county, who is a prosperous farmer of near Hoyes, Rev. J. B. Workman performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends on Tuesday evening at 8.30. The bridal party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt and Mrs. Nell Miller left Oakland Wednesday morning on No. 2 for points in Pennsylvania and West Virginia where tney will spend two or three weeks, after which they will return to Oakland and Mrs. Miller will resume her duties in the postoffice, while Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt will take up their residence at Hoyes.

ZIMMERMAN—SOWERS—There was a very pretty wedding at the Ferndale Baptist Church on Sunday morning, November 1st. The contracting parties were Mr. Roy Zimmerman, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Zimmerman, and Miss Elva Hill, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sowers. The groom wore the conventional black and the bride was becomingly dressed in white. Only the immediate family was present. Rev. C. W. Hudson, the pastor of the church, officiated. We wish them a pleasant journey along the pathways of life.

Church Services.

OAKLAND PRESBYTERIAN.

Services on Sunday, to which all are cordially invited, will be preaching at 11 a. m. and 7.3 p. m.
L. B. HENSLEY, Pastor.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Preaching 10.30 a. m.
Sunday school at 2.15 p. m.
Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 7.30 p. m.
Junior League Wednesday 4.15 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday 7.30 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.
J. B. WORKMAN, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.30 a. m., and 7.30 p. m.
Preaching at Crellin next Sunday at 3 p. m.
Everybody welcome.
E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m. in the new church.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 7.30 p. m.
C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Call for Your Letters.

Will W. Bernhardt, W. E Brown, Miss Minnie Camps, Albert W. Cleary, Mrs. Cleon James, R. J. Miller, Frank Poling, Miss Effie M. Teats, J. L. Whorton, Miss Greather Woody.

Subscribe for The Republican.

JURY FOR DECEMBER TERM.

Judge Henderson Drew the Names of Those to Serve at the Next Term.

Last Friday Judge Robert R. Henderson came to Oakland and drew the jury for service at the December Term, which will convene on the first Monday of next month, as follows:

District No. 1—Henry Paugh, Harry Bell, John C. Beckman.

District No. 2—Sherman Friend, Lucian Frazee, Robert R. Liston, William H. Thomas.

District No. 3—George C. Turner, Noah Newman, C. M. Towzer, Peter Reichenbecker, William H. Michaels, Emanuel Durst, Frederick H. Winterburg, Peter H. Thomas.

District No. 4—Martin L. Titchenell.

District No. 5—Samuel Mosser.

District No. 6—Horace R. DeWitt, William G. Browning.

District No. 7—Josiah T. Beckman, George D. White, Clarence J. Rathbun, George Hipsley, William Weber.

District No. 8—Burt Wilson, Robert Lathrum, Christian Martin, Isaac N. Shillingburg, John M. White, William P. Warsaw.

District No. 9—Winfield S. Garlitz, Patrick Hoye.

District No. 10—Bruce T. Browning.

District No. 11—None.

District No. 12—Christian C. Orendorf.

District No. 13—Frank G. Trout, Joseph W. Marvill, George J. Pool.

District No. 13—J. A. Kelly, James L. Pollock, Ami Rodeheaver, J. William Whorton, Archibold Chisholm, Joseph E. Harned, Raymond M. Saucer, D. E. Bolden, John M. Jarboe, Alonzo D. Naylor.

Mr. C. E. Ellithorp, of Bittinger, and Mr. J. E. Brenninger, of near Sunnyside, who were delegates in attendance at the Lutheran Synod of Maryland held in Frederick last week, returned to their respective homes Monday, as also did Rev. E. Manges, of Oakland.

Rev. S. R. Ludwig, of the U. B. Church in Christ, who has been preaching at Gormania, Bayard and Chaffee, whose home was in Westernport, will leave next week to take charge of a church in Baltimore county, Md., to which place he has been transferred. Rev. Ludwig during his sojourn in the Twin-Towns made many friends, who wish him a successful future career in his Holy calling.—Piedmont Independent.

At the Republican meeting held in Oakland last Friday night the Mountain City Band, which was recently organized here, made its initial public appearance, and created a very favorable impression upon all. If the proper encouragement is given the band there is no good reason why Oakland's reputation for a good musical organization should suffer, as in past years the Oakland band was recognized by towns in all section of the country as being one of the very best. The organization now has a membership of more than twenty-five well equipped players and the progress being made by them is remarkable, as many of the members never before had any experience.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

New Goods

Just opened a new line of Dress Goods, Dress Ginghams, Chambrays, Percales, Melrose Cloths, Silkolines, Outings, Draperies, etc., etc.

Boys' Knickerbocker and Short and Long Pants Suits. Prices rock bottom.

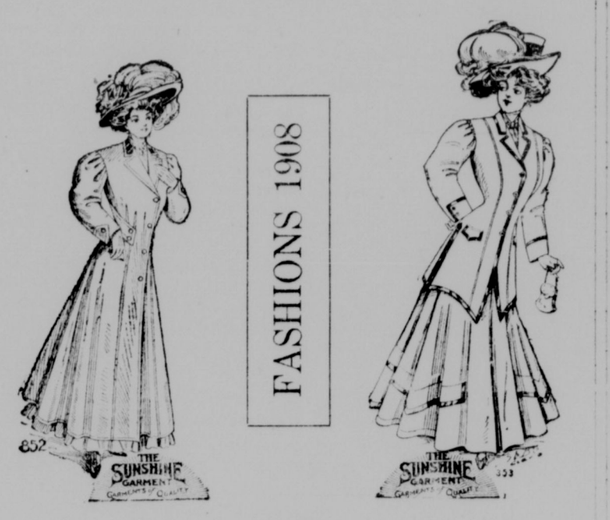
Men's Worsted and Corduroy Pants.

Have taken the Agency for a first-class Clothing House. Latest Styles and Best Prices.

ARTHUR TOWNSHEND

See The Republican for Job Printing

H. C. Sincell & Co.



The CLOAKS and SUITS we are showing this season at

$5.50 TO $30.00

are far superior to any previous effort.

See this line before you buy and be convinced that the

Fit and Style

you get here is what you desire.

H. C. Sincell & Co.

DIXON & KELSO

Dixon & Kelso are headquarters on

WOOL & COTTON BLANKETS

Kindly notice the following prices and come and see the quality, and we will save you money:

10-4 Cotton Blanket was 85c, now ..... 69c per pr

11-4 Cotton Blanket was $1.25, now ..... 95c per pr

11-4 Cotton Blanket wool finish, was $2, $1.25 per pr

Wool Blankets—we have the best on the market: in white and brown, white and blue, white and pink plaids: extra heavy all-wool, in all colors $3.75 per pr

"Fort Pitt" the best $5.00 Blanket on the market for ..... $4.25 per pr

Plenty of Blankets from ..... $1.00 to $2.00

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

Institute at Accident November 14.

A local teachers' institute will be held at Accident, Saturday, November 14th, beginning at 10 a. m. The institute is held under the auspices of the Garrett County Teachers' Association, and under their oath of office all teachers are required to attend these institutes and take some part in the proceedings.

The following is the program: Opening, singing by teachers; enrollment of teachers and discussion of Association; address, E. A. Browning; response, Wm. Miller; Primary Reading, Misses Emma Hamill and Anna Snyder; Primary Numbers, John Geis; Mental Arithmetic, E. A. Browning; Orthography, N. K. Welch; Geography and U. S. History, C J. Hanft and J. C. Meyers.

On Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock there will be a literary and educational program rendered. Addresses will be made by Wm. Miller and others.

Everybody invited.

H. A. LORADITCH, Chairman.

Old Glades Hotel Down.

Work in razing the old Glades Hotel, which was started more than a month ago, was completed last Friday, when the last timber was removed from the foundations. The hotel and ground upon which it stood was purchased several years ago by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, which corporation disposed of the building to a number of Oakland people. The hotel was erected a number of years ago by the late John Dailey, the building taking the place of the original hotel, which was burned about the year 1874.

Four Per Cent. Interest.

The First National Bank, Friendsville, pays four per cent. interest on time deposits. Place your money in this bank where its earning capacity will be greater than in any other banking institution in the county.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Friendsville, Md.

Subscribe for The REPUBLICAN.

Bound to Make Somebody.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1908, by Frank H. Sweet.

"LADY, what you call-a-dis?"

The lady's eyes were raised languidly from the book she was reading. But as they became focused upon the strange figure before her they acquired a momentary interest.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Dis," and the boy leaned eagerly over her chair, without removing his dirty finger from the picture which he held up for her inspection.

She drew back with a slight frown. But it was only momentary and was succeeded by a quiet look of amusement.

"It is an elephant," she answered. "Have you never seen one?"

"Dey ain't live in my country, no. I t'ink dey is Amerika."

"Oh, no; they are not Americans," she said, smiling. "They belong to a warm climate. You have not been over long, I suppose?"

"I t'ink it be t'ree—what you call him—mont's," the boy replied doubtfully.

"What made you come to this out of the way place?" she asked, after a moment's silence. "Surely there is no work here for your father and mother."

Instantly the merry smile disappeared, and his face became grave and thoughtful.

"De fader an' moder die on de vessel with de fever," he said slowly, with an awed look in his blue eyes. "I haf two-t'ree dollar, an' I no like stay in de big New York with the bradders an' sisters. It be bad place for small peoples. We come on de boat till de money be gone, den we walk an' walk till de little ones be tired. Den we stop. Den we be here."

The lady had unconsciously allowed the book to slip from her lap to the sand at her feet, and her face was losing its expression of bored indifference.

"Are you the oldest?" she asked.

"I be de fader now," he replied gravely. "I t'ink we live here. It be nice place for bring up de little ones. I like it more as any place I see. It make me t'ink of home country—only betta."

"Not better than your own country?" she said, in some surprise.

"Yes, Ameriky de betta country for teach little ones. Dey learn t'ings an' make somebody, mebba."

"How many of you are there," she asked, "and how do you manage to get along? What do you do?"

"Dere be two brudders an' two sisters," he replied, with the smile returning to his face, "an' dey all be more little as me. An' we get along fusta rate. We find de clams an' de crabs an' de feesh an' sell to de peoples, an' de sisters do sell flowers. We haf some room in a barn, an' it not costa much to live in summer."

"IT IS AN ELEPHANT," SHE ANSWERED.

"So you catch crabs and fish. I am very fond of them. What are crabs worth?"

"Ff' cent," eagerly.

"Well, suppose you bring me a dozen tomorrow—to Mrs. Roper, at the stone house on the hill."

She watched him as he went briskly down the beach and across to the narrow bit of wharf where there were several men fishing. Here he evidently found a job, for she saw a man give him a rod and a fish basket and point across to one of the hotels. Then she opened the book and soon lost herself in its contents.

But hers were not the only eyes that had glanced curiously at the gay figure of the boy. He was a bright dash of color for the dull background of these quiet New England streets, and there was artist enough in the hearts of the onlookers to be pleased with the innovation. Once upon a time his jacket had been brave with bright colors and gay buttons, but time and the sun and the rain had been at work, and now it was an uncertain mixture of dull greens and yellows, and the buttons had all disappeared. But his trousers had fared better. Perhaps the plant which had furnished the coloring material had more vitality or the dyer had been more conscientious in his work. At any rate, their flaming glory had been scarcely dimmed by the vicissitudes they had been through. They reached only as far as his knees—below that was the firm, brown skin—but they and the saucy little head covering which was neither hat nor cap soon became the envy of the small boys of Seaview.

Originally Seaview had been a small settlement which had furnished the surrounding farmers with the few necessary things they could not raise. But one day an artist stroller wandered in and did the place the honor to be pleased. After that came a gradual transformation. A dozen or more cottages took possession of the more picturesque points, and here and there a hotel rose to meet the wants of those who could not own cottages. It had the reputation of being very exclusive.

When the group of strangely dressed children came into town there were many who gazed at them with suspicion. But as the days and weeks went by and nothing was missed the distrust gradually gave place to idle curiosity. A few even showed some friendly interest. The children were neither beggars nor thieves; that much was now conceded by all. At present they seemed perfectly able to take care of themselves. When cold weather arrived it would be time enough to take some action in the matter.

Every day they could be seen on the beach, along the banks of the river, on the wharf, catching crabs, digging clams and fishing. Even the tiny little fellow in picturesque kirtle spent most of his time in racing up and down the beach with crab net and basket. Every morning the girls went back into the fields after wild flowers or over to the shallow lake after pond lilies. And as the days went by and the people became more familiar with their bright faces and eager ways they grew more liberal in their patronage. The signs of prosperity began to show in the disappearance of the showy rags and the substitution of such garments as were worn by the village children. The transformation began with the little fellow in the kirtle and extended by slow degrees to the girls and the other small boy.

The oldest boy still wore the faded jacket and red trousers. He was here and there and everywhere, working, smiling, asking questions, making notes and taking his new knowledge home to the children.

A few days later as Mrs. Roper stood idly on her piazza she saw him going toward the kitchen entrance with a basket of crabs.

"Say, boy," she called, "come here a minute!"

The basket was quickly set upon the ground, and he hurried across to the piazza.

"You haven't told me your name yet," she suggested.

"Name Paoli; fader's an' grandfader's name before me."

"Well, Paoli, I want you to tell your sister to bring me a large bunch of pond lilies tomorrow. How old are you, Paoli?"

"I nebba knew. I t'ink I pretty old. I seen a good many t'ings. How old you s'pose I be?"

"I should say about fourteen or fifteen."

"Den I t'ink I 'bout dat old—'bout fo'teen or fi'teen. You have some crab tomorra?"

"Yes, you may bring me a few, and—oh, Paoli, what is the matter with your hands?"

The boy laughed and held up his hands complacently.

"I wash dem—scrub, scrub, scrub!—an' I make de brudders an' sisters wash, an' we clean de room an' fix up t'ings. I see dat Ameriky peoples no had dirt like peoples in home country. We Ameriky peoples now." Then a sudden sparkle came into his eyes. "De school begin next mont', an' I hab de brudders an' sisters to go. I got dem all dress up nice like Ameriky peoples. I t'ink dey make somebody."

"But why don't you get some American clothes and go to school yourself, Paoli?"

The boy's face became grave.

"I like to, but no ready yet. Dese t'ings costa monna, an' de fader"—the ready smile returning to his face—"haf to look out for de little ones. When dey go to school somebody haf to make de monna. Mebba I go some time."

The next day Mrs. Roper was again on the piazza when she saw him coming up the path. This time he had no basket, and there was no smile on his face. Instead of going round to the kitchen he came directly up the piazza steps.

"What is it?" she asked kindly.

"Dis." And he took from beneath his jacket a pair of small opera glasses.

"My glasses!" she exclaimed in surprise. "I had not even missed them. Where did you find them?"

"My brudder—stole dem."

"What?"

"Stole dem," he repeated gravely. "He come with crabs one day an' see dem on de table an' take dem. He mean to sell, but get scare an' tell de sisters. Dey tell me."

"But what did he want to sell them for? Did he need the money?"

The boy flushed and hesitated a little before answering.

"He—he tell de sisters dat he buy clothes for Paoli so all go school togedder. He verra small boy," apologetically.

"Yes, I know he is."

Paoli looked at her anxiously.

"He musta be punish," he said in a troubled voice, "an' I like for you to help me. He be good boy an' smar-rt an' I t'ink make somebody some time if he no ge' bad. He musta be punish for lesson."

"But how am I to help you?"

"You been tell me raise grass an' pick up leaves an' t'ings. S'pose you haf Luigi do it. He hate dat kind work. He love catch fish an' crabs an' t'ings like dat. Mebba it take him two, t'ree week, an' you musta pay him no'ting—no'ting!" emphatically.

She looked surprised.

"I do not wish any one to work for me without pay."

"He stole glass, you make him work. Dat all right, an' be lesson for him. He willing. I no' long talk with him dis morning, an' he verra, verra sorry an' say he do it no more. But he must be punish."

"Very well, if you think it is best. But you must not be too hard with him, Paoli. He is such a bright little fellow."

As he was going down the steps she called him back.

"What are you going to do this winter, Paoli?"

"Catch feesh an' clams an' t'ings," he replied, the gravity not yet gone from his face.

"But you cannot live in that barn all winter. You would freeze."

"We no need live dere," he said eagerly. "We get fine place soon—f-i-n-e. De bazaar-r man go off in de winter, an' he say we haf his place for two dolla a mont'—t'ree room an' stove an' chair an' bed, an' we use dem all if we be careful. He say he trust me to look out for t'ings."

"MY BRUDDER—STOLE DEM."

"That will be nice. Now, I have been thinking of a plan, Paoli, that may be of use to both of us. When I came here this spring I found that one of my shutters had become loose and a window was broken. The rain and snow had driven in and spoiled a carpet and some furniture. This winter I wish to leave some one in charge. I shall want him to visit the place at least once a week and see that the shutters and windows are secure and everything all right. Several of my neighbors feel about their cottages as I do mine. Now, you could look after them all, Paoli, and still have most of your time for other things. We will pay altogether, say, $15 a month. Would that be satisfactory?"

Paoli did not answer for a moment, but his eyes were shining. Then:

"Fi'teen dolla—a mont'. Dat will pay for all t'ings, an' we all go to school togedder. It be gr-a-nd!"

Poisonous Baby Coaches.

"In buying this first coach," said the physician, "be sure, madam, to get a nonpoisonous one."

The young and pretty mother gave a cry of fear.

"Gracious me!" she said. "Is there poison in baby coaches?"

"There is sometimes," the physician asserted. "Only last August I was suddenly summoned to Ocean Grove. The little firstborn of a popular evangelist was very low. The child died. The coach was the cause of his death.

"It was a new coach, and while riding in it on the romantic shores of Fletcher lake the baby sucked vigorously the beautiful bright green strap confining it to its seat. That strap had been painted with a paint heavy with arsenic, and a few hours after my arrival the babe passed away, a victim of a poisonous baby coach.

"So, madam, insist on a coach decorated with pure and harmless vegetable decorations. Examine the article as though you were a food inspector."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Man Who Shaved Him.

The man of learning strolled into his club at about 11 a. m.

"It's a strange thing," he told the members present, "but I was shaved this morning by a man who really is, I suppose, a little above the ordinary barber. I know, for instance, that he took a double first class at Oxford, that he studied at Heidelberg afterward and spent several years in other foreign educational centers. He has also contributed scientific articles to our best magazines and has numbered among his intimate friends men of the highest social standing. And yet," exclaimed the savant, "he can't shave a man decently!"

"By Jove!" exclaimed the younger members in astonishment. "But, with all those accomplishments, what is he a barber for?"

"Oh, he isn't a barber!" said the bookworm, smiling. "I shaved myself this morning!"—London Tatler.

Regular Army Not Sufficiently Appreciated.

By Colonel H. O. S. HEISTAND, U. S. A.

IF there is one institution of the government less appreciated and understood than another, it is probably the regular army.

This condition is the result, among others, of two principal causes—first, PREJUDICE against armed forces as a possible menace to liberty; second, PUBLIC INDIFFERENCE, largely due to commercial pursuits and the field offered to energy in the development of natural resources in a comparatively new country.

Furthermore, the people rarely come in contact with the army and know NOTHING about it.

With the widened influence of our country and a broader conception of its responsibilities as a world power the first cause has about disappeared. At the present time very few persons except demagogues advocate the dangers of "militarism," and they must before long abandon it.

THE VAST THINKING MAJORITY OF OUR PEOPLE HAVE COME TO UNDERSTAND THAT ARMED FORCES ARE THE MAIN SAFEGUARD TO A NATION'S INSTITUTIONS AND ITS INTERESTS.

To them the demagogue's cry of "militarism" suggests only a harmless "bugaboo." They know that we have a population of about 88,000,000. The numerical strength of the regular army as now organized is 71,735. So that with the present army there are over 1,200 citizens to every man with a gun, a DISPARITY too great to leave any fear in the minds of the most timid.

Province of Art In the Future.

By Count LEO TOLSTOY, Russian Author.

ART of the future—that is to say, such part of art as will be chosen from among all the art diffused among mankind—will consist not in transmitting feelings accessible only to members of the RICH classes, as is the case today, but in transmitting such feelings as embody the highest religious perception of our times.

ONLY THOSE PRODUCTIONS WILL BE CONSIDERED ART WHICH TRANSMIT FEELINGS DRAWING MEN TOGETHER IN BROTHERLY UNION OR SUCH UNIVERSAL FEELINGS AS CAN UNITE ALL MEN.

Only such art will be chosen, tolerated, approved and diffused. But art transmitting feelings flowing from antiquated, wornout religious teachings—church art, patriotic art, voluptuous art, transmitting feelings of superstitious fear, of pride, of vanity, of ecstatic admiration of national heroes—art exciting exclusive love of one's own people or sensuality will be considered BAD, HARMFUL ART and will be censured and despised by public opinion. All the rest of art transmitting feelings accessible only to a SECTION of people will be considered unimportant and will be neither blamed nor praised. And the appraisement of art in general will devolve not, as is now the case, on a separate class of rich people, but ON THE WHOLE PEOPLE, so that for a work to be esteemed good and to be approved of and diffused it will have to satisfy the demands not of a few people living in identical and often unnatural conditions, but it will have to satisfy the demands of all those GREAT MASSES of people who are situated in the natural conditions of laborious life.

And the artists producing art also will not be as now, merely a few people selected from a small section of the nation, members of the upper classes and their hangers on, but will consist of all those gifted members of the whole people who prove capable of and are inclined toward artistic activity.

ARTISTIC ACTIVITY THEN WILL BE ACCESSIBLE TO ALL MEN.

Money Evils Have Their Conception In Universities.

By JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON, Prominent Socialist and Author.

THE gorgeous restaurants and hotels which have come to be the boast of our civilization are not devised with the idea of gratifying any artistic taste which has developed along with the growth of wealth.

THEY ARE CRAFTILY DESIGNED TO PANDER TO THE SENSE OF POWER.

The people who support these places do not frequent them because they are beautiful or because the food appeals to an epicurean palate, but because the huge cost of their mirrored and bedizened walls and the suave, obsequious and perfected service say to them plainly as words, "You are a great man; you are a masterful power or you could not afford to be here," and the great man believes this and is flattered and soothed. He does not know it, but he is simply paying a parasite to TICKLE HIS VANITY.

All this is not wicked. It is simply a new social manifestation which is still in the raw. It cries out: "Money is power; money is music, art, poetry, pleasure, leisure, taste; MONEY IS EVERYTHING, and we've got it! Here it is! Look at it slide through our fingers!"

THIS FALSE VIEW OF LIFE HAS ITS INCEPTION IN OUR GREAT UNIVERSITIES.

Sheer merit and winning personal attributes won't get a student into the fraternities and honorary societies. Student honors do not go that way. Money, family and influence are held up to the young man as GODS to be bowed before, and if he hasn't got them his one ambition after he graduates is to GET THEM—get them by hook or by crook, but get them. Ideals, kindliness, singleheartedness, all the graces that go to make the world a happy place to live in, may take their chances of survival, but MONEY, POWER, POSITION, he is educated to consider paramount.

SHE WAS NO HAS-BEEN.

Why the Little Old Woman Rode In a Smoking Car.

"Madam," said the brakeman as the train stopped at a little village station and a little old woman started to enter the smoking car, "the car back is the one you want."

"How do you know?" she tartly asked.

"Because this is the smoking car."

She pushed past him and climbed up the steps, and after taking a seat she pulled out and filled a pipe, struck a match on the sole of her shoe, and after drawing a few puffs she said to a man smoking a cigar across the aisle:

"That young feller out there don't know half as much as he thinks he does."

"How so?" was asked.

"He took me for an old woman that had never rode on the cars before and told me this was the smoking car."

"And you wanted this car?"

"Why, I never ride in any other—not unless my pipe is broke, my tobacco all out and none o' you men folks will lend me a cigar."—Chicago News.

Caught on the Rebound.

"John, dear," said Mrs. Skimpem as she poured the coffee at the breakfast table, "if I remember rightly, you have often said you disliked to see a woman constantly getting herself into print."

"That's right," rejoined Skimpem.

"You consider it indelicate and unwomanly, don't you?"

"I certainly do."

"And you don't think a sensible man would allow his wife to do anything like that?"

"Most assuredly not."

"Well, John, I'm glad you have such radical views on the subject, because they justify me in asking you for a new silk dress."

"W-what?"

"You heard what I said, John. For the last five years I've had nothing but bargain counter calico, and I'm tired of getting into print."

And what could poor John do?—Chicago News.

How It Happened.

"Please, ma'am," said the husky hobo, "would youse help a pore feller wot wuz caught on a ellervator an' laid up fer six months?"

"Certainly, poor man," replied the kind lady. "Here's a dollar for you. How did you happen to get caught in an elevator?"

"De perlice wuz too quick fer me," explained the h. h. as he hastily beat it.—Minneapolis Journal.

Courage to Suffer.

Tess—Well, there's one thing about May Woodby. She has the courage of her convictions.

Jess—Indeed! I never noticed it.

Tess—Oh, yes! She's convinced that she can wear a No. 3 shoe.—Philadelphia Press.

Weighed In the Hand.

"Some grocers," remarked the customer, "have an offhand way of weighing sugar, but I notice you're not one of them."

"Offhand way? How do you mean?" asked the grocer.

"I noticed you kept your hand on the scales just now while you measured out five pounds for me."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Two Bores.

Towne—I'd rather associate with Nuditch than Kadley. Kadley's just a society man. I can't imagine anything worse than a man who is always indulging in small talk.

Browne—Oh, I don't know. He can't be worse than a fellow who's always talking big.—Philadelphia Press.

As to Divorce.

Briggs—Even divorce nowadays offers no sure relief.

Griggs—How so?

"Why, in nine cases out of ten a man is free to marry again."—New York Life.

Ungummed.

"He isn't so stuck on himself as he used to be, is he?"

"No. He got into hot water awhile ago, and the mucilage seemed to dissolve."—Cleveland Leader.

Her Catch.

He told about the fish he caught
On his vacation trip,
And how he used with rod and line
The mountain streams to whip,
And now he stalked from pool to pool
An old and wary trout,
And, where all other anglers failed,
Had pulled the rascal out.

But while he talked a maid demure
Was clinging to his arm,
Her shyly drooping lashes dark
Enhanced her modest charm.
She did not boast about her catch—
'Tis not a woman's plan—
But while he angled for the fish
She hooked the fisherman.

—New York Press.

Improved Labor Conditions Due to Publicity.

By CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS, Vice President.

THERE has been during the past few years a very noticeable improvement in labor conditions. This has been due in a large degree to the perfection and influence of labor organizations and to the co-operation of many thousands who have believed that the improvement of the conditions of labor was a matter of the VERY FIRST importance to the great body of our citizenship.

SUCH GRATIFYING IMPROVEMENT IS DUE TO A WIDE DISCUSSION OF LABOR'S INTERESTS AND TO THE EDUCATION OF THE PEOPLE AS TO ITS CONDITION AND AS TO ITS REAL AND JUST NEEDS.

In the earlier days those who advocated an improvement of the conditions of labor and sought to enact laws for its protection were regarded by many as AGITATORS, as encroaching upon certain vested or natural rights of employers.

Much progress has been made since then. The reforms which have been effected and which are now generally regarded as just, the improvement of conditions in many hazardous undertakings for the protection of the persons and lives of operatives, the improvement of insanitary conditions which surrounded many places of labor and other improvements are proof of the wisdom of organized effort and of discussion.

Industrial Training Lacking In Public Schools.

By ANDREW S. DRAPER, Commissioner of Education of New York State.

THE length of the school period and the productive value of the citizen are closely related.

INDUSTRIALISM IS THE GREAT BASIS OF A NATION'S TRUE STRENGTH AND REAL CULTURE.

Knowing this, we have seen that there is not sufficient articulation between the EDUCATIONAL AND THE INDUSTRIAL systems of the country. We have seen the indefinite expansion of instruction and the unlimited multiplication of appliances leading to literary and professional and managing occupations without any real solicitude about the vital INDUSTRIAL FOUNDATIONS of the nation's happiness and power. A situation manifestly unjust to the greater number, even unjust to those for whom it has done the most, has resulted. Notwithstanding our boasted UNIVERSALITY OF EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY there has grown up an absurd hiatus in the educational system which denies the just rights of the wage earning masses and grievously menaces the industrial efficiency and the material prosperity of the country.

There should be an open chance for every American child. The influences of the schools must not lead boys who might become excellent cabinetmakers into being no account lawyers and girls who might be first class breadmakers or dressmakers into being fourth class music teachers.

THE SCHOOL SYSTEM HAS GROWN DEFORMED; IT IS ONE SIDED AND NOT BROAD ENOUGH AT THE BASE.

Neglect of Voters Responsible For Political Graft.

By Congressman H. C. LOUDENSLAGER of New Jersey.

WE will never have really pure politics in America until we devise some means for compelling voters to perform their duties. At the present time the percentage of men who SHIRK their responsibility, particularly at the primaries, is enormous.

The result is that the political game in America is played too often only by an INFERIOR class of citizens, who could easily be outvoted by good men. These defaulting good citizens who NEGLECT THEIR DUTY to the community are responsible for graft in public life, for bossism in states and cities and for practically every iniquity of American politics. This is a fact which is known to every practical politician and to every man who has ever run for public office. If they would do their duty we would have clean politics.

WE NEVER WILL HAVE CLEAN POLITICS UNTIL THE EXERCISE OF THE RIGHT OF VOTING IS MADE COMPULSORY BY EVERY PERSON WHO IS ENTITLED TO CAST A BALLOT.

American Girl Not to Blame For International Marriage Failure.

By BOOTH TARKINGTON, Author.

THE international marriage between an American girl of wealth and a foreigner of title is usually a most deplorable failure. I do not deny that there are rare exceptions, when the love motive is pre-eminently strong. The exception, however, does not prove the rule, which is one of utter failure in the great majority of cases.

THE BLAME LIES WITH THE SOCIALLY AMBITIOUS AMERICAN MOTHER WHO INSISTS UPON HER DAUGHTER'S MARRIAGE TO A FOREIGN NOBLEMAN BECAUSE SHE ASPIRES TO SOCIAL PROMINENCE—ONE MIGHT ALMOST DESCRIBE IT AS SOCIAL NOTORIETY.

The climbers in American society are women; the money makers are men. If the American aristocracy were MORE JEALOUS OF ITS BIRTHRIGHT there would be fewer sacrifices of the sort we are all familiar with.

The bride in these international marriages scarcely realizes the underlying significance of the event. The glamour of the occasion, of which she is the central figure, dazzles and delights her, and the seeming moral support of her mother is a strong incentive to her happiness.

BOWSER TENTS OUT,

Plans to Sleep on Ground and Get Benefit of Earth Currents.

WHAT HE GOES THROUGH.

Experiment Has Its Disadvantages, According to the Notes He Makes. Stolen by Three Tramps While In Peaceful Slumber.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

An hour before Mr. Bowser came home to dinner the other evening an express wagon brought a small tent to the house, and, of course, Mrs. Bowser was all agog to know what was going to happen. She had made up her mind that Mr. Bowser was going to take her to the seashore or the woods and was looking to see what old dresses she could wear when he arrived home. When asked about the tent he replied:

"Mrs. Bowser, have you ever heard of Professor Baumgarten, the celebrated scientist?"

"I don't remember."

"He is the man who discovered that there was an electric current passing through the earth from darkness to

MR. BOWSER CARRIED THE TENT TO THE BACK YARD AND SET IT UP.

sunrise and that the said current was beneficial to many human complaints when rightly taken."

"But you have no human complaints."

"That's all you know about it. Because I'm not complaining every few minutes you think nothing ails me. I had a little time this afternoon, and I wrote down a few of my ailments in this form. There they are."

And he handed her a paper with the following record nicely drawn up and typewritten:

	Rheumatism.
Asthma.	Lumbago.	Heartburn.
Dyspepsia.	Liver comp.	Catarrh.
	Flatulency.

"It's all nonsense!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser after reading the list. "If there's a healthier man in this town than you are, I'd like to know his name."

Had a Sinking Spell.

"Healthy! Why, I had a sinking spell not four hours ago!" he shouted.

"Yes, you probably sunk down in a chair. Why, man, you eat enough at every meal to do for two common men. That boiled ham we had last night"—

"Never mind the boiled ham. It's no use to tell you that I may not live three months. The doctor says it's the worst complication of ailments he ever saw. It is only after I have passed in my checks that you'll awake to the fact that I was an uncomplaining sufferer for years."

"But what about the tent? Are you going to swallow that to cure yourself of some of the ailments?"

"Mrs. Bowser, we'll treat this as a serious matter, a very serious matter, or we'll shut up about it. It is no time for sarcasm when a man's life is hanging in the balance."

"Well, then?"

"I shall put up the tent in the back yard and sleep in it in order to get the ground current. I have every faith in the experiment. I believe that after the first three nights I shall be feeling much better. I wish you wouldn't irritate me this evening. I have been thinking of coffins and tombstones all day, and I have a fear that I have begun this experiment too late."

"Why, my dear husband, if you feel that way, I haven't another word to say in opposition. Go right ahead and put up your tent and occupy it. I don't know anything about the electric ground current, but if it will help even one of your ailments I shall be thankful. You'll need a mattress, of course?"

"No; I shall sleep on the bare ground. I want the full effect of the current."

After dinner, which was one of the heartiest he had eaten in a month, Mr. Bowser carried the tent to the back yard and set it up. When the cook saw what was going on she went to Mrs. Bowser and said:

"Mum, could you get another girl and let me go this evening?"

"But why, Bridget?"

"Because I want to be found alive in the morning, and I see that Mr. Bowser is fixing to explode us all. It's the water pipes, and the gas pipes, and the hot water, and the cold water, and dynamite, and gunpowder, and the furnace, and I've got so scared that I'm finding gray hairs in my head."

Made Notes of Experiment.

Bridget was quieted with a guarantee of safety, and Mr. Bowser came in for an hour before retiring to get the electric current. During this time he had a great deal to say about the north pole and the south pole and the gulf stream and finally predicted that his sleeping in the tent might be the means of informing the world the exact cause of earthquakes, volcanoes and cyclones. He finally hunted up pencil and paper and took his way to the yard. As was afterward ascertained, he made notes, and the notes read as follows:

"I have retired to the tent. Over forty cats about. It may be the electric current of the earth that gives cats nine lives.

"I have stretched myself on the grass. I seem to feel a vibration of the earth. May be a truck going past on the street or may be Professor Baumgarten's electric current.

"There is a quiet crackling of the grass. Electricity must be at work.

"This is restful. I am feeling a holy calm steal over me.

"The above mentioned holy calm was interrupted by a cat entering the tent, but I soon walked her out again.

"This is a heap better than going to the woods. No danger of bears or snakes, and you get the electric current besides.

"I think I feel the current passing from the north to the south pole, but may be mistaken.

"I was mistaken. It was only a chicken bone under my back. Perhaps the current is late in getting started tonight.

"Several other cats invaded the tent to be clubbed out.

"Just saw Mrs. Bowser at a back window looking out. She needn't concern herself about me. Never was there a more peaceful situation than this. It combines all the advantages of the seashore with all the comforts of home.

"I am certain that the electric current has now got started. For the benefit of the public I will say that the hour is exactly 10 o'clock. The direction is from north to south, sustaining the professor's theory. I can feel it crinkling my hair and doing my flatulency a world of good.

"I seem to hear about 200 cats on the fence. I must write the professor and ask if cats and ground currents go together.

"I seem to hear footsteps and whispers in the alley. That may be caused by the current meeting an obstruction in its passage.

Felt the Current.

"No mistake about the current. I feel a soothing creeping over me, and my liver is placid for the first time in years. It would be a wonderful thing if I was completely cured. I would give the professor a testimonial over my own name.

"The current is twitching around somewhat. Has probably hit against the Standard Oil company and neither of them will give way.

"Steady again and all O. K. Heartburn gone; dyspepsia gone; asthma a heap better. It's lulling me to sleep."

And to sleep he went. Mrs. Bowser looked out occasionally to see that all was well, and there was no alarm till midnight. Then, after an interval of half an hour, she peered forth and uttered an exclamation. Three tramps had come through the alley gate and folded up the tent and Mr. Bowser with it and were passing out again. She called and called, but they paid no heed. They were not interested in Professor Baumgarten's electric currents of earth. M. QUAD.

Quite Likely.

"I didn't see you at our euchre the other night," said the bachelor.

"No," replied the young Benedict. "As far as euchre goes with me now, I consider 'home' the right bower."

"That's all right while hearts are trump, but I suppose if clubs should turn up it would be the 'left bower.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Mystery.

"I wonder why it is?" said the man who seemed to be thinking aloud.

"Why what is?" queried the friend who had overheard.

"That people who are so different from us seem to be satisfied with themselves?" concluded the noisy thinker.—Pittsburg Post.

Why She Couldn't.

"Oh, I couldn't love him!"

"Why not?"

"He wears a wig. The very idea!"

Then the dear creature removed two rats, some puffs, a coronet braid, a pompadour, a switch and sat down to peruse a novel.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

All Well Except Bill.

"Why, how do you do, uncle? How's all the folks?"

"They're all well 'cept Bill. He's married."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Up to Date Explanation.

"Electrical failures have an advantage over all kinds."

"In what way?"

"They can always furnish a current excuse."—Baltimore American.

Chill.

Gladys—Isn't this autumn air delightful?

Harold—Not much. It reminds me that I've got to get a new overcoat.—Detroit Tribune.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice — buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest. Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
E. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

A. D. NAYLOR & COMP'Y

You can buy at Reduced Prices
Grain Drills, Harrows & Plows
AT NAYLOR & CO.'S

Big Stock to select from.

Have the Farmer's Favorite Drills, the Thomas, the Superior Hoe and Disc Drills.

We have the Syracuse, the Imperial and the Wyard Plows. Also the wood frame Harrows, the wheel and lever Harrows; also the Disc Harrow, all at reduced prices.

We also have a nice line of Spray Pumps.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

Real Estate Bargains

I offer for sale

FARM OF 147 ACRES, 3 miles from Oakland; good 6-room House; plenty of water; over 50 acres cleared; about 25 acres of grass; 2 Orchards, bearing; over 75 acres of White Oak Timber; R. F. D. mail service.

COTTAGE OF 6 ROOMS for sale at Mt. Lake Park.

HOUSE AND LOT on Oak Street, Oakland, for sale or rent. House of 6 rooms—Lot 50x150 feet, with Stable and all necessary Outbuildings.

FOUR VERY DESIRABLE BUILDING LOTS situated on Liberty Street, in Oakland. Also 3 DWELLING HOUSES on Liberty Street, with good water and all necessary outbuildings.

HOUSE AND LOT on Wilson Street. House of 10 rooms; good water. Lot 150 feet front. Best Outbuildings in Oakland.

A VERY GOOD FARM 1 mile from Oakland—all under fence; containing 32 acres; about 25 under cultivation; 2 fine Orchards, and about 2½ acres in small Fruit; 2 Houses, a very good Well and a never failing Spring. A very desirable place for Truck and Poultry Farming. Can be bought at a low price just now.

I have for sale 18 of the very best Building Lots in the town which I will sell for cash—or $5 down and $5 per month.

150 ACRES OF VALUABLE COAL LAND situated less than two miles of Oakland which can be bought at a great bargain. The surface would make fine farming land. This land is well watered with a stream and several good springs.

12 MORE CHOICE BUILDING LOTS at $5 down and $5 per month.

If you want cash for your Real Estate, or Real Estate for your cash, let me hear from you.

For further particulars call on or address

James A. Sincell, Real Estate Agt and Surveyor
Sincell Building, Oakland, Md.

The Maze.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

The maze was located a few rods from the hotel, its compact walls of evergreen rising ten feet high. The little opening which revealed a narrow curving path possessed the undeniable charm of mystery. But Lettice, recalling tales she had heard of tourists wandering for hours in those intricate windings unable to find their way out, was inclined to be skeptical.

"It's so little," she criticised. "I imagined that a maze would cover acres."

Inwardly she felt convinced of her ability to walk triumphantly to the center and out again. She looked at the clock. It was three-quarters of an hour before the coaching party was to start. Bigger things than the conquest of a maze had been accomplished in that time.

Lettice stepped through the opening into the narrow path with its high, green walls, promising herself that she would turn back before there was any likelihood of losing her way. And almost on the moment she forgot that possibility. The path was very narrow, so narrow that the most amicable pair could not have walked abreast. The dense foliage of the evergreen was for all practical purposes impenetrable as granite. Overhead was the blue California sky, and the breeze was weighted with the odors of uncounted millions of blossoms.

"What a delicious place!" thought Lettice. The big outside world was no longer in evidence. She seemed to herself a solitary pilgrim, following life's winding paths, not knowing where they led, satisfied with a glimpse of the sky overhead and the odors of unseen flowers.

In this peaceful, almost philosophical frame of mind Lettice turned a corner and came face to face with a young man. And the encounter was sufficient to work an immediate change in the current of her thoughts. She swayed against the wall of evergreen as if about to fall.

"Jack!" she murmured faintly.

"Lettice!" cried the young man, and his tones were rapturous.

As he advanced with outstretched hands Lettice drew herself up. A sudden amazing dignity radiated from her slight figure. An expression of extreme hauteur replaced her previous look of agitation.

"I SEE, AND I BEG YOUR PARDON," SAID THE ELDERLY MAN.

"I beg your pardon," said Lettice, gazing at some indefinite object over the young man's head. "I am afraid you misunderstand me."

The young man might have replied that the break in her voice and her sudden pallor were sufficient excuses for the indiscretion into which he had been betrayed. He did nothing of the kind, however. He only stood and looked at her as if even at her haughtiest the sight of her rejoiced his eyes.

"If you will kindly let me pass," continued Lettice, and the young man obligingly flattened himself against the wall of foliage. But owing to the narrowness of the path her arm brushed his sleeve as she swept by, and something in the contact weakened her resolution. She felt the tears rushing to her eyes, and her knees were unsteady.

